on the 5th the First Regiment, with six companies of the Second, and nine companies of the Third, started forward in two trains of cars. The first of these trains reached Washington about midnight, and the second at eight o'clock the following morning. The same evening the Fourth Regiment and the remaining company of the Third reached the capital. The four companies of the Second left at Annapolis were detailed, by order of Gen. Scott, to the service of guarding the telegraph and the railroad track between Washington and Annapolis Junction.¹

On the 6th of May the arrival of the brigade was reported to Gen. Scott, and no camps being provided, the troops went into such quarters as were available in Washington. On all sides the arrival of the troops was hailed with pleasure. Men felt that now the capital was safe.² These three thousand Jerseymen, thoroughly armed and equipped, as no regiments previously arrived had been, could be relied upon to repel all assaults. New Jersey never stood

¹ Capt. W. B. Dumming, of the Second Regiment, furnishes the following outline of the experience of the detachment which was assigned for service in Maryland:

"Upon arriving at Annapolis, Companies D, E, I and K were detailed for guard duty at the Naval school, while the other six companies made themselves comfortable in the mansions normally occupied by the professors. The regiment was ordered to proceed to Washington on the night of its arrival, and the companies on guard, not being relieved in time, were left behind. The next day Capt. Mulligan, of Gen. Bunyon's staff, arrived from Washington, and arranging for the relief of the remaining companies, they took cars for the Washington Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; Companies D and K were put off at Beltsville, thirteen miles from Washington, and E and I at Hyattsville, six miles from Washington, with orders to guard the railroad from Laurel to the city of Washington, a distance of about seventeen miles. And here these four companies remained three months, the first nine months without rest and nearly the same period of time with out rations. Thanks to Gen. Butler, however, these wants were soon supplied when brought to his notice. Occasional alarms—some real and others fancied, relieved the monotony of the lonely pickets as they patrolled their beats, but nothing occurred of a serious nature during the term. Lieut.-Col. Speer was in command of the detachment, with his headquarters at the residence of Mr. Hyatt (a Jerseyman), at Hyattsville, near Bladensburg."

A letter from a member of the detachment, dated at Beltsville, Md. (twelve miles from Washington), May 8th, gives the following glimpse of the impoverished commissariat: "Our first meal here—supper—consisted of smoked beef and crackers, our next—breakfast—of only coffee and crackers, or sea bread. There was salt pork for dinner, and a pound and a half of rice for twenty-five men. For breakfast this morning we had a cup of coffee and three small crackers each. All this means are doing hard duty. . . . The population about here is nearly equally divided between Unionists and secessionists. The latter don't like the presence of troops. It is said that two bridges which we guard would have been destroyed but for our timely arrival."

"The National Intelligencer (Washington) thus referred to the brigade upon its arrival in that city:

"The whole brigade, with its four pieces of artillery, arrived at Annapolis on Sunday, May 5th, in twenty-eight hours from Trenton, and proceeded direct for Washington. It is stated that the fourteen transports, with a strong convoy, Commander F. R. Lyster, made a splendid appearance steaming in two lines down the Chesapeake. They had been greeted by a great Union demonstration as they passed along the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. They are armed with the Minie musket, but are to have the M-18 rifle and sword-bayonet. The splendid stand of colors brought with them was presented to the (First) Regiment by the High School in Washington street, Newark, just prior to their departure for Washington. The regiment is composed of some of the best men in the State, and in athletic appearance, as well as general soldierly deportment, are a credit to the country."

higher in the estimation of the loyal people of the country than at that juncture, when she sent to the nation's defense the first full brigade of troops that reached the field. The government was especially cordial in its expression of satisfaction.³ Two days after its arrival the brigade paraded the city, and was everywhere hailed with the liveliest demonstrations of enthusiasm by the populace.⁴ As was, perhaps, to be expected, great difficulty was at first experienced in the commissariat, no adequate provision having been made by the government for supplying the wants of the troops, and some days were required to produce system in the issue of rations, and remove all cause for complaint. Some dissatisfaction also existed among the men as to the quality of their arms, but the government as rapidly as possible supplied them with percussion muskets, and deficiencies in clothing and equipments were also met by supplies forwarded by the State authorities. On the 9th the Fourth Regiment was ordered to go into camp at Meridian Hill, and within a few days the entire brigade was encamped at that point, where, on the 12th, it was honored by a visit from the President, who warmly complimented the appearance of the troops.⁵ At this point the army life of the volunteers commenced in earnest, the utmost exactness being required in all points of discipline. All the hard routine of camp duties was daily observed. The work of the soldier

² In a letter to the executive, referring to the exertions of this State in aid of the general government, the Secretary of War used the following language: "For your prompt and patriotic response to the call of the general government I tender to yourself and the people of New Jersey my sincere and heartfelt thanks;" and in a subsequent letter he says: "Allow me to tender you the thanks of this department for the very prompt and efficient manner in which you, and the people of your State, have responded to the requisition made upon you."

³ "This afternoon (May 7), at short notice, the whole New Jersey brigade was paraded and marched to the White House, where we were reviewed by the President, Gen. Scott, and members of the Cabinet. It is seldom that four regiments of soldiers have appeared on parade together in this country, and it was a novel sight to the citizens of Washington. Some thought the whole force here was out, so large appeared the numbers under arms, and they were incredulous when informed that they were all Jerseymen. The troops all behaved well, and made a creditable appearance. All along the route they were cheered by the citizens, who lined the streets to witness the spectacle. I heard a great many compliments passed on their appearance, drill, equipments, etc., and all agreed that New Jersey had done nobly. It appears that most of the troops that have been sent here were without uniforms and other equipments, and in some cases were without arms,—as one gentleman remarked, they looked more like a mob than like soldiers. The contrast, therefore, between them and the Jerseymen was very great."—Maj. Ward's Journal.

⁴ "During the afternoon, while busy in arranging the camp, we were surprised by a visit from Mr. Lincoln, Secretaries Chase and Seward, and C. M. Clay, of Kentucky. The party was recognized by the soldiers, the news spread, and they crowded eagerly around, directly they burst into three cheers for President Lincoln. He bowed in acknowledgment of the compliment, and then, in a free-and-easy way, waved his hand toward Mr. Seward, saying: "This is the Secretary of State; give him three cheers." It was done, and he then turned towards Mr. Chase, saying: "This is the paymaster, who gives you your pay; three cheers for him;" and again turning, pointed to Mr. Clay, saying: "And now three cheers for Old Kentucky." The boys responded heartily, and the President and his party seemed to enjoy it highly. After a few words of compliment and inter-languish of bows, they walked off as unceremoniously as they came."—Journal of Maj. Ward.

was found to be something more than mere festival employment. It demanded every energy, the fullest devotion, the loftiest self-sacrifice.

This regiment was mustered into the service of the United States, at Trenton, N. J., May 1, 1861, by Maj. T. T. S. Laidley and Lieut. A. T. A. Torbert, and at the end of its term of service (three months) returned to Trenton, where it was mustered out of the service of the United States, July 31, 1861, by Lieut. A. T. A. Torbert, U. S. Army.

FIELD AND STAFF.

Colonel—Henry M. Baker, must. in May 1, 1861.
Lieutenant Colonel—Abraham Speer, must. in May 2, 1861.
Major—John J. Van Buskirk, must. in June 5, 1861, capt. Co. E May 1, 1861; com. major to ill original vacancy.
Adjutant—Cornelius Van Relpen, must. in May 2, 1861.
Quartermaster—Henry B. Brinkerhoff, must. in May 2, 1861.
Sergeant—John E. Quidor, must. in April 25, 1861.
Assistant Surge—John Longstaff, must. in April 26, 1861.
Chaplain—Matthew B. Ribble, must. in May 28, 1861.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

Sergeant-Major—Nest D. Taylor, must. in May 1, 1861.
Quartermaster-Sergeant—Francis R. Hill, must. in May 1, 1861.
Iron-Major—Edward C. Woodruff, must. in May 1, 1861.
File-Major—William K. Van Ripen, must. in May 1, 1861.

COMPANY A.

Captain—Garret D. Van Ripen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—William D. W. C. Jones, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—Richard A. Vresland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—William H. Debevoise, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—Martin V. B. Simons, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Abner J. Welsh, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Richard M. Van Ripen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Corporals—Euse Z. Van Ripen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Frank Davis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred Metz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Prior, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
File—Jesse I. Parr, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Drummers—James G. Cantot, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Privates—Thomas Ackerman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John H. Allen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Stephen D. Allen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Bell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Benson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Francis H. Bookstaver, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Bookstaver, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Frederick Boteman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John T. Boyd, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Brune, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Christian Brune, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry Bucklein, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Cating, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry B. Cank, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Connersly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert Cullen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Cyle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Crane, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred Debevoise, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Donely, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel Drayton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Ben. L. Durban, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Valentine Eickes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George W. Halstead, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hannon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Harrison, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Hawkins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Heffles, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert W. Henson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Garret A. Jackson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William F. N. Jones, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Jordan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Lawrence Jordan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Lewis Kiser, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Kiser, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John A. Larkins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John S. Lawson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Cornelius Mandville, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Mathis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel Mandelke, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George May, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Martin May, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William McLaughlin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Albert Metz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Moore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James R. W. Moore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Mortimer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Newkirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Ozden, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert Powell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Powell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Albert B. Pryor, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 In Witt C. Reed, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph P. Ross, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry S. Sauer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry E. Skinner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Matthew H. Speer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 David Stowell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry Stock, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph Sturges, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Anthony Swartz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Tyson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph Trvon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John H. Van Winkle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jacob Van Winkle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Daniel S. Vresland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Archer G. Welsh, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph Westervelt, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter G. Westervelt, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles H. Wilcox, must. in May 1, 1861.
 Theodore Windship, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY B.

Captain—Edward C. Hopper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—James C. May, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; res. June 12, 1861.
 John Hopper, must. in June 12, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; res. from muster, 1st sergt. race Hopper, promoted.
Ensign—John Gaudle, must. in June 12, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; sergt. from muster, 1st sergt. May 17, 1861; ensign race Hopper, promoted.
First Sergeant—Edward Hopper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; sergt. from muster, 1st sergt. June 12, 1861.

Sergeants—Samuel Whitten, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; from muster; sergt. June 2, 1861.
 James Garbraut, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; 1st sergt. from muster, red. to sergt. May 17, 1861.
 John G. Main, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; corp. from muster; sergt. June 12, 1861.

Corporals—Edmund W. Gordon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Simon P. Whitley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; private from muster; corp. June 2, 1861.
 Robert H. Beever, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; private from muster; corp. June 12, 1861.
 John M. Flanigan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out June 31, 1861; private from muster; corp. June 18, 1861.

Privates—George L. Reynolds, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; nurse in hospital from June 1, 1861.

Drummers—Henry H. Dias, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Francis Appel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Barrett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William B. Baxter, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred Bradway, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Branton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred S. Bruce, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Buckley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Burrill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jonathan M. Clark, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Herbert Chester, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Hewlett Cook, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel Craig, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Devine, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Diamond, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Dunn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Fallon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Martin Foley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Foxon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas H. Easter, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; sergt. from muster.
 Joseph Garland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Gill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Hackett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Bernard Hagerly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Hearn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hilbrith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hoy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry Johnston, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter Leverett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William H. Lloyd, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Simon Lundy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Paul Marshall, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James McConnell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick McGinness, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Archibald McKaig, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel McKaig, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick McKenna, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Francis Miller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel A. Mills, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Guy Murphy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Neill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles A. Norris, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter O'Brien, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George O'Geden, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert Overend, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Benjamin Parrett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred Pave, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Benne Robinson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George Reddick, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Philip Russell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Randolph Schhardt, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Matthew Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Springstein, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Yitch Thompson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Y. Treedy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—George Walker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edmund P. Watrous, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alexander White, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry Whitten, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Williams, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Wright, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph S. York, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

DISCHARGED.

Corporal—Leonard Springstein, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; dish. June 18, 1861, disability.
Private—Alexander McIver, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; dish. at Camp Princeton, Va., July 11, 1861.

COMPANY C.

Captain—Frederick Grain, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—James H. Hughes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—Frederick Cooper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—Hugh M. Pattison, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—John Berrian, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Mohl, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Adolphus T. Chazotte, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Corporals—James S. O'lyde, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William H. Conway, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James M. Craig, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George W. Weart, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—John W. Adams, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Oscar H. Allen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edwin W. Andrews, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Adam Anthony, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John R. Atchison, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Baughan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Bissinger, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Hiram J. Blanchard, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Lorin L. Bobble, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Gilbert D. Bogart, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alexander H. Brown, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Burin Brown, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Dennis M. Buck, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George S. Cole, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Richard Cooper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Levi Curtin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Derby, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John W. Evans, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles H. Fesselman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Benjamin F. Gale, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Gustavus Gitz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Darwin Godfrey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Martin G. Gorman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jeremiah M. Green, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Grimes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Noble Griggett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Horace A. Halsey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 R. Alexander Hamilton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George H. Harris, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Henry, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George R. Hillier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George S. Hoffman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William W. Holms, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Private—John W. Howe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Keegan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Kelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Lawrence Lindrine, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George J. Lawler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
John W. Lemon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Joseph McLaughlin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Fredrick L. Mohl, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Levris Mohl, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Lindsay Morrison, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Samuel H. Morrison, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Mullery, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Emil O'Brien, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Phillip T. Prang, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
George W. Quirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
George S. Russell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Benson Rummel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Charles Stedfield, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
John Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Charles M. K. Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Somerville, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Jacob Stahl, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Christian H. Tugeman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas W. Tilden, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
William L. Titworth, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Nicholas Toban, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
James R. Turner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Gabriel Tuttle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Stephen K. Veeland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Gustavus Weiner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Charles H. Wheeler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Christian T. Williamson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Alphouse Witherell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Edwin B. W. Oswald, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY D.

Captain—Gustavus A. Liffondall, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

First Lieutenant—Joseph C. Bishop, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Ensign—Charles Bauer, must. in May 1, 1861; resigned June 3, 1861.

George Knapp, must. in June 3, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

1st sergt. from muster, assigned to Bauer, resigned.

Sergeants—John Bidler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Frank, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Richard Eldel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Corporals—Eugene Jacobs, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Gilbert Lillis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John J. Poria, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Howe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Private—Edward Paul, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Drummer—Andrew Garland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Joseph Arel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael G. Bauer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Gottfried Bergman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodore Brand, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George Bueller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodore C. Bughe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Burger, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Bernard Dwyer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Gustavus Dieffenbacher, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Dikoschiel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Fredrick Dockerman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Private—P. Druppner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Malachy Duval, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Levi Fluizer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Augustus Knapp, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Farrell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Frisch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Fritsch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Cornet Hoss, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Habeler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Tobias Haffner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Benjamin Healy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles Herman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Howe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Huggins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodore Hirsch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Peter Hirsch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles Kline, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodor Knapp, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick McGuire, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael McGuirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George McEvar, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Meyer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Peter Moore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Moore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Emile Phanz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles P. H. P. P. P., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John P. P. P. P., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Fredrick Johnson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Schliker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George Schliker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Seiwartz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Shury, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Shuler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Shumaker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Henry Steiner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William A. Simpson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Skelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Earnest Steiner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph Stark, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles R. Thompson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John W. W. W., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Walther, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles Weddenauer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George F. White, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Woods, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Frederic Yal, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George Ziegler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

TRANSFERRED.

Privates—Fredrick Chaney, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

William Cook, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

William T. Higgins, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

James McKeen, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

Bernard Small, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

John Tinley, must. in May 1, 1861; trans. to Co. F May 9, 1861.

COMPANY E.

Captain—John J. Van Buskirk, must. in May 1, 1861; pro. maj. June 15, 1861.

Henry Van Buskirk, must. in July 6, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; 1st lieut. May 1, 1861; capt. vice John J. Van Buskirk; pro. maj.

First Lieutenant—James M. Simonsen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; ensign May 1, 1861; 1st lieut. vice William Van Buskirk; promoted.

Ensign—Andrew Van Buskirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; 1st sergt. from muster; ensign vice Simonsen; promoted.

First Sergeant—Jaeger M. Gilmuis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; sergt. from muster; 1st sergt. July 6, 1861.

Sergeants—Hartman Veeland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Sergeant—Henry C. Post, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; com. from master; sergt. July 6, 1861.

John A. Salinas, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; corp. from master; sergt. July 6, 1861.

Company—Carnegie-Simouson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; private from master; corp. July 6, 1861.

Simon B. L. W., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Twigg, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; private from master; corp. July 6, 1861.

George H. Braisted, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; private from master; corp. July 6, 1861.

Private—Alfred B. Beach, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John B. Black, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Earl P. Bowker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Garret Y. Braisted, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Jezeiah P. Brewer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Elias Burr, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Byers, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodore Calhoun, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Carrigan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Robert Chaffer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Erney Clements, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James B. Chase, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Richard Godlington, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Curtis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Hartman Demarest, must. in June 19, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John D. Dexter, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Andrew Elbersson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Robert Elsworth, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Abran Garbancant, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Lawrence Gill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Jacob Harberdorf, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John H. Heath, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Martin V. B. Ingram, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph A. Jackaway, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles P. Jones, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Daniel Kilburn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Matthew D. Lattorrett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Coruelius P. Marsh, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael McCuire, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Daniel McKinsey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Mills, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Williams Miller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Elwazer Morrell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Williams Penndet, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Robinson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Norman L. Rowe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Mark D. Safford, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Sleight, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Garr J. Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Benjamin Soper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Wright Soper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Augustus H. Tait, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Samuel F. Taylor, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William H. Thompson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Benjamin Trux, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Albert Tross, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George Tross, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John R. Tuttle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Nicholas Van Buskirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Peter Van Buskirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Hank Van Der Boven, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Van Der Boven, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—James M. Voorhies, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Vreeland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Benjamin Wainright, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Williams, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George W. Yates, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

DISCHARGED

Sergeant—Jacob Van Pelt, must. in May 1, 1861; dish. at Bladensburg, Md., July 7, 1861, disability.

Private—William Pierce, must. in May 1, 1861; dish. at Bladensburg, Md. June 2, 1861, disability.

COMPANY F.

Captains—Laurent J. Tonnelle, must. in May 1, 1861; res. May 15, 1861.

Robert Gillis, Jr., must. in May 20, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; com. capt. see Tonnelle resigned.

First Lieutenant—James Maguire, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Ensign—John Dugan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

First Sergeant—Michael Gallagher, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Sergeants—Jerome Delaney, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Mullin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Owen Lee, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; corp. from master.

Corporals—Thomas Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick O. Neill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Peter O'Leary, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Francis Auld, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Cain, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Frederick C. Lacey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick Cogan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Coleman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Stephen Colohan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Robert Cook, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Cook, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Cooper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; trans. from Co. D May 9, 1861.

Thomas Corcoran, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Dempsey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick Duddy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Doyle (1), must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Doyle (2), must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick English, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Enright, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Fullton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Feecey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Finerty, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Flannigan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Flood, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Flynn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Ford, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Gately, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Graham, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Michael Harmon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Healey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick Heavey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Herbert, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William F. Higgins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Hines, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861; trans. from Co. D May 9, 1861.

John Hogan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Johnston, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Kenny, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick Kenny, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Lane, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Timothy Langton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Latham, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Leelan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Lalle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Lynch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Patrick Malon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Malone, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Martin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 1, 1861.
 Thomas Masterson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael McCabe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Daniel McCarroll, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William McCreary, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James M. Keene, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
trans. from Co. D May 9, 1861.
 Michael McKernan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Philip McMahon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Murphy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James O'Connor, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas O'Neil, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward O'Donnell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Matthew O'Donnell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James O'Neill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Reilly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Reynolds, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Ryan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Ryan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Bernard Small, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
trans. from Co. D May 9, 1861.
 John Tinsley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
trans. from Co. D May 9, 1861.
 John Travers, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Walsh, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY G

Captain—John Ramsey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—Benjamin Van Riper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—Elliott T. Farrier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—John H. McCutcheon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—William H. Gallagher, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Haggerty, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jeffrey Collins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Corporals—John Quinlan Adams, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Edelstein, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George Logan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George F. Durant, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Fifer—John B. Thompson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Drummers—Joseph W. Lewis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Privates—Lewis C. Alberts, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles J. Bane, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Burns, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Clark, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Collins, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Coyle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jacob Curtis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Dingler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Eugene Dimmick, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Dougherty, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Doyle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Engler, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Walter J. Evans, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry C. Farrier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alfred Fildkin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Fitzgeorge, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Owen Flannelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 David W. Garcia, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Gress, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Hatch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hogan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Andrew Jackson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—Stephen Jacobus, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William D. Janney, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert J. Kelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Tom Jennings, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert H. Johnson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William W. Keene, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward F. Lamb, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Allen C. Lattimore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Lawton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William L. Leary, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter Lynch, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James V. Lyon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alexander Mason, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George McCarthy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Moran, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Moran, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles E. M. Laughlin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John M. Laughlin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Hugh McNichol, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Miller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles A. Moran, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Moran, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Muliken, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Arthur Noy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James S. Payne, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William F. Payne, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Elias A. Perry, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Piroon, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Platt, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Stephen B. Post, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Theodore Post, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel Ramsey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 David Beach, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph N. Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel L. Steward, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Stephen S. Sparks, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Toffe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Taylor, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Morris E. Van Syckle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 A. W. Van Winkle, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter G. Van Winkle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Frederick Van Bernier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James V. Washell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George Wesley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY H

Captain—Edwin S. Babcock, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—George B. Gardner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—John Wood, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—John Vreeland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—John Holden, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Fran de Valde, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Theodor W. Burger, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Corporals—Elias G. Hand, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Francis Priole, Jr., must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 B. Taylor Hutton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Paul Babcock, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Privates—Elias Applegate, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Arbnuckle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Arbnuckle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Arbnuckle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Theodore A. Baldwin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Private—Thos. R. Beck, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Brill, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Nathaniel Britton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Bryn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 C. W. Buttz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Carragan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry K. Clothier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Caleb Day, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John T. Donnell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Abraham Dupue, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Dimond, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Douglass, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph W. Edwards, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Otto Ellendorf, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry Ennis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John H. Falty, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John D. Franklin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John H. Garretson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jacob Hawry, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Walter Hinman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Hinman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Frederick Hobart, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edwin House, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George Jones, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph Johnston, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Koefe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 August Knodler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Nathaniel Lal, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Longstaff, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel H. McBurney, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John McLean, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 David Miller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William D. Norton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Abraham P. Purrow, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Henry B. Murray, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Johnson Nurne, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Nolan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Samuel Norton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Matthias Pettigrew, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Louis Patez, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Rodway, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Rodler, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Abraham Simons, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Felix Sultzer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George W. Sturgis, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Alonzo F. Swartz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jacob T. Thompson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William H. Van Buskirk, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Vanatta, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Van Vleet, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Warren, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jairus Wilgus, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY I.

Captain—John A. Van Voorhes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—Edward Kellog, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—Henry J. Westcott, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—John Marshall, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—Thomas Hogan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Joseph H. Rommel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Virgil M. Healy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Corporals—Michael O'Neil, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Nicholas Riley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert Thomas, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Andrew J. Calcab, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Fifer—Henry B. Twist, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Drummer—John Powers, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Privates—Edward Allen, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Arbackle, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Slias G. Baker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Martin Bennett, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Nelson Billingley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Brington, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Burke, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Coffey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Clancy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles H. Clark, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Conner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Conner, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John D'Injury, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Donley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Farr, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Feeley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Donald Ferdinand, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Fitzpatrick, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Edward Flanigan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Flynn, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Webster Frazier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Given, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Hagery, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Stephen Hertz, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Kane, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Kelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter Kelly, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James King, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 1, 1861.
 Arthur Malley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 1, 1861.
 Wilson R. Marsiles, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas McBride, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John McConna, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William McCona, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Barney McConna, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Peter McElroy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert McFarland, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Charles Mekesvor, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Megan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Miller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Nelson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John O'Brien, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Patrick Reiley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Archibald Richard, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Rodgers, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Michael Savage, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Richard Savage, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 James Scantlan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Thomas Sheehan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 George W. Shields, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Anderson Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jonathan Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Albert Supe, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Talbot, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Van Wert, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 William Walters, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Theodore Whitlock, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 John Whitten, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

COMPANY K.

Captain—William B. Dunning, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Lieutenant—Peter H. Hoyt, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Ensign—John G. Langston, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
First Sergeant—Edwin Hughes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Sergeants—John P. Fisher, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Robert Binwood, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
 Jacob Wilson, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Corporals—George Bosmann, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William B. Mason, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Anselm, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Charles Stegmüller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Privates—George Anthony, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph C. Baldwin, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Balliet, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Bell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph Bleil, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George W. Bonnell, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph Brown, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William W. Broxton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Horace W. Carey, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Valerio Castro, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Robert Clark, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Andrew Courier, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Patrick Cuddy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Andrew Dorst, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Anton Durst, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Aron W. Eckel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Henry B. Eckel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Feblar, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John R. Fulton, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William Farney, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Abraham Farrant, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Richard Gall, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William R. Hilyer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Gershon C. Hirs, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William H. Holzgos, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Hughes, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Hull, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Henry Keller, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Emil Kost, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John C. Laury, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Lincks, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Peter Lyricks, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Andrian Marions, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Isaac Marshall, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Henry Mason, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William D. Moore, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Murphy, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Jefferson Musselman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Joseph L. Newman, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James H. Ouston, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

John Parker, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Edward M. Rakee, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

James Riley, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Martin Ryan, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Davis Shack, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

David Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

David P. Smith, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George Spaur, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Friedrick Tempa, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Henry H. Todd, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Thomas Todd, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

William E. Trimmer, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Theodore A. Tupper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

David Vail, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Benjamin Verrinder, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Lucian A. Vorhies, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Richard Walsh, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

George W. Wason, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Ellie P. Whitcraft, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Josiah Wiesel, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

Private—Jac H. Zabriskie, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.

TRANSFERRED

Richard Cooper, must. in May 1, 1861; must. out July 31, 1861.
Transferred to C. June 1, 1862.

CHAPTER XIX.

HUDSON COUNTY IN THE REBELLION.

Continued.

First Regiment, (Three Years' Troops).—The regiment to which companies I and K were attached, was raised under authority of general orders, No. 15, War Department, Washington, D.C., May 4, 1861, and mustered into service on the twenty-first of the same month. Company I was recruited in Hoboken, and with the regiment, participated in the following engagements:

Bull Run, Va., July 21, 1861; Benson's Tavern, Va., Oct. 15, 1861; West Point, Va., May 7, 1862; Gaines' Farm, Va., June 27, 1862; Charles City Cross Roads, Va., June 30, 1862; Malvern Hill, Va., July 1, 1862; Manassas, Va., Aug. 27, 1862; Chantilly, Va., Sept. 1, 1862; Crampton's Pass, Md., Sept. 14, 1862; Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13 and 14, 1862, and May 3, 1863; Salem Heights, Va., May 3 and 4, 1863; Gettysburg, Pa., July 2 and 3, 1863; Fairfield, Pa., July 5, 1863; Williamsport, Md., July 6, 1863; Funktown, Md., July 12, 1863; Rappahannock Station, Va., Oct. 12, 1863; and Nov. 7, 1863; Mine Run, Va., Nov. 30, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 5 to 7, 1864; Spottsylvania, Va., May 8 to 10, 1864; Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12 to 16, 1864; North and South Anna River, Va., May 24, 1864; Hanover Court-House, Va., May 29, 1864; Tolopotomy Creek, Va., May 30 and 31, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 1 to 3, 1864; Before Petersburg, Va., (Weldon Railroad,) June 23, 1864; Snickers Gap, Va., July 18, 1864; Strasburg, Va., Aug. 15, 1864; Winchester, Va., Aug. 17, 1864; Charlestown, Va., Aug. 21, 1864; Opesquan, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; Fishers Hill, Va., Sept. 21 and 22, 1864; New Market, Va., Sept. 24, 1864; Mount Jackson, Va., Sept. 25, 1864; Cedar Creek and Middletown, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; Hatcher's Run, Va., Feb. 5, 1865; Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; Capture of Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; Sailors Creek, Va., April 6, 1865; Farmville, Va., April 7, 1865; Lee's Surrender, Appomattox, Va., April 9, 1865.

The Company, with the regiment, was mustered out of the service of the United States at Hall's Hill, Va., June 29, 1865, by Major A. M. Tyler.

COMPANY I.

The members of this company, except in a few instances otherwise noted, enlisted and were mustered into service in the summer of 1861, and served three years, or until the summer of 1864.

Captains—John D. P. Moore, res. Feb. 8, 1862; wounded at Gaines Farm June 27, 1862.

Bailey B. Brown, must. in March 1, 1863; sergt. June 4, 1861; 1st sergt. June 12, 1861; 2d lieut. U. S. C. Sept. 6, 1861; 1st lieut. Nov. 4, 1862; capt. res. Mount, res.; lost right arm at Spottsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864; bvt.-major March 13, 1865.

First Lieutenants—Augustus O. Evans, res. Aug. 5, 1861; Edward G. Brown, 1st sergt. June 4, 1861; 2d lieut. June 12, 1861; 1st lieut. vice Evans, res. Nov. 29, 1862.

Albert L. Blue, must. in Jan. 6, 1862; 2d lieut., Co. F, Oct. 7, 1862; 1st lieut. vice Brown, resigned.

Second Lieutenants—George B. Wright, must. in Nov. 4, 1862; private, Co. G, 2d lieut. vice Brown, promoted, res. Aug. 24, 1863.

First Sergeants—Nathaniel W. Smith, sergt. June 4, 1861; 1st sergt. Sept. 1, 1862; pro. 2d lieut. Co. E, Nov. 27, 1862.

Eleanor Holt, Jr., disch. at Trenton, circular 28, War Dept. A. G. O., Wash., D. C., June 28, 1863; corp. June 4, 1861; lieut. Sept. 6, 1861; re-enlisted Dec. 28, 1863; 1st sergt. March 1, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st batt.

Sergeants—John H. Selveira, corp. June 4, 1861; sergt. Sept. 1, 1862; Charles E. Anderson, corp. Sept. 1, 1862; sergt. Nov. 13, 1862.

James Sytle, corp. Nov. 13, 1862; re-enlisted Feb. 11, 1864; sergt. March 24, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st batt.

Corporals—John E. Bradford, corp. Sept. 6, 1861; pro. 2d lieut. Co. G, 4th Regt., Sept. 6, 1862.

Aaron S. Syms, appointed Nov. 13, 1862.

Louis Mitchell, appointed Dec. 10, 1862.

George W. Smith, appointed Dec. 10, 1862.

William Pearsen, appointed March 1, 1863.

Musician—Warrin Conklin, trans. from Co. F; drum-major May 21, 1861; musician March 22, 1862.

Wagoner—Albert Cox.

Privates—Charles A. Brown.

Henry Brown.

Bernard Colgan, Oct. 10, 1861 to Nov. 12, 1861; disch. at Trenton; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Reuben Croft, re-enlisted March 28, 1864, and served in Co. B, 1st batt., to June 29, 1865.

Thomas Davidson, March 21, 1864, to June 29, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

William Devey.

George L. Draumond.

David T. Eckerson, March 21, 1864, to June 29, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Charles H. Ferris.

Joseph Felson, disch. at Trenton, May 12, 1863.

John B. Gerhard.

Nash E. Grant.

William Grey.

Henry H. Hazard, Feb. 17, 1864, to June 29, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Joseph Holman, June 1, 1861, to Aug. 30, 1862; re-enlisted Feb. 11, 1864; disch. at Ward U. S. Genl. Hosp., Newark.

Charles F. Hopkins, June 10, 1861, to April 21, 1865; disch. at Trenton; corp. Jan. 1, 1862; private March 7, 1863; paroled prisoner.

William H. Johnson.

Michael Kirlin, corp. Sept. 20, 1862; private Dec. 1, 1862.

Patrick Kirlin.

George W. Lane, June 6, 1861, to June 29, 1865; re-enlisted Feb. 11, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

George W. Laddy, June 6, 1861, to June 29, 1865; recruit, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

William Laddy, Oct. 1, 1862, to June 29, 1865; recruit; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

John Lopez, May 21, 1861, to April 11, 1865; disch. at Trenton; paroled prisoner.

Thomas L. Lincoln.

Isaac M. Maxwell, June 24, 1861, to June 29, 1865; re-enlisted Feb. 16, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Thomas L. Moore.

William Morris.

Daniel Phelps, March 19, 1862, to June 29, 1865; recruit; re-enlisted March 21, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

George W. Pearsen.

Charles A. Shields, trans. from Co. K.

Privates—Jos. F. Slater, Feb. 29, 1864, to June 29, 1865; recruit, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

John L. Syms, disch. at Trenton; served in 4th Regt.

Charles Tanner, corp. Jan. 1, 1862; private April 29, 1862.

Walter E. Way.

DISCHARGED.

Sergeant—Richard A. Donnelly, at McKim U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Baltimore, Oct. 7, 1862; wounds received in action at Gaines Farm, Va.

Corporals—Madison M. Cannon, on Sept. 27, 1862, to accept commission as 1st lieut., 40th Regt. N. Y. Vols.

James B. Van Dyke, at Satterlee U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., West Philadelphia, Pa., March 28, 1863; disability.

William B. Lumlid, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, July 20, 1865; wounds received in action; corp. March 1, 1863; re-enlisted Feb. 11, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Privates—James S. Baptist, at Philadelphia, Oct. 11, 1862; wounds received in action at Gaines Farm, Va., June 27, 1862.

William Bradley, Nov. 3, 1862, by sentence G. C. M.

Michael Brown, at Camp Seminary, Va., Jan. 2, 1862; disability.

William B. Bunting, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, Aug. 17, 1865; wounds received in action; re-enlisted Feb. 11, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Alunzo Carpenter, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1862; wounds received at Gaines Farm, Va.

William E. Chandler, Aug. 26, 1863, to join signal corps.

George C. Clarkson, at Hammond U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Point Lookout, Md., Jan. 6, 1863; disability.

James Duncan, at Camp Seminary, Va., Dec. 9, 1861; disability.

George Fewkes, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Jan. 16, 1863; disability.

William S. Keary, Nov. 1, 1862, to join reg. army.

Henry Kohler, at Camp near White Oak Church, Va., Jan. 30, 1863; trans. from Co. K.

Mark Lawrence, at Lovell U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Portsmouth Grove, R. I., March 12, 1863; disability.

Mark Lapettit, at Chesapeake U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Fortress Monroe, Aug. 11, 1863; disability.

Phillip Liebrick, at Satterlee U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Sept. 18, 1862; disability.

John McGrath, on steamer "Herc," Pequoson Bay, Va., April 27, 1862; mental disability.

Patrick Rooney, at Annapolis, Md., July 25, 1862; wounds received in action.

Emil Sellier, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, Feb. 26, 1863.

John Smith, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Fortress Monroe, Va., Oct. 1, 1862; disability.

Theodore Tashira, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Jan. 27, 1863; disability; corp. June 4, 1861; private Sept. 1, 1862.

William T. Swanley, at First Division Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Jan. 16, 1863; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

Edward N. Hollinger, to Vet. Res. Corps, Nov. 1, 1863; discharged therefrom June 4, 1864; corp. Nov. 13, 1862; 1st sergt. Dec. 8, 1862.

Michael Jones, to Western Gun-Boat Service, Feb. 22, 1862; disch. therefrom Dec. 17, 1862.

Charles H. Brady, to Co. I, 4th Regt. June 1, 1864; re-enlisted Feb. 12, 1864.

John Burns, to Vet. Res. Corps, March 14, 1864.

John Carroll, to Vet. Res. Corps, Aug. 1, 1863; re-enlisted April 8, 1864.

Peter Farrell, to Vet. Res. Corps, Feb. 15, 1864; re-enlisted May 4, 1864.

Matthew Marsony, to Vet. Res. Corps, Sept. 1, 1863.

George Van Ghalen, to Vet. Res. Corps, Sept. 30, 1864; disch. therefrom June 4, 1864.

DIED.

First Sergeant—Allen H. Kirkham, killed in action at Gaines Farm, Va., June 27, 1862; sergt. June 4, 1861; 1st sergt. Sept. 6, 1861.

Sergeant—Samuel D. Wallington, died of chronic diarrhoea at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., White House, Va., June 5, 1864; corp. Dec. 18, 1862; sergt. March 1, 1863.

Corporals—James Danielson, missing in action at Salem Heights, supposed dead corp. Nov. 13, 1862.

Julius Hourriett, killed in action at Crumpton's Pass, Md., Sept. 14, 1862; corp. June 4, 1861; private June 21, 1861; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Company—Albert Lutz, missing in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 3, 1863, supposed dead, sep. April 1, 1862.

Kings, died at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Division 1, Alexandria, Md., of disease contracted in the prison, enlisted Feb. 29, 1862.

Privates—Edward Buttrick, died at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp. at Washington, of wounds received in action at Salem Heights.

Robert Cameron, killed in action at Mountain Pass, Md., Sept. 14, 1862.

Leonard Le Roy, sep. of lip, died at Camp Seminary, Va., Nov. 6, 1862.

George Kipp, died at Army Station, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 21, 1864, of wounds received in action at Wilderness, Va.

Patrick Minoutry, killed in action at Campian's Pass, Md., Sept. 14, 1862.

John W. Outwater, died of cholera at Back Tavern, Va., Sept. 15, 1862.

William H. Small, died of disease in Camp Union, Trenton, June 29, 1862.

Cornelius E. West, died at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, May 24, 1862.

COMPANY K.

The Regiment left the State June 28, 1861. In the latter part of 1863 Company K failing to muster a sufficient number of men, and being without officers was disbanded, the enlisted men having been assigned by transfer to Battery A, First Regiment, New Jersey Artillery, and to the several companies in this regiment. Authority was issued for a new company to fill this vacancy, and on the 30th of January, 1864, a full company was mustered into the service of the United States at Trenton, for three years.

(Where not otherwise indicated, these men were mustered in in January, 1864, and mustered out in June of July, 1867.)

Captains—Charles Cassinell, must. in June 6, 1861, dish. Aug. 1, disability.

Richard Foster, died at Douglas, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., June 14, 1864, of wounds received at Pottsylvania, Va.

First Lieutenants—William R. Harrison, must. in June 17, 1861; resigned Aug. 5, 1861.

Atlee C. Beving, must. in Aug. 13, 1861, 2d lieut., June 12, 1864, 1st lieut. rice Barriss, dish. Aug. 27, 1862.

William Meigs, must. in Feb. 11, 1864, private Jan. 11, 1864, 1st lieut. to fill original vacancy in new company, dish. Oct. 13, 1864.

Second Lieutenants—Frederick H. Ber, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, 1st sergt. June 6, 1864; 2d lieut. rice Deming, sep. Feb. 10, 1862.

William Milner, must. in Feb. 11, 1864, private Jan. 3, 1864, 2d lieut. to fill original vacancy in new company, dish. Sept. 6, 1864, disability.

First Sergeants—Jacob H. Hunt, 1st sergt., Feb. 12, 1861, priv. 1st lieut. Co. C, 4th Regt., Oct. 9, 1864.

Robert Halloway, sergt., Feb. 12, 1864, 1st sergt. March 10, 1865, served in Co. C, 1st Batt., must. Oct. 2, 1865.

Sergeants—William O. Smith, sergt., Feb. 12, 1864, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Samuel M. Matic, sergt., Feb. 12, 1864, dish. at Trenton, N. J., May 3, 1865, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Samuel J. Nixon, sergt., Feb. 12, 1864, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Emanuel Holman, corp., March 23, 1865, sergt., May 1, 1866, served in Co. A, 1st Batt.

Corporals—Edward McDaniel, corp., Feb. 12, 1864, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Vanderhof Ward, corp., May 1, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Henry Whitten, corp., May 1, 1865, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Musicians—John W. Craze, served in Co. A, 1st Batt.

Privates—George A. Fair, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Joseph J. Anson, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Ebenzer D. Apper, sep.

James R. N. Apper, dish. at Mt. Pleasant, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Thomas Redon, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

John H. Weman, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Privates—John Bowers, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Edward Garry, dish. at Mt. Pleasant, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., May 3, 1865.

James Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Peter Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Abraham Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

John E. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Michael Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Honors Todd, dish. at Trenton, June 2, 1862, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

William D. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Samuel T. Gandy, dish. at Trenton, June 29, 1862, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Malcolm F. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

William W. Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Patrick H. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

James H. Gandy, dish. at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., May 3, 1865, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Thomas H. Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Isaac N. Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

James F. Layton, must. in Jan. 7, 1864, sergt., priv. 2d lieut. Co. B, 1st Regt., July 8, 1865.

David M. H. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Hiram S. Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

George S. Gandy, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

John L. Gandy, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Peter Turner, must. in April 7, 1864, sergt., priv. 2d lieut. Co. D, 1st Batt.

John Van Order, dish. at Stoning, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., April 25, 1862, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Constant P. Van Vliet, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Marion West, served in Co. C, 1st Batt.

Charles Schuyler, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

RESERVE.

Sergeant—David W. Kenning, must. in June 6, 1861, at Summit, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Sept. 15, 1862, disability; corp., June 6, 1864, sergt., Feb. 2, 1862.

Frederick Deming, at Camp Seminary, Va., Jan. 2, 1862, disability.

Corporals—Louis Hagen, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Aug. 2, 1862, disability.

Benjamin Miller, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Aug. 14, 1862, disability.

William Mison, at Camp Princeton, Va., Aug. 3, 1861, disability.

Charles Buchanan, Oct. 7, 1861, to accept com. as 2d lieut. Co. C, 2d S. Y. Volk.

Lois Howe, at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 13, 1861, disability.

Musician—Matthew H. Conklin, at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 6, 1861.

Privates—Moses H. Beberth, at Camp Seminary, Va., Jan. 2, 1862.

Jacob I. Berry, at Brandy Station, Va., March 27, 1864.

Henry Bell, must. in June 6, 1861, dish. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 6, 1861, disability.

Joseph Clark, must. in Jan. 29, 1863, dish. at Summit House, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, Jan. 31, 1866, disability.

John Egan, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Chester, Pa., July 2, 1866; wounds received in action before Petersburg.

Henry Egan, must. in June 2, 1861, dish. at Camp Seminary, Va., Feb. 4, 1862, disability.

John W. Ford, at Mt. Pleasant, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., March 8, 1865, disability.

Conrad Fuhrman, at Camp Princeton, Va., Aug. 3, 1861, disability.

William Fuhrman, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., West Philadelphia, July 18, 1862, disability.

Adrian Gerlach, must. in June 13, 1861, dish. at Lowell, U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Portsmouth Grove, R. I., Nov. 29, 1862, disability.

Ferdinand Heaver, must. in June 22, 1861, dish. at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Philadelphia, March 17, 1863, disability.

Louis Herzog, must. in Jan. 21, 1862, dish. at Camp Seminary, Va., March 23, 1862.

Erna H. Hill, at Hill's Hill, Va., June 12, 1865; disability; served in Co. F, 1st Batt.

Adolph Kaufman, must. in June 6, 1861, dish. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 13, 1861; disability.

Daniel Knott, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, May 25, 1865, served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Private—H. Kirk, must. in June 22, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Oct. 16, 1861; disability.

Gustav Leonhardt, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 14, 1861; disability.

George Lowenthal, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Baltimore, July 28, 1863.

James McLuckey, disch. at Columbia U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 17, 1865; disability; served in Co. B, 1st Regt.

Jacob Mesdel, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Jan. 2, 1862; disability.

Charles Merkle, must. in June 27, 1861; disch. at Mt. Pleasant U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Sept. 1, 1862; disability.

James Milner, at Finley U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 17, 1865; disability; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Clifton Peer, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, Aug. 15, 1861; disability.

William Raible, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 13, 1861; disability.

Peter Reentzbeimer, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Annapolis, Md., June 22, 1862.

George F. Schaumburg, at Camp Seminary, Va., Jan. 2, 1862.

Fordham O. Schuyler, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark June 30, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Robert Smith, at Hall's Hill, Va., June 13, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Nelson Teets, at Ward U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Newark, May 3, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Peter Vright, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 6, 1861.

Louis Walter, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Seminary, Va., Sept. 14, 1861.

Charles Wandger, must. in June 13, 1861; disch. at Camp Princeton, Va., Aug. 3, 1861.

John Woster, must. in June 27, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Jan. 15, 1862.

Augustus Wurm, must. in June 6, 1861; disch. at Camp Princeton, Va., Aug. 3, 1861.

TRANSFERRED.

First Sergeant—Herman Schlick, must. in June 6, 1861; Co. Batt. A, 1st Regt., N. J. Art., Oct. 16, 1862; sergt. June 6, 1861, 1st Sergt. Aug. 1, 1861.

Sergeants—Ferdinand Werner, must. in June 6, 1861; to Batt. A, 1st Regt., N. J. Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Philip Philbus, must. in June 6, 1861; to Batt. A, 1st Regt., N. J. Art., Nov. 12, 1862; corp. June 6, 1861, sergt. Aug. 1, 1861.

Adolph Washman, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. C, April 6, 1863; corp. June 6, 1861; sergt. Feb. 23, 1862.

Corporals—Robert Bartman, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. F, Aug. 29, 1863.

Oscar Goslines, to Co. E, Dec. 19, 1862.

Arthur Pope, to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Henry Lachmund, to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

James Farlong, must. in June 27, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Adrian Young, must. in Oct. 16, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

William Jones, to Vet. Res. Corps, Jan. 10, 1865; disch. therefrom July 21, 1865; corp. Feb. 12, 1863; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Wagoner—George Kuchi, must. in June 13, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Privates—Aaron R. Abrams, must. in Jan. 21, 1862; to Vet. Res. Corps, 15, 1864; disch. Aug. 23, 1864.

Charles Breitzman, must. in June 23, 1861; to Co. C, March 20, 1862.

Lawrence Diehl, must. in June 27, 1861; to Co. C, Oct. 30, 1863.

John Duper, must. in April 2, 1862; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

John C. Emmons, must. in Aug. 16, 1861; to Co. C, April 6, 1861.

Jacob Febr, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. E, Nov. 4, 1863.

August Fuchtmacht, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. H, Dec. 17, 1861.

Rudolph Gettemann, must. in June 6, 1861; to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 13, 1864.

Frederick Gley, must. in Aug. 28, 1862; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Privates—Emil Hasser, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

John Hamilton, must. in June 27, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Patrick Harney, must. in June 3, 1861; to Co. H.

Charles Heim, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Charles Hexamer, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; to Co. E, Dec. 19, 1862.

Martin Hoelle, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. E, Dec. 19, 1862.

Leonard Hoffman, must. in Dec. 9, 1860; to Co. H.

Edward Ihl, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. C, April 6, 1863.

Charles C. Jackson, must. in Sept. 25, 1863; to Co. F.

Daniel Kane, must. in Oct. 1, 1863; to Co. H.

Henry Kehler, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. I.

Henry Krauer, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. C.

Henning Krauss, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

Jacob S. Kunkel, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Co. K, 4th Regt.

George Langgath, must. in June 22, 1861; to Co. C, April 6, 1863.

Griffin P. Lillis, must. in Oct. 2, 1863; to Co. F.

Adolph Lindemann, must. in June 13, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

Frederick C. Muller, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

Charles Munn, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Co. K, 4th Regt., June 4, 1864.

Charles Manning, must. in Feb. 8, 1862; to Co. K, Dec. 19, 1862.

Caspar Nubar, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

George Nix, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Co. F, 4th Regt.

Emil Noll, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

Henry Oldenag, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

John Pitschan, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art.

Bernard Riley, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 10, 1865; disch. July 30, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

George A. Schable, must. in June 6, 1861; to Co. I, April 18, 1864.

Herman Schellenberg, must. in Dec. 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

August Schmidt, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Charles Schmitt, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

John Sieman, must. in June 22, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

William Simont, must. in Sept. 25, 1863; to Co. F.

Michael Slane, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Co. K, 4th Regt.

Garret C. Smith, must. in Jan. 30, 1864; to Vet. Res. Corps Dec. 29, 1864; disch. Aug. 1, 1865; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Adam Stewerman, must. in June 13, 1861; to Co. C, April 6, 1863.

John Vroom, must. in Feb. 13, 1862; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

John Werner, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

Gottlieb Zimmermann, must. in June 6, 1861; to Bat. A, 1st Art., Oct. 16, 1862.

DIED.

Corporals—John A. Peer, at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., West Philadelphia, May 20, 1865; of wounds received in action; corp. Feb. 12, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Richard H. Vanuzen, at Summit House U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., West Philadelphia, July 10, 1864, corp. Feb. 12, 1864.

James Metcory, killed in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864, corp. Feb. 12, 1864.

John Whitten, killed in action at Spotsylvania Court-House, Va., May 14, 1864; corp. Feb. 12, 1864.

Musicians—Gerrard Schell, must. in June 6, 1861; died of consumption at Court-House Hosp., Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 7, 1862.

Privates—Gater R. Aney, died at Andersonville, Ga., July 15, 1864.

Robert Benn, killed in action before Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865.

Dennis Brown, missing in action at Wilderness.

Patrick Carey, missing in action at Wilderness.

Thomas Cook, missing in action at Wilderness.

James H. Crane, killed at Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

George Crawford, killed at Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

Thomas G. Davis, killed at Wilderness, May 5, 1864.

Samuel S. Eilsworth, died at Annet U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Dec. 19, 1864; served in Co. B, 1st Batt.

Private John Fisher, must. in Jan. 10, 1862, killed in action at Manassas, Va., Aug. 27, 1862.

Henry S. Fitzinger, taken prisoner Aug. 17, 1862, died at Manassas, Va., July 8, 1865, from effects of treatment while a prisoner.

James W. Howell, died at Andersonville, Ga., Sept. 9, 1864.

Monroe J. Huggins, must. in Jan. 10, 1862, died of disease at Camp Seminary, Va., March 28, 1862.

Charles A. Huggins, died of fever at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Baltimore, June 19.

John Kelly, died at Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 17, 1864.

Ernest Lee, must. in June 6, 1861, killed in action at Manassas Pass, Md., Sept. 14, 1862.

Jonathan P. Lott, died of fever U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, May 29, 1864, of wounds received in action at Wilderness.

Robert J. McAlams, must. in Feb. 7, 1862, died at Reg. Hosp., June 28, 1862, of wounds received in action at Gaines Farm, Va.

John Miller, died of typhoid fever at Andersonville, Ga., July 1, 1864.

Philip Nicklas, killed in action at Gaines Farm, Va., June 2, 1862, sergt. Jan. 9, 1864.

Peter Ransom, died of typhoid pneumonia at Carver U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 10, 1864.

Mortimer Roberts, wounded and taken prisoner in action at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864, exposed to fire.

Martin Stivers, died at U. S. A. Genl. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 18, 1864, of wounds received in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864.

Henry Spohn, must. in Sept. 20, 1861, died at Mechanicsville, Va., June 16, 1862.

Bartek Toste, missing in action Aug. 17, 1862, died of diarrhea at Danville, Va., Dec. 2, 1864.

John H. Tucker, taken prisoner Aug. 17, 1862, exchanged Feb. 22, 1863, died of disease April 9, 1867, while on furlough from Camp Parole.

Charles Ulrich, must. in June 22, 1861, died Oct. 1, 1862.

William S. Van Fleet, died at Hosp., Fredericksburg, Va., May 24, 1864, of wounds received in action at Spotsylvania Court-House.

Richard Vincent, Jr., died of diarrhea at Andersonville, Ga., July 2, 1864.

William A. Wright, died of pneumonia at Danville, Va., Jan. 24, 1865.

second division, third corps; then to the first brigade, fourth division, second corps; then to the third brigade, third division, second corps.

A large portion of the regiment re-enlisted in 1862 for three years, or during the war, and those not re-enlisting at that time were ordered to Trenton at the expiration of term already enlisted for, where they were mustered out of service by Capt. James W. Long, U. S. A., Sept. 7, 1864. Three companies of this regiment, B, C and G, were recruited in Hudson County, and with the regiment participated in the following engagements:

Siege of Yorktown, Va., April and May, 1862; Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862; Fair Oaks, Va., June 1 and 2, 1862; Seven Pines, Va., June 25, 1862; Savage Station, Va., June 29, 1862; Glendale, Va., June 30, 1862; Malvern Hill, Va., July 1, 1862, and Aug. 15, 1862; Bristow Station, Va., Aug. 27, 1862; Bull's Run, Va., Aug. 29 and 30, 1862; Chantilly, Va., Aug. 31, 1862; Centreville, Va., Sept. 2, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13 and 14, 1862; Chancellorsville, Va., May 3 and 4, 1863; Gettysburg, Pa., July 2 and 3, 1863; Wapping Heights, Md., July 24, 1863, McLean's Ford, Va., Oct. 13, 1863; Mine Run, Va., Nov. 29 and 30 and Dec. 1, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 5 and 6, 1864; Spotsylvania, Va., May 8 to 11, 1864; Spotsylvania C. H., Va., May 12 to 18, 1864; North Anna River, Va., May 23 and 24, 1864; Tolo-potamy Creek, Va., May 30 and 31, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 1 to 5, 1864; Before Petersburg, Va., June 16 to 23, 1864; Deep Bottom, Va., July 26 and 27, 1864; Mine Explosion, Va., July 30, 1864; North Bank of James River, Va., Aug. 14 to 18, 1864; Fort Sedgwick, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; Poplar Spring Church, Va., Oct. 2, 1864; Boydton Plank Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; Fort Morton, Va., Nov. 5, 1864.

FIELD AND STAFF

Colonel—Samuel H. Starr
Lieutenant-Colonel—Gershom Mott
Major—William S. Traux
Adjutant—Caldwell K. Hall
Surgeon—James C. Fisher
Assistant Surgeon—A. W. Woodhull
Quartermaster—James F. Risdig
Chaplain—Thomas S. Freign

COMPANY B

Captain—John Ramsey, must. in Aug. 28, 1861, sergt. maj., March 7, 1862, lieutenant Oct. 21, 1862, and of 8th Regt. April 1, 1864.

Sergeant—M. Hawley, must. in Jan. 6, 1862, 2d lieut. Aug. 28, 1861, March 31, 1862, capt. vice Ramsey, pro. maj., 8th Regt., Nov. 16, 1863.

Thomas G. Morrow, must. in June 1, 1861, sergt. Aug. 17, 1861, sergt., 1st sergt., March, 1862, pro. 2d lieut. Co. E, May 7, 1862, trans. from Co. A, vice Hawley, pro. trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

First Lieutenant—Edward Kelly, must. in Aug. 28, 1861, res. Feb. 6, 1862.

Thomas Kelly, must. in Jan. 6, 1862, 1st sergt. Aug. 17, 1861, 2d lieut. March 31, 1862, 1st lieut. vice Hawley, pro., pro. capt. Co. I, Nov. 16, 1863.

Myraud Carey, must. in Jan. 6, 1862, must. out Sept. 7, 1864, comp. Aug. 17, 1861, 1st sergt., 1st lieut. vice Kelly, pro.

George W. Jackson, must. in July 19, 1861, trans. from Co. H, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

CHAPTER XX.

HUDSON COUNTY IN THE REBELLION.

(Continued.)

Fifth Regiment was organized under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 22, 1861. The regiment was fully organized, equipped and officered by the 22nd day of August, at which time it was duly mustered into the service of the United States for three years, at Camp Olden, Trenton, N. J., by Capt. Alfred T. A. Torbert, U. S. A. The regiment left the State Aug. 29, 1861, and upon its arrival in Washington went into camp at Meridian Hill, Washington, D. C., where it remained until the early part of December, 1861, at which time it, with other regiments, was ordered to report to Gen. Joseph Hooker, near Budd's Ferry, Md., where it was brigaded with what was known as the Third Brigade, Hooker's division.

This regiment constituted one of the four regiments composing what was generally known as the Second Brigade, New Jersey Volunteers, and was attached first as above stated, afterwards to the third brigade,

Second Lieutenants—George H. Mott, must. in Jan. 6, 1863; sergt. Co. K, 2d licit. vice Thomas Keagy pro. pro. 1st licit. Co. C. May 19, 1863.

Philip Russell, must. in June 9, 1863; 1st sergt. Co. C Dec. 10, 1862; 2d licit., vice Mitchell pro.; disch. Dec. 9, 1862.

Joseph O. Neil, must. in Oct. 22, 1863; sergt., Co. I, pro. 2d licit., vice Russ D. Ellis; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

First Sergeants—Robert Smith, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Aug. 31, 1861; corp. Jan. 1, 1862; sergt.; 1st sergt., March 21, 1863.

Sergeants—Sylvester W. Saffery, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; sergt. Dec. 1, 1861; jr. 2d licit. Co. C March 2, 1862.

Samuel Mustard, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; trans. from Co. A; sergt. Sept. 1, 1862.

Roderick Egau, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; sergt. March 24, 1864.

Corporals—Michael Bowie, must. in Oct. 8, 1861; must. out Oct. 8, 1864; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Musicians—Joseph E. Healey, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Wagoners—James Dunlan, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Privates—Charles Bedford, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

James Brannigan, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John Brink, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; trans. from Co. A.

Michael Burke, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Robert Walton, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Dunbar H. Case, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Feb. 3, 1863; trans. from Co. A; paroled prisoner.

John Cassidy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 12, 1864; corp. Sept. 1, 1862; private.

William H. Flynn, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Michael Fox, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

James Haggerty, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

James King, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

William Lees, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out March 1, 1863; trans. from Co. A, disch. at Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md.; paroled prisoner.

Annasius H. Lynn, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Charles McLeer, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Albert McMorthy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Bernard M. Donahy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Feb. 20, 1863; corp. Aug. 17, 1861; private Oct. 8, 1861; disch. at Trenton, N. J.; paroled prisoner.

John McFreely, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Sylvester Noiset, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

George W. Tranger, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Aug. 31, 1864; trans. from Co. A.

George T. White, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

DISPARSED.

Sergeants—John Q. Adams, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Trinity U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Aug. 18, 1862; disability.

James Clark, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Corporals—Peter McElroy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., March 21, 1863; disability.

Michael Savage, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Seminary U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Sept. 1, 1862; disability.

David McKernan, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Clifton U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Dec. 24, 1862; disability.

Arthur Quinn, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 20, 1862; paroled prisoner.

Joseph S. Lauer, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. H. sp., Newark, N. J., March 29, 1864; wounds received in action; trans. from Co. A, corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Privates—William Ashard, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Feb. 13, 1863; disability; trans. from Co. A.

Samuel Bennett, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at camp, Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 30, 1861; disability.

John W. Brown, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Columbus U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Oct. 8, 1862; disability.

Patrick Carroll, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., April 2, 1863; disability.

Privates—Jacob Cloe, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Patrick Conannon, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at camp near Falmouth, Va., April 21, 1863; disability; corp. Aug. 17, 1861; private May 26, 1862.

John Connors, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Annapolis, Md., July 14, 1862; wounds received on picket near Fair Oaks, Va., June 22, 1862.

Thomas Conners, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

William Cooper, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Patrick Deegan, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

John Delaney, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

William T. Dimond, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Michael Garrigan, must. in Nov. 7, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Thomas Gibson, must. in Nov. 13, 1861; disch. at St. Elizabeth U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Feb. 9, 1863, of wounds received in action at 2d Bull Run, Va.; left leg amputated.

Cornelius H. Gotschling, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at camp on Lower Potomac, Md., March 15, 1862; disability.

Morris F. Marshall, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Camden St. U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Oct. 29, 1862; disability.

Thomas McGee, must. in Oct. 15, 1861; disch. at Columbus, O., Nov. 11, 1862; disability.

James McKeenan, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Tilton U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Wilmington, Del., Aug. 3, 1863; disability; corp. Aug. 17, 1861; private June 28, 1862.

Charles McTay, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Cheeseman's Creek, Va., May 26, 1862; disability.

James Nelson, must. in Oct. 8, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

Charles Nessborue, must. in Sept. 16, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.

John O'Connell, must. in Oct. 14, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 16, 1863.

Larkin Quinn, must. in Oct. 1, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., July 3, 1862; paroled prisoner.

Thomas A. Rolow, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 30, 1862; disability.

David S. Rice, must. in Oct. 12, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 23, 1862; paroled prisoner.

Edward Sandall, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Aug. 14, 1862; disability.

John Savage, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 22, 1862; disability; trans. from Co. A.

Nelson Schaffer, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; disch. at Bull's Ferry, Md., June 13, 1862; disability.

Joseph K. Simpson, must. in Oct. 8, 1861; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Dec. 9, 1862; disability.

George A. Woolley, must. in Sept. 16, 1861; disch. at Chestnut Hill U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., April 7, 1863; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

Musicians—John McCoy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; sergt. Nov. 1, 1862; private; must.; re-enlisted Jan. 3, 1864.

Privates—Philip Ackerman, recruit; trans. to Co. B, 7th Regt.

James W. Andrews, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 17, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 15, 1864; trans. from Co. A.

William H. Bean, must. in July 13, 1864; drafted, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

John Campbell, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Jeremiah Galvin, must. in June 25, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Edward Gross, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Lewis Hendricks, must. in Aug. 27, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

William Leopold, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Enfiled, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Fritz Leaning, must. in Aug. 29, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Patrick McCrumick, must. in Aug. 3, 1861; recruit, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt., trans. from Co. E, 7th Regt.

Joseph Noidy, must. in Aug. 29, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

William O'Daniel, must. in Aug. 14, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 15, 1861; disch. therefrom Aug. 17, 1861, trans. to Co. A.

Patrick O'Keefe, must. in Aug. 17, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 29, 1864, disch. therefrom Aug. 17, 1864.

John Bush, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; recruit, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Michael Shea, must. in Oct. 16, 1861, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

James A. Shagers, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

Lewis Thacher, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

John Walton, must. in Feb. 27, 1861; recruit, trans. to Co. E, 7th Regt.; trans. from Co. A.

Charles L. Whitman, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

DEAD

Sergeants—William Fitzpatrick, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 3, 1862.

Robert Thomas, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

John M. Davis, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; died July 13, 1863, of wounds received in action at Gettysburg, Pa.; buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section B, grave 2; sergt. June 1, 1863.

Charles J. Essene, must. in Sept. 11, 1861; killed in action at Manassas, Va., Aug. 27, 1862; sergt. July 23, 1862.

Corporals—Eugene S. Vanwinkle, must. in Nov. 13, 1861; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; corp. June 1, 1863.

Musicians—John Hofferson, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

Privates—James Arbnuckle, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; died of disease at Patent Office, U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Oct. 19, 1862; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

James Bell, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; died at Armory Square, U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., July 12, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.; trans. from Company A; re-enlisted Feb. 25, 1864.

Martin Bennett, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

John Bushman, must. in Feb. 27, 1861; recruit; missing in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; supposed dead.

Hamilton, must. in Feb. 27, 1861; recruit; died at Draft Rendezvous, Trenton, N. J., March 7, 1864.

William Harris, must. in Oct. 9, 1861; died at Presbyterian Church U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Nov. 30, 1862; of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

Patrick McKenna, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Yorktown, Va., June 8, 1862; of wounds received in action at Yorktown, Va.; buried at Yorktown National Cemetery, Va., Section D, grave 185.

William Thomas, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; killed in action before Petersburg, Va., June 17, 1864; buried at Poplar Grove National Cemetery, Va., Division A, Section B, grave 18; corp. Aug. 17, 1861, private Sept. 30, 1861.

COMPANY C

Captains—William J. Sewell, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; pro. lieutenant July 7, 1862; col. Oct. 21, 1862; res. July 2, 1864.

John Gamble, must. in Jan. 6, 1861, 1st lieutenant Co. C, Aug. 28, 1861; capt. Sewell pro.; killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

First Lieutenants—George S. Russell, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; pro. capt. Co. D, May 10, 1862.

Cyrus H. Rogers, must. in Jan. 6, 1863; sergt. Co. D, 1st lieutenant Russell, pro. capt. Co. K, May 19, 1863.

George K. Mitchell, must. in June 1, 1863; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; 2d lieutenant Co. B, May 16, 1863, 1st lieutenant vice Rogers pro., acting adjt.

Second Lieutenants—William H. Hill, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; pro. 1st lieutenant Co. I, May 10, 1862.

Charles W. Agnett, must. in June 1, 1861, 1st lieutenant Co. G, 1st lieutenant Hill pro.; disch. Nov. 31, 1862; of wounds received in action.

George J. Lawver, must. in Jan. 6, 1861; lieutenant Aug. 19, 1861; pro. 1st lieutenant Co. A, July 7, 1862; pro. 1st lieutenant Co. F, March 7, 1864; trans. from Co. A.

Walter W. Nelson, must. in April 3, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1861; sergt. Co. B, 2d lieutenant; Lawver pro.

Timothy White, must. in May 1, 1864; acting from the A. trans. to Co. G, 7th Regt.

First Sergeants—Russell Phelps, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; corp. Aug. 10, 1861; sergt. Dec. 10, 1861; pro. 2d lieutenant Co. B, May 3, 1864.

Abraham H. Austin, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. Aug. 1863; re-enlisted Feb. 26, 1861; 1st sergt. pro. 2d lieutenant Co. I, Oct. 13, 1863.

Edward Connelly, must. in Oct. 19, 1861; must. out Oct. 15, 1864; sergt. Aug. 19, 1861; sergt. Sept. 7, 1862.

Sergeants—Gustavus Goetz, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John W. Ferris, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Aug. 19, 1861; must. March 13, 1864.

Edward Miller, must. in Oct. 13, 1861; must. out Oct. 15, 1864; sergt. Sept. 1, 1862.

Corporals—Patrick Larkins, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. July 8, 1863.

Christian Rapp, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Nov. 8, 1863.

Bernard J. Deery, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. March 12, 1862.

Privates—William Vandy, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Edward Besigkommer, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; sergt. Aug. 19, 1861; private March 13, 1864.

Thomas L. Crowell, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John Fitch, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Benjamin Healy, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

William Herrow, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

David J. Huntington, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Philip Lynch, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Fredrick Oldensamer, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. May 1, 1864; private.

James Riley, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

George Scherler, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Joseph Stock, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John J. Switzer, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John J. Switzer, Jr., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. March 8, 1864.

John Thomas, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Peter Van Piskirk, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

William Waldron, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

DISBARRED

Sergeant—Patrick Campbell, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 23, 1862; corp. Aug. 11, 1864; sergt.

Corporals—Archibald E. Noble, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Gen. Vincent Camp, Alexandria, Va., April 8, 1863; disbarred; corp. Nov. 8, 1862.

Anthony W. Lukon, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Bull's Ferry, Md., June 2, 1862; disability.

Peter York, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. Army General Hospital, York, Pa., Oct. 23, 1862; disability.

James Wright, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Bull's Ferry, Md., June 13, 1862; disability.

George G. Curtis, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862; to join regular army; corp.

Richard Gill, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 27, 1862; to join regular army.

John Elberg, must. in Dec. 10, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Sept. 6, 1862; wounds received in action at Gaines Farm, Va.

- Musgrave, John P., must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., March 19, 1862; disability.
- Private Robert Appleton, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 13, 1862; disability.
- Robert F. Appleton, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at 3d Corp. Hosp., Fort Lyon, Va., Dec. 9, 1862; disability.
- Christian Aenbiter, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 14, 1862; disability.
- Edward Barrett, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Lovell U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Portsmouth Grove, R. I., Dec. 1, 1862; disability until Aug. 19, 1861; private Feb. 9, 1862.
- Thomas Beagan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Budd's Ferry, Md., May 8, 1862; disability.
- James Bergen, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Annapolis, Md., Dec. 26, 1862; disability.
- Edward T. Blake, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 22, 1862; paroled prisoner.
- Louis Bradbury, must. in Sept. 6, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 23, 1862; paroled prisoner.
- Nathan Buchanan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Budd's Ferry, Md., May 6, 1862; disability.
- Nathaniel Buchanan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8, 1862; disability.
- Dennis M. Buks, must. Aug. 22, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regt. army; trans. from Co. G.
- James Campbell, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regt. army.
- Cadisto Castro, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Fort Columbus, New York Harbor, April 8, 1863; disability; corp. Aug. 19, 1861; private Feb. 13, 1862.
- William L. Cook, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.
- Isaac L. Croft, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Chester, Pa., April 10, 1863; disability.
- Joseph Eick, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; recruit; disch. at New York City, Nov. 29, 1863, wounds received in action.
- Patrick Gill, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Seminary U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Jan. 19, 1863; wounds received in action.
- George Gray, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; discharged at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Park Landing, Md., Oct. 2, 1862; disability.
- Robert Harlow, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 29, 1863; disability.
- Peter Hessler, must. in Oct. 13, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., May 6, 1864; disability.
- William Johnson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; discharged at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 3, 1863; disability.
- Thomas Kiley, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Aug. 13, 1863; disability.
- Fredrick Knodel, must. in Aug. 28, 1861; disch. at Fort Hamilton, New York Harbor, Oct. 1, 1862; disability.
- John Madigan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Fort Hamilton, New York Harbor, Oct. 1, 1862; disability.
- Jacob Miller, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 3, 1862; disability.
- Lonnie Miller, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp Alexandria, Va., June 28, 1863; disability.
- Joseph Mitchell, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Camp near Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 30, 1861; disability.
- Thomas Morey, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.
- William L. Murphy, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 2, 1863; disability.
- John P. G. Norton, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.
- Martin Ryan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to join regular army.
- Fredrick Sasseack, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. at Union Hotel, U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Aug. 22, 1862; disability.
- John Summerville, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Sept. 8, 1862; disability.
- Yesh Thompson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 3, 1862; disability.
- Stewart Turner, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Jan. 21, 1864; disability.
- Thomas J. Wells, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Camp near Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 30, 1861; disability.
- John Wilson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; disch. at Camp near Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 29, 1861; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

- Sergeant—Charles S. Miller, must. Sept. 23, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. H, 7th Reg.; corp., sergt., Sept. 9, 1864.
- Corporal—John H. H. Sams, must. in April 11, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.; corp.
- Richard D. Grigietti, must. in Oct. 15, 1861; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg. Oct. 31, 1864; corp. Sept. 9, 1863; re-enlisted Feb. 25, 1864.
- Henry Bach, must. in March 25, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg., Nov. 6, 1864; corp.
- Privates—Herman Adler, must. Aug. 30, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- William Albert, must. in Aug. 11, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Joseph Bauer, must. in Aug. 16, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Alfred Bellard, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Dec. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Aug. 19, 1864.
- Fredrick Buerger, must. in Jan. 4, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- John Carrol, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Samuel Cochran, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Patrick Coffey, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Robert G. Davis, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Francis De Bock, must. in Oct. 1, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Lulu Dempsey, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Peter Donahue, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Julius Dorndorf, must. in Aug. 13, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- John J. Duerr, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- John Dugan, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Jan. 15, 1864; disch. therefrom as com. sergt. Aug. 11, 1864.
- Martin Fout, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.; re-enlisted Dec. 31, 1863.
- Patrick Flinn, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Regiment.
- Joseph Geissler, must. in Sept. 14, 1863; recruit; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 17, 1864.
- John Grunshaw, must. in Aug. 26, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Valentine Gunthers, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Regiment.
- Jacob Hilyard, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Alexander King, must. in Aug. 19, 1861.
- James Lane, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.; re-enlisted Dec. 31, 1863.
- Michael G. Manning, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 31, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 30, 1864.
- Patrick McCaffrey, must. in Aug. 30, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Robert McClellan, must. in Dec. 23, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Michael McTigh, must. in Dec. 23, 1863; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 15, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 29, 1864.
- Michael Moss, must. in Aug. 27, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- John P. Moynighan, must. in Dec. 21, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. I, 7th Reg.
- Edward Peel, must. in August 19, 1861; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.; re-enlisted Feb. 25, 1864.
- John Peters, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- John Roth, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
- Fredrick Rothfus, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.

Privates—Philip Kolp-Ross, substitute; trans to Co. G, 7th Reg. Simon Schmidt, must. in Jan. 25, 1861, recruit; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.
 Adolphus Versteijn, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 15, 1864; dishc. therefrom Aug. 20, 1864.
 Louis J. Wender, must. in Aug. 6, 1861, recruit; trans. to Co. H, 7th Reg.
 James Whitaker, must. in Aug. 20, 1861, drafted; trans. to Co. G, 7th Reg.

DEED.

Corporal—William Heatley, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, died in the hands of the enemy Aug. 23, 1862, of wounds received in action at Bull Run.
Privates—John Beck, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, died of consumption at Camp on Lower Potomac, Md., Feb. 9, 1862.
 William M. Donaldson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, died at Fortress Monroe, Va., May 13, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.
 Anton Fries, must. in Oct. 7, 1861, killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.
 Charles Giesel, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; recruit; missing in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862, supposed dead.
 Harvey T. Heatley, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, died of typhoid fever in Mt. Pleasant U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 26, 1862, buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.
 Augustus Hoffman, must. in Sept. 24, 1861, recruit, died at Trenton, N. J., Sept. 27, 1862.
 Henry Horne, must. in Oct. 12, 1861; recruit, killed in action at Cold Harbor, Va., Mass. 31, 1864.
 Henry Johnson, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; died of chronic diarrhea at Ft. Det., U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Oct. 29, 1862, buried at National Cemetery, Alexandria, Va., grave 877.
 William Newell, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, died at Falmouth, Va., Dec. 21, 1862, buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va., Div. C, Section B, grave 196.
 John Ryan, must. in Oct. 5, 1861, killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863, buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section C, grave 5.

COMPANY G.

Captain—Edward C. Hopper, must. in Aug. 23, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
First Lieutenants—John Giesel, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, pro. capt. Co. C, July 7, 1862.
 Edward P. Berry, must. on Jan. 6, 1863; 2d Lieut. Co. A, May 16, 1862; 1st Lieut. res. Campbell, Pa., capt. Co. E, May 19, 1863.
Second Lieutenants—Simon P. White, must. in Aug. 29, 1861, died May 22, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.
 Robert H. Besse, 1st sergt., Aug. 22, 1861; 2d lieut. res. Whitty, died.
 Matthew S. Austin, must. in Jan. 6, 1863, must. out Sept. 7, 1864; com. sergt. Aug. 29, 1861.
First Sergeants—John M. Flanagan, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, sergt. Aug. 22, 1861, 1st sergt. June 1st 1862, pro. sergt.-major, Dec. 1, 1862.
 Archibald M. Kay, must. in Dec. 22, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864; sergt., Aug. 22, 1861; 1st sergt. December 1, 1862.
Sergeants—John Hays, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Martin Hoyle, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. June 1, 1862, sergt. May 3, 1863.
Corporals—Samuel H. Craig, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 David McManus, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
Musicians—Martin Bergus, must. in Aug. 19, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
Wagoner—William Vanborn, must. in Aug. 19, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
Privates—Nicholas Baker, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Albert Halsted, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Thomas R. Hunt, must. in Aug. 11, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864; trans. from Co. A.
 John J. Irving, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Smith Kitchen, must. in Aug. 11, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; trans. from Co. A.
 John M. Fougall, must. in Aug. 28, 1862, recruit, pro. 2d Lieut. Co. E, 13th Regt., June 3, 1863.
 David Miller, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Aug. 22, 1861; private June 29, 1862.
 Robert Overland, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Privates—William B. Perkins, must. in Aug. 2, 1861, must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Francis Quinn Jr., must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.
 Samuel Williamson, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

DISCHARGED.

Corporals—Alexander Reed, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 Isaac J. Yeomans, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at New York City, Jan. 2, 1863, disability.
 James S. Flanagan, must. in Dec. 2, 1861, dishc. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Nov. 24, 1862, wounds received in action at Bull Run, Va., corp. July 1, 1862.
 John Buckley, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at Fifth Street U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 13, 1862, wounds received in action.
 John Bennett, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at Union Hotel U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Aug. 5, 1862, disability.
Privates—Thomas Almond, must. in Aug. 12, 1861, dishc. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., July 13, 1863, disability.
 Jacob Barr, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; dishc. at Camp Distribution, Va., May 17, 1863; S. O. 54, par. 41, War Dept., A. G. O. Wash.ington, D. C., Feb. 6, 1864.
 Samuel S. Bradley, must. in Oct. 21, 1861; dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 Patrick Carroll, mustered in Dec. 15, 1861; dishc. at Washington, D. C., May 23, 1862, disability.
 John Cox, must. in Oct. 6, 1862; recruit, dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 Charles W. Dougherty, must. in Aug. 18, 1861, dishc. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., March 24, 1863, disability.
 John Dunn, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 25, 1862, wounds received in action.
 William Fairhurst, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dishc. at Second Division Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., May 23, 1864, disability.
 John Gallagher, must. in Aug. 29, 1861, dishc. at camp near Fort Lyon, Va., Sept. 24, 1862, disability.
 James Given, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Fortress Monroe, Va., Oct. 7, 1862, disability.
 Andrew Grant, must. in Oct. 18, 1861; dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 James Graves, must. in Sept. 6, 1861, dishc. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., April 13, 1863, wounds received in action.
 Moses W. Green, must. in Aug. 29, 1861, discharged at camp near Falmouth, Va., Feb. 8, 1863, disability.
 Jesse Hand, must. in Sept. 5, 1861, dishc. at camp near Washington, D. C., Nov. 26, 1861, disability.
 Thomas Handey, must. in Aug. 29, 1861, dishc. at Douglas U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Oct. 29, 1862, disability.
 William Harrison, must. in Aug. 28, 1861, recruit; taken prisoner at Newtown, Va., June 9, 1864, confined in Rebel Army while prisoner; released at Upper Marlboro, Md., June 28, 1864; confined in prison at Annapolis, dishc. therefrom Sept. 11, 1865, to enlist in 9th U. S. Infantry.
 James W. Harpison, must. in Aug. 14, 1861, dishc. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Feb. 31, 1863, disability; trans. from Co. A.
 Patrick Kane, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; discharged Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 Daniel Luther, must. in Aug. 14, 1861, dishc. at Seminary U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Aug. 18, 1862; disability, trans. from Co. A.
 Michael McCarty, must. in Aug. 9, 1864, recruit, discharged Oct. 14, 1864, disability.
 Robert McFarland, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at Washington, D. C., May 23, 1862, disability.
 McElroy, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dishc. at McKim U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., July 5, 1862, disability.
 Joseph McWilliam, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; dishc. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., April 29, 1863, disability.
 George Minzel, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. at Hud's Ferry, Lower Potomac, Md., May 30, 1862, disability.
 John Murphy, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army.
 Jefferson L. Musselman, must. in Aug. 14, 1861, dishc. Oct. 26, 1862, to join Regular Army, trans. from Co. A.

Privates—William Nativity, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; disch. at 3d Corps Hosp., near Fort Lyon, Va., Nov. 18, 1861; disability.
James I. Parson, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 28, 1862; disability.
James Pennington, must. in Oct. 18, 1861; disch. at Camden Street U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Nov. 5, 1862; disability.
Charles E. Peterson, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at Judiciary Square U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Aug. 20, 1862; disability.
Henry Powell, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. Oct. 20, 1862, to John Knapton's Regt.
Patrick Schuman, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; discharged Oct. 20, 1862, to John Knapton's Regt.
William Swainwell, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at Camp Kearney, Va., Oct. 21, 1862; disability.
Jacob H. Stork, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. Oct. 20, 1862, to John Knapton's Regt.; trans. from Co. A.
Elihu S. Stoughton, must. in Nov. 6, 1861; disch. Oct. 26, 1862, to John Knapton's Regt.
Frederick Van Fleet, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. at Camp Kearney, Va., Oct. 21, 1862; disability; trans. from Co. A.
James Walsh, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at Annapolis, Md., April 18, 1863; disability.
James Weaver, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Fort M. Henry, Md., Nov. 19, 1862; disability.
Robert Whitebrother, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at camp on Chickahominy Creek, Va., April 20, 1862; disability.
Robert Young, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Dec. 13, 1862; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

Sergeant—Stephen B. Post, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Co. H, 7th Regt.; re-enlisted March 26, 1864.
Private—W. Brown, must. in Dec. 9, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; must. again in 1862; sergt.
Samuel Wells, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; must. again in 1862; sergt. Sept. 23, 1862; re-enlisted Dec. 26, 1863.
Company Quartermaster—Betts, must. in July 26, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; corp.
Henry H. Boney, must. in Dec. 17th, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; corp. July 1, 1862.
William Knott, must. in May 26, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. H, 7th Regt.; corp. Sept. 8, 1864.
Private—James Arnheiter, must. in July 27th, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
William Arnold, must. in Aug. 18, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
George M. Beck, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Co. C, corp. Aug. 22, 1861; private.
John Bonney, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; trans. from Co. C.
George Bonness, must. in Aug. 31, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Charles Collins, must. in March 26, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
William H. Elwood, must. in Dec. 30, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
John Gosson, must. in Nov. 20, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Bill Graham, must. in August 5, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
James Higgins, must. in Dec. 9, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Theophil Long, must. in Aug. 18, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Robert Mason, must. in June 21, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Michael M. O'Leary, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 15, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 29, 1864.
Thomas J. McCarthy, must. in Sept. 8, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
William McFarland, must. in Dec. 12, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Edward Metcalf, must. in Dec. 19, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Nov. 15, 1863; returned to regt. March 11, 1864; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Thomas McGrath, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, March 15, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 29, 1864.

Privates—Jeremiah F. McSweeney, must. in Aug. 14, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Matthew Murphy, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Patrick Murphy, must. in Jan. 21, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. E, John Murry, must. in Aug. 2, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Ayers Noble, must. in Sept. 11, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Leonard Odell, must. in Oct. 5, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Thomas Patton, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.; re-enlisted Feb. 25, 1864.
Charles Sheehan, must. in Aug. 12, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
Knuch Taylor, must. in Feb. 11, 1864; recruit.
Thompson, James, must. in Aug. 11, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.
John White, must. in June 30, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 7th Regt.

DIED.

Sergeant—James McConnell, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; corp. Aug. 22, 1861; sergt. June 1, 1862.
Corporal—John McCurn, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; supposed dead. corp. Jan. 1, 1864.
Abraham Mills, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; died at camp near Yorktown, Va., April 30, 1862, of wounds received on picket; buried at Yorktown National Cemetery, Va., Section B, grave 237; corp. Jan. 1, 1862.
Thomas Sweeney, must. in Aug. 15, 1863; recruit; missing in action near Cold Harbor, Va., May 30, 1864; supposed dead; corp. March 22, 1864.
Privates—Charles Booth, must. in Jan. 27, 1863; recruit; wounded and missing in action; supposed dead.
Joseph H. Farwell, must. in Aug. 20, 1863; recruit; died of diarrhoea at Andersonville, Ga., June 1, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga.; grave 1, 522.
John H. Freedland, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; died at Fortress Monroe, Va., May 20, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.; buried at National Cemetery, Hampton, Va., Row 13, Section D, grave 40.
John L. Friant, must. in Oct. 21, 1861; died of rheumatism at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Dec. 11, 1862.
Henry Henney, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; died of chronic dysentery at Harrison's Landing, Va., July 10, 1862.
John O. Heath, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; missing in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; supposed dead. trans. from Co. A.
Peter McComb, must. in May 27, 1864; recruit; missing in action before Petersburg, Va., June 22, 1864; supposed dead.
John McConnell, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; killed in action at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862.
Charles McGovern, must. in Jan. 20, 1864; recruit; killed in action before Petersburg, Va., June 16, 1864.
John McKenzie, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; died at Government Insane Asylum, Washington, D. C., Sept. 25, 1862.
Robert B. Taylor, must. in June 20, 1861; recruit; died at Richmond, Va., Feb. 1, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Richmond, Va.; prisoner of war.
William Wilson, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; killed in action at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864.

FINAL RECORD UNKNOWN.

William Palmer, must. in Dec. 20, 1863; recruit; absent in Hosp. wounded at Spotsylvania Court-House, Va. May 12, 1864.

Sixth Regiment.—This was also one of the four regiments composing the Second Brigade of New Jersey Volunteers, and was raised under the same order as that of the Fifth, and took part in all the movements, battles, etc., in which the other regiments of the brigade were engaged. One company, C, was recruited in Hudson County.

FIELD AND STAFF.

Colonel—James T. Hatfield.

Lieutenant-Colonel—Stinson B. Stroud.

Major—John F. Van Leer.

Adjutant—Leonard J. Gordon.

Quartermaster—Joseph Woodward.

Surgeon—John Wiley.

Assistant Surgeon—Bedford Sharp.

Chaplain—Samuel T. Moore.

COMPANY C.

Captain—James B. Hughes, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; res. July 11, 1862; wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.

John Williams, must. in Jan. 2, 1863; 1st lieut. Co. D, Sept. 9, 1861; capt. res. Hughes, resigned; pro maj. April 6, 1864.

First Lieutenants—Jacob J. Van Riper, must. in Sept. 9, 1861, pro capt. Co. F, March 25, 1862.

John Howeth, must. in Jan. 2, 1863; 2d lieut., Sept. 9, 1861; 1st lieut. res. Van Riper pro. died at St. Albans Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 19, 1863, of wounds received in action at Chancellorsville, Va.

Joseph C. Lee, must. in Sept. 21, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864, 2d lieut. Co. G, July 11, 1862; 1st lieut. res. Howeth, died.

Second Lieutenants—Edwin Hughes, must. in April 12, 1862; 1st sergt., Aug. 24, 1861; 2d lieut. res. Howeth, promoted, res. June 7, 1862.

Rufus H. Case, must. in Jan. 24, 1863; pr. 1st sergt., Jan. 1, 1862; 2d lieut. res. Hughes, resigned; pro 1st lieut. Co. G, Jan. 1, 1863.

John H. Hoagland, must. in March 24, 1863; sergt. Co. G, 2d lieut. res. Case, promoted, dismissed July 14, 1864.

Sergeant—John Finney, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Jan. 9, 1863; @ regt., June 1, 1864.

Corporal—John Quirk, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Jan. 1, 1864.

Musician—George Brandon, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Drummers—John Connor, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John Flanely, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John Galton, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out June 21, 1865; dish. at Trenton, N. J., paroled prisoner.

Stephen Pals, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864; corp. Aug. 24, 1861; private Oct. 12, 1863.

John McCarthy, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

Henry M. Vreeland, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

John Wagner, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

William W. Zindle, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Sept. 7, 1864.

DISCHARGED.

Sergeant—Michael O'Neill, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Camp Becker, Budd's Ferry, Md., March 18, 1862; disability.

Corporals—Herbert Clute, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Camp near Falmouth, Va., April 18, 1863; disability.

Frederick Doorman, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. Sept. 3, 1863; wounds received in action at Gettysburg, Pa.; right arm amputated.

Wagoner—Stephen F. Jaquins, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., April 1, 1862; disability.

Drummers—Clarkson B. Beatty, must. Nov. 7, 1861; dish. at Camp Keary, near Alexandria, Va., Oct. 17, 1862; disability.

Patrick Branigan, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Camp Olden, Trenton, N. J., Aug. 30, 1861; disability.

Charles Clark, must. in Aug. 30, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., March 18, 1862; disability.

John Connors, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. Sept. 9, 1862.

Thomas Corcoran, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Camp near Falmouth, Va., April 18, 1863; disability.

Patrick Corneady, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., June 2, 1862; disability.

William Diller, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., June 2, 1862; disability.

Michael Dillan, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., June 2, 1862; disability.

Robert Dittich, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., July 6, 1864; disability.

Charles Drano, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 25, 1863; disability.

Private—James Farrell, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., May 6, 1864; disability.

Henry S. Hand, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at New York City, March 13, 1864; disability.

Thomas Hines, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; discharged.

John Holmes, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Fort Ellsworth, Va., Feb. 25, 1861; disability.

George Hubbs, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., York, Pa., March 10, 1863; disability.

Edward Keesee, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Budd's Ferry, Md., March 18, 1862; disability.

John Kelley, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 16, 1863; disability.

Peter Kely, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 24, 1863; disability.

James Martin, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 28, 1863; disability.

Patrick Martin, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Sept. 2, 1861; disability.

Patrick McCarthy, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Camp near Alexandria, Va., Oct. 25, 1862; disability.

Patrick McMahon, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Hosp. Budd's Ferry, Md., April 1, 1862; disability.

Joseph Skinner, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., April 20, 1863; disability.

John Thurston, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Jan. 14, 1863; disability.

Frank Vollier, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Sept. 5, 1861; disability.

Henry Walton, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; dish. at Bellevue U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., New York City, Jan. 15, 1863; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

First Sergeants—David Smith, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; sergt. Aug. 24, 1861; re-enlisted, Dec. 27, 1864; 1st sergt., June 1, 1864.

Sergeants—John Pryor, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Aug. 19, 1863; dish. therefrom Aug. 29, 1864.

John J. Perrine, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted Feb. 22, 1864.

Thomas Bradie, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Aug. 19, 1863; dish. therefrom June 1, 1864; corp. Aug. 24, 1861; sergt., May 15, 1862.

Musician—August Zindle, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted, Jan. 1, 1864.

Privates—William H. Alward, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. G, 8th Reg.

John Coleman, must. in May 15, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. K, 8th Reg.

Michael Conner, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted, Dec. 27, 1863.

George Coppermier, must. in Aug. 10, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

Michael Doran, must. in May 26, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

Michael Driscoll, must. in May 27, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

John Evans, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Nov. 15, 1863; dish. therefrom Sept. 3, 1864.

Michael Freely, must. in May 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

Henry Herman, must. in Sept. 21, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted, Jan. 1, 1864.

Edwin Hughes, must. in Aug. 17, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

Owen Kelley, must. in May 27, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

William B. Mariner, must. 13 Aug. 21, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted Dec. 20, 1863.

Thomas McBride, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted Dec. 27, 1863.

William Minor, must. in Jan. 23, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg., Oct. 12, 1864.

Amos Moore, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted, Jan. 4, 1864.

James H. W. Moore, must. in Nov. 7, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.

Privates—James Mulheron, must. in Oct. 8, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.
 Jeremiah O'Brien, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.
 Henry E. Skinner, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.; corp. Aug. 24, 1861; private Dec. 20, 1861; re-enlisted Dec. 20, 1861.
 Joseph Skinner, (2) must. in Feb. 11, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.
 John V. Smith, must. in Feb. 19, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.
 Thomas Smith, must. in June 6, 1861; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 8th Reg.
 Robert Storr, must. in Jan. 29, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F, 8th Reg.
 Peter Van Winkle, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Co. E, 8th Reg.; re-enlisted Dec. 27, 1861.
 Nehemiah Wright, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; trans. to Veteran Reserve Corps, Aug. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Aug. 22, 1861.

FIELD.

First Sergeant—Charles H. Wise, must. in Aug. 21, 1861; killed in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1861; buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va., Division B, Section C, grave 320; sergt. Aug. 24, 1861; 1st sergt. Aug. 4, 1863; re-enlisted Dec. 27, 1861.

Sergeant—Thomas Hughes, must. in August 24, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

Corporal—George Buddick, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; killed in action Petersburg, Va., June 17, 1861; buried at City Point National Cemetery, Va., Section D, Division 1, grave 91.

Privates—Edward Boorman, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; died at Mill Creek Hoop, Fortross Monroe Va., May 13, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.; buried at Hampton National Cemetery, Va., Row 2, Section D, grave 13.
 Daniel Cleary, mustered in Aug. 24, 1861; died in Hoop, Jersey City, N. J., June 22, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.

Thomas Graham, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; died in Hoop, Jersey City, N. J., June 2, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.

George Higgins, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; killed in action at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862; buried at National Cemetery, Arlington, Va., grave 59, Row 13, Section E, Block 2.

Henry Hillman, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; died of diarrhoea at Andersonville, Ga., May 31, 1864, buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga.; grave 1508.

Owen Maloney, must. in Nov. 4, 1861; died of diarrhoea at Andersonville, Ga., July 4, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 3254.

George Mason, must. Aug. 24, 1861; died at College U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Georgetown, D. C., Sept. 11, 1862, of wounds received in action at Bull Run, Va., Aug. 29, 1862; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

Hugh Molligan, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; recruit; killed in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1861.

Austin A. Skinner, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; died of scurvy at Andersonville, Ga., July 1, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 2724.

James Tompkinson, must. in Sept. 9, 1861; drowned while bathing near Camp Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 2, 1861; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

Patrick Tuman, must. Aug. 24, 1861; died in Mill Creek Hoop, Fortross Monroe, Va., May 14, 1862, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.; buried at Hampton National Cemetery, Va., row 3, Section D, grave 10.

Joseph Winton, must. in Aug. 10, 1861; recruit; killed in action before Petersburg, Va., June 17, 1864.

Martin Williams, must. in Nov. 7, 1861; missing in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 3, 1863; died of disease at Richmond, Va., Nov. 10, 1863, prisoner of war.

Seventh Regiment was raised under a requisition made by President Lincoln on July 24, 1861, for four regiments from this State, and was one of the famous Second Brigade New Jersey Volunteers. Company F of this regiment was recruited in Hudson County, and was engaged in the many battles and fatiguing marches endured by the old brigade.

FIELD AND STAFF.

Colonel—Joseph W. Kuylen.
Lieutenant Colonel—Zerah A. Cushman.
Major—3 Dallas Meloy.
Adjutant—Francis Price, 1st
Quartermaster—Thomas P. Johnson.
Surgeon—D. W. C. Hough.
Assistant Surgeon—Alvin Satterthwaite.
Chaplain—Julius H. Ross.

COMPANY F.

Captains—Frederick Cooper, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; pro. maj. Jan. 8, 1863.

Alpheus Withersell, must. in Jan. 18, 1863; 1st lieut. Sept. 18, 1861; adj. Oct. 31, 1862; capt. vice Cooper, pro. 5th Aug. 21, 1863, of wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.

Edward Dingler, must. in Sept. 6, 1861; sergt. Sept. 2, 1861; sergt. vice Withersell, died.

Thomas G. Morrow, must. in June 1, 1861; must. out July 17, 1861; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt., vice Dingler, must. out; hospital-maj. April 9, 1865.

First Lieutenants—Richard Cooper, must. 30 Nov. 2, 1863; private Sept. 2, 1861; sergt. Sept. 1, 1862, 2d lieut. May 24, 1863; 1st lieut. vice Dingler, pro.; disch. March 27, 1865; 8 O. 1863, Par. 16, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

George W. Jackson, must. in July 19, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt., vice Cooper, maj. 8.

Second Lieutenants—Adolphus T. Chazotte, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; killed in action at Seven Pines, Va., June 25, 1862.

Warren W. Barnes, must. in Nov. 2, 1863; corp. Sept. 8, 1861; sergt. Dec. 1, 1862; 2d lieut. vice Cooper, pro.; pro. 1st lieut. Co. H Jan. 28, 1864.

Joseph O'Neil, mustered in Oct. 22, 1861; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt., vice Barnes, pro.; dismissed Jan. 30, 1865, absence without leave, S. O. 85, Par. 53, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., Feb. 21, 1865.

William H. Powers, must. in March 14, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; sergt.-maj.; 2d lieut. vice O'Neil, dismissed.

First Sergeants—James Murphy, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1861; corp. Sept. 2, 1861; sergt. Oct. 2, 1862; 1st sergt. Dec. 1, 1862.

Alexander Duffies, must. in Nov. 1, 1862; recruit; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.; pro. 2d lieut. Co. B, April 29, 1865.

Christopher Betts, must. in July 26, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. as corp. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; 1st sergt. June 1, 1865.

Sergeants—James H. Onslow, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; pro. 2d lieut. Co. D Nov. 14, 1862.

Charles A. Fosselman, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; pro. sergt.-maj. Oct. 2, 1863.

Charles Sheffell, must. out Oct. 7, 1861; corp. Sept. 2, 1861; sergt. Oct. 2, 1862.

Francis O'Brien, must. in Dec. 9, 1861; must. out Dec. 9, 1861; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Edwin Ellis, must. in Sept. 2, 1862; must. out June 4, 1865; recruit; transferred from Co. A, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Cornelius A. Boose, must. in Aug. 28, 1862; recruit; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; sergt. April 19, 1865; discharged at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

John Hainey, must. in Nov. 14, 1862; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; corp. April 10, 1865; sergt. June 1, 1865.

Andrew Brannan, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute; corp. April 1, 1865; sergt. June 1, 1865.

Samuel Mills, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Corporals—James Gilman, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Feb. 22, 1865; disch. at Trenton, N. J.; paroled prisoner.

Henry J. Garrison, must. in Oct. 21, 1861; must. out Oct. 21, 1861; corp. Aug. 1, 1862.

George W. Preston, must. in Oct. 4, 1862; recruit; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; pro. sergt. March 28, 1865.

Privates—David Almond, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864, corp. Dec. 1, 1862.

Martin O'Gorman, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864; corp. Oct. 1, 1862.

James Pinkean, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864, corp. July 1, 1864.

Owen O'Reilly, must. in Dec. 17, 1861; must. out Dec. 17, 1864, trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

Peter H. Simpkins, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865. Trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt. Aug. 1, 1862.

Edwards Tuttle, must. in March 2, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; corp. March 14, 1865.

Daniel Pritton, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute; corp. April 19, 1865.

Charles Dubois, must. in March 26, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; corp. June 1, 1865.

Musician—John Logan, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

William McFarland, must. in Dec. 12, 1861; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; priv. principal musician April 16, 1864.

Wagoner—Joseph Clark, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

Privates—Elijah C. Ager, must. in July 25, 1864; must. out May 4, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. A, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Orders War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

Christian Ambruster, must. in July 27, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Orders War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

William Ament, must. in Aug. 18, 1861; must. out July 22, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Owen Bance, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out June 4, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Thomas Barron, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

William B. Bean, must. in July 15, 1864; must. out June 10, 1865; dish. trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins. War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Patrick Buckley, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

John Campbell, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Bartlett Clancy, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

John Clancy, must. in Oct. 31, 1862; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

John W. Clark, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out Aug. 3, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.; dish. at Ward United States Army General Hospital, Newark, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

William Donnelly, must. in Feb. 7, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865.

Dennis Donovan, must. in Aug. 31, 1863; must. out July 22, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Orders War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

John Dougherty, must. in Aug. 24, 1864; must. out July 22, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Orders War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

William H. Edwards, must. in Dec. 30, 1863; must. out July 21, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Orders War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

John C. Ewary, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

Fredrick Feigel, must. out July 17, 1865.

Joseph Finkelnauer, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 6, 1864; com. 2d Lieut. Co. H., March 28, 1865; not must.

Jeremiah Galvin, must. in June 25, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.

John Graham, must. in Aug. 5, 1863; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Edward Gross, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.

James Hendley, must. in Aug. 3, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. E, 15th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Valentine Herman, must. in March 1, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

James Higgins, must. in Dec. 9, 1863; must. out Dec. 8, 1865; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Privates—Felix Hoedtz, must. in March 6, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

August Hoff, must. in March 1, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Henry G. Hopper, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864; 10th-d prisoner.

Charles H. Hull, must. in March 5, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

Jonathan Husser, must. in Feb. 20, 1865; must. out Feb. 18, 1865; recruit. substituted from Co. B, 5th Regt.

William Hutchison, must. in Aug. 23, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. as corp. from Co. F, 5th Regt.; private.

David Hurler, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Andrew Johnson, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Thomas Keenan, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Isaac J. Kemble, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Lewis Kerr, must. in March 7, 1865; must. out March 7, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.

William Kirby, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Thomas J. Lough, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

William Lehart, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Rudolph Leffer, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. H, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

William Leopold, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.

Louis Lutz, must. in March 4, 1865; must. out March 4, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. A, 5th Regt.; dish. orders War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

James Logan, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

Fritz Loving, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Peter McBurn, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

Martin McDonnell, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

Edward McEwen, must. in Dec. 14, 1863; must. out Dec. 14, 1864; trans. from Co. H, 5th Regt.

Patrick McFisher, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

Yaron Morse, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

Robert Nasson, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; priv. hospital steward; Sept. 1, 1862.

Thomas Mulvaney, must. in Feb. 8, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Matthew Murphy, must. in Sept. 23, 1865; must. out June 8, 1865; recruit. trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; dish. at U. S. Army Hosp., Washington, D. C., orders War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

John Murry, must. in Aug. 2, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

John Myers, must. in Aug. 15, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

William S. Newham, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865.

William E. Nichols, must. in Aug. 24, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. H, 5th Regt.

Adams Noble, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out June 8, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; dish. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Buchwalter S. Odium, must. in March 2, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D, 5th Regt.

Thomas Patton, must. in Aug. 23, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Charles Pugh, must. in Aug. 16, 1861; must. out July 22, 1865; trans. as corp. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; substitute; dish. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Privates—John M. Roberts, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Oct. 7, 1864.

John Ruh, must. in Aug. 12, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Samuel H. Sherron, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Charles Sheehan, must. in Aug. 12, 1863; must. out June 7, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.; disch. at Augur U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., G. O. 77, Par. 6, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

James A. Singers, must. in Aug. 29, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Lewis Thatcher, must. in Aug. 26, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Calvin C. Turpin, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

George E. Usherwood, must. in Dec. 27, 1864; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. C.

Theodore Warner, must. in Aug. 22, 1863; must. out June 4, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Joseph Walcott, must. in March, 3, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

James M. Walsh, must. in Aug. 22, 1863; must. out July 17, 1861; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Jonathan Wentzell, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; must. out July 17, 1861; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Charles L. Whiteman, must. in Aug. 30, 1864; must. out June 4, 1865; substitute; trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; disch. at camp, near Washington, D. C., G. O. 26, headquarters Army of Potomac, May 17, 1865.

Henry Wiend, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute; disch. at Philadelphia, Pa., S. O. 16, Ins. & headquarters Dept. of East Jan. 27, 1868.

Alexander S. Wilson, must. in March 1, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

William A. Wilson, must. in March 1, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Fritz Wold, must. in March 3, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865; substitute.

Augustus Wood, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Feb. 7, 1864.

Thomas Wright, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; must. out Feb. 7, 1864.

DISCHARGED.

John Grimes, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., July 22, 1862; disability.

Corporals—John R. Atcheson, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., New York Harbor Aug. 11, 1862; disability.

Andrew B. Bradbury, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at United U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Nov. 8, 1862; disability.

Musician—James L. Edwards, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at United U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., July 30, 1862; disability.

Privates—William Applegate, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; disch. at camp, from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Nathaniel Barnes, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., June 2, 1862; disability.

Loran L. Bodell, must. in Oct. 18, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Sept. 5, 1862; disability.

Michael Brady, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 26, 1863; disability.

Thomas Brouley, must. in Nov. 7, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22, 1862; disability.

Daniel Brown, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at camp, near Harrison Landing, Aug. 8, 1862; disability.

Patrick Burke, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Budd's Ferry, Md., June 9, 1862; disability.

Charles E. Bush, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 23, 1863; wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va.

James C. Cummings, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., York, Pa., Nov. 5, 1862; wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

Privates—Luko Dempsey, must. in Sept. 30, 1862; recruit; disch. at Newark, N. J., Aug. 22, 1865; wounds received in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Peter Fay, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Hammond U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Point Lookout, Md., Jan. 5, 1863; disability.

Patrick Fisher, must. in Oct. 17, 1861; disch. at Batteries U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., West Philadelphia, Pa., March 31, 1863; disability.

William Farron, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., March 27, 1863; disability.

Charles Frederick, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Fort McHenry, Md., Sept. 20, 1862; wounds received in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

Edward Goodwin, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Finley U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Dec. 1, 1862; disability.

Augustine W. Griffing, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22, 1862; disability.

James Hoggins (1), must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Jan. 26, 1863; disability.

George D. Hopper, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Fort McHenry, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 3, 1862; disability.

Samuel J. Johnson, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Camp Hooker, Va., Sept. 27, 1862; disability.

Joseph Law, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Nov. 12, 1862; disability.

Thomas Mack, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., April 30, 1863; disability.

George McCarthy, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at camp, near Budd's Ferry, Md., June 2, 1862; disability.

John McCormick, must. in Oct. 21, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Fort Hamilton, New York Harbor, Sept. 21, 1862; wounds received in action, June 25, 1862.

Andrew McLeod, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 3, 1863; disability.

John McWilliams, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Meridian Hill, D. C., Nov. 30, 1861; disability.

William Mulligan, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29, 1862; disability.

John Nugent, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Oct. 7, 1861; orders of War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

Leonard Oshel, must. in Oct. 5, 1863; recruit; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., July 15, 1862; wounds received in action at Wilderness, Va., May 5, 1864; trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

William Paxton, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., June 3, 1862; disability.

Edison F. Platt, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., Nov. 2, 1863; disability.

Elmer H. Rogers, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; discharged at camp on Lower Potomac, Md., March 15, 1862; disability.

John Ryan, must. in Nov. 7, 1861; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., March 14, 1863; disability.

Ralph Shubbs, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., June 29, 1863; disability.

Richard Tilton, must. in Oct. 4, 1861; disch. at Patent Office U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Dec. 2, 1862; disability.

Philip Turley, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 15, 1862; wounds received in action.

TRANSFERRED.

Private Sergeant—William H. Powers, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. E; trans. from Co. A, 5th Regt.

Sergeants—John Herman, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. J March 1, 1865; trans. as corp. from Co. D, 5th Regt.; sergt.

Edward H. Ridgway, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Sept. 2, 1864; corp. Feb. 1, 1864; sergt. Dec. 1, 1862.

Corporals—Samuel S. Drayton, must. in Sept. 19, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Aug. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Sept. 19, 1864.

William Bellfield, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Aug. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Sept. 2, 1864; corp. Feb. 1, 1863.

Elisha W. Reed, must. in Aug. 22, 1861; trans. to Co. I May 1, 1865; trans. from Co. F, 5th Regt.

Musician—Albert Lawrence, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 15, 1864; disch. therefrom Sept. 2, 1864.

Private—George Baron, must. in Nov. 15, 1861; trans. to Co. D.

Thomas Brannan, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 15, 1864.

Private—Charles C. Conter, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Co. D; corp. Sept. 21, 1861.

Michael Durey, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 10, 1864; disch. therefrom Sept. 2, 1864.

Joseph Dwyer, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Co. D; disch. Aug. 20, 1862; re-enl. Sept. 22, 1862.

Edward Eichelhart, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863, disch. therefrom Sept. 3, 1864.

John Ford, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Co. D; disch. Aug. 20, 1862.

Louis C. Gasson, must. in Nov. 2, 1861, recruit, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 1, 1865, disch. therefrom July 20, 1865, trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

James Heggen (2), must. in Aug. 23, 1861, recruit, trans. to Co. D.

John Hennessey, must. in Aug. 20, 1861, trans. to Co. D.

John Hushan, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863, disch. therefrom Sept. 2, 1864.

William Kludick, must. in Oct. 12, 1861, trans. to Co. D; corp. Oct. 12, 1861, private.

Leopold Long, must. in Aug. 18, 1861, recruit, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Jan. 2, 1864; disch. therefrom Aug. 11, 1865, trans. to Co. G, 5th Regt.

Patrik McCormick, must. in Aug. 3, 1861, recruit, trans. to Co. I March 1, 1865; trans. from Co. B, 4th Regt.

Jeremiah F. Mesweeney, must. in Aug. 14, 1861, recruit, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Nov. 8, 1864, disch. therefrom July 20, 1865, trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

Robert W. Milligan, must. in Nov. 7, 1861, trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom Nov. 11, 1864.

Benjamin P. Pili, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, trans. to Co. D.

Andrew Riege, must. in May 14, 1861, drafted, trans. to Co. D.

James Robinson, must. in June 2, 1861; substitute, trans. to Co. A, 8th Regt., April 10, 1865.

Daniel Stewart, must. in Nov. 15, 1861, trans. to Co. D.

John White, must. in June 30, 1861, recruit; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Feb. 1, 1865; disch. therefrom Aug. 10, 1865, trans. from Co. G, 5th Regt.

DEAD.

First Sergeant—James F. Bonshaw, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; died July 11, 1863, of wounds received in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; corp. Sept. 4, 1861; sergt. Aug. 1, 1862; 1st sergt.

Sergeant—Lewis White, died near Gordon's Mills, Va., May 3, 1861, of wounds received in action; buried at National Cemetery, Culpeper Court-House, Va., grave 325, row 10, Section A, block 1; corp. Sept. 2, 1861; sergt. Nov. 1, 1861, re-enl. Jan. 11, 1864.

Musician—John McCoy, must. in Aug. 17, 1861; died of pneumonia at Alexandria, Va., June 3, 1865; buried at National Cemetery, Alexandria, Va., grave 3301; trans. from Co. B, 6th Regt.

Private—James Bennett, must. in Sept. 2, 1861, killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863, buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section B, grave 10.

John Fitzpatrick, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; missing in action at Malvern Hill, Va., July 1, 1862; supposed dead.

Thomas Gallagher, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862; buried at Yorktown National Cemetery, Va., Section F, grave 7.

Robert A. Garrison, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862; buried at Yorktown National Cemetery, Va., Section B, grave 26.

Joseph Hall, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section B, grave 20.

James Horgan, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Williamsburg, Va., May 5, 1862.

John M. Laughlin, must. in Oct. 10, 1861; died of cholera during 1st Regt. Hosp., Va., Aug. 20, 1862.

Jeremiah McNeill, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section B, grave 11.

Charles P. Platt, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; died at New York City, N. Y., July 24, 1863, of wounds received in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; corp. Dec. 2, 1861; private Sept. 1, 1863.

Henry Thomas, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; buried at National Cemetery, Gettysburg, Pa., Section B, grave 21.

Private—Charles Ryan, must. in Sept. 2, 1861; died at Columbia S. Army Gen. Hosp., Washington D. C., Oct. 20, 1863.

FUGITIVE RECORD.

Private—Lewis Hendricks, must. in Aug. 27, 1861, substitute, trans. from Co. B, 5th Regt.; absent, sick, in Field Hosp., S. Army Gen. City Point, Va.

James Harrington, must. in Feb. 28, 1865, substitute; absent, sick, in hosp. since May 5, 1865.

Theodore Kinker, must. in March 1, 1865, substitute; absent, sick, at Emory Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 7, 1865.

James Scaulin, must. in Aug. 22, 1861, trans. from Co. F, 4th Regt.

Michael Shea, must. in Oct. 15, 1863, trans. from Co. B, 11 Regt.; absent, in confinement, since May 20, 1864.

James Thompson, must. in Aug. 13, 1864, recruit, trans. from Co. G, 11 Regt.; absent, in confinement.

John Therman, must. in June 8, 1864, substitute, taken prisoner in action near Petersburg, Va., June 22, 1864, escaped July 25, 1864.

CHAPTER XXI.

HUDSON COUNTY IN THE REBELLION.

(Continued.)

Ninth Regiment.—This regiment was raised under an authorization from the War Department to recruit a regiment of riflemen in this State. Recruiting was commenced in September, 1861, the first muster being made at Camp Olden, Trenton, on October 5th. It remained in camp until December 4th, when it proceeded to Washington, where it arrived on the 6th, with a full regiment fully equipped, and reported to Gen. Casey, and was ordered into camp on the Bladensburg turnpike, about one mile from the capital, where it remained until Jan. 4, 1862, when it proceeded by rail to Annapolis, where it became a part of the celebrated Burnside expedition, and was assigned to the command of Brig.-Gen. Jesse L. Reno. To follow the regiment through its experience on ship-board, its marches, countermarches, fatigues, trials and difficulties, its victories and defeats, and its final triumphant march homeward, would occupy more space than can be allotted to the one company, V, raised in Hudson County.

We can only say that no regiment in the service was more highly honored with brave and efficient officers, and no regiment was composed of better men, and none did more honor to itself and its State, than did the Ninth New Jersey. To show the kind of stuff the Ninth were made of, we give the following extract from Foster's "New Jersey and the Rebellion," p. 235:

"While before Winton, and in reverse, Private Charles Bull, Company A of the Ninth Regiment, from New Jersey, went into the woods for pleasure, carrying a small wooden stick in his hand, when he came up with three rebel soldiers under a tree, their loaded guns, with equipments standing by their side at the tree; to secure the retreat and to kill the men that they were his prisoners was the work of a moment, and carrying the stick himself, with the men walking before him, Charles returned to camp, still with the wooden stick in his hand. This march just the soldiers and cavalry general, and his arrival in the camp of the Ninth, caused much amusement among the men." Story of the Rebellion.

New Jersey should ever be proud of this regiment, which did so much to achieve a just and honorable peace. Its story is the story of the war; its eulogy is its own great deeds. During its term of service it participated in forty-two battles and engagements, and traveled by rail and on foot a distance of seven thousand six hundred and fifty-two miles. Entering the service with eleven hundred and forty-two men, and at various times strengthened by recruits, the mean strength of the regiment when mustered out was only six hundred men. Eight officers offered their lives a sacrifice on the nation's altar, while twenty-three received wounds in battle, most of them of a serious nature. Sixty-one enlisted men were killed in battle, and four hundred wounded. Forty-three men died from wounds and one hundred from disease. The total loss of the regiment from all causes was six hundred and forty-six men. The entire number of officers and men taken prisoners were one hundred and thirty, forty-seven of this number dying while in the hands of the enemy.

The original field and staff of this regiment were as follows:

Colinell, Joseph W. Allen, drowned at Hatteras Inlet, N. C., Jan. 15, 1862; Major, Charles A. Hedmann, who subsequently was made colonel, and Nov. 20, 1862, was made brigadier-general United States Volunteers; Abram Zabriskie was the first adjutant, afterwards made colonel of the regiment; James Stewart, Jr., was captain of Company H, and subsequently colonel of the regiment. The lieutenant-colonels were James Wilson, William B. Curtis and Samuel Huddy; Major, Thomas B. Applegate; and the adjutants were William H. Abel, Edward S. Carroll, F. G. Coyle and E. W. Welsted; Quartermasters, Samuel Keys and R. J. Berdan; Surgeons, F. S. Wedder, A. W. Woodhull and F. B. Gillette; Chaplains, T. Drumm, J. J. Carrell and G. Lane.

The principal battles and engagements of the regiment are as follows:

Roanoke Island, N. C., Feb. 8, 1862; Newberne, N. C., March 14, 1862; Fort Macon, N. C., April 25, 1862; Young's Cross-Road, N. C., July 27, 1862; Rowell's Mill, Nov. 2, 1862; Deep Creek, N. C., Dec. 12, 1862; Southwest Creek, N. C., Dec. 13, 1862; before Kingston, N. C., Dec. 13, 1862; Kingston, N. C., Dec. 14, 1862; Whitehall, N. C., Dec. 16, 1862; Goldsborough, N. C., Dec. 17, 1862; Comfort, N. C., July 6, 1863; near Winton, N. C. July 26, 1863; Deep Creek, N. C., Feb. 7, 1864; Cherry Grove, N. C., April 14, 1864; Port Walthall, Va., May 6 and 7, 1864; Swift Creek, Va., May 9 and 10, 1864; Drury's Bluff, Va., May 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16, 1864, five days in succession; Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, 1864, ten days in succession; Petersburg, Va., from June 20 to Aug. 24, 1864; Gardner's Bridge, N. C., Dec. 9, 1864; Foster's Bridge, N. C., Dec. 10, 1864; Butler's Bridge, N. C., Dec. 11, 1864; near Southwest Creek, N. C., March 7, 1865; Wise's Fork, N. C., March 8, 9 and 10, 1865; Goldsborough, N. C., March 21, 1865.

COMPANY E.

Captains—Uriah De Hart, must. in Oct. 22, 1861; res. Dec. 8, 1862.

William H. Abel, must. in Dec. 23, 1862, 1st lieut. Oct. 22, 1861; adjt. Feb. 10, 1862; capt. vice De Hart, res. pro. capt. and A. A. G. U. S. Vols. March 11, 1863.

Benjamin W. Hopper, must. in July 1, 1863; must. out July 12, 1865; sergt. Sept. 20, 1861; 2d lieut. May 16, 1862; 1st lieut. Dec. 23, 1862; capt. vice Abel, promoted.

First Lieutenants—Albert B. Beach, must. in May 16, 1862; 2d lieut. Oct. 22, 1861; 1st lieut. vice Abel, pro.; dismissed Dec. 24, 1862.

Edward W. Welsted, must. in Aug. 1, 1863; private Co. H; 1st lieut. vice Hopper, pro.; pro. adjt. Sept. 28, 1864.

Amos H. Evans, must. in Oct. 16, 1861; 2d lieut. Co. F April 13, 1861; 1st lieut. vice Welsted, pro.; pro. capt. Co. D April 22, 1865.

Henry Hopper, must. in May 28, 1863; must. out July 12, 1865; private Sept. 30, 1861; corp. Dec. 24, 1862; sergt. Nov. 7, 1863; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; 2d lieut. Co. C Feb. 10, 1865; 1st lieut. vice Evans, promoted.

Second Lieutenants—Charles F. Bonney, must. in Dec. 23, 1862; sergt., maj. May 1, 1862; 2d lieut. vice B. W. Hopper, pro.; res. June 22, 1863.

Frederick G. Coyle, must. in Sept. 23, 1863; sergt. Sept. 29, 1861; 1st sergt. Feb. 19, 1863; 2d lieut. vice Bonney, res.; pro. adjt. April 13, 1864.

George L. Bryant, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; 1st sergt. Co. K; 1st lieut. vice Coyle, pro.; pro. 1st lieut. Co. G April 1, 1865.

First Sergeants—James B. Goldsmith, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; pro. 2d lieut. Bat. E, 1st Regt. N. J. Art. Sept. 8, 1863.

Richard J. Berdan, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; corp. Sept. 20, 1861; sergt. Feb. 20, 1863; 1st sergt. Nov. 9, 1864; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; pro. 2d lieut. Co. C Aug. 25, 1864.

Collins B. Ware, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; corp. May 20, 1863; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864, 1st sergt. March 1, 1865; com. 2d lieut. Co. C April 22, 1865; not must.

Sergeants—Edo M. King, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; dish. at Trenton, N. J.

David J. Senior, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Sept. 22, 1864; corp. Sept. 20, 1861; sergt. Oct. 8, 1863; dish. at Fortress Monroe, Va.

Charles G. Banta, must. in Jan. 19, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; sergt. Dec. 7, 1864.

Isaac June, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; sergt. Dec. 7, 1864.

Tilghman A. Barron, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; trans. from Co. H; sergt. March 1, 1865.

Corporals—Thomas G. Freudenberg, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.

Ira Weaver, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; corp. Feb. 20, 1863.

John Prentiss, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; corp. Oct. 8, 1863.

Richard Post, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; corp. Oct. 8, 1863.

William L. Munson, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; corp. Nov. 7, 1863.

Charles T. Barron, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H; corp. May 1, 1865.

William Sales, must. in April 1, 1864; must. out May 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. C; corp. May 1, 1865.

William Castimore, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out May 1, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; corp. Dec. 7, 1864.

John N. Carrough, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out May 1, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; corp. Dec. 7, 1864.

James Stinard, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out May 1, 1865; recruit; corp. June 15, 1865.

Andrew J. Steelman, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out; recruit; trans. from Co. B; corp. March 1, 1865.

John Tallefather, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; corp. Dec. 7, 1864; dish. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 74, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.

Joseph Murphy, must. in Sept. 20, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; corp. Dec. 7, 1864; dish. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 74, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.

- Corporal*—John H. Smith, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 11, 1865; substitute, corp. Dec. 7, 1864, disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
- Boyle*—Edward Wadsway, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; pro. principal musician Feb. 10, 1862.
- Musicians*—William H. King, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.
Edward C. Tuttle, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.
- Wagoner*—Henry Baker, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.
- Privates*—David D. Ackerman, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
William P. Amerman, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Dec. 19, 1864.
Henry Andrews, must. in April 6, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Edwin Applegate, must. in Mar. 18, 1864; must. out July 28, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D, disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.
Nathan S. Applegate, must. in Feb. 2, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Chauncey W. Barker, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
Thomas Bixby, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Josiah E. Benson, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
William K. Braunin, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 11, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Morris Breslin (1), must. in Sept. 23, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Morris Breslin (2), must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Abraham Books, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
James Brown, must. in Oct. 1, 1864; must. out July 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
James U. Brown, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out July 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
William J. Brown, must. in Oct. 1, 1864; must. out July 11, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Abraham A. Bush, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Nov. 30, 1864.
James Campbell, must. in Aug. 22, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
William Carner, must. in Dec. 1, 1864; must. out June 11, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.; paroled prisoner.
Richard Case, must. in Oct. 1, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Charles R. Cashmore, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out July 31, 1865; recruit; disch. at Ward T. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 2, 1865.
Tus, Vandy, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
Alanson Cole, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Joseph Collins, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Lorenzo D. Cummings, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Andrew Decker, must. in Aug. 22, 1864; must. out June 11, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
George M. Decker, must. in Feb. 27, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
Charles Defferest, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
John Dent, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Enoch Denkerly, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Joseph N. Emer, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Aaron S. Emory, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; must. out June 24, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Fortrose Monroe, Va., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.
Private—William Emory, must. in Feb. 20, 1864; recruit; trans. from Co. H; disch. at Trenton, N. J., S. A. H. Headquarters Dept. N. C. Owen Farley, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
Joseph Frazier, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
William Frick, must. in Sept. 13, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; trans. from Co. A; recruit; Jan. 1, 1864.
George W. Gilliam, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Joseph M. Gilliam, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865.
John C. Gordon, must. in Aug. 18, 1865; must. out June 14, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Jacob Goss, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.; paroled prisoner.
Austin Grading, must. in Sept. 19, 1864; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; trans. from Co. B.
George Guntler, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Thomas B. Halliwell, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Thomas R. Hardy, must. in Feb. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
Samuel Hearon, must. in April 8, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
Frank Hewitt, must. in April 6, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
James Hickman, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; corp. Sept. 29, 1864; private May 8, 1865.
Albert Higgins, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
John High, must. in April 8, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
Aaron P. Hines, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
John D. Huffman, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Fay de Jenkins, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
John D. Jennings, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out Oct. 15, 1864; corp. Oct. 8, 1865; private.
James Johnson, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
John E. Jordan, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
Daniel E. Koefe, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
John Koefe, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
Valentine Keller, must. in Sept. 25, 1863; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; corp. Sept. 25, 1864; private Nov. 17, 1862; trans. from Co. A.
Jacob Kessler, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; recruit.
Simpson Kessler, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; recruit.
Peter Kenny, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Patrick Kerrigan, must. in April 11, 1861; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
David Kint, must. in Aug. 22, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
George F. Lee, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
John A. Lewis, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Adam Lind, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
Patrick Lynch, must. in April 7, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Manning Lyons, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
William B. Malnos, must. in Aug. 14, 1865; must. out June 14, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Frederick Marshall, must. in Sept. 30, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.; paroled prisoner.
William Mather, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.

Private—Henry Maxwell, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
James McElroy, must. in April 12, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
John McElroy, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
Robert McElroy, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
Thomas W. Meigs, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 8, 1864; sergeant; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
John M. Meigs, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
George Mearns, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Charles McWhorter, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
David Newman, must. in Aug. 25, 1862; must. out June 14, 1865; recruit; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.; private; disch.
William B. Newman, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Henry Nethick, must. in March 22, 1864; must. out July 12, 1864; recruit.
James O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Thomas O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
William O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Billy B. O'Brien, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
John W. O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Michael O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 8, 1865; drafted; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.
Tim O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Edward O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Harold O'Brien, must. in April 12, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
William O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Mark O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 19, 1865; corp. Nov. 27, 1865; recruit; disch. in 1864; private; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., March 1, 1865.
William O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B. April July 28, 1865, when must. in 1864 at Raleigh National Cemetery, Section 23, grave 4.
Henry O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; disch. in 1865.
Nathan O'Brien, must. in March 7, 1864; must. out June 9, 1865; recruit.
William O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; disch. in 1865.
Henry O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
Arthur O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; disch. in 1865.
William O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 14, 1865; drafted; must. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Richard M. O'Brien, must. in April 8, 1865; recruit.
John O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Robert O'Brien, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; disch. in 1864.
John O'Brien, must. in Oct. 1, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.

Private—William Sawyer, must. in April 8, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
John Sayfried, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Henry Scheick, must. in April 8, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; substitute.
Otto Schnable, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
George M. Simons, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
John Sindle, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
John Skoll, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Benjamin Sloan, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
Henry H. Small, must. in March 27, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
John Smith, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.
John P. Smith, must. in April 7, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
William H. Somers, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.
Peter G. Spicer, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Jonathan S. Steelman, must. in April 10, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; drafted.
William S. Taggart, must. in April 7, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
John Tierce, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.
Oscar Van Houten, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; corp. Sept. 29, 1864; private Dec. 24, 1862; pro. q. m.-sergt. Dec. 24, 1863.
Henry M. Van Schalk, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; pro. sergt.-maj. Dec. 24, 1862.
Joseph Wagener, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out June 14, 1865; substitute; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., G. O. 73, C. S. 1865, Dept. N. C.
Taylor Wainwright, must. in Jan. 5, 1864; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
Charles W. Wallace, must. in Feb. 4, 1864; must. out June 13, 1865; recruit; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.
Andrew Walters, must. in Feb. 3, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.
Elmer W. Ward, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.
Charles V. Weatherly, must. in April 15, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.
Daniel E. Westloch, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 8, 1864.
Jacob Whitmore, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. out July 12, 1865; recruit.
John Winters, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Oct. 15, 1864; corp. Dec. 31, 1862; private Nov. 29, 1863.
Richard Wood, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; must. out Dec. 7, 1864; sergt. Sept. 29, 1864; private Feb. 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Sergeant—George Meyer, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Greensboro', N. C., May 12, 1865; disability; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.
Corporal—Alma Boyden, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Newbern, N. C., Nov. 18, 1862; disability.
Wagoner—Samuel B. Powell, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Newbern, N. C., June 7, 1861; disability.
Private—John B. Brown, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Beaufort, N. C., June 1, 1863; disability.
Robert A. Burris, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Morehead City, N. C., Nov. 18, 1863; disability.
Samuel C. Burris, must. in Sept. 29, 1864; disch. at Newbern, N. C., April 4, 1863; disability.
James H. Cole, must. in Aug. 14, 1864; recruit; disch. at Beaufort, N. C., June 1, 1863; disability.
Samuel H. Cole, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; disch. at Beaufort, N. C., Dec. 9, 1862; disability.

Privates—John Doppelman, must. in Sept. 20, 1861, dish. at Newbern, N. C., Jan. 14, 1862, disability; trans. from Co. A.

Benjamin V. Dufford, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., Aug. 12, 1862, disability.

Jacob Elch, must. in Sept. 18, 1861; dish. at Beaufort, N. C., June 1, 1862, disability; trans. from Co. A.

John Gehring, must. in Sept. 13, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., June 10, 1863; disability; corp. Sept. 13, 1861; privat. Nov. 17, 1862; trans. from Co. A.

Horace Havens, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., May 20, 1863; disability.

Oswald Hendershot, must. in Sept. 20, 1861, dish. at Camp Olden, Trenton, N. J., Oct. 1, 1861, disability.

John O. Huff, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Feb. 11, 1862, disability; re-enl. Jan. 13, 1861.

David Kinsell, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., March 31, 1863, disability.

Michael King, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., March 31, 1863, disability.

Patrick Lappin, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., July 21, 1862; disability.

William Lemons, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., May 15, 1865; wounds received in action at Drury's Bluff, Va.; corp. Dec. 24, 1862; private July 31, 1863; re-enl. Jan. 1864.

James McLelland, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., Feb. 28, 1863; disability.

Isaac Morrell, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., June 24, 1863; disability.

Francis Pargenkemper, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., Aug. 12, 1862; disability.

William Reel, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., March 18, 1861; disability.

William B. Ritter, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Camp Olden, Trenton, N. J., Oct. 21, 1861; disability.

Cornelius Ryerson, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., Aug. 12, 1862; disability.

Robert M. Smith, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newbern, N. C., May 20, 1863; disability.

David Valentini, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Newport News, Va., Jan. 15, 1864; arm amputated.

Joseph Van Etten, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Morehead City, N. C., Nov. 19, 1862; disability.

Eriah D. Voorhees, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. at Beaufort, N. C., June 1, 1863; disability; corp. Sept. 20, 1861; private Dec. 24, 1862.

TRANSFERRED.

Musicians—Ferdinand Schilling, must. in Aug. 25, 1862; recruit, trans. as private to Co. D, Nov. 25, 1862.

Privates—Edward L. Alford, must. in Feb. 8, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I.

Stephen A. Barnes, must. in Jan. 29, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. H.

Ely Burritt, must. in Jan. 27, 1861; recruit; trans. to Co. F.

John C. S. Burritt, must. in Jan. 27, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. F.

Henry Clayhill, must. in March 10, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. D.

Lewis Conrad, must. in March 9, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. G.

John M. Dolly, must. in Feb. 5, 1864; recruit; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1861; dish. therefrom June 19, 1865; trans. from Co. F.

Charles Fuchs, must. in Aug. 20, 1862; recruit; trans. to Co. D, trans. from Co. A.

Joseph Little, must. in Dec. 28, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F.

David Mottan, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I.

John Morgan, must. in Aug. 31, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I.

Hulmuth Post, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps; dish. therefrom Oct. 20, 1864.

Abraham H. Ross, must. in Sept. 20, 1864; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 31, 1864; dish. therefrom May 9, 1864, to re-enlist.

John Shickville, must. in Feb. 20, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. C.

John Siederan, must. in Dec. 21, 1863; recruit; trans. to Co. F.

Alexander M. Van Gorden, must. in Jan. 7, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. H.

Martin Ward, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1864; dish. therefrom Aug. 7, 1865, re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.

Joseph Wolf, must. in Jan. 20, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I.

DEAD.

Privates—George E. Cooper, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; dish. in battle field May 16, 1864, of wounds received in action at Drury's Bluff, Va.; re-enl. Nov. 30, 1860.

Tinton Dolans, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died of hemorrhage of bowels at Craven Street Hosp., Newbern, N. C., April 29, 1862; buried at Newton National Cemetery, N. C., Section I, grave 16.

George B. Driskon, must. in Feb. 21, 1864; recruit; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 27, 1864, of wounds received in action at Drury's Bluff, Va.; buried at Philadelphia, Pa.; trans. from Co. H.

Hiram Gray, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; killed in action before Petersburg, Va., June 25, 1864; re-enl. Nov. 30, 1863.

Benjamin W. Hunt, dish. at Camp Olden, Trenton, N. J., Nov. 23, 1861.

George Love, must. in Dec. 20, 1861; died at Newton, N. J., Feb. 27, 1864, while on vet. furlough; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1861.

John Lyons, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died of typhoid fever on hosp. ship at Hatteras Inlet, N. C., March 3, 1862.

Israel O. Maxwell, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died of typhoid fever on hosp. ship at Hatteras Inlet, N. C., Feb. 22, 1862.

John Monch, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; killed in action at Walthall, Va., May 7, 1861; buried at City Park National Cemetery, Va., Section F, Division I, grave 39; corp. Sept. 20, 1861; private July 3, 1864; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1861.

Theodore Prodmore, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; recruit; died of chronic diarrhoea at Balfour U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Portsmouth, Va., Aug. 2, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Hampton, Va., row 6, Section D, grave 67.

Conrad Ribb, must. in Feb. 16, 1864; recruit; died of typhoid pneumonia at Fortress Monroe, Va., Sept. 21, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Hampton, Va., row 8, Section E, grave 50; trans. from Co. H.

Andrew Schildenart, must. in Sept. 13, 1861; died of apoplexy at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Oct. 18, 1862; buried at Fairmount Cemetery, Newark, N. J., corp. Sept. 13, 1861; private Nov. 17, 1862; trans. from Co. A.

James E. Siskin, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Hampton, Va., June 1, 1864, of wound received in action at Walthall, Va.; buried at National Cemetery, Hampton, Va., row 7, Section C, grave 13; re-enl. Jan. 18, 1864.

Lucas Tierce, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died of black-tongue fever at Craven U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newbern, N. C., April 7, 1862.

Ambrosius Weharth, must. in Sept. 13, 1861; died Oct. 19, 1863; supposed to have fallen overboard from transport "Albany" en route from Newbern, N. C., to Newport News, Va.; bugler Sept. 13, 1861; private Nov. 17, 1862; trans. from Co. A.

Hampson Whitehead, must. Sept. 20, 1861; died at Brickyard Hosp., Newbern, N. C., March 17, 1862, of wounds received in action at Newbern, N. C.

James Williams, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died at Hammond U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Beaufort, N. C., Sept. 26, 1866; also reported dish. Dec. 7, 1864.

FINAL RECORD UNKNOWN.

William Ellison, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; substitute; corp. Dec. 7, 1864; private April 20, 1865; prisoner of war.

Tenth Regiment.—This regiment was organized under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 22, 1861, and by authority issued by the War Department, Washington, D. C., direct to private individual resident of this State, and not in any way under the control or supervision of the State authorities. Under authority thus given, recruiting was commenced and its organization soon completed. It was then accepted by the War Department as an independent organization, having been designated the Olden Legion. The regiment went into camp at Beverly, N. J., and from thence proceeded to Washington, Dec. 26, 1861, with a full complement of men and officers, and went into camp at

¹ From Strick's "Officers and Men of New Jersey in the Civil War."

Clay, on the Bladensburg Turnpike, one mile from Washington. Jan. 29, 1862, an order was issued from the War Department transferring the regiment to the State authorities. It was then thoroughly reorganized, and designated the Tenth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers. April 8, 1862, Company G, which had been recruited and mustered as a cavalry company, was mustered out of service, and a company of infantry was recruited in this State to fill the vacancy, and forwarded to Washington, June 12, 1862. The greater part of the early services of the regiment were performed in and around Washington, D. C., on provost duty.

April 12, 1863, the regiment was ordered to Suffolk, Va., to resist an anticipated attack of the enemy at that point. In July, 1863, it was ordered to Philadelphia, Pa., to assist in the draft at that time, and in the fall of the same year was ordered to the mining regions of Pennsylvania to suppress riots, and April 13, 1864, was assigned to active duty with the Army of the Potomac, and proceeded to Brandy Station, where it was attached to the First New Jersey Brigade. The numerical force was strengthened in 1863 and 1864 by recruits from draft rendezvous at Trenton, and in 1865 by a large number of substitutes. Like many other regiments, many of the Tenth re-enlisted in 1862 for the war, and served to the end thereof, and were mustered out of service at Hall's Hill, Va., July 1, 1865.

The regiment took part in the following engagements:

Chancellorsville, Va., May 19, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 31 to 7, 1864; Spotsylvania, Va., May 8 to 11, 1863; Spotsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12 to 16, 1863; North and South Anna River, Va., May 24, 1863; Brandy Station, Va., May 29, 1864; Topomunoy Creek, Va., May 30 and 31, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 1 to 3, 1864; Before Petersburg, Va. (Weldon Railroad), June 25, 1864; Snicker's Gap, Va., July 18, 1864; Strasburg, Va., Aug. 15, 1864; Winchester, Va., Aug. 27, 1864; Charlestown, Va., Aug. 21, 1864; Orange, Va., Sept. 19, 1864; Fishers' Hill, Va., Sept. 21 and 22, 1864; New Market, Va., Sept. 24, 1864; Mount Jackson, Va., Sept. 25, 1864; Cedar Creek and Middleton, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; Hatchers Run, Va., Feb. 5, 1865; Fort Steadman, Va., March 25, 1865; capture of Petersburg, Va., April 2, 1865; Sailors' Creek, Va., April 6, 1865; Fairville, Va., April 7, 1865; Lee's surrender, Appomattox, Va., April 9, 1865.

COMPANIES.

(Recreated in Hudson County.)

Company—John W. Wright, must. in Oct. 9, 1861; pro. to 1st lieut.-col. Oct. 10, 1861.

Company—D. C. Applegate, must. in April 21, 1862; must. out Dec. 25, 1864; 1st lieut. Oct. 2, 1861; capt. Dec. 1861, pro.

Company—Frederick J. Ferry, must. out Dec. 1, 1861; must. out March 20, 1865; 1st lieut. Oct. 1, Oct. 1861; capt. Dec. 1861, pro.

Two Lieutenants—Abner B. Bunker, must. in Sept. 21, 1862; 1st sergt. Sept. 15, 1864; 1st sergt. Dec. 1864; pro. to 1st sergt. Dec. 1864; disallowed.

First Lieutenants—Charles W. Taylor, must. in April 14, 1861; private Sept. 15, 1861; 4th sergt. Oct. 11, 1861; 2d lieut. Oct. 24, 1863; 1st lieut. Dec. 1864; 1st sergt. Dec. 11, 1864.

John Wilson, must. in Dec. 9, 1861; 2d lieut. Co. E. March 24, 1864; 1st lieut. Dec. 1864; pro. to capt. Co. E, Dec. 14, 1864.

Thomas P. Madden, must. in Feb. 1, 1865; July 1, 1865; sergt. Co. K; 1st lieut. Dec. 1864; pro. to com. capt. July 1, 1865; not must.

Second Lieutenants—George T. Dougherty, must. in Oct. 9, 1861; res. Feb. 20, 1862.

James M. Brantley, must. in April 21, 1862; recorded at War Dept. as having died at Washington, D. C., Sept. 18, 1863.

Edward W. Yenable, must. in June 10, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; sergt. Co. E; 2d lieut. Dec. 1864; pro. to com. 1st lieut. Co. A. July 1, 1865; not must.

Platoon Sergeants—Richard H. Townsend, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; pro. to 2d lieut. Co. G, 12th Regt., April 9, 1863.

John Westcott, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; must. out Nov. 11, 1864; corp. Oct. 5, 1861; sergt. May 16, 1862; 1st sergt.

Daniel F. Garrison, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; corp. June 8, 1863; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864; 1st sergt. Nov. 10, 1861.

Sergeants—William H. Donnelly, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; corp. Sept. 8, 1862; sergt. Jan. 10, 1864; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864.

James Robinson, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out Oct. 20, 1864; sergt. Dec. 1, 1862.

Ellis T. Reeder, must. in Feb. 19, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; sergt. Nov. 1, 1864.

Thomas Blair, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; sergt. Jan. 1, 1865.

Robert C. Thompson, must. in Aug. 20, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; sergt. May 16, 1865.

Henry Reynolds, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out May 1, 1865; disch. at Trenton, N. J.; paroled prisoner.

Corporals—Jereemiah P. Barber, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out Sept. 23, 1864.

Samuel B. Shaw, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; must. out Sept. 27, 1864.

Isaac Penn, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 20, 1864; corp. Jan. 1, 1865.

Daniel A. Barber, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864; corp. Jan. 1, 1865.

John Brandriff, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Feb. 2, 1861; corp. Jan. 1, 1865.

Israel E. Chew, must. in Jan. 8, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; corp. May 6, 1865.

Ellis Scull, must. in Oct. 12, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865.

Israel W. Gilford, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864; corp. Jan. 10, 1865.

Tenbrook Price, must. in Oct. 19, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864; corp. Jan. 1, 1865.

Musician—Charles T. Stratton, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must. out Sept. 29, 1864.

Lieutenants—Hiram H. Pure, must. in Oct. 10, 1861; pro. drum-major Jan. 29, 1862.

Private—Andrew Albertson, must. in March 29, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. G.

William J. Applegate, must. in Sept. 29, 1865; must. out June 22, 1865; drafted; disch. at Hall's Hill, Va., G. O. 94. War Dept., Washington, D. C., May 15, 1865.

Henry Baker, must. in Dec. 29, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

John Barth, must. in March 2, 1864; must. out June 5, 1865; pro. must. disch. at Trenton, N. J. Feb. 1864, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

John Barton, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

John Baskin, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; must. out Oct. 20, 1864.

Vincent Blawie, must. in Jan. 24, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Christian Bussard, must. in Nov. 29, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Edward Brown, must. in April 20, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. E.

John Brown, must. in Oct. 25, 1865; must. out Dec. 7, 1864.

Arthur Brock, must. in Dec. 3, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Michael Campbell, must. in Dec. 2, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; drafted.

Private—David P. Chubbuck, must. in Sept. 26, 1861; must. out Oct. 25, 1861; corp. Sept. 26, 1861; private Sept. 17, 1861.

Erasmus Cullaghan, must. in Nov. 18, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Christian Cawley, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865.

Charles DeLaney, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Wheeler Devins, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out June 16, 1862; substitute; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Annapolis, Md., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Edwin Edridge, must. in Feb. 1, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Alonzo H. Falger, must. in March 29, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.

John Fisher, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out June 29, 1865; disch.; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Lewis Fowitt, must. in Feb. 1, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Larry Gallagher, must. in Feb. 26, 1861; must. out July 17, 1865; recruit; disch. at Mount Pleasant U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Joseph Garsick, must. in Dec. 14, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. E.

Henry Griggs, must. in Oct. 14, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

Thomas Green, must. in Sept. 21, 1861; must. out June 22, 1865; recruit; disch. at Hall's Hill, Va., U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., May 17, 1865.

William Harris, must. in Jan. 28, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

James Harvee, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

James Hines, must. in Nov. 26, 1861; must. out May 1, 1865; substitute; disch. at Station U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., West Philadelphia, Pa., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Thomas Howard, must. in Jan. 31, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

David T. Johnson, must. in Sept. 27, 1861; must. out Sept. 29, 1861.

John W. Jones, must. in Sept. 8, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

John Kessel, must. in April 14, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. B.

Friedrich Klottermann, must. in Nov. 20, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Joseph Lackey, must. in Jan. 30, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Henry Lindental, must. in Nov. 30, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

Augustus Lively, must. in March 23, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

Gustavus Lubron, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

Augustus Lutz, must. in Aug. 22, 1862; must. out Aug. 10, 1865; recruit; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

John Mehr, must. in Jan. 31, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

George W. Manderville, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

Gilias F. Manderville, must. in April 11, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

John Manderville, must. in Jan. 11, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. C, 7th Regt.

Emanuel Marks, must. in Feb. 24, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

John Marks, must. in Feb. 11, 1864; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

Thomas McEwen, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; must. out June 25, 1865; substitute; disch. at Hall's Hill, Va., G. O. 94, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 15, 1865.

Bernard McMillan, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; must. out Nov. 18, 1864; disch. at Lincoln U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C.

Herman Millarich, must. in April 13, 1865; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

Private—James Miller, must. in Feb. 7, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D.

Christian McMillan, must. in March 8, 1861; must. out Feb. 8, 1865; recruit.

Aaron Moore, must. in Sept. 26, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; Jan. 20, 1864.

Henry B. Moore, must. in Sept. 26, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; Feb. 23, 1864.

Isaac Morgan, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit.

John Mulford, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865.

William Newman, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Charles F. Nixon, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; must. out Oct. 3, 1861; recruit; Oct. 5, 1861; private March 3, 1862.

William H. Baker, must. in Aug. 24, 1861; must. out Oct. 22, 1865; substitute; disch. at Hall's Hill, Va., U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

David Rosen, must. in Oct. 29, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

George Butler, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

Herman Schrosser, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

Daniel Silvers, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Oct. 25, 1864.

Richard V. Stimpson, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; Jan. 24, 1864.

George Stadler, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Oct. 6, 1864.

William H. Stadler, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; must. out Oct. 6, 1864.

August Stoll, must. in Nov. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

James P. Ward, must. in Feb. 14, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D.

Henry Warner, must. in Feb. 8, 1862; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

George W. Webb, must. in Sept. 26, 1861; must. out Sept. 21, 1864.

John Welch, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; Jan. 4, 1864.

Fernand Welch, must. in Sept. 28, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; recruit; Jan. 29, 1864.

Charles Ziehm, must. in Dec. 8, 1861; must. out July 1, 1865; substitute.

REGIMENT.

Sergeant—Henry Laurence, must. in Dec. 7, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Feb. 10, 1862; disability.

Corporal—Lewis Getzinger, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Aug. 6, 1864; disability.

Joseph S. Abrams, must. in Sept. 28, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Chester, Pa., June 28, 1865; wounds received in action Oct. 11, 1864; recruit; Jan. 20, 1864.

Musician—James McLaughlin, must. in Sept. 28, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., July 8, 1862; disability.

Wagoner—Joseph Murphy, must. in Dec. 7, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., March 18, 1862; disability.

Private—Joseph Anderson, must. in Aug. 14, 1862; recruit; disch. Nov. 15, 1862; to join regular army.

Jonathan Barber, must. in Sept. 27, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., March 5, 1862; disability.

Aaron Cambour, must. in Oct. 28, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., July 7, 1862; disability.

Ezekiel Camp, must. in Oct. 1, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Aug. 12, 1862; disability.

John B. Colney, must. in Sept. 10, 1861; disch. at Camp Monmouth, near Washington, D. C., April 11, 1862; disability.

James Creamer, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., March 18, 1862; disability.

Thomas Dare, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. at Camp Monmouth, near Washington, D. C., May 9, 1862; disability.

Nathaniel Ernest, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., July 8, 1862; disability.

Leonard Hirth, must. in Nov. 1, 1861; disch. at Chestnut Hill U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., July 25, 1863; disability; trans. from Co. H.

James H. Hoopam, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Aug. 11, 1862; disability.

Samuel Haru, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; disch. at Camp Monmouth, near Washington, D. C., April 24, 1862; disability.

Privates—Chas. J. Livingston, must. in Aug. 21, 1862; recruit; disch. at Army Gen. Hosp., York, Pa., Feb. 22, 1864; disability.

George Y. Mason, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; disch. at Camp Monmouth, near Washington D. C., May, 1, 1862; disability.

Francis McLann, must. in May 2, 1862; recruit; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Frederick City, Md., March 18, 1862; wounds received in action, right leg amputated.

Samuel McCarthy, must. in Oct. 18, 1861; disch. at Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 3, 1861; disability.

Robert McIntire, Jr., must. in Oct. 15, 1861; disch. at Beverly, N. J., Dec. 13, 1861; disability.

John McMullan, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; disch. at Reg. Hosp., Camp Clay, near Washington, D. C., March 8, 1862; disability.

Samuel McMullan, must. in Oct. 4, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., July 28, 1862; disability.

Charles Michael, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; disch. at Mount Pleasant U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Aug. 11, 1862; disability.

William F. Morrison, must. in Sept. 25, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Oct. 1, 1862; disability.

Michael Mulligan, must. in May 20, 1862; recruit; disch. at Judiciary Square U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., July 28, 1862; disability.

Jonathan Nixon, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Nov. 2, 1862; disability.

Ipsie Parker, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., July 3, 1862; disability.

Thomas Price, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., Aug. 11, 1862; disability.

Samuel Robinson, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; disch. at Washington, D. C., March 10, 1862; disability.

John Ryan, must. in Sept. 8, 1862; recruit; disch. at Washington, D. C., April 10, 1863.

John Sussinger, must. in Oct. 15, 1861; discharged.

William Shaw, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; discharged.

William Smith, must. in Jan. 19, 1861; recruit; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., West Philadelphia, Pa., July 31, 1863; disability.

Bezekiah Veach, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; disch. at Beverly, N. J., disability.

Antion Wayne, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; discharged.

Daniel H. White, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; disch. at Camp Monmouth, Va., May 8, 1862; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

Medics—David T. Moore, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1861; disch. therefrom April 23, 1864.

Privates—Edward Scoley, must. in Aug. 18, 1864; recruit; trans. to Ch. G. John Stillie, must. in May 26, 1862; recruit; trans. in Vet. Res. Corps March 15, 1864; disch. therefrom May 25, 1865.

Victor O. Williams, must. in Oct. 12, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1864; disch. therefrom July 19, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 29, 1864.

William C. Yates, must. in Oct. 14, 1861; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1864; disch. therefrom Oct. 14, 1864.

DIED.

Sergeants—Thomas Harvey, must. in Sept. 15, 1861; died of scurvy at Andersonville, Ga., Oct. 2, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 19,212; sergt. Sept. 15, 1861; private Dec. 1, 1862; sergt. June 8, 1863.

Barth B. Leach, must. in Oct. 5, 1861; died of chronic diarrhoea at Berlin, N. J., while on furlough from Jarvis U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Nov. 25, 1864; corp. Sept. 18, 1862; sergt. Jan. 1, 1864; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1861.

Mathias Conner, must. in Oct. 1, 1861; died of chronic diarrhoea at Sutherland Station, Va., May 13, 1865; buried at Poplar Grove National Cemetery, Va.; sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; re-enl. Jan. 29, 1864.

Corporals—Stephen E. Sheldon, must. in Sept. 20, 1861; died of typhoid fever at Dennisville, N. J., Aug. 23, 1862.

Lorenzo Ross, must. in Sept. 27, 1861; died of typhoid fever at Washington, D. C., Feb. 28, 1862; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

William Green, must. in July 29, 1862; recruit; died of typhoid fever at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 8, 1863; corp. Sept. 18, 1862.

Elmer B. Erickson, must. in Oct. 22, 1861; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., 1st Div., Alexandria, Va., June 9, 1864; of wounds received in action at Cold Harbor, Va.; buried at National Cemetery, Alexandria, Va., grave 2971; corp. June 8, 1863; re-enl. Jan. 24, 1864.

Corporal—Francis L. Vaneman, must. in Oct. 7, 1861; died of fever at Port Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 28, 1863; corp. Sept. 18, 1862.

Privates—Thomas B. Ayres, must. in Feb. 7, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. D; died at City Point, Va., April 27, 1865; buried at National Cemetery, City Point, Va.

Jonathan Camp, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; died of smallpox at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Norfolk, Va., May 4, 1863; buried at National Cemetery, Hampton, Va., row 19, Section B, grave 37.

John Carroll, killed in action at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 10, 1864.

John Cartry, must. in Oct. 7, 1864; died of measles at Beverly, N. J., Dec. 24, 1861; buried at Pittstown, N. J.

Henry Clayton, must. in Sept. 27, 1861; died of chronic diarrhoea at Winchester, Va., Nov. 9, 1864; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864.

Roger Clayton, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; died of scurvy at Andersonville, Va., Nov. 10, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 11,900.

Ely C. Reamer, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; died of diarrhoea at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 25, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 6229; re-enl. Jan. 20, 1864.

John Erickson, must. in Oct. 7, 1864; died of smallpox at Kalorama U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., March 14, 1862; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

David Garrison, must. in Sept. 24, 1861; died of chronic diarrhoea at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Annapolis, Md., Feb. 25, 1865; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Annapolis, Md.

Samuel H. Gifford, must. in March 7, 1864; recruit; died of diarrhoea at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Dec. 4, 1864; buried at Fairmount Cemetery Newark, N. J.

Azzel C. Henderson, must. in Oct. 24, 1861; died of fever at Washington, D. C., Dec. 25, 1862.

Joseph P. Layton, must. in Sept. 23, 1861; killed in action at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, 1864; re-enl. Feb. 24, 1864.

Robert McIntire, must. in Sept. 21, 1861; died of typhoid fever at Washington, D. C., Sept. 11, 1862.

Samuel Martin, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; killed in action at Spotsylvania Court-House, Va., May 12, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va., Division C, Section D, grave 88; re-enl. Jan. 29, 1864.

William Redford, must. in Feb. 26, 1864; recruit; died of debility at Andersonville, Ga., Aug. 6, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Andersonville, Ga., grave 1558.

John S. Robinson, must. in Oct. 3, 1861; died of fever at Washington, D. C., Oct. 16, 1862.

George Seelman, must. in May 26, 1862; recruit; missing in action at Galt House, Va., May 14, 1864; supposed dead.

Levi Simons, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; recruit; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15, 1864; of wounds received in action at Cedar Creek, Va., Oct. 19, 1864; buried at London Park National Cemetery, Baltimore, Md.

James S. Smith, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; recruit; killed in action at Wilderness, Va., May 6, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va., Division C, Section A, grave 324.

James Spaulding, must. in Dec. 16, 1863; recruit; missing in action at Galt House, Va., May 14, 1864; recorded at War and Pension Departments as dead that date.

William Straug, must. in Oct. 6, 1861; died of typhoid fever at Washington, D. C., Oct. 15, 1862.

Thomas Townee, must. in Sept. 30, 1861; died of smallpox at Kalorama U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Jan. 16, 1863; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

Watson Turpin, must. in Oct. 21, 1861; died of smallpox at Washington, D. C., Jan. 26, 1863; buried at Military Asylum Cemetery, D. C.

John H. Watson, must. in Dec. 5, 1863; recruit; died at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., 2d Div., Alexandria, Va., June 28, 1864; of wounds received in action at Cold Harbor, Va., June 3, 1864.

FINAL RECORD UNKNOWN.

Privates—Henry F. Schmidt, must. in Nov. 12, 1864; substitute; absent, sick, in hosp. near Petersburg, Va., since March 28, 1865.

James Thompson, must. in Dec. 29, 1863; recruit; absent, sick, in Lincoln U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., July 10, 1864; furloughed Sept. 23, 1864.

Thirteenth Regiment.—The following is a complete roster of Companies B and H of the Thirteenth, a complete history of which will be found in the Rebellion Records (Chapter XVII) of Essex County, Volume I.

COMPANY B.

Captains—John Grimes, pro. Maj. Feb. 4, 1862.
Robert Burnsted, 1st lieut. Aug. 2, 1862.

First Lieutenants—Samuel R. Boardley, 2d lieut. Dec. 1, Nov. 1, 1862, 1st lieut. vice Burnsted, promoted, res. Aug. 2, 1863, wounds received in action at Roanoke, Va., May 1, 1864.
John McDougall, 2d lieut. Co. E June 3, 1863; 1st lieut. vice Boardley, resigned.

Second Lieutenants—James F. Layton, private, Co. K, 1st Regt. 2d lieut. to fill original vacancy; pro. 1st lieut. Co. G Jan. 16, 1863.
John T. Dennard, 1st sergt. July 24, 1862; 2d sergt. Nov. 1, 1862; 2d lieut. vice Layton, pro.; res. Aug. 13, 1863.
John M. Mahannah, sergt. Co. A, 2d lieut. vice Dennard, res.

First Sergeants—Andrew Jackson, sergt. July 16, 1862, 1st sergt. Nov. 1, 1862; pro. 2d lieut. Co. K Oct. 28, 1864.
Daniel P. Shea, sergt. Aug. 6, 1862; 1st sergt. March 13, 1863.

Sergeants—John McLaughlin, Francis M. Kurlz, Edward Wagner, Thomas Flynn, corp. Nov. 1, 1862; sergt. April 1, 1863.

Corporals—Thomas Flanagan, Nov. 1, 1862.
Lawrence Barrett, Jan. 8, 1863.
John B. Beskes, April 1, 1863, trans. to 1st Regt. 2d Corps Sept. 1, 1863; returned to company March 31, 1864.
Charles Clark, April 1, 1863.
Thomas Mervay, April 1, 1863.
Theodore H. Harding, April 1, 1863.

Musician—Patrick Costello, Stephen A. Pillsbury.

Privates—John Barton, must. out June 8, 1863.
Edward Broadway, must. out June 8, 1863.
Joseph Broadway, must. out June 8, 1863.
Thomas Ferris, deserted Aug. 27, 1862; returned to duty Oct. 7, 1862; must. out June 8, 1863.
Thomas Jackson, must. out June 8, 1863.
James McIlwain, must. out June 8, 1863.
John McLaughlin, must. out June 8, 1863.
Michael O'Connor, must. out June 8, 1863.
William Flynn, must. out June 8, 1863.
Peter H. Blaney, corp. Aug. 29, 1862; private, June 8, 1864, must. out June 8, 1863.
Howard J. Thaworth, 2d sergt. Aug. 25, 1862; private Nov. 1, 1862; must. out June 8, 1863.
William H. Van Dyck, must. out June 8, 1863.
Richard Vardle, must. out June 8, 1863.
Charles Walker, must. out June 8, 1863.
Randall Westervelt, must. out June 8, 1863.

Recruits—Charles Batwick, enlisted Sept. 30, 1864, for one year; trans. from Co. C, 3d Regt. must. out June 8, 1865.
Thomas Brady, enlisted Sept. 16, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
Daniel Cramm, trans. from Co. K, enlisted Sept. 22, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
George Dink, enlisted Sept. 9, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
Jacob M. Donagan, enlisted Aug. 19, 1864; must. out June 8, 1865.
Jesse S. Donating, enlisted Sept. 9, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
John Gaffney, enlisted Sept. 13, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
Stephen L. Harvey, trans. from Co. K, enlisted Aug. 26, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
Patrick Lowery, enlisted Sept. 13, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
John Milroy, vol. Sept. 9, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
John Murphy, vol. Sept. 24, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
Patrick Shea, vol. Sept. 9, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.
James Warburton, vol. Aug. 22, 1864, for one year; must. out June 8, 1865.

DISCHARGES.

Samuel M. Byer, corp.; disch. at Manchester, N. H., May 20, 1865.
Jacob Bink, deserted Sept. 12, 1862; returned to duty Nov. 9, 1862; disch. at Harper's Ferry, Va., March 9, 1863; disability.
John Progers, disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Aug. 13, 1863; disability.

George B. Calvert, recruit and Sept. 16, 1864, for one year; disch. at David's Island, New York Harbor, May 18, 1865.
Morgan Campbell, disch. at Washington, D. C., Feb. 25, 1863; disability.
Michael De Lanny, disch. at Washington, D. C., May 27, 1863; disability.
George Dupont, disch. at Louisville, Ky., June 26, 1865.
Hiram Kurny, disch. at Edlington U. S. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Jan. 25, 1865; disability.
David G. Latham, disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 17, 1863; disability.
John McConell, disch. at Stafford Court House, Va., April 1, 1863; disability.
James M. Keenan, disch. at Chestnut Hill U. S. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 2, 1863; disability.
Thomas Murphy, recruit; enlisted Sept. 24, 1862, for one year; disch. at Ward U. S. Hosp., Newark, July 20, 1863.
Michael Pyram, disch. at Ward U. S. Gen. Hosp., Newark, Sept. 1, 1863; disability.
James Ryanick, corp., Aug. 11, 1862; private, Nov. 11, 1862; disch. at Washington, D. C., Nov. 21, 1862.
William Ryder, disch. at Ward U. S. Gen. Hosp., Newark, July 26, 1863.
William Towmley, recruit; enlisted Feb. 1, 1863, for one year; disch. at Trenton, May 4, 1863.
John Trotter, disch. at Stafford Court House, Va., April 1, 1863; disability.
Thomas Ward, disch. at Harper's Ferry, Va., June 4, 1864.
William J. Weedman, recruit and Nov. 18, 1862, for one year; disch. at General Hospital, Jacksonville, Ind., May 22, 1865.

TRANSFERRED TO VETERAN RESERVE COMPANIES.

William T. Higgins, corp. Feb. 11, 1863; corporal Aug. 15, 1863; disch. therefrom July 12, 1865.
John Courtney, April 6, 1862; disch. therefrom July 16, 1865.
Thomas Flanagan, Nov. 22, 1862; re-enl. therefrom Sept. 7, 1863; right arm amputated.
David Lovv, July 1, 1863; disch. therefrom June 27, 1865.
George R. Mulr, Sept. 1, 1862; disch. therefrom June 1, 1865.
Richard Panting, Feb. 13, 1863; disch. therefrom Sept. 5, 1865.
Samuel Seiler, Dec. 28, 1861; disch. therefrom July 5, 1865.
Theodore C. Slaver, corp. Aug. 13, 1862; disch. therefrom July 5, 1865; trans. Feb. 15, 1864; disch. therefrom June 27, 1865.
William Wall, July 8, 1863; disch. therefrom as corp. June 27, 1865.

TRANSFERRED TO OTHER COMPANIES.

Recruits—Michael Banfield, trans. to Co. A.
George Claxton, trans. to Co. K.
Patrick Costigan, trans. to Co. A.
John Daley, trans. to Co. A.
John Davis, trans. to Co. A.
Charles Dougherty, trans. to Co. I.
John Faye, trans. to Co. G.
Lewis Green, trans. to Co. I.
Thomas Harlike, trans. to Co. I.
Joseph Higley, trans. to Co. I.
Thomas Hines, trans. to Co. I.
Milton Iseman, trans. to Co. H.
James Kelsey, trans. to Co. K.
John Kirsch, trans. to Co. I.
William Mand, trans. to Co. G.
Christopher Mear, trans. to Co. H.
Charles Moore, trans. to Co. K.
Elihu Moore, trans. to Co. K.
Andrew Myers, trans. to Co. A.
William Ryanick, trans. to Co. I.
Andrew Beach, trans. to Co. I.
Thomas Hyatt, trans. to Co. I.
John Stronberger, trans. to Co. I.
William Tharp, trans. to Co. K.
Samuel Tilt, trans. to Co. K.
Robert R. Tullfree, trans. to Co. I.
Samuel J. Turner, trans. to Co. C.
William A. Young, trans. to Co. I.

TRANSFERRED TO THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT, N. J. VOLUNTEERS.

Recruits—William R. Neil, Robert Bowden, Charles Burr, Patrick Conway, Thomas Cummings, Daniel W. Drake, John Eldridge, Ludwig Febl, Patrick Gibney, Benjamin Grison, Thomas Hanson, George Hinkle, William Howard, William P. Howard, Michael Kearnes, John Kennedy, Benjamin F. Keyser, Isaac Lott, Thomas Maranga, John McDenott, John McFarland, Louis Myers, John Murphy, John O'Connor, John O'Donnell, Henry Orloff, Jacob Parker, Richard C. Patterson, Virgilio Peroty, Michael Plunkett, William H. Post, Joseph Price, Adolph Reumer, Walter S. Seacan, William Van Lee, William Wade, Theodore Winans.

OTHER TRANSFERS.

John Brodigan, deserted July 15, 1863; returned to duty Jan. 22, 1865; trans. to 33d Regt.

DIED.

Sergeants—Oren Warren, 1st sergt., killed in action at Avery'sboro, N. C., March 16, 1865; corp. Aug. 11, 1862; sergt. Nov. 1, 1862; 1st sergt.; buried at Nat. Cem., Raleigh, N. C., Section 1, Grave 101.

William Moffatt, corp.; killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

William Backus, died at Marietta, Ga., July 25, 1864, of wounds received in action at Powell Tree Creek, Ga., July 29, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Marietta, Ga., Section G, Grave 236.

William Casey, killed in action at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862. James Clancy, died of delirium tremens at U. S. Gen. Hosp., Madison, Ind., Feb. 19, 1865; buried at Nat. Cem., New Albany, Ind., Section B, Grave 787.

John Conroy, died at Jeffersonville, Ind., June 14, 1864, of wounds received in action at Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864; buried in Nat. Cem., New Albany, Ind., Section B, Grave 560.

Thomas Isbell, killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

Christopher Kruhart, deserted January 18, 1863, at Wolf Run Shoals, Va., shot June 19, 1863, at Leesburg, Va., by order of General Court Martial.

William Lear, killed in action at Resaca, Ga., May 15, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Chattanooga, Tenn., Section 1, Grave 195.

William St. Clair, killed in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863.

George H. Wood, died of chronic diarrhoea at Laniaville, Ky., June 4, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Cove Hill, Ky., Section B, Grave 77.

COMPANY H.

Captains—James Braun, res. Oct. 24, 1862; Charles H. Bliven, capt. vice Braun, resigned.

First Lieutenants—James Henry, res. Feb. 27, 1863; William G. Cunningham, 1st lieut. vice Henry res.; pro. adjt., Aug. 10, 1863; William A. Nicholson, 1st lieut. vice Cunningham promoted.

Second Lieutenants—Robert G. Wilson, pro. 1st lieut. Co. G, Aug. 19, 1863.

First Sergeant—Peter Snyder, com. 2d lieut. Co. C, May 26, 1865; not mustered.

Sergeants—Thomas J. Feltman, Charles Edmondson.

Corporals—De Witt L. Turner, William Douglass, George Lathrop, David Lafontaine, John N. Moshau, John Mead.

Musicians—John Natross, Patrick O'Gorman.

Privates—Augustus Adams, des. Aug. 28, 1862; returned to duty March 7, 1863. Must. out June 8, 1865.

Cornelius C. Anderson, must. out June 8, 1865.

William W. Brownley, 1st sergt. July 23, 1863; private May 2, 1863; must. out June 8, 1865.

Alabama Collins, must. out June 8, 1865.

Jeremiah O. Callaghan, must. out June 8, 1865.

Henry H. Cook, sergt., Nov. 1, 1862; private.

John Cooke, pro. sergt. maj., Nov. 10, 1862.

Francis Coyle, must. out June 8, 1865.

John P. Fairbairn, must. out June 8, 1865.

Charles Galnor, must. out June 8, 1865.

Thomas Ferguson, must. out June 8, 1865.

George C. Isaac, sergt., May 3, 1863; private, April 1864.

Thomas Hogan, must. out June 8, 1865.

Charles W. Johnson, pro. sergt. maj., Aug. 26, 1862.

James E. Kenny, must. out June 8, 1865.

Michael Madden, must. out June 8, 1865.

Privates—Philip Miller, must. out June 8, 1865.

Daniel Price, must. out June 8, 1865.

William E. Sippell, corp. Aug. 15, 1862; private, May 2, 1863; mustered out June 8, 1865.

Henry D. Southurst, must. out June 8, 1865.

John Snyder, must. out June 8, 1865.

Jacob Van Winkle, must. out June 8, 1865.

Ernest Wagner, must. out June 8, 1865.

DISCHARGED FOR VARIOUS CAUSES.

Aaron E. Ackerman, sergt., disch. July 12, 1865.

William Henry, sergt., disch. June 27, 1865.

Amos Baron, corp., disch. June 27, 1865.

Edwin Sharp, disch. July 12, 1865.

John Banker, disch. July 12, 1865.

John Burbage, deserted June 29, 1863; returned to duty Nov. 13, 1863; disch. July 12, 1865.

John Carr, recruit; disch. May 31, 1865.

George Cobb, recruit; disch. June 14, 1865.

Peter Connors, disch. Sept. 19, 1865.

Samuel H. Davis, disch. Aug. 30, 1865.

Christopher Gobright, recruit; disch. June 22, 1865.

James D. Stockdale, recruit; disch. July 14, 1865.

George Thomas, recruit; disch. July 14, 1865.

Edward H. Armitage, disch. Feb. 5, 1863; disability.

David C. Carr, disch. March 2, 1864, to accept appointment as Hospital Steward U. S. Army.

Jacob Cubberly, disch. March 19, 1863; disability.

Christian Herre, disch. Jan. 26, 1863.

Patrick Mahoney, disch. Feb. 17, 1863.

Charles Megan, disch. Jan. 23, 1865.

Orlando Richmond, disch. March 18, 1863.

Silas D. Rowland, sergt. Aug. 2, 1862; private May 2, 1863; disch. April 11, 1864.

Robert Taylor, disch. July 15, 1863; disability.

James Woodall, disch. Jan. 30, 1863; disability.

TRANSFERRED TO VETERAN RESERVE CORPS.

William Atkinson, Sept. 20, 1863.

August Botterling, Feb. 18, 1864; disch. Aug. 10, 1864.

Michael Donnelly, Jan. 15, 1864; disch. July 13, 1865.

John Knox, Jan. 15, 1864; disch. May 15, 1864.

Henry Mallon, April 10, 1864; re-enl. Aug. 29, 1864.

RECRUITS TRANSFERRED TO OTHER COMPANIES

Adolph Anthes, Co. I.

William Brown, Co. I.

Thomas Gandy, Co. A.

Hiram H. Hand, Co. C.

Charles C. Henry, Co. K.

Peter Richberg, Co. I.

TRANSFERRED TO THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT N. J. VOLUNTEERS.

Recruits—George W. Burgess, corp.; Isaac Bibby, John Bulger, William J. Emmett, Lewis Hnag, Albert A. Harrison, Daniel McCarty, Charles McGuire, Christopher Metz, John C. Millman, George W. Howland, Milton Iseman, George Johnson, John H. Keating, Henry Livering, Alfred Logas, Henry W. Morgan, Jeremiah O. Riordan, George W. Shields, Thomas J. Williams.

DIED.

Andrew Anderson, died Sept. 9, 1863; at Kelly's Ford, Va.; buried at Nat. Cem., Arlington, Va., No. 56, Row 5, Section E, Block 2.

James Cafford, killed in action at Nancy's Creek, Ga., July 18, 1864.

John Freeman, died at Andersonville, Ga., Nov. 25, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Andersonville, Grave 157.

Thomas Griffith, killed in action at Nancy's Creek, Ga., July 18, 1864.

Peter Lynch, died March 1, 1865, at Fourteenth Army Corps Hospital.

Michael McDowell, missing in action at Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862; supposed dead.

John Moriarty, died March 8, 1863; buried at Fort Hamilton, New York Harbor.

Herron Saxton; recruit; died May 28, 1865; buried at Nat. Cem., Arlington, Va.

CHAPTER XXII.

HUDSON COUNTY IN THE REBELLION.

(Continued.)

The Twenty-first Regiment.—On the 4th of August, 1862, President Lincoln ordered that a draft of three hundred thousand militia be immediately called into the service of the United States, to serve for nine months, unless sooner discharged. A few days subsequently the quota of New Jersey was designated as ten thousand four hundred and seventy-eight, and the regulations for the draft were announced, providing that an enrollment be immediately made of all able-bodied male citizens between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, and that the drawing be made on the 3d of September. The State authorities at once took the necessary steps to meet the requirements of this order, but a general desire being manifested by the people of the State to fill the quota by voluntary enlistment, it was announced that volunteers in lieu of drafted men would be received up to the 1st of September, but that the draft would positively take place at the time appointed in any township which should not by that time have furnished the full number of men required. The result of this policy, and of the general disposition to escape the stigma of a draft, was gratifying in the extreme. Everywhere throughout the State the utmost enthusiasm and energy were exhibited, not only by those liable to the conscription, but by citizens of all ages and classes. For several days previous to that fixed for the draft men poured into camp by thousands, and by the evening of the 2d of September the five camps¹ contained ten thousand eight hundred volunteers.² On the morning of the 3d the State authorities had the satisfaction of announcing to the Adjutant-General of the United States that the quota of New Jersey was in camp, without a single drafted man.³ As rapidly as possible, after being received in camp, the men were organized into companies and regiments, clothed, uniformed, equipped and placed under instruction, and by the 10th of October all had left for the field.

The Twenty-first Regiment was organized at Trenton in August, 1862, and was composed of eight companies (A, B, C, D, F, G, I and K) from Hudson County and two (E and H) from Mercer County.

The regiment being organized, armed and equipped, all which was accomplished in about ten days, it was mustered into the United States service on the 15th of September, and the next day took its departure for Washington. A day or two after its arrival it was ordered to Frederick City, Md., and thence to the battle-ground of Antietam, where it joined the Army of the Potomac. Immediately upon reaching headquarters it was attached to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Sixth Corps, with which it served during its entire time of enlistment, sharing the privations and hardships, and participating in all the engagements in which that famous corps took part during the nine months following.

A few days after joining the army the regiment marched with its corps to intercept the rebel cavalry, then making a "raid" into Maryland and Pennsylvania. After marching as far as Hagerstown, however, it was found that the rebels had escaped into Virginia, and the march was not continued further. Remaining about two weeks at Hagerstown, the command was then suddenly ordered, at midnight, to march in the direction of Dam No. 5, on the Potomac, to oppose another expected advance of the rebels into Maryland. Reaching Dam No. 5, it was stationed to guard that ford, and extending its lines some two miles along the river, held the position until the army moved into Virginia in pursuit of Lee.

The army having moved, orders were received by Col. Van Houten to call in his regiment from the ford and join his brigade on the Williamsport road. Accordingly, the regiment was mustered as soon as possible, and moved out towards its destination. It being late in the afternoon when the order was received, darkness set in before the regiment overtook the main column, and after marching at a rapid rate until midnight, without finding any trace of the brigade, the men being so much exhausted that it was impossible to keep them together, the colonel ordered it into camp for the night. Early the next morning it was again put in motion to join the brigade, and after marching about an hour the junction was effected. Immediately upon joining the brigade the colonel was placed under arrest by the brigade commander, Gen. Vinton, for not coming up during the night. This unjust and uncalled-for act was vehemently condemned by both officers and men of the regiment, and the colonel promptly demanded an investigation of the matter by court-martial, but after being held under arrest for a few days, he was finally released and ordered to the command of his regiment. This was very unsatisfactory to the colonel, as it gave him no opportunity to vindicate himself from the imputation upon his efficiency; but he had no remedy. This arbitrary act of Gen. Vinton caused an antipathy to spring up between the general and the officers and men of the regiment, which lasted a long time, and led to the regiment being sent out upon picket two or three times a week while on the march through Virginia to Aquia Creek. Finally, the attention of Brevet Maj.-Gen. A. P. Howe, the division commander, was called to the injustice, when a stop was at once put to it, and thenceforward the regiment was only called upon to perform its proper share of picket-duty. With the exception of this, nothing of interest occurred until the army arrived before Fredericksburg, on the evening of December 10th. Here this regiment, with one or two others, was placed under the command of Col. Alexander Shaler, as the advanced guard of the left grand division (Franklin's) of the army, with orders to advance to the Rappahannock and cover the laying of the pontoons for crossing the river. After some severe skirmishing the pontoons were laid, and during the afternoon of the 11th it crossed with the brigade, with which it advanced upon the enemy, driving him back until possession was gained of the Bowling Green road, where line of battle was formed and our batteries placed in position, the regiment being assigned as a support to Wier's (Maryland) Battery. This trying position it held from the afternoon of the 11th until the morning of the 15th, during the whole of the hard-fought and desperate engagements. On the night of the 15th it recrossed the river with the rest of the army, and was ordered to cover the removal of the pontoons, being the first to reach the river, and the last to leave in this engagement. Although the regiment was under a severe cross-fire of the enemy's artillery, it had but six or eight men wounded.

¹ The number of rendezvous were established as follows: Rendezvous No. 1, at Trenton, Brig.-Gen. N. N. Halsted, commandant; Rendezvous No. 2, at Beverly, Brig.-Gen. George M. Robeson, commandant; Rendezvous No. 3, at Freshold, Brig.-Gen. Charles Haight, commandant; Rendezvous No. 4, at Newark, Brig.-Gen. Cornelius Van Vorst, commandant; Rendezvous No. 5, at Flemington, Brig.-Gen. Alexander E. Donaldson, commandant.

² This number was subsequently reduced, by medical examination, to ten thousand seven hundred and fourteen, being two hundred and thirty-six more than the number called for.

³ At this time no other State had its quota in camp, so that here again New Jersey led all her sisters.

After this battle the regiment went into camp with the rest of the corps near White Oak Church, Stafford Co., Va. Early in January five hundred men, with the requisite number of line officers, under the command of the major, were ordered to report to the chief engineer of the army for special duty, namely, the construction of a corduroy road for an approach to the Rappahannock River, about six miles below Fredericksburg. This was a dangerous work, the position being about one mile and a half below the picket-lines of our army, and within a few yards of the enemy's lines. The work had to be done at night, the men commencing soon after dark and quitting before daylight, but by vigorous efforts it was completed in three nights, when the men returned to camp. This work was intended as a blind to the rebels, and a cover to the movement which was made by Hardee against their lines a few days afterwards, known as the "mid-march," which was participated in by this regiment, the march being one of great fatigue and hardship, with barren results. After this the regiment returned by its old camp, near White Oak Church, where it remained until spring, engaged in drilling and other duties. In the latter part of April, 1863, when the army, then under the command of Gen. Hooker, was put in motion, the Twenty-first moved with its corps (the Sixth) to the Rappahannock River, where a crossing was effected at Franklin's Crossing. On the evening of the 3d of May the corps moved forward to attack the rebels, and during that night this regiment was engaged, supporting the skirmish line in driving the enemy to his intrenchments.

At daylight of the 3d the enemy, having discovered our position, opened fire with musketry and artillery, whereupon the regiment was ordered forward as skirmishers. Four companies were at once deployed and moved out, supported by the remaining companies of the regiment, and steadily drove the enemy to a point designated by the commanding general. At about eleven o'clock a charge was ordered along the whole line, which resulted in the capture of the line of rebel redoubts, seventeen pieces of artillery and a number of prisoners. In this charge the regiment took part, behaving gallantly, and receiving the commendations of its commanding general for its soldierly action. Immediately on getting possession of the Heights of Fredericksburg the troops were moved forward in the direction of Chancellorsville, where the main body of the army was then engaged. After advancing about four miles, the First Division of the Sixth Corps came upon the enemy posted in a thick pine wood. Our troops attacked them at once, but were repulsed with severe loss in killed and wounded. The Twenty-first Regiment then moved forward with its brigade to their support, and after some desultory fighting until dark, was placed in line of battle, facing Chancellorsville. At break of day on the following morning (the 4th) the enemy was found to be advancing upon our flank, having already taken possession of the heights captured by our troops the day before, and flanking our position. Orders were at once given to face the line of battle from front to rear, so as to check the advance of the enemy in that direction, this duty devolving on the Third Brigade, to which this regiment was attached. The latter was ordered to hold the plank-road up which the enemy was rapidly advancing; and taking a commanding position, by a steady and well-directed fire, it checked his further advance until the whole brigade was brought into proper position. Soon after, however, the enemy commenced to concentrate in strong force in front of the position held by the brigade, it being the extreme left of the line of battle of the Sixth Corps, but the position was firmly held. Little fighting was done through the day, except between the skirmish lines, but about five o'clock in the afternoon the rebels advanced in four columns upon our lines, and now commenced the severest conflict in which this regiment was ever engaged. Gen. Thomas H. Neill, the brigade commander, riding up in Col. Van Hooker, ordered him to advance his regiment to meet the charge. This was quickly done under a heavy fire of musketry and artillery. Advancing about one hundred yards, the regiment was ordered to halt and open fire, which, being steady and well-directed, twice repulsed the enemy. About this time, however, the Twentieth New York Regiment (known as Max Weber's Regiment), on the right, broke in confusion and fled to the rear, the regiment on the left simultaneously falling back in order under the heavy fire of the rebels on their front, thus exposing both flanks of the Twenty-first to a cross-fire of the enemy, now advancing in augmented force upon its front. The position of the regiment at this time was critical. The bravest troops could not long withstand this terrible cross-fire. Col. Van Houten fell mortally wounded, and the regiment was losing heavily in both officers and men, and, accordingly, Gen. Neill ordered it to fall back, which it did, after having maintained its ground in the face of a murderous fire for about three-quarters of an hour. In falling back the regiment became somewhat confused, but the lieutenant-colonel for some unaccountable reason having left the field in the morning) the major, upon whom the command now devolved, with the assistance of the adjutant and remaining line officers, soon rallied the men, and continued the fight in good order until darkness ended the conflict. During the night it recrossed the river with the rest of the corps at Banks' Ford, about six miles above Fredericksburg. In this engagement the regiment lost heavily in both officers and men, killed, wounded and prisoners. Most of the wounded, among whom were Col. Van Houten, Capt. Kendall, Capt. Schaffle, Lieut. Schaffle and several other officers, fell into the enemy's hands. Col. Van Houten was carried to the rear, a distance of about half a mile to a barn, where he became utterly exhausted, and it was found impossible to remove him further. Sergt.-Maj. George W. Fielder, of Jersey City, was left to attend to his wants, but during the night the enemy occupied the ground, preventing his rescue. He died the next morning, and was buried by the sergeant-major, who, stating the circumstances of his capture to Gen. Barksdale, the rebel commander, was at once released on parole. The body of the colonel was recovered in a few days, under flag of truce and sent home to Hudson County under a proper guard, commanded by First Lieut. William D. W. C. Jones, of Company C, a brave and efficient officer, and a bosom friend of the deceased. Col. Van Houten's death was a severe blow to the regiment, by whom he was warmly esteemed as a brave soldier and skillful commander.

During the engagement the headquarters wagon of Gen. Pratt, commanding the Light Brigade of the army, having been abandoned by his men, this regiment secured his effects, among which were all his valuable papers. They also secured several mules laden with ammunition, which, but for their intervention, would have fallen into the hands of the rebels. The men lost nearly all their clothing and blankets, having unslung knapsacks on going into the fight, and not being able to recover them when retreating.¹

¹ A few days after this fight several of the field officers of the brigade were relating to the brigade commander Gen. Thomas H. Neill the manoeuvres of their respective regiments during the engagement after hearing them, the general replied, 'I have been through the Mexican and Indian wars, and in all the battles of the Army of the Potomac up to the present time, but I never before experienced so heavy an infantry fire as that directed against the Twenty-first New Jersey Regiment during the assault of the rebels upon my lines. I have no fault to find with any

The next day after crossing the river the regiment was ordered to relieve the Twentieth Maine Regiment, guarding the telegraph lines from United States Ford (where the main portion of the arm crossed) to Fallmouth. This order was received at night, and was at once obeyed. This night was very dark, the rain coming down in torrents and continuing to do so for several hours, the regiment marching through mud and water, half knee-deep, drenched to the skin, but successfully accomplishing the task. Soon after performing this duty the regiment returned to its old camping-ground near White Oak Church, where the next three weeks were spent in drilling and guard duties.²

report of my brigade, but I had had in my command four or five regiments besides as tenacious in holding their ground as the Twenty-first, the enemy would never have been able to try this.'³

² The following is the report of the brigade commander in reference to this action:

"HEAD-QUARTERS THIRD BRIGADE, SECOND DIVISION, SIXTH ARMY CORPS, MAY 7, 1862."

I have the honor to report, for the information of the general commanding the division, that on the night of May 21 I led my brigade across the ponton bridge at Marshall, the Regiments about two and a half miles below Fredericksburg, and posed the regiments, the Forty-ninth and Thirty-third New York, as pickets in front of the enemy. At twelve o'clock, midnight, my brigade was ordered to march along the Bowling Green road towards Fredericksburg. While waiting to get the road the enemy attacked the left of my picket-line, held by the Forty-ninth New York. The Forty-ninth repulsed them and held their ground. In the morning of the 21st, at about ten o'clock a. m. I was ordered to form three regiments at the advance of a column of assault against the heights on Mary's Hill, back of Fredericksburg. I led the Thirty-third New York, Twenty-first New Jersey and Seventeenth Maine, crossed by the Seventy-seventh New York, who were acting as skirmishers, under a heavy fire of shot and shell. Before reaching the batteries on the hill, against which we were directed, I found they had already been taken by our troops on our right, and I directed the attack against the batteries on the hills to our left, along the Richmond road. We took in succession four distinct detached earthworks of strong profile. We captured three pieces of artillery, two long brass guns and one short howitzer, and one stand of colors belonging to the Eighteenth Mississippi Regiment, after which we marched to assist in repelling an attack of the enemy along the Chancellorsville road.

"On the morning of the 4th of May, the enemy attempted to turn our rear, when I led four regiments of my brigade back towards Fredericksburg, and checked him. I must not omit to mention that on the morning of the 4th instant a brigade of rebels advanced to take an earthwork near the plank-road which was there occupied by our troops, when two companies of the Forty-ninth New York and one company of the Seventh Maine, supported by the Forty-ninth New York, in conjunction with two pieces of brass and Martin's Battery, entirely routed the whole brigade, and the three companies of infantry afore-mentioned captured two hundred prisoners and the colors of a rebel regiment, the Fifty-eighth Virginia.

"On the evening of the 4th of May, about five o'clock p. m., the whole of Longstreet's rebel corps came up the Richmond road as reinforcements, attacked my right and front, mowing large numbers of his infantry in the ravines, which were held by their troops. After being about ten thousand men I was obliged to retire, my regiments being unable to cope with the overpowering numbers of the enemy, and fearful lest the position I then held would be captured by the enemy piercing our lines in the rear, between us and Banks' Ford. In the assault the Twenty-first Regiment New York Volunteers broke and went to the rear; I could not rally them. The other regiments stood their ground nobly under a murderous fire, and by their stubborn resistance at that time, I believe, the Sixth Corps was enabled eventually to recover the Rappahannock at Banks' Ford in the night. Col. Van Houten, Twenty-first New Jersey, was wounded on the field of battle, and I regret to say has died—a prisoner in the hands of the enemy—then was saved in battle.

About the 1st of June, Gen. Hooker discovering that Gen. Lee was moving his forces north towards Washington, the Sixth Corps was ordered to make a demonstration against his rear. Accordingly, early in the morning of June 3d, the corps moved toward the Rappahannock River, and on the morning of the 4th reached Franklin's Crossing. Here the enemy was found posted in a strong position behind breast-works. Arriving near the crossing, the Twenty-first, now under the command of Maj. Van Buskirk, was ordered forward as skirmishers, the order being promptly complied with, and the line advanced to the bank. It was found impossible, however, to dislodge the enemy from his strong position without the use of artillery, whereupon four batteries were posted in the rear of the regiment, and having opened fire, soon silenced the guns of the enemy. Under cover of this united fire of musketry and artillery a body of men was thrown across the river in boats and carried the enemy's works at the point of the bayonet, capturing about two hundred and fifty prisoners. In this skirmish the regiment lost one man killed,—shot through the head by the enemy's sharpshooters while on the skirmish line. He was a member of Company A, of Jersey City, and universally beloved by the members of his company.

This ended the fighting of the Twenty-first. Soon after this action the regiment was ordered home to Trenton, its term of service having expired. Reaching Trenton about the 15th of June, it was reviewed by Governor Parker, and handsomely entertained at a public dinner given by the citizens, and presided over by the mayor. Soon after the regiment was mustered out of service and the men returned to their homes. Many of them subsequently re-enlisted in other regiments and served during the war. Some of the companies, upon their return to the localities in which they were raised, were handsomely received by the people. Company C was given a public reception and dinner, and the major of the regiment, and officers and men of the company were the recipients of handsome gold and silver medals at the hands of the inhabitants of the towns of Bergen, Greenville and Bayonne, from which towns the company was recruited.

The regiment took part in the following engagements: Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13 and 14, 1862; Fredericksburg, Va., May 2 and 3, 1863; Salem Heights, Va., May 3 and 4, 1863; Franklin's Crossing, Va., June 5, 1863.

FIELD AND STAFF

Colonel—William Van Hooker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died near Banks' Ford, Va., while prisoner of war, May 8, 1863, of wounds received in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

"I cannot close my report without making full and sincere acknowledgments to the brave and gallant men of the various regiments of my command, who encountered the enemy at these different battles. The horses of both my aids and my own were shot.

"With great respect,

"THOMAS H. NEILL."

Lieutenant-Colonel—Issac S. Miller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Major—Hiram Van Buskirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Adjutant—Andrew Van Buskirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Quartermaster—William Harper, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Surgeon—Daniel McNeill, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Assistant Surgeon—William S. Janney, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; pro. surg. 2d Regt. Vols. March 27, 1863.

Cornelius Conover, must. in June 2, 1861; must. out June 19, 1863; com. surg. vice Janney, promoted.

Chaplain—Samuel Cook, must. in Oct. 16, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; private Co. H, chaplain to fill original vacancy.

NON-COMMISSIONED STAFF.

Sergeant-Major—George H. Fielder; must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; private Co. A; sergt. Sept. 15, 1862; com. 3d Regt. Co. I June 1, 1863; not mustered.

Quartermaster-Sergeant—Edward B. Bingham, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; private Co. I; Q. M.-sergt. Sept. 15, 1862.

Commissary-Sergeant—Cornelius Young, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; private Co. A, Com.-Sergt. Oct. 10, 1862.

Hospital Steward—William M. Cornelius, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; private Co. I, hosp. stew. Sept. 15, 1862.

Drum Major—Theodore H. Temple, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; mus. Co. A; drum-maj. Sept. 15, 1862; Asst. Sgt. 12, 1862, G. O. S. 126, War Dept. A. G. O., Washington, D. C.

COMPANY A.

Captain—George H. Farrier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

First Lieutenant—Alfred H. Vroom, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Second Lieutenant—Henry E. Farrier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

First Sergeant—James Hagerty, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Sergeants—Edward A. Finney, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; pro. capt. Co. K Nov. 5, 1862.

James H. Cox, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Dec. 8, 1862.

John Brennan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas D. Jordan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William C. McLauley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Corporals—David W. Taylor, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Weston D. Halsey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John F. Mauderville, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Joseph A. Earle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James S. Clyde, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Augustus H. Mills, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

George H. Coates, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Musician—Howard M. Coffin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Wagoner—George W. McLaughlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Privates—William H. Ambrose, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William H. Armstrong, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Armstrong, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Henry Barnes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard B. Bond, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Benjamin Brennan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Cornelius Bush, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John B. Christie, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Colton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Conroy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Conline L. Cox, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Henry F. Cox, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Jonathan Coxon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Augustus M. Deuyse, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Privates—Pat. Dillon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Dombrow, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George S. Duncan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Benjamin R. Durfee, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Eaton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 David Evans, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Willard J. Evans, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James B. Farrier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William W. Farrier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel Frazier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel W. Frazier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Frazier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joel E. Gardner, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Sam and W. Garrison, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Ferliand A. Hall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Harry Holloway, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Channsey Holt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel Hulmy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles C. Isbell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joshua W. Johnson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry E. Kline, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Julius Kline, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frederick Klink, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Lackey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Lanning, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George L. Hommeslieu, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 T. Arnold L. Hommeslieu, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James H. Love, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Hugh McLaughlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel H. M. Laughlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Mitchell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Mitchell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Simon H. Morrison, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Furman H. Norbon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Patrick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John D. Piery, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Reid, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 David Reid, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel Riddle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles H. Rose, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Ryan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James A. Rykeman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Gilbert W. Scoley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 David F. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Clay Tilden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Van Buskirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Isaac B. Van Buskirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Walter Vanderzee, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Van Wert, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Wagener, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel Wolf, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Sharou H. Waples, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Simon White, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William W. Willets, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Williams, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Wright, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William B. Wycoff, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Cornelius Young, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; priv. com.-sergt. Oct. 18, 1862.

DEBARRERS.

Privates—John G. Broken, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; sent. at W. to Co. C, 4th Reg. I. Inf., Dec. 2, 1862; disability.
 William Jolly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out at Government Camp Alexandria, Va., April 17, 1863; disability.

DIED.

Privates—George W. J. Jolly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever at camp near White Oak Church, Va., March 17, 1863.
 William French, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of dysentery at hosp. Clear Spring, Md., Nov. 11, 1862.
 Buford J. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever at camp near White Oak Church, Va., April 23, 1863.
 William V. Townsend, killed in action at Franklin's Crossing, Va., June 9, 1862.

COMPANY B.

Captain—Thomas C. Kendall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; wounded and taken prisoner in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863; lost right leg.
First Lieutenant—Theodore Wanda, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Second Lieutenant—Francis H. Bookstaver, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
First Sergeant—William M. Hawkins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 5, 1862; 1st sergt. May 2, 1862.
Sergeants—Abraham Greenleaf, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Oct. 10, 1863.
 John Jordan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Oct. 15, 1862.
 John R. Elgar, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Jan. 24, 1863.
 Edward Hennessey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Corporals—Robert Condon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry C. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph Longmets, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 David F. Williamson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Nov. 14, 1862.
 Constantine Keegan, must. in Sept. 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Nov. 14, 1862.
 George F. Sheldon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Jan. 24, 1863.
 Edward Tonnelle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. May 5, 1863.
 Hiram P. Lippincott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; 644, May 5, 1863.
Musician—John Shulart, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William J. McLain, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Privates—John H. Van Winkle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Privates—George J. Ackerman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Albert, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Richard Aldridge, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Oct. 10, 1862; privats-May 5, 1863.
 Charles Miller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Bagnall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Barrett, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John S. Billington, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John S. Bookstaver, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Oct. 16, 1862; private Jan. 24, 1863.
 James Brannin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Brighthead, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Oscar F. Buchen, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Rudelman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Owen Carroll, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Clegg, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Private—John Toll, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frank Link, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Goulson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Gough, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John E. Donnelly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1862; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Nov. 12, 1862.
 Henry L. Duhon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Fenton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Stephen Filan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Galmory, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Gobisch, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Patrick Gorman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Greenleaf, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Jamison, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William B. Harrison, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel S. Hart, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Haskins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Heisch, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Alfred C. Howard, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Gleason Isley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Isley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Robert J. Lee, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph Keller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Martin Kehler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Kleingart, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles P. Knicker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Adam Kupper, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Larkin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1862.
 Patrick Larkin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Marquet, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry May, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John McFadden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William McLean, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Otto W. Meyer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Myers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John O'Keefe, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Nov. 4, 1862.
 Monson O'Koback, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Peterson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Riley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Romerloh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Schneider, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John W. Sexton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Martin Sexton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Patrick Sexton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles E. Tappan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Josiah F. Thompson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Thompson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Tise, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Van Buren, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Sylvester Van Buren, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Nov. 14, 1862; private Jan. 21, 1863.
 John Vanderbilt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frank Vanderbestine, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Jasper Van Orden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frederick W. Weeks, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Willcox, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel Winship, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Private—Francis S. Wittig, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Privates—Samuel Kigley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. near Bello Plain, Va., Jan. 3, 1863; disability.
 Thomas W. Marlow, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Sept. 24, 1862; disability.

TRANSFERRED.

First Sergeant—John Rudolph, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; trans. to 70th Regt. New York Vol. Oct. 9, 1862.

DIED.

Sergeant—Jabez Hatnaway, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

Privates—Peter Christian, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 1, 1863.

Frederick Fisher, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

Hugh Hardy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Belle Plain, Va., March 7, 1863.

John H. Jacobs, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Brooks' Station, Va., Dec. 5, 1863.

Henry Prentice, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died at 6th Corps Hosp., Potomac Creek, Va., May 27, 1863, of wounds received in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

Chas. B. Scott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Belle Plain, Va., Dec. 25, 1862.

COMPANY C.

Captain—James W. Low, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

First Lieutenant—William D. W. C. Jones, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Second Lieutenant—William H. Debevoise, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; sergt. Sept. 3, 1862; 2d lieut. to fill original vacancy; disch. June 8, 1863.

First Sergeant—Henry C. Post, must. in Sept. 15, 1863; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Sept. 3, 1862; 1st sergt. Sept. 16, 1862.

Sergeants—Hartman M. Vreeland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Abner J. Welsh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Nicholas Van Baskirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard M. Van Kelpes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Jan. 24, 1863; sergt. March 16, 1863.

Corporals—John Headlen, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Jacob M. Van Winkle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William H. Cochrane, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William C. Williams, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Dexter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Dec. 17, 1862.

Robert M. Parker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Dec. 24, 1862.

William V. N. Jones, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Feb. 23, 1863.

Jacob M. Anderson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. April 1, 1863.

Privates—George Abbott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Ackerman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Artis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Daniel A. Bedell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Benson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Brauon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Abraham Brower, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Burke, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Hanson Cadmus, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Horzekiah Campbell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Carrigan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard Codding, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William H. Cook, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Private—Anthony Battiment, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael W. Drum, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Jacob M. Garrabraut, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Garrabraut, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Garraut, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Hamilton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph Hill, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Hill, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William W. Irish, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Patrick Kavanagh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James G. Kent, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 David Laungan, must. in Sept. 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas A. Lee, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George H. Lewis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Martin D. Lewis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Simon R. Lewis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Sept. 15, 1862.
 Cornelius Milesville, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863. comp. Sept. 3, 1862; private March 1, 1863.
 John A. Moser, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph W. Robinson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Albert McDonald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Anthony S. McDonald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John H. McDonald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Richard McDonald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John K. McDona, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Barnes McKeenrae, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Meersick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Myrles S. Meadows, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James H. Miles, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas W. Miles, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Miller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Abram D. Moore, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George A. Newkirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John W. Newkirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Sept. 3, 1862; private July 17, 1862.
 Wallace Newland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George W. O'Neil, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel M. O'Neil, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John R. Onderdonk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John A. Parker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Paynton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John H. Paynton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Paynton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph V. W. Perrine, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John S. Rapp, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter S. Ray, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Rimmer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James H. Rowland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles R. Satter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas H. Satter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas J. Sharret, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Short, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John W. Simonsen, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George S. Sloc, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Sloc, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry O. Stanley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Sept. 3, 1862; private March 1, 1863.

Private—James A. Van, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John J. Vollen, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John R. Van, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Richard Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John A. Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John A. Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Menckes Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Andrew Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Robert W. Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

SERGEANTS.

Captain—William J. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Private—Jacob A. Van, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 1862.

Private—James S. Prudden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Floyd S. May, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

CAPTAINS.

Captain—Jeffrey W. Collins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
First Lieutenant—William J. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel Ramsey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Second Lieutenant—Michael White, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Sergeant—Michael Duran, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Sergeant—William T. Collins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Kugler, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Wall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John A. Van, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Robert Kelly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Sept. 3, 1862; sergt. Feb. 1, 1863.
Sergeant—Albert S. Norton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Albert S. Norton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Lyons, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Lyons, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Dec. 3, 1862.
 Frederick Heister, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Dec. 3, 1862.
 Edward W. Williams, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Jan. 1, 1863.
 John O'Brien, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. May 3, 1863.
 William Thomas, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. May 3, 1863.
Private—James G. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Private—George A. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Private—Michael Bishop, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Blackman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Wright, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles S. Brown, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel E. Brown, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 comp. Oct. 15, 1862; sergt. Feb. 1, 1863; private May 3, 1863.
 James Cannon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Carroll, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Childers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Connors, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles H. Conroy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Cook, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Crogers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Privates—Wm. Croley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Cummings, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Jacob Curtis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Donovan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Donohue, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Patrick Doyle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Duffy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Dugan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Duncan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Fadden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Feeley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Feehan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frederick Grasmuck, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Ishmael P. Harris, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Christian Huss, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Isaac Jennings, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William H. Jewett, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Kane, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Kerney, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Kiernan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Victor P. Laurent, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Lee, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Daniel McCarron, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas McArty, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward McCormick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas McCullagh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael McErnery, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 30, 1862; private Oct. 13, 1862.
 Edward McKeonell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John McKenna, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Philip M. Mahon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Cornelius McMillan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Meyer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward B. Miller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Francis L. Miller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Walter G. Moulds, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Nov. 13, 1862.
 Philip Muldoon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Dennis Mulvey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles H. Mulligan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private Feb. 2, 1863.
 Samuel Murth, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Narrine, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Neal, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Timothy O'Heron, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Andrew O'Neil, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Raffers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry F. Ray, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Samuel F. Rodgers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Seaman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Sheehan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William L. Shepp, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James Simpson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Sleight, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Louis J. Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Emile Stephenson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Timothy S. Sullivan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Joseph Taylor, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Patrick Tumanly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Wait, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Theodore Whitlock, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Sept. 3, 1862; private May 5, 1863.
 Robert Whorrell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Corporal—Frederick Bishop, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; dish. near White Oak Church, Va., Jan. 9, 1863; disability.
Private—Robert M. Hammond, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; dish. near Warrenton, Va., Nov. 7, 1862; disability.

COMPANY F.

Captain—James W. Van Kenren, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
First Lieutenant—John D. Probst, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Second Lieutenant—Charles Leo Abey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
First Sergeant—Barrett Fraser, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Sergeants—John S. Rowan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William A. Haveins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Robert McTague, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Corporals—William Hammell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William W. Lawrence, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Nicholas Aspen, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Maeten, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Jesse Fraser, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry E. Rowland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edwin F. Phelan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Ulrich Eby, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Musician—John Kruger, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Wagoner—James Smith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Privates—Joseph A. Alcorn, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Applegate, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Bell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John Boyd, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frederick Brandes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James D. Brinkerhoff, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Frederick Drinkman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Burk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Arthur Clayton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry D. Colley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Cook, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George G. Cooper, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Coppers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 George Cox, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 James P. Craustron, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Martin Denarest, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William De Mott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John F. Dusbrow, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas H. Eaton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Fenning, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Fitzpatrick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Fleming, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Rodolph Francisco, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Richard Galbraith, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Ambrose Gale, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Edward Gibb, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Michael Gona, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Arnel Graff, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry H. Hazard, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Highty, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 William Jennings, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Bayard S. Johnston, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Peter Jost, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Henry Kaufhold, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Thomas Lane, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Louis McIlott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 John H. Mead, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Miles, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Charles Minnet, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Adolph Moistadt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
 Moss Moses, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 24, 1862; private Oct. 1, 1862.

Privates—Thomas Mott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Joseph Murdoch, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Michael H. Murphy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Daniel Paine, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
John Peer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
William Powell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Charles H. Ritter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
George Robinson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
James H. Ryeer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Casper Schaefer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Nicholas Schroets, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Charles Seibert, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
George Shelton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
August Sillman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
James T. Slater, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Jacob Stillwell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
John Stillwell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Loni A. Stien, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
William M. Swan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Tenner, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Lawrence Tompkins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Edward A. Tuers, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Phillip Upton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
James H. Ward, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Thomas Ward, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
William E. Ward, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
William White, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Herman C. Wicker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Mortimer Whitman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Alonzo Worden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Charles A. Yates, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Privates—David Bantz, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Washington, D. C., Jan. 7, 1863; disability.
Jacob Dennison, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at White Oak Church, Va., Feb. 12, 1863; disability.
George E. Wiley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at White Oak Church, Va., Dec. 29, 1862; disability.

DIED.

Sergeant—James Eaton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

Musician—William M. Ritter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of scurvy at camp near White Oak Church, Va., Feb. 15, 1863.

Privates—John Golden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; missing in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863; supposed dead.
Alphonse Marriessotti, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

COMPANY G.

Captains—Frank Tyler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; resigned Jan. 7, 1863.
John Shaffle, must. in Jan. 8, 1863; must. out June 19, 1863; 1st lieut. Sept. 2, 1862; capt. vice Tyler, resigned; severely wounded May 3, 1863; lost left arm.

First Lieutenant—Michael Shaffle, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; 2d lieut. Sept. 2, 1862; 1st lieut. vice John Shaffle, promoted.

Second Lieutenant—John V. Walton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; 1st sergt. Aug. 25, 1862; 1st lieut. vice Michael Shaffle, promoted.

First Sergeant—Patrick Burk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Aug. 25, 1862; 1st sergt. Feb. 1, 1863.

Sergeants—Richard Savage, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 25, 1862; sergt. Feb. 1, 1863.
Lewis Dillman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
George T. Ibbes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Peter Kappes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 25, 1862; sergt. Feb. 2, 1863.

Corporals—Joseph D. Nutt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James C. Orr, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Patrick Lee, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Daniel Golder, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Jonah F. Aster, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Nov. 20, 1862.

Patrick Lowe, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Feb. 4, 1863.

John Kelly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt. Feb. 1, 1863.

George W. Perrott, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. April 1, 1863; wounded in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 4, 1863; right leg amputated.

Musician—George C. Gray, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael McHugh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Wagoner—Michael Dillon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Privates—Edward T. Baker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Edward G. Bates, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Daniel Berg, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Berg, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James F. Berkshire, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Patrick Brangan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Isaac M. Brown, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Brown, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Henry Bull, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Cogan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Robert H. Conall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael Cunningham, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Devine, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Deane, sr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Devine, Jr., must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Lewis Fidler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael Eddy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Follert, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard Garrick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Garvey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Isidore Goldpink, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Andrew Grantzau, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Taylor Graves, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Handon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Healy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Randolph B. Herzel, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John E. Hewitt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Stas James, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Edward Keogh, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Leonard Keller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Kelly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Ketting, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Kierau, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Kingsbury, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Joseph Kirkman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Stephen R. Knight, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Frederick Knudel, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Constantine Langensbacher, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas S. T. Lester, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Martin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Andrew McInnis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 25, 1862; private Nov. 20, 1862.

Andrew McInnis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James McLaughlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Meyer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Privates—Hubt Mackay, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Michael Sullivan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Jonnes Neill, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
Thomas Newland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael O'Neil, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
merg. Aug. 25, 1862; private. Dec. 3, 1863.

Corporals—B. Quickhous, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Quiby, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Joseph Rudeck, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Robert Rudeck, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Ruhl, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Philip Rosanna, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Phillip Schuler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Schlinger, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Adolph Simon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William S. Sulzbach, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Timothy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Julius T. W. Ober, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Horatio Watt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Timothy Well, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Joseph Winkler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Joseph Woodward, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Young, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John W. Young, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Privates—John Goldspink, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Calmworth, Va., Jan. 3, 1863; disability.

Edward Kelly, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Freedom, N. J., Sept. 15, 1862; before muster.

James H. McFlintick, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Nov. 1, 1862; disability.

DEAD.

Corporal—William Davis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Belle Plati, Va., March 21, 1863.

Private—Miles F. Dwyer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Belle Plati, Va., Jan. 8, 1863.

Joseph Giddis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever near Hagansville, Md., Oct. 18, 1862; buried at National Cemetery, Arlington, Md., Sep. 25, 1864 F. grave 672.

Michael J. Knapp, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of chronic diarrhoea near Belle Plati, Va.; Dec. 25, 1862; buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va.; Div. B, sec. B, grave 429.

COMPANY I.

Captain—John Vreeland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
First Lieutenant—John F. Holden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Second Lieutenant—John H. Christian, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; abandoned March 25, 1863; R. O. 100, War Dept., A. H. O., Washington, D. C.

First Sergeant—Elias H. Hand, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Sergeants—Abraham Minnema, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James A. Jirffon, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

George Blipple, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Corporals—Charles E. Hobben, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Godfrey Dilloway, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

George L. Perry, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John H. Allen, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Oct. 12, 1862.

James B. Williams, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. April 1, 1863.

John Hudson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. April 1, 1863.

Samuel Springer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. April 1, 1863.

Musicians—Robert J. Kerr, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Philip Eschig, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Wagoner—Josiah M. Wills, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Private—Samuel Briggs, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Brinkerhoff, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John A. Colman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Edward Crane, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 22, 1862; private Oct. 12, 1862.

William Day, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

William Ditts, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Patrick Dackney, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas Dack, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John O. Donnell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Isidore Douglas, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Frank Eichenhofer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

David Egan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

George Fiedler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Corvelius Fisher, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael Floss, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John F. Fullmer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Lawrence Gill, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Corvelius Gesebach, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Abraham Greenleaf, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Robert Greenwood, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Alexander Hall, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John S. Hays, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Robert A. Hays, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Hanks, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Edward Jones, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard Johnson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Naithaird Kalton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Knoll, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Henry Kruggensner, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

David Loeber, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Thomas McDonough, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Patrick McManis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James McKim, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John H. Messer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Moran, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Mullany, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John O. Nicholson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

David Perry, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John J. Rabble, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

James Reddy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Abraham Riker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Richard Shawer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Master V. R. Simons, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Quincy Speck, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Augustus Thain, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Vorden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Harold S. Vreeland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Michael Vreeland, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp. Aug. 22, 1862; private Jan. 24, 1863.

Jacob D. Westerfield, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Jaeger Westervelt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Alexander Wilkins, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

Charles Wilson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

John Wood, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

August Ziegler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Corporals—Abram P. Monroe, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., March 14, 1863; disability.

William N. Day, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; discharged near White Oak Church, Va., March 30, 1863; disability.

DEAD.

- Sergeant*—Garet Earle, must. in Sept. 1, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.
- Corporal*—John Atchuck, killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.
- Private*—Samuel Casckett, killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.
- Joseph D. Greenleaf, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever in camp near Belle Plain, Va., April 16, 1863.
- Josiah L. Kirk, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever in camp near Belle Plain, Va., Dec. 29, 1862.
- David McDonald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of diarrhea at Div. Haap, near Belle Plain, Va., March 13, 1863.
- William M. Donald, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Windmill Point, Va., Jan. 19, 1863.
- Joseph Stok, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.
- James G. Whiston, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died at 6th Corps Hosp., Potomac Creek, Va., May 23, 1863; of wounds received in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.
- Christian Young, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died at 6th Corps Hosp., Potomac Creek, Va., May 13, 1863; of wounds received in action at Salem Heights, Va., May 4, 1863.

COMPANY K.

- Captain*—James H. Hughes, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of pneumonia at Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 3, 1862.
- Edgar A. Finney, must. in Dec. 9, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; capt. Co. A, capt. vice Hughes, died.
- First Lieutenant*—Griggett Noble, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Second Lieutenant*—William Alberts, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; detached service, A. D. C. to Gen. Noll, com. 2d Brig., 2d Div., 6th Corps.
- First Sergeant*—Elbridge G. Hunt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Sergeants*—William S. Martin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- William Parker, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- George Kerfoot, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt., May 7, 1863.
- Ambrose B. Rikeman, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., Nov. 19, 1862; sergt., May 7, 1863.
- Corporals*—Alfred Watson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Joseph Maragoni, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., Feb. 1, 1863.
- William Tice, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Alexander Finley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., Feb. 1, 1863.
- John Looey, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Vanmest, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., March 1, 1863.
- Joseph Evans, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Patrick Kearny, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., May 7, 1863.
- Musicians*—Lewis Rodier, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Theodore Bishop, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Privates*—David Barry, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Henry Braden, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Thomas Burke, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Cornelius Burns, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Calahan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Robert Carter, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Jerome B. Colburn, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Richard Cook, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Joseph Cowley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Bartholomew Curley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- William H. Dalton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Henry Devlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John H. Dehan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Josiah Donovan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; corp., Aug. 28, 1862; private, Nov. 10, 1862.
- James B. Ditch, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

- Private*—H. Todd, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Samuel Ford, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Samuel French, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Peter Hart, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Joseph S. Herold, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Hennessy, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Hunnan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- James Huron, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- William Lathie, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Robert Johnson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1862; corp., Sept. 1, 1862; private, Jan. 25, 1863.
- Thomas Kane, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- William King, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt., Aug. 28, 1862; private, Nov. 12, 1862.
- Thomas Long, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Martin Loftus, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Maxwell, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Burley M. Cary, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Lincoln McKenzie, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Thomas M. Laughlin, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Messner, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- William Mosner, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Herman Muller, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Matthew Murray, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- James Perry, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Jacob Schultz, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Bryan Sheridan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- James Shavis, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Samuel Spencer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Robert Sterling, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Bartholomew Stoneham, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Janus B. Stonehake, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Sylvester, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Henry Taylor, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John W. Thompson, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Frederick M. Van, Clef, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Peter D. Wakeless, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- David Woodford, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; sergt., Aug. 28, 1862; private, April 28, 1863.
- George Works, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Joseph Weston, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- John Witt, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- James F. Winslow, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.
- Ebenezer Wisley, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863.

WOUNDERS.

- Privates*—James Hagerty, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; must. out June 19, 1863; disch. at 2d Div. U. S. A. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Feb. 3, 1863; disability.
- Ralph Whitton, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; disch. at camp near White Oak Church, Va., Jan. 6, 1863; disability.
- Sergeant*—David Tice, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; killed near Fredericksburg, Va., May 3, 1863; corp., Aug. 28, 1862; sergt., March 1, 1863.
- Privates*—James M. Fowler, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of typhoid fever in camp near White Oak Church, Va., March 13, 1863; buried at National Cemetery, Fredericksburg, Va., Div. B, Sec. D, grave 436.
- John Kortigan, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of diarrhea at Hagerwood U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Jan. 5, 1863; buried at Military Arden Cemetery, D. C.
- John C. Loefer, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of acute dropsy at 2d Div. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., March 28, 1863.
- Joseph Van Houten, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; died of diarrhea at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Windmill Point, Va., Jan. 25, 1863.

FINAL RECORD UNKNOWN.

- Private*—John B. W. Fisher, must. in Sept. 15, 1862; wounded Dec. 13, 1862; sent to hosp. from battle-field, Fredericksburg, Va.

CHAPTER XXIII.

HUDSON COUNTY IN THE REBELLION.

(Continued.)

Eleventh Regiment, of which Robert McAllister was appointed colonel on June 30, 1862, left Trenton on the 25th of August following, and reported at Washington, D. C., on the 26th, at noon. The regiment was first attached to the First Brigade, Second Division, Third Corps, then to the First Brigade (Second New Jersey Brigade), Fourth Division, Second Corps, then to the Third Brigade, Third Division, Second Corps.

The regiment took part in the following engagements: Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13 and 14, 1862; Chancellorsville, Va., May 3 and 4, 1863; Gettysburg, Pa., July 2 and 3, 1863; Wapping Heights, Va., July 24, 1863; Kelly's Ford, Va., Nov. 8, 1863; Locust Grove, Va., Nov. 22, 1863; Mine Run, Va., Nov. 23, 1863; Wilderness, Va., May 5 to 7, 1864; Spottsylvania, Va., May 8 to 11, 1864; Spottsylvania Court House, Va., May 12 to 18, 1864; North Anna River, Va., May 23 and 24, 1864; Tolopotomy Creek, Va., May 30 and 31, 1864; Cold Harbor, Va., June 1 to 5, 1864; Barker's Mills, Va., June 10, 1864; before Petersburg, Va., June 16 to 23, 1864; Deep Bottom, Va., July 26 and 27, 1864; Mine Explosion, Va., July 30, 1864; North Bank of James' River, Va., Aug. 14 to 18, 1864; Ream's Station, Va., Aug. 25, 1864; Fort Sedgwick, Va., Sept. 10, 1864; Poplar Spring Church, Va., Oct. 2, 1864; Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; Fort Morton, Va., Nov. 5, 1864; Hatcher's Run, Va., Feb. 5 to 7, 1865; Armstrong House, Va., March 25, 1865; Boydton Plank-Road, Va. (capture of Petersburg), April 2, 1865; Amelia Springs, Va., April 6, 1865; Farmville, Va., April 6 to 7, 1865; Lee's Surrender (Appomattox), Va., April 9, 1865. Hudson county furnished one company for this regiment, as follows.

COMPANY K.

Captains—W. H. B. Dunning, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; disch. Sept. 14, 1863.

John Oldershaw, must. in Nov. 13, 1863; must. out June 6, 1865; 1st lieut. Aug. 13, 1862; capt. vice Dunning, discharged.

First Lieutenant—Alexander Cummings, must. in Nov. 24, 1863; 2d lieut. Co. H Sept. 20, 1863; 1st lieut. vice Oldershaw, pro.; trans. to Co. H Jan. 1, 1864.

Second Lieutenant—William S. Prosser, must. in July 15, 1862; sergt.-maj. 1st Regt.; 2d lieut. to fill original vacancy; pro. 1st lieut. Co. B May 4, 1865.

Albert L. Du Puyet, must. in May 29, 1863; corp. Aug. 12, 1862; sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; 2d lieut. vice Prosser, pro.; disch. Jan. 31, 1865.

Watson P. Tuttle, must. in Feb. 28, 1865; sergt.-maj.; 2d lieut. vice Du Puyet, disch.; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt., June 6, 1865.

First Sergeants—Edward Kelly, must. in June 16, 1862; pro. 2d lieut. Co. B March 6, 1863.

Charles C. Reiley, must. in April 30, 1862; sergt. April 30, 1862; 1st sergt. April 1, 1863; pro. 1st lieut. Co. A., 2d Cav. Regt., Aug. 7, 1863.

Cyprian H. Rositter, must. in June 13, 1863; corp. June 13, 1862; sergt. July 1, 1863; private March 3, 1864; 1st sergt. Aug. 1, 1864; pro. 2d lieut. Co. B Sept. 16, 1864.

Thomas O'Neill, must. in May 28, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. July 1, 1863; 1st sergt. April 1, 1865; com. 1st lieut. July 13, 1865; not mustered.

Sergeants—Joseph C. Baldwin, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; pro. 2d lieut. Co. F, Feb. 18, 1862.

Joseph L. Hughes, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. Aug. 11, 1862; sergt. April 1, 1863.

Joseph Marshall, must. in June 24, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. April 1, 1863; sergt. July 1, 1863; private March 3, 1864; sergt. Feb. 18, 1865.

George Lindley, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. July 6, 1863; sergt. April 30, 1864.

Corporals—Stephen Sayers, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. July 1, 1863.

John Burns, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. Oct. 1, 1864.

James Brady, must. in Aug. 16, 1864; must. out May 31, 1865; substitute; corp. Jan. 12, 1865; disch. at camp near Washington, I. C., G. O. 77, Par. 6, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

James Morrissey, must. in Aug. 16, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; corp. Nov. 1, 1864.

Marine—John Conventry, must. in July 12, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

Wagoner—Matthew Carroll, must. in July 11, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

Privates—Frederick Arbutnot, must. in Aug. 4, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

William Bottenbach, must. in Oct. 7, 1864; must. out May 31, 1865; substitute; disch. at camp near Washington, D. C., G. O. 77, Par. 6, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Theodore Boyd, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

John A. Burk, must. in Oct. 7, 1864; must. out June 12, 1865; substitute; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Bryan Carroll, must. in June 29, 1863; must. out June 6, 1865.

John Cole, must. in Aug. 12, 1864; must. out Aug. 3, 1865; substitute; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Cir. 31, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., July 8, 1865.

William Cyphers, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

Charles Davis (1), must. in Sept. 27, 1864; must. out Aug. 12, 1865; substitute; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

George Deitz, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

Bernard Duffy, must. in Sept. 26, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

Philip Farley, must. in July 23, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

George H. Garabrant, must. in Sept. 25, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

George Holly, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

Nathaniel Kent, must. in Aug. 1, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865; disch. at Augur U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., G. O. 77, Par. 6, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Edward Kimble, must. in Sept. 1, 1864; must. out June 6, 1865; substitute.

John A. Labort, must. in Aug. 4, 1862; must. out June 6, 1865.

Robert B. Larve, must. in Sept. 2, 1864; must. out June 7, 1865; substitute; disch. at Augur U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., G. O. 77, Par. 6, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Suney Lindon, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; must. out June 13, 1865; substitute; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Patrick Mahew (1), must. in June 16, 1864; must. out June 13, 1865; substitute; disch. at Satterlee U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., West Philadelphia, Pa., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

John McConnoy, must. in Oct. 12, 1864; must. out June 12, 1865; substitute; disch. at Trenton, N. J., orders War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C.; paroled prisoner.

James McConville, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; must. out May 25, 1865; substitute; disch. at Mount Pleasant U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Tel. Ins., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Private—James McDonald, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; must out July 6, 1865; disch. at Ward I. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Tol. Ins., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

August Schuchla, must. in March 31, 1862; must out Aug. 2, 1869; disch. at Lib. H. I. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Tol. Ins., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Silas Smith, must. in May 29, 1862; must out June 13, 1862; recruit; disch. at Lib. H. I. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

George Townsend, must. in Sept. 29, 1861; must out May 31, 1865; substitute; disch. at Lib. H. I. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 29, 1865.

Alfred Wilson, must. in June 8, 1862; must out June 10, 1865; disch. at Trenton, N. J., Tol. Ins., Wash. Hq., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 14, 1865. (partial return).

FIRST SERGEANTS

First Sergeant—Charles Hogg, must. in June 9, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., March 17, 1864; wounds received in action at Mine Run, Va.; corp. June 9, 1862; sergt. April 1, 1863; 1st sergt. Aug. 11, 1863.

Sergeant—Jeremiah Demarest, must. in May 7, 1862; disch. at Alexandria, Va., Jan. 8, 1863; disability; corp. July 7, 1862; sergt. Sept. 1, 1862.

William A. Williams, must. in July 30, 1862; disch. at Emory U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., March 11, 1869; disability; corp. July 4, 1863; sergt. March 3, 1864.

Private—Edward Applton, must. in Aug. 14, 1861; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., May 24, 1861; disability; sergt. Feb. 1, 1863; private Nov. 1, 1863.

Hugh Bondy, must. in June 21, 1862; disch. at Alexandria, Va.

William Carson, Jr., must. in Aug. 8, 1862; disch. at Ward I. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., June 9, 1862; wounds received in action; leg amputated.

Henry Critz, must. in July 18, 1862; disch. at Trenton, N. J., July 22, 1862; disability.

John B. Durham, must. in June 23, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., Dec. 11, 1863; disability.

Peter Hopkins, must. in Aug. 9, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Jan. 14, 1863; disability.

William Hyslop, must. in July 18, 1862; disch. at Trenton, N. J., July 22, 1862; disability.

John H. Jackson, must. in May 30, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Providence, R. I., March 25, 1863; disability; corp. May 30, 1862; private Feb. 28, 1863.

Thomas McMullin, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Baltimore, Md., Feb. 10, 1864; disability.

Franklin W. Pierce, must. in July 30, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Jan. 1, 1863; disability.

George H. Parter, must. in April 26, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Dec. 22, 1862; disability.

Theodore F. Rodgers, must. in June 11, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Jan. 15, 1863; disability.

Patrick Smith, must. in July 11, 1862; disch. at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Feb. 1, 1863; disability.

Joseph Wearing, must. in July 28, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Fairfax Seminary, Va., Jan. 9, 1863; disability.

James Williams, must. in Aug. 2, 1862; disch. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 5, 1863; disability.

TRANSPORTED

Sergeants—William Amson, must. in April 30, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom July 5, 1865; sergt. April 30, 1862; private March 1, 1863; sergt. April 1, 1863.

Charles H. Wilson, must. in June 9, 1861; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.; corp. April 1, 1865; sergt. April 30, 1865.

Corporals—Amos J. Foote, must. in April 30, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 31, 1864; disch. therefrom as 1st sergt. April 30, 1865; corp. April 1, 1863.

John Whitten, must. in Aug. 8, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1864; disch. therefrom July 6, 1865; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Ebenezer Kennedy, must. in Aug. 17, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.; corp. Jan. 12, 1865.

Musicians—Edward Burden, must. in May 3, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 30, 1864; re-enl. May 5, 1864.

Private—Henry Barrett, must. in Feb. 8, 1862; recruit; trans. to D. William B. Patterson, must. in Aug. 1, 1862; substitute; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1865; re-enl. Sept. 26, 1864.

John J. Bell, must. in Aug. 13, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. E, 34th Regt.

William Brown, must. in June 11, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

William Coddington, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; trans. to Co. I, Regt. 1, 1862.

John Connors 1, must. in June 16, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. D.

Charles Davis (2), must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. E.

George A. Earle, must. in July 15, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Sept. 1, 1863; disch. therefrom June 28, 1865.

Gerholm J. Ervate, must. in May 7, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 16, 1864; disch. therefrom May 7, 1865.

Samuel S. Gregg, must. in June 10, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

John Haggerty, must. in Aug. 8, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 15, 1864; disch. therefrom June 26, 1865.

William F. Hogan, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; drafted; trans. to Co. E.

Thomas Jackson, must. in Aug. 13, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

Francis Keiser, must. in Feb. 13, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

John G. Locke, must. in July 9, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps March 30, 1864; disch. therefrom July 10, 1865.

Charles McLean, must. in June 10, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. D.

Thomas McGivenry, must. in July 14, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps Aug. 16, 1863; disch. therefrom July 12, 1865.

John McLean, must. in Oct. 8, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

Edward McLaughlin, must. in April 8, 1860; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

Patrick Pries, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; trans. to Co. E, Regt. 3, 1862.

Jacob H. Snyder, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; trans. to Co. E, Regt. 3, 1862.

John Snyder, must. in Aug. 18, 1862; trans. to Co. E, Regt. 3, 1862.

Frederick Solner, must. in July 28, 1862; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps July 7, 1864; disch. therefrom June 20, 1865.

Francis Walters, must. in Nov. 4, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. C.

John Weiner, must. in July 30, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

John White, must. in Sept. 1, 1861; substitute; trans. to Co. D.

John Winters, must. in June 16, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

Franz Wirotsch, must. in June 15, 1864; substitute; trans. to Co. I, 12th Regt.

DIED.

First Sergeant—James Boucks, must. in June 16, 1862; killed in action at Armstrong House, Va., March 25, 1863; sergt. July 1, 1861; 1st sergt. Oct. 6, 1864.

Sergeant—Daniel Adrians, must. in Aug. 11, 1862; died at held hospital June 20, 1864; of wounds received in action near Petersburg, Va.; corp. Nov. 11, 1862; sergt. Nov. 1, 1865.

Corporals—William H. Morgan, must. in Aug. 8, 1862; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; corp. Sept. 1, 1862.

Jeremiah O'Brien, must. in April 30, 1862; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863; corp. Feb. 1, 1864.

Private—John Arthur, must. in Aug. 4, 1862; missing in action at Locust Grove, Va., Nov. 27, 1864; presumed dead.

Martin Bekke, must. in July 28, 1862; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863.

Turns B. Haight, must. in Aug. 10, 1862; died of diphtheria at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Sept. 29, 1864.

Israel J. Jacobus, must. in Aug. 16, 1862; died of pneumonia at Libby Prison, Richmond, Va., Dec. 3, 1863; prisoner of war; buried at Nat. Cem., Richmond, Va.

Henry Kring, must. in July 8, 1862; killed in action at Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863.

Patrick Mater, must. in Oct. 8, 1864; substitute; died of typhoid pneumonia at Third Division U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Alexandria, Va., Jan. 26, 1865. Interred Nat. Cem., Alexandria, Va., grave 2972.

Privates—Joseph Manning, must. in Sept. 28, 1864; substitute; missing in action at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; supposed dead.
 Jacob Meener, must. in Aug. 8, 1862; wounded and taken prisoner at Locust Grove, Va., Nov. 27, 1863; died at Andersonville, Ga., June 10, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Andersonville, Ga., grave 2019.
 James Mulligan, must. in Oct. 11, 1864; substitute; died Oct. 22, 1864, of wounds received on picket near Petersburg, Va.; buried at Poplar Grove Nat. Cem., Va., Division D, Section C, grave 12.
 Pierre Schneider, must. in June 15, 1864; substitute; died of chronic diarrhoea at Mount Pleasant U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington D. C., Nov. 20, 1864; buried at Nat. Cem., Arlington, Va.
 Thomas Smith, must. in Aug. 6, 1862; missing in action at Chancellorsville, Va., May 3, 1863; supposed dead.
 John H. Trouton, must. in June 25, 1864; died of typhoid fever at Convalescent Camp, Alexandria, Va., Nov. 19, 1862.
 George Yeager, must. in June 14, 1864; substitute; missing in action at Boydton Plank-Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864; supposed dead.
 Jacob Zender, must. in June 13, 1864; substitute; died of chronic diarrhoea at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Sept. 3, 1864.

FINAL RECORD UNKNOWN.

Privates—August Asmus, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute; furloughed from Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., April 7, 1865.
 George Davis, must. in Sept. 27, 1864; substitute; furloughed from Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., April 7, 1865.
 James Gray, must. in Sept. 27, 1864; substitute; furloughed from Camp Parole, Annapolis, Md., April 2, 1865.
 Roland N. Payton, must. in April 11, 1865; recruit.
 Philip Smith, must. in July 26, 1861; substitute; at Third Division, Second Corps Hosp., Nov. 1, 1864; wounded in action.

Thirty-third Regiment.—This regiment participated in the battles of Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 23, 1863; Mission Ridge, Tenn., Nov. 24 and 25, 1863; Mill Creek Gap, near Dalton, Ga., May 8, 1864; Resaca, Ga., May 15 and 16, 1864; New Hope Church, near Dallas, Ga., May 25 to June 1, 1864; Pine Knob, Ga., June 15 and 16, 1864; Muddy Creek, Ga., June 17 and 18, 1864; Culp's Farm, Ga., June 22, 1864; Kenesaw Mountain, Ga., June 27, 1864; Peach-Tree-Creek, Ga., July 20, 1864; siege of Atlanta, Ga., July 22 to Sept. 2, 1864; siege of Savannah, Ga., Dec. 11 to 21, 1864; Averysboro', N. C., March 16, 1865; Bentonville, N. C., March 18 and 20, 1864.

For an extended sketch of this regiment, see chapter XIX. of Essex County in the Rebellion. Hudson County raised two companies for this regiment, H and K, of which the following is a copy of the roster (except deserters), as found in the official Records of "Officers and Men of New Jersey in the Civil War, 1861-65," by Gen. William S. Stryker.

COMPANY H.

Captain—Barent Frazer, Jr., must. in Sept. 4, 1863; must. Oct. 17, 1865.

First Lieutenants—Thomas H. Lee, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; pro. capt. Co. G, June 28, 1864.

James J. Deegan, must. in Aug. 4, 1864; sergt.-maj. Jan. 16, 1864; 1st lieut. rice Lee, promoted.

Second Lieutenants—Joseph P. Cause, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; pro. 1st lieut. Co. A, Sept. 25, 1864.

Phillip Upton, must. in Dec. 19, 1864; 1st sergt. Sept. 3, 1863; 2d lieut. vice Cause, pro., disch. S. O. 224, Par. 33, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 12, 1865.

The enlisted men of this company were mustered out of service with the regiment July 17, 1865, except in such cases as are otherwise noted.

First Sergeants—Joseph Crane, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; sergt. Aug. 25, 1863; 1st sergt. Jan. 1, 1865; 1st lieut. Co. E, April 1, 1865.

William H. Lloyd, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; sergt. Aug. 29, 1863; 1st sergt. May 1, 1865; 2d lieut. July 17, 1865; not mustered.

Sergeants—Timothy J. Holly, must. in April 2, 1864; pro. com-sergt. June 1, 1865. A. S. Louis Miller, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Francis Smith, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. Aug. 25, 1863; sergt. Dec. 30, 1863.

Erastus Meyers, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. Sept. 5, 1863; sergt. April 25, 1865.

Oder Quinn, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. Aug. 23, 1863; sergt. June, 1865.

Corporals—James McLaughlin, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Thomas Murton, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; pro. 2d lieut. Co. G, June 28, 1864.

Francis Taylor, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; pro. 2d lieut. Co. C, Sept. 20, 1864.

Thomas H. Eaton, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; disch. at Trenton, N. J., May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington D. C.; must. Oct. 17, 1865.

John M. Buxton, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; disch. at Trenton, N. J., July 8, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington, D. C.; must. Oct. 17, 1865.

James Moran, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. May 1, 1865.

Abram S. Canfield, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. Oct. 1, 1864.

Ambruse Hotchkiss, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. May 5, 1865.

William H. Straway, must. in April 2, 1864; corp. May 5, 1865.

William Oliver, must. in Sept. 4, 1864; corp. June 2, 1865.

Privates—Francis P. Backer, must. in Feb. 2, 1864; recruit.
 Lockwood Bellin, must. in Oct. 17, 1864; substitute.

George Best, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; drafted.

Louis H. Brown, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; corp. Sept. 2, 1863.

John Burk, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

John Burns, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Charles H. Chamberlain, must. in April 13, 1865; drafted.

Hugh Comstock, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

John W. Cooper, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Justin A. Cooper, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Samuel B. Cox, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; substitute.

Francis Croxon, must. in April 13, 1865; drafted.

James Dalton, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Newton C. Dealing, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Philip De Freese, must. in March 13, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

Erastus De Graw, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; recruit; disch. near Hadesburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865; trans. from Co. I; must. Oct. 17, 1865.

James G. Denavost, must. in Jan. 11, 1865; recruit.

John Donnelly, must. in Oct. 19, 1864; substitute.

James Dougherty, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; drafted.

Frederick Eaton, must. in Oct. 19, 1864; must. Oct. 30, 1865; disch. at McJannet U. S. A. Gen. Hosp. New York Harbor, War Dept., A. G. O., May 4, 1865.

Noah C. Estill, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

John Fishback, must. in Oct. 17, 1864; must. Oct. 17, 1865; disch. near Hadesburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., April 25, 1865.

Garret Garrison, must. in Feb. 23, 1865; must. Oct. 28, 1865; disch. at Newark, N. J., May 3, 1865; War Dept., A. G. O.

Thomas Gilson, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; substitute.

Henry Gilman, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; substitute.

Charles Hnos, must. in Sept. 22, 1864; disch. near Hadesburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., April 28, 1865.

Henry C. Haslet, must. in Jan. 18, 1865; disch. at Mower U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., War Dept., A. G. O., May 3, 1865; must. Oct. 26, 1865.

Leonard Hendershot, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Richard Herian, must. in Oct. 18, 1864; substitute.

William Higgin, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., May 3, 1865.

Henry Hillglass, must. in March 13, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. K.

John Hinkle, must. in Jan. 16, 1865; disch. at Washington, D. C., War Dept., A. G. O., May 23, 1865; trans. from Co. B.

John Interstrum, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute.

James M. Jarvis, must. in April 2, 1864.

Pierson Johnson, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Theodore Johnson, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

James H. Kidney, must. in Sept. 4, 1864.

William Koester, must. in Sept. 24, 1864; disch. near Hadesburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., April 28, 1865.

Private—James Lawton, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

William Lewis, must. in Oct. 17, 1864, substitute.

Henry Ludwig, must. in Oct. 14, 1864, substitute.

Francis Madison, must. in June 21, 1864, detach. at Trenton, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 4, 1865, trans. from Co. B.

Andrew Mason, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Trenton, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., May 3, 1865.

John McLean, must. in Oct. 14, 1864, substitute.

Michael McFadyen, must. in Aug. 21, 1863, substitute.

Daniel McNamee, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Thomas Mink, must. in April 14, 1863, detach. at Trenton, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Joseph Miller, must. in Oct. 18, 1864, substitute.

Barney Mowrey, must. in Dec. 24, 1863, drafted.

Wallace Newbold, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, recruit.

Robert Newton, must. in Oct. 14, 1864, detach. at McDougall C. S. A. Gen. Hosp., New York Harbor, May 4, 1865, War Dept., A. G. O.

William Parker, must. in April 18, 1863, substitute; detach. at Trenton, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 4, 1865.

John B. Pittenger, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Trenton, N. J., War Dept., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

Adam Scherer, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., April 28, 1865; must. out June 1, 1865.

John Shaffer, must. in March 14, 1863, recruit.

Samuel Stocker, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

Edward South, must. in April 14, 1863, drafted.

Alma Spangenberg, must. in April 2, 1863.

Ohio Spierling, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Louisville, Ky., G. O. 27 for 1863, 1st. of Kentucky.

Augustus Stoway, must. in April 2, 1863.

James A. Struble, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, private-sergeant Jan. 29, 1865.

Howard Sykes, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

George Taylor, must. in April 18, 1863, drafted.

Gabriel Telo, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Ward, F. & A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, N. J., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865.

William F. Trow, must. in Oct. 18, 1864, substitute.

Joseph Van Brunt, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Trenton, N. J., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 4, 1865.

Ira Van Orden, must. in Sept. 14, 1863, detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Lewis Vogel, must. in May 10, 1865, substitute; detach. at Trenton, N. J., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865; trans. from Co. A. Thomas Ward, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

George Weatherwax, must. in Sept. 11, 1864, recruit; detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Christian Wegen, must. in Oct. 16, 1864, substitute.

Charles White, must. in Sept. 28, 1864, drafted; detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

George Wells, must. in Oct. 4, 1864, recruit; detach. at Trenton, N. J., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 15, 1865; private prisoner.

Charles J. Weyble, must. in Sept. 14, 1864, recruit; detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

John E. Wiley, must. in Sept. 13, 1864, recruit; detach. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., Washington, D. C., April 28, 1865.

Charles Wright, must. in Sept. 4, 1863.

DISCHARGED.

Sergeant—Richard O'Dougherty, must. in Sept. 6, 1864, detach. at Centennial Hotel, New York City, April 13, 1865, right eye injured.

Private—William Brandt, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Washington, D. C., April 11, 1865, disability.

Christopher Ferguson, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 27, 1864, disability.

John F. Haines, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Cincinnati, O., Jan. 1, 1865, disability.

Cyrus B. Johnson, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Cincinnati, O., Dec. 21, 1864, disability.

Thomas Keating, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Louisville, Ky., April 1, 1864, disability.

Private—Christopher M. Levis, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at Centennial Hotel, New York City, July 2, 1865, disability.

Edward Van Horn, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, detach. at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Jefferson Barracks, Ind., Sept. 24, 1864, gunshot wound.

TRANSFERRED.

Henry Allen, must. in Oct. 2, 1863, G. O. 1 S. Army, May 12, 1864, detach. at Centennial Hotel, New York City, July 2, 1865, disability.

John Ford, must. in Aug. 9, 1864, recruit; trans. to Co. C, George King, must. in Feb. 4, 1865, recruit; trans. to Co. K, Frank Adams, must. in April 18, 1865, recruit; trans. to Co. G, George Langston, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, recruit; trans. to V. B. Co., Nov. 24, 1865.

William B. Lawson, must. in Nov. 26, 1864, recruit; trans. to Co. C, 30th Reg.

James M. DeLoe, must. in April 15, 1865, substitute; trans. to Co. K.

William Spaw, must. in Oct. 4, 1863, trans. to V. B. Co., June 24, 1864, detach. at Centennial Hotel, New York City, July 2, 1865, disability.

DIED.

John A. Bandy, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, accidentally killed at Newark, N. J., 1865.

James Bush, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, died of typhoid fever at 11th Army Corps Hosp., Lookout Valley, Ga., Dec. 10, 1864, buried at National Cemetery, Chattanooga, Tenn., Section B, grave 51.

Jeremiah C. Cramer, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, died of fever at U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 5, 1864, buried at National Cemetery, Nashville, Tenn., Section E, grave 2785.

Britton Drake, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, died at Nashville, Tenn., July 1, 1864, of wounds received in action at Resaca, Ga., May 14, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Nashville, Tenn., Section 8, grave 560.

Newton Dutcher, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, died at Pine Knob, Ga., July 5, 1864, of wounds received in action at Pine Knob, June 16, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Section E, grave 74.

George Hetherington, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, killed at Resaca, Ga., May 16, 1864.

William B. Kitchpaugh, must. in March 11, 1865; recruit; died of fever at McDougall C. S. A. Gen. Hosp., New York Harbor, June 10, 1865; buried at Cypress Hill Cemetery, Long Island, N. Y., grave 2946.

Samuel Letts, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, killed in action at Pine Knob, Ga., June 16, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Marietta, Ga., Section H, grave 82.

Charles H. Locke, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, killed in action at Pine Knob, Ga., June 16, 1864.

Thomas Marsh, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, killed in action at Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 23, 1863.

Hugh McRae, must. in Sept. 4, 1863, killed in action at Peach Tree Creek, Ga., July 20, 1864; buried at National Cemetery, Marietta, Ga., Section F, grave 334.

George H. 2d, must. in March 22, 1864, died at Pine Knob, Ga., June 16, 1864, of wounds received in action at Pine Knob, Ga.

James Smith, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; accidentally killed at Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 14, 1863.

Emile Traxler, must. in Oct. 4, 1864, substitute; recruit; typhoid fever at Jackson C. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., June 16, 1865; buried at National Cemetery, Arlington, Va.

John C. Enghel, must. in Sept. 4, 1863; private; died, record unknown.

COMPANY K.

Company—William M. Fry, must. in Aug. 28, 1863, must. out July 17, 1865.

First Lieutenant—William H. Cleburne, must. in Aug. 28, 1863, promoted in May 10, 1864.

Second Lieutenant—John C. Kelly, must. in Aug. 28, 1863; discharged Oct. 9, 1865.

Sydney B. Smith, must. in April 5, 1864, private; Co. B, 23rd Ind. Inf. (Heavy Arty.), detach. April 7, 1864, disability.

Andr. W. G. Hinton, must. in May 25, 1864, 1st sergeant; Co. B, 23rd Ind. Inf. (Heavy Arty.).

Unless otherwise noted, the sergeants, corporals and privates of this company were mustered out of the service of the United States July 17, 1865.

Privates—Thomas Duncan, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Trenton, N. J., A. G. O., Washington, D. C., May 12, 1865.

Michael Tenney, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; corp. Aug. 10, 1863; sergt.; 1st's sergt. June 1, 1865; must. out July 17, 1865.

Sergeants—John O'Neil, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; sergt. Aug. 13, 1863; sergt.-major Aug. 1, 1864.

Theodore Columbus, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Trenton, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington, D. C.

James Simpson, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Michael Donahoe, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Edward Sandalls, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; corp. Aug. 19, 1863; 2d Lieut. Co. E April 1, 1865.

Corporals—Patrick Dooley, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Thomas Fallon, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

William McFadyen, must. in Sept. 22, 1863.

John Quinn, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Peter S. Ray, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Trenton, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington, D. C.

James Morrissey, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Privates—Richard Black, must. in Feb. 18, 1865; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Harman I. Blauvelt, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Trenton, N. J., May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

James Booth, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Ward U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Mordecai Y. Brvant, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Chattanooga, Tenn., May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

James Carey, must. in Sept. 27, 1863; disch. at Trenton, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington, D. C.; trans. from Co. B.

John Collins, must. in April 12, 1865; disch. at Trenton, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Patrick Connell, must. in March 29, 1865; trans. from Co. F.

Samuel F. Conant, must. in Jan. 5, 1865; trans. from Co. C.

James Cox, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Michael Cox, must. in March 1, 1864; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Charles C. Dawson, must. in Aug. 8, 1865; recruit.

John Delaney, must. in Sept. 25, 1863; disch. at Trenton, May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.; trans. from Co. B.

Francis Ernst, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Albert Goetehus, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

James Green, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Robert Hall, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Gustave Hartman, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

John Lertz, must. in Sept. 17, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., Aug. 2, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Adolph Hoike, must. in Feb. 9, 1865; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Matthew Kelly, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Thomas Kierman, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

George King, must. in Feb. 6, 1865; recruit; trans. from Co. H.

Edward Knox, must. in Oct. 10, 1864; substitute.

John Larkin, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Lowell U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Portsmouth Grove, R. I., July 7, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Andrew Layden, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Carl J. Lindmark, must. in Oct. 21, 1864.

Frederick H. Lynn, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

John W. Martling, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Francis McFarty, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Patrick McLean, must. in Aug. 23, 1863.

Edward McFormot, must. in Oct. 19, 1864; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

James McIntire, must. in April 12, 1865; trans. from Co. H.

Privates—Thomas Ryan, must. in Oct. 8, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., April 28, 1865.

William Simmons, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., April 28, 1865.

William Smezer, must. in April 13, 1865; substitute.

George Smith, must. in Oct. 7, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, War Dept., A. G. O., April 28, 1865.

James Smith, must. in April 13, 1865; substitute.

John Smith, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Samuel Smith, must. in Sept. 9, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., April 28, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

George J. Stock, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Daniel B. Stuart, must. in Sept. 5, 1863.

Jeremiah Sullivan, must. in April 13, 1865; substitute.

George W. Thomas, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

James Townley, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

Cornelius Van Heest, must. in Sept. 22, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., G. O. 77, A. G. O., War Dept.

George Vanmatten, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., April 28, 1865; G. O. 77, A. G. O., War Dept.

Honice Vanmatten, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. at Washington, D. C., May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Charles Wagner, must. in Oct. 15, 1864; disch. at Newark, May 12, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

William H. Waldron, must. in Sept. 23, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., April 28, 1865; G. O. 77, A. G. O., War Dept.

Peter Welch, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept., Washington, D. C.

Adam Wetzel, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Fort Schuyler, New York Harbor, May 3, 1865; A. G. O., War Dept.

Blakely Windsor, must. in Aug. 29, 1863.

John Wyman, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; disch. near Bladensburg, Md., April 28, 1865; G. O. 77, A. G. O., War Dept.

Ernest Elke, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, Jan. 1, 1865; disability.

John Hays, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; disch. at Newark, Feb. 1, 1865; disability.

James Monahan, must. in Aug. 15, 1863; disch. at Lincoln U. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Washington, D. C., Oct. 19, 1864.

Patrick Slattery, must. in Aug. 15, 1863; disch. at Insano Hosp., Washington, D. C., Oct. 19, 1864.

TRANSFERRED.

John Allen, must. in April 12, 1865; substitute; trans. to Co. C.

William Bliese, must. in April 13, 1865; substitute; trans. to Co. C.

George Bowen, must. in April 13, 1865; drafted; trans. to Co. I.

Joseph A. Brown, must. in Nov. 22, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G, 34th Regt.

Philip De Freeze, must. in March 13, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. H.

Evan B. Edmunds, must. in April 12, 1865; drafted; trans. to Co. I.

Samuel Gillespie, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps April 3, 1865; disch. Aug. 1, 1865.

John E. Haines, must. in March 9, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. D.

John Houshall, must. in Sept. 7, 1864; trans. to Co. D, 35th Regt.

Michael Higgins, must. in March 8, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. D.

Philip Hilgar, must. in March 11, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. G.

Henry Hilgloth, must. in March 13, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. H.

William Hunt, must. in April 12, 1865; substitute; trans. to Co. E.

Adolph Machowof, must. in April 14, 1865; substitute; trans. to Co. I.

Thomas McCarthy, must. in April 3, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. A.

William McElhucue, must. in March 28, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. A.

James Mullins, must. in April 12, 1865; substitute; trans. to Co. E.

Frank Mullen, must. in March 11, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. A.

Isaac A. Perry, must. in March 16, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. C, 34th Regt.

Charles Riker, must. in Sept. 7, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. C.

John Schafer, must. in March 14, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. C.

William Smith, must. in Feb. 2, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. E.

William J. Smith, must. in Feb. 3, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. F.

Richard Stage, must. in March 11, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. G.

Richard Stewart, must. in April 12, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. E.

Frederick W. Studford, must. in May 5, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. I.

Private—Anthony Ummernis, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; trans. to Vet. Res. Corps June 25, 1865; disch. Aug. 3, 1865.

Ira Van Ordon, must. in Sept. 13, 1864; recruit; trans. to Co. H, Augusta Vordenburgh, must. in March 11, 1865; result? trans. to Co. G.

Frank H. Winters, must. in March 11, 1865; recruit; trans. to Co. H.

George T. Wood, must. in Feb. 24, 1865; drafted; trans. to Co. F
DIED.

James Adams, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; died in F. S. A. Gen. Hosp., New Albany, Ind., Dec. 9, 1864; buried in National Cemetery at that place, section B, grave 1319.

Hiram Babcock, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; died at Clay F. S. A. Gen. Hosp., Louisville, Ky., Feb. 7, 1864; buried in National Cemetery, Cave Hill, Ky.; section B, grave 44.

William F. Green, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; killed at Peach-Tree Creek, Ga., July 29, 1864.

John Long, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; killed at Peach-Tree Creek, Ga., July 29, 1864.

William Thompson alias John O'Keefe, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; killed in action at Peach-Tree Creek, Ga., July 29, 1864.

Patrick Travers, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; killed in action at Peach-Tree Creek, Ga., July 29, 1864.

William F. Wheeler, must. in Sept. 5, 1863; killed in action at Dallas, Ga., May 25, 1864.

RECORD UNKNOWN.

Oscar Encke, corp., must. in Aug. 29, 1863; wounded; record unknown.

Chester Andrews, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; absent, sick; record unknown.

Thomas F. Kenney, must. in Aug. 29, 1863; record unknown.

Hexamer's Battery, known in the army roster as Battery A, First New Jersey Artillery, Capt. William Hexamer, was mustered into the service Aug. 12, 1861, at Hoboken, where the battery was recruited, which place it left eight days after for Washington.

The first battle in which the battery was engaged was that of West Point, Va., May 7, 1861, where it displayed great gallantry, receiving the highest encomiums. It was next engaged at Mechanicsville, before Richmond, May 31, 1861. June 27th it was in the battle of Gaines' Mills. Upon the withdrawal of the army to Harrison's Landing, the battery went into camp, where it remained until August 26th, when it embarked for Alexandria, and was on the right of Kearny's division in the fight of Chantilly. It was also in the battle of Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1862, where it performed excellent service. From that time forward Hexamer's was one of the most famous Batteries during the war, performing herculean feats upon several hard-fought battle-fields. Composed largely of Germans, in whose breasts the love of liberty amounted to a passion, it fought from first to last with a heroism, a loftiness of purpose and a spirit of noble consecration which none, among all the volunteer organizations of the war, ever surpassed, and its survivors, in whatever spheres of action they may now be employed, may well wear their scars with pride, and rejoice in the memories of their services as in hid treasure.

The following is the register of the commissioned officers actually in service of Battery A:

Captain—William Hexamer, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; must. out Aug. 12, 1864.

First Lieutenant—John Fingerlin, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; res. Nov. 30, 1861.

Christian Werner, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; res. Oct. 8, 1862.

John I. Hoff, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; res. November, 1862.

George W. B. Wright, must. in Aug. 1, 1862; res. March 28, 1863.

Augustus Parsons, must. in July 11, 1862; took the command Aug. 12, 1864.

William Yongle, must. in April 24, 1863.

Second Lieutenant—Herrman Lantz, must. in Aug. 12, 1861; res. Sept. 4, 1861.

Adolph Falow, must. in May 15, 1862; res. July 13, 1862.

William Hausmann, must. in 1862; res. July 20, 1862.

Phillip Phildrus, must. in 1863; res. Nov. 12, 1863.

Samuel F. Wheeler, must. in June 23, 1863; must. out Aug. 12, 1864.

William O. Bonin, must. in Dec. 15, 1863; must. out with the battery, 1864.

CHAPTER XXIV.

PIONEER ROADS AND BRIDGES IN HUDSON COUNTY; TRAVELING FACILITIES OF YE OLDER TIME.¹

It is with difficulty we can bring our minds to a realization that but little more than two centuries ago the two counties of Essex and Hudson, now teeming with busy life, and numbering its hundreds of thousands of population, were entirely destitute of roads or highways other than were bridle-paths or Indian tracks, traversed by the aboriginals in going to or from the trading posts established by the Dutch settlers in old Bergen.

The first road laid out by Europeans within the limits of New Jersey with which the Dutch at New Amsterdam communicated with the settlements on the Delaware was little more than a foot-path, and so continued for many years, affording facilities to horsemen and pedestrians only, until the Legislature, in 1675 and 1676, adopted some general regulations for the opening of roads. Highways and streets were provided for in the concessions of 1664, but these related to cities and towns, without provision for communication with distant points. The first wagon road of which there is any record ran from Communipaw to Bergen by the route now known as Communipaw and Palisade Avenues. This was in existence as early as 1679.

In March, 1682, the Governor, Council and deputies passed an act for "making and setting of highways, passages, landings, bridges and ferries fit and apt for traveling passages and landing of goods," and appointed the first commissioners of highways of which there is any record. The commissioners appointed for Bergen were Capt. John Berry, Laurence Andross, Enoch Machillson, Hance Dederick, Michael Smith, Hendrick Van Asstrum, and Clause Janson Vansarumarant. In 1694 vacancies were filled by the appointment of the Governor, the surveyor-general, Capt.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

William Lawrence, Hendrick Epkee, Lawrence Lawrence, Enoch McChilson, Edward Earl, Jr., John Adrian, Sr., and Capt. Garabrant Clawson.

For Essex, the commissioners named in the first-quoted law were the Governor and Deputy-Governor for the time being, the surveyor-general, Capt. John Palmer, Capt. William Sandford, Benjamin Price, Isaac Kingsland, Henry Lyon, Benjamin Parkis, Thomas Johnston and John Curtis, and by the succeeding appointment, Maj. Isaac Kingsland, Elias McChilson, Claus Johnson Romain, Capt. John Curcive, Azariah Crane, John Treat, Benjamin Meeker, Aaron Thompson and Benjamin Ogden.

These commissioners, the orthography of whose names is preserved as found in a printed volume of the laws of those years in the library of the New Jersey Historical Society, had full power to set, lay out and appoint public highways in and throughout their respective counties, and similar commissions were formed for Monmouth and Middlesex Counties, which embraced all the remainder of the province. Under their management local roads were improved, and a post route was established about 1693. In 1698 a public wagon-road was ordered from Perth Amboy to West Jersey and Pennsylvania, for the convenience of travel from New York and New England. Between Perth Amboy and New York the transit was made in small, inconvenient boats, called periaugers, and the journey was attended with more peril and anxiety than a trip nowadays across the Atlantic. One Dellaman was permitted by Governor Hamilton to drive a wagon on the Amboy road, and enjoyed the first monopoly of transporting goods and passengers between New York and Philadelphia. This was one of the grievances complained of by the Assembly in 1707 in their memorial to Lord Cornbury, as "destructive to that freedom which trade and commerce ought to have." The despotic Governor in his reply defended the exclusive privileges complained of on the ground that by the patent "everybody is sure once a fortnight to have an opportunity of sending any quantity of goods, great or small, at reasonable rates, without being in danger of being imposed upon." The wagon continued its trade to and from Philadelphia, Burlington, Amboy and New York until Lord Cornbury's recall, in 1710.

The grand jury of each county was authorized in 1704 to appoint two persons in each county, precinct, district or township to perform the duties theretofore devolving upon the commissioners, and from this act the present mode of controlling roads by surveyors of highways owes its origin.

A road from Bergen Point, through the town of Bergen, and thence to the Hudson River, had been laid prior to 1764, for in that year the old road was vacated, and a "king's highway" was laid out to the point opposite Staten Island, and in this year a stage route from the landing at Bergen Point to Paulus Hook was established. The stage connected with a boat running to Blazing Star landing, in Woodbridge, whence the passengers were conveyed to Philadelphia in covered wagons, with the seats set on springs, which were modestly called "Flying machines." These stage-wagons conveyed the passengers from New York to Philadelphia in two days during the summer and three days in the winter.

By an act of June 28, 1766, Ephraim Ferrill, Jonathan Hampton, John Halsted, Matthias Williamson and John Blanchard were authorized to lay out a new road, four rods wide, from the southwesterly point of Bergen, along up Newark Bay as far as they might think convenient, and from thence to and over Paulus Hook to low water mark on Hudson's River; said road to be maintained by the county, excepting that part of the said road up Newark Bay until it intersected the road previously laid out by the surveyors of the highways, which was to be kept in repair by the owners of the ferry at Bergen Point, and that part lying between the uplands of Abasimus and the uplands of Paulus Hook, which was to be thereafter "and for ever" kept in good and sufficient repair by the owners of the ferry at Paulus Hook. In 1797 a repealer was passed making the highway subject to vacation or alteration by the surveyors of highways.

In 1765 the Legislature ordered a road four rods wide to be laid out from the lower end of the Great Neck, at Newark, beginning at the upland of Abner Ward, on the road by the meadow edge, at the southwest corner of the meadow of Joseph Rogers, and from thence running along the line of said Joseph Rogers, south sixty-eight degrees and thirty minutes east, thirty-five chains to Passaic River at low-water mark. It then continued on the south side of a small creek, on a course south sixty-three degrees and fifteen minutes east, sixty-six chains to the Hackensack River at low-water mark, and thence on the east side of the Hackensack, near a creek called Post's Creek, continuing its breadth of four rods to the public road leading from Bergen Point to Paulus Hook. The trustees of this road were David Ogden, Daniel Pierson, Joseph Hedden, Jr., Caleb Camp, Uzal Ward, Joseph Rogers, Jr., and Thomas Brown, who also had charge of the ferries over the two rivers. They were authorized to raise by subscriptions or donations a sum not exceeding five thousand pounds, to defray the expenses of making the road and erecting the necessary ferries, causeways and buildings. In this act we find further legislative authority for dead-heading in the following proviso: "That no ferrage be taken from his Excellency the Governor of this colony for the time being, for himself, his retinue, horses and carriages, on passing the ferries hereby established."

The act authorizing the erection of bridges over the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers was passed Nov. 24, 1790, and Samuel Tuthill, of Morristown, Col. John Neilson, of New Brunswick, Robert T. Kimble, of Newark, and William Maxwell and John Pintard, of New York, were appointed commissioners to alter the route of the road to some more convenient place, and to locate and erect the bridges over the two rivers with draws not less than twenty-four feet wide. These commissioners were authorized to purchase the ferries and to make the rates of toll, and it was declared unlawful for any other persons to erect a bridge over the Passaic between the mouth of that river and the place where Second River empties itself, or across the Hackensack between its mouth and Kingsland Creek. On the same day an act was passed granting power to the commissioners to erect a lottery for the purpose of raising a fund of four thousand dollars to defray the expenses of carrying into effect the good purposes intended in and by said act. In 1794 the time allotted for the completion of the bridges was extended six months, and a further delay was occasioned the following year by a mistake made by the surveyors in making their return of the road, which was remedied by a supplemental act. In the following year legislation was obtained by which the amount to be raised by a lottery was increased to twenty-seven thousand pounds, of which two thousand pounds were to be paid to the State for the purpose of providing suitable buildings for the Legislature, five thousand pounds towards building the bridge across the Raritan River, and the balance to be used by the commissioners in completing their road and bridges.

In February, 1792, the commissioners acting for the State passed to Samuel Ogden and thirty-six other persons the privileges and franchise conferred by the charter, and the bridges were completed in 1795. On the 7th of March, 1797, the Legislature incorporated Rev. Uzal Ogden, Moses Ogden, Samuel Ogden, Lewis Ogden, Charles Ogden, Philip Kearny, Elisha Boudinot, Samuel Baldwin, George W. Burnet, Arent L. Schuyler, Robert Watts, Daniel Ludlow, Robert T. Kemble, Francis B. Winthrop, John C. Shaw, Thomas Marston, Peter Kemble, Daniel Badcock, Nicholas Gouverneur, Harman Le Roy, Israel Canfield, James H. Kip, Cornelius Ray, William Bayard, Hercules D. Bize and Joseph Kingsland, by the name of "The Proprietors of the Bridges over the rivers Passaic and Hackensack." Rev. Uzal Ogden was made president, Samuel Baldwin secretary and Charles Ogden treasurer of the corporation. These proprietors and their successors claimed a monopoly of the right of building bridges over the two rivers, which has since been the source of several hard-fought battles in the courts.

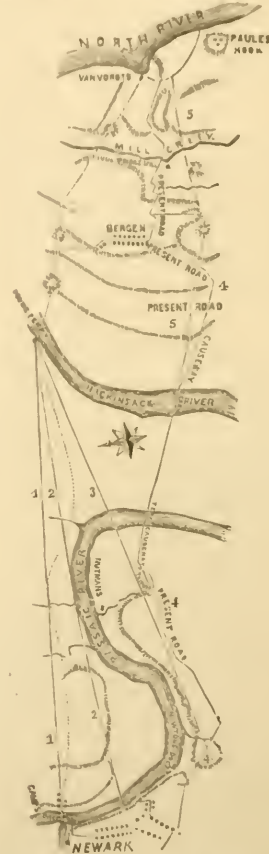

The road constructed was what is now known as the Old Turnpike road through East Newark, and the bridges built spanned the rivers where this road crosses them.

The old route through Bergen was once the ground now occupied by the Plank-Road Company.

The courses described in the accompanying map are the several routes proposed to lead to different stations on the rivers, at one of which it was judged most advantageous to erect the bridges. The distance from Newark Court-House to Powles' Hook, by the several routes, is as follows:

- No. 1. Camp's Dock Route, 9 miles, 13 chains, 76 links.
 - No. 2. Heddin's Dock Route, 7 miles, 65 chains, 76 links.
 - No. 3. Beef Point Route, 8 miles, 18 chains, 41 links.
 - No. 4. Present road, 8 miles, 60 chains, 7 links.
 - No. 5. Present road, shortened, 7 miles, 52 chains, 6 links.
- The length of causeway required over the meadows is as follows:
 No. 1. Camp's Dock Route, 4 miles, 1 chain, 66 links. No. 2. Heddin's

- Dock Route, 3 miles, 65 chains, 40 links.
- No. 3. Beef Point Route, 3 miles, 5 chains, 42 links.
- No. 4. Present road, 2 miles, 26 chains, 75 links.
- No. 5. Present road, shortened, 2 miles, 44 chains, 77 links.

The breadth and depth of the water is as follows:
 1st. HACKENSACK RIVER: at the place where the present ferry is established: breadth, 144½ feet; depth at eastern shore, 8 feet 8 inches; depth at western shore, 5 feet 11 inches; depth of the channel, 25 feet 4 inches.
 2d. At the place more northerly, called Dows Ferry: breadth, 246 feet; depth at east shore, 10 feet, 10 inches; depth at west shore, 12 feet 12 inches; greatest depth in channel, 35 feet.

PASSAIC RIVER.—1. At the place where the present ferry is established. Breadth, 676 feet; depth at eastern shore, 8 feet 6 inches; depth at western shore, 9 feet 6 inches; greatest depth in channel, 17 feet.

2. At a place more northerly, called Beef Point: Breadth, 799 feet; depth at eastern shore, 11 feet; depth at western shore, 4 feet 5 inches; greatest depth in channel, 13 feet 4 inches.

3. At a place more northerly, called Heddin's Dock, in the city of Newark. Breadth, 526 feet; depth at eastern shore, 4 feet 5 inches; depth at western shore, 10 feet 8 inches; greatest depth in channel, 15 feet 11 inches.

On Feb. 17, 1794, commissioners were authorized to lay out a road from the ferry at Hoboken to intersect at Four Corners the road already laid between the Hackensack River and Paulus Hook.

A road from Weehawken ferry to what is now known as English Neighborhood was laid in 1718, a part of which is now covered by the Hackensack turnpike.

Another road laid out at an early period, and of which there is no recorded date, was constructed from Ahasimus to Bergen, by way of Prior's mill. The road was widened out and improved in 1753.

The road recently known as the Bergen Point plank-road was laid out in 1799. Its course was from the intersection of Waverly Avenue and the new road to Bergen Point.

On Nov. 22, 1802, an act was passed authorizing John Cumming, David D. Crane and John Dodd as commissioners to lay out a four-rod road from the great road leading from Newark to Paulus Hook to Nathaniel Budd's dock and ferry, between Paulus Hook and Hoboken ferries, where Budd had lately erected a new ferry stairs and dock; to be maintained at the sole expense of N. Budd, his heirs or assigns.

The Newark Turnpike was authorized by an act of the Legislature Dec. 11, 1804, which incorporated John N. Cumming, John Dodd, Alexander C. McWhorter, Silas Condit, David D. Crane, and their future associates and successors, by the name of the Newark Turnpike Company for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a turnpike road from the west line of the associates of the New Jersey Company (now Warren Street, Jersey City) to the eastern abutment of the bridge over the Hackensack River, on the then existing road as far as the intersection of the Bergen road, near the house of Nathaniel Budd, after which it was allowed to deviate so far as to conform to the blocks and streets laid out upon Harsimus; but this requirement was disregarded, and the road was laid diagonally across the blocks. The capital stock was limited to ten thousand dollars for each mile of road, and the charter was to continue for ninety-nine years.

The law authorized the Governor to subscribe for the State any number of shares not exceeding two hundred and fifty, and on Dec. 3, 1801, a further act authorized the Governor to draw from the treasury the sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars for the purpose of carrying the law into effect and meeting the expenditure of the ensuing year. The franchise was subsequently acquired by the bridge proprietors, and in November, 1832, the New Jersey

Railroad and Transportation Company purchased the lease of the proprietors, and this company for years thereafter controlled not only the railroad traffic, but the only turnpike road between Jersey City and Newark.

Newark Plank-Road.—On the 24th of February, 1849, an act incorporating the Newark Plank-Road and Ferry Company was passed. The company was authorized to build a plank-road from Newark to the Hudson River, and to run ferry-boats across the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers. The right to bridge the rivers belonged exclusively to the railroad company, under its lease from the bridge proprietors, and therefore the new company had to resort to a ferry in crossing the two streams. The New Jersey Railroad Company bitterly opposed this charter, but failed in their efforts, and to prevent them from getting control of it, a clause was inserted in the act prohibiting any other incorporated company from controlling directly or indirectly the new company's stock; but this was subsequently repealed. Moreover, each stockholder of the Plank-Road Company was required to sign an agreement to first offer his stock, should he desire to sell it, to the board of directors. But in spite of these precautions, the railroad company succeeded in buying up more than half of the plank-road stock.

In March, 1852, the Plank-Road Company was authorized to build a bridge over the Hackensack River, provided the holders of the lease from the bridge proprietors would consent, and in 1855 a like act concerning a bridge over the Passaic was passed.

The New Jersey Railroad Company, which controlled the bridges, at last gave its consent, and the bridges were built, and shortly afterwards the railroad company became the owners.

Under the authority of an act of 1875, the corporate existence of the bridge company was extended in 1879 for fifty years, or until the 22d of April, 1929, carrying with it the exclusive privileges which prevent any other citizens from building bridges over Hackensack or Passaic Rivers. The president of the company is Mr. A. L. Dennis; Mr. Charles P. Thurston was for many years the secretary and treasurer, but recently resigned, and Mr. Warren E. Dennis was elected to fill the vacancy.

The Schuyler Road was constructed by Col. Schuyler to facilitate transportation of ore from the copper mines opened by his father, and was probably laid out about 1755. An act was passed Sept. 26, 1772, the preamble of which recites that "Many of the inhabitants of the counties of Essex and Bergen have, by their petition, set forth that a certain highway through a cedar swamp and over the meadows and marshes on New Barbours Neck to Hackensack River is very useful and will be greatly beneficial to the inhabitants of the northern parts of Sussex, Morris and Essex, in passing to and from New York by Paulus Hook; and that Col. John Schuyler, at his own private expense, hath, at great charge, erected a causeway of cedar logs through the said swamp and meadows upwards of three miles in length, and built proper bridges at upwards of three thousand pounds expense; and said road will be in danger of being destroyed by fire unless properly covered with gravel, and that such covering will be attended with an expense of at least ten hundred and fifty pounds, an additional expense too great to be borne by the said Col. John Schuyler.

The act then proceeds to authorize Richard Ludlow, Michael Vreeland, Jacobus Post, John Richards, Jonathan J. Drayton and Edward Thomas, or any three or more of them, to draw a lottery for raising that sum, the money to be paid to Josiah Hornblower, and by him issued to William Dow and Aront H. Schuyler, to be by them applied to covering said causeway with earth or gravel.

Authority to build a bridge over the Passaic River near the Dutch Church, at Second River (Belleville), was given in 1794 to the persons who should thereafter become subscribers as fully and absolutely as if they were particularly named in the act. The bridge was to be completed by Dec. 1, 1796, or the grant to become null and void. Aaron Kitchel, John Condit, John Dodd, Amos Harrison and Elias Cook were appointed commissioners to examine into the damages which might be sustained by William Dow in taking his land. Four years later the proprietors represented to the Legislature that the expense of building the bridge had far exceeded the estimate, and that the toll did not afford a reasonable compensation, whereupon the rates of toll were increased, with the restriction that the annual net proceeds of the tolls should at no time exceed fifteen per cent. of the moneys expended in erecting and maintaining the bridge. About this time Gen. John Doughty, John Blanchard and Col. Elias Cook formally laid out the road to the width of four rods (no legal record existing of the original road as laid by Col. Schuyler) between the Passaic and the Hackensack, but it was provided that the part running through the Cedar Swamp and meadows of Aront Schuyler should be maintained by the proprietors of the bridge at Second River. In 1802 the stockholders and proprietors of the bridge and of the road were incorporated by the name of the Belleville Bridge and Turnpike Road Association, the act naming as directors Josiah Hornblower, John N. Cumming, Edward W. Kingsland, Abraham Speer and Joseph Kingsland.

The Bergen Turnpike Company was chartered Nov. 30, 1802, with John Stevens, Lewis Moore, Robert Campbell, Nehemiah Wade, Garret G. Lansing and Adam Boyd as incorporators, with a capital stock authorized of seven thousand dollars for each mile of road constructed, and full authority to build and maintain a turnpike road from the town of Hackensack to Hoboken. The commissioners were authorized to discharge the duties of directors for the first year. Aaron Kitchel, John N. Cummings and William Colfax were named as commissioners to lay out the road, the course of which was to the bridge over English Creek, and thence to the bridge at Hackensack.

June 3, 1718, a road was laid out from "Crom Kill to Wheelocken" ferry. The road then laid out must have been a part of what is now Hackensack turnpike.

At an early day the dwellers at Harsimus laid out a road by the way of Prior's mill to Bergen. The following return, without date, when compared with the field map, will give a general idea of its course, as well as show that some of the residents preferred the war-path to a highway:

"By ye Surveyors of ye Highways for ye County of Bergen. Application having been made to us by Archibald Kennedy, Esqr., of some hardship & trespasses he meets with from his Neighbor Mattys De Mot for want of particular fences, and We having heard the Allegations of both parties, & having Viewed the Premises, doe order that partition fences be forthwith put up, and ye said ye Mot's fence belonging to Mattys De Mot, as it is now marked out by us, ye North Easterly one half to be fenced & kept up by ye said Archibald Kennedy, and ye South Westerly other half to be fenced and kept up by ye said Mattys De Mot.

"As also that ye Rhoad for ye line of ye plantations at Passaic or Harsimus to ye Mill and Church shall be for ye future to begin at ye North East Corner of ye barn belonging to ye said Archibald Kennedy, and to run through ye said Six Acres one Rod and a half wide, to be supported and fenced by said Archibald Kennedy, unless, if he please, they may have Swinging gates allowing to ye said De Mot some out of his land as is taken out of ye Six Acres of ye Rhoad, all which we have Determined and Staked out, of which you are to take Notice as you will Answer ye contrary. We have, according to the best of our Judgements allowed ye said de Mot an Equivalent for ye Rhoad upon ye South Side of his Six Acres out of land belonging to ye said Archibald Kennedy."

Jan. 12, 1753, the above-named road was widened to four rods. It came to the shore just south of Kennedy's orchard, at about the corner of what is now Second and Henderson Streets, Jersey City, thence passed up by Van Vorst's to a place on Kennedy's land called "Saul Point."

Prior to 1848 all travel from Bergen and the lower part of the county to Paulus Hook was around by the Five Corners and Newark Avenue, or by the Mill road via Prior's mill. Even the residents at Communipaw were obliged to take this round about way; but in 1848 Grand Street was extended from Jersey City across the meadows.¹

Thus are all the roads in the county of ancient date named. There were a few others as the Middle road, which was approached through the northwest gate of the village of Bergen, and the Bergen Woods road, which opened into the woods through the northeast gate of the town. There was also the Dallytown road, and the Bull's Ferry road. But the dates of their laying out are not at this date known. For convenience in keeping the roads in repair, the old Township of Bergen was divided into districts, which bore the following names: Bergen Town, Gomonipa, Pamerpugh, Bergen Point, Wehawk, Maislaud, Bull's Ferry, Sekakes and Bergen Woods.²

Traveling Facilities of ye Olden Time.—In 1764 stages were first "set up" to start from Paulus Hook for Philadelphia, via Bergen Point and Blazing Star ferries. The vehicle used was a Jersey wagon, covered with cotton cloth drawn over roughly-made hoops, and was modestly named "Flying Machine," and made the distance between the two points in the unprecedented short space of three days.

¹ Winfield's "History of Hudson County," 364.

² Winfield's "History of Hudson County," 364.

³ Winfield's "History of Hudson County," 363.

In the fall of the same year Sovereign Sybrant, an enterprising Jerseyman, gave notice that he had fitted up and completed in the neatest manner a new and genteel stage-wagon, which was to set out from Philadelphia on Monday and get to Trenton that day; the next day to Sybrant's house, known by the sign of the "Roebuck," two miles and a half from Elizabethtown, where, with a good assortment of wines and liquors, and by "Assiduity, Care and Despatch," he hoped for the "Favor and Esteem of the Public." On Wednesday the stage reached "Powless's Hoec" by the new post-road over Bergen and return to the Roebuck. Thence it would start on Thursday, and reach its destination on Friday.

In 1772, John Mersereau appeared with his "Machines." He left Paulus Hook three times a week, and went through to Philadelphia in a day and a half. In 1773 he established a line of stage-coaches which left Paulus Hook on Tuesday and Friday of each week, "at or before sunrise," and went as far as "Prince-Town" the same night. Here they exchanged passengers with the coach from Philadelphia, and returned the next day. Inside passengers paid thirty shillings fare, outside passengers twenty shillings. Each passenger was allowed fourteen pounds of baggage; beyond that weight the charge was two-pence per pound.

In 1769 a new route from Paulus Hook to Philadelphia was selected by Joseph Crane and Josiah F. Davenport, via Newark, Elizabeth, Bound Brook and the north branch of the Raritan, to Corriell's ferry, on the Delaware. They proposed to leave the Hook every Tuesday morning by sunrise. Passengers were requested to cross over from New York the night before. The stages met at the South Branch, exchanged passengers and returned.

In 1771, Abraham Skillman started his "Flying Machine" to Philadelphia, via Newark, Elizabeth, Woodbridge, New Brunswick, Princeton, Trenton and Bristol. Time, one day and a half; fare, twenty shillings proclamation money; "a good wagon, sober drivers and able horses."

In 1767, Matthias Ward informed the public that he had for some time kept a stage-wagon from Newark to "Powlas Hook," having met with some encouragement, he proposed to make the round trip each day, leaving Newark at sunrise, and "Powlas Hook" "sun two hours high." All persons might expect the "best usage at 1s. 6d. each for coming and going, or three shillings for both."

In 1768 Andrew Van Buskirk gave notice that he would erect a "Stage-Wagon" in Hackensack at the New Bridge, to set out for Paulus Hook on September 17th, to go twice a week; fare, 2s. 7d. In 1775 he changed the terminus from Paulus Hook to Hoboken, and named his vehicle a "Flying Machine."

In the same year and year following some proprietors adopted the system of having their stages on each side of the Hackensack, where they would exchange passengers, "which entirely takes off the Inconvenience of detaining passengers by ferrying of the Wagon over said River."

For some years prior to 1774, Peter Stuyvesant ran a stage from the Hook to Brown's ferry, where he met Josiah Crane, with a stage from Newark, and exchanged passengers.

In 1770 a stage was run from Morristown to the Hook by Daniel and Silas Burnett, and in 1775 by Constant Cooper from Hanover to Paulus Hook.

In 1775, Abraham Goodwin ran a stage from the Great Falls (Paterson) to the Hook twice a week. In May of the same year Thomas Douglas erected his stage to run from Hackettstown once a week, via Flanders, Black River, Mendham, and Morristown, consuming two days en route.

In 1775, Verdine Elsworth brought out his "new caravan" between the Hook and New Bridge. He informed the public that his horses were "very quiet, and the Caravan new and in excellent order."

In 1783, Adam Boyd "established a stage-wagon to run between Hackensack and Hoebuck ferry." He boasted that the roads were very good, his wagon and horses in prime order, and he hoped that such a useful institution would be encouraged.

From almost every direction in the interior of the State, stage lines were organized, and all sorts of vehicles started towards Paulus Hook to accommodate the public. To such an extent did this system of travel increase that before the construction of the New Jersey Railroad as many as twenty regular stages would daily leave the ferry for different parts of the State.

[For Railroads and Canals, see Chapter XXI. "History of Essex County."]

CHAPTER XXV.

WATER COMMUNICATION OF HUDSON COUNTY.¹

Ferries.—The establishment of ferries, including their control as to the rates of ferriage, was at the first settlement of the State the prerogative of the crown, and grants were made by royal letters patent to the parties who were authorized to operate them for the accommodation of the public. Persons desirous of passing their own goods and merchandise across the river were not prevented from doing so by these patents, but none but the duly licensed ferrymen could transport passengers, live stock or merchandise for hire. In 1779 the Legislature transferred the right to regulate ferries to the Boards of Chosen Freeholders of the several counties, but the Bergen county board seem to have never interfered with the vested rights of the ferry-owners. After the formation of Hudson County an effort was made to exercise the power given by the State, and a protracted dispute was the consequence, until in 1853 the Legislature took the matter up again, and relegated the authority to the State.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

COMMUNIPAW FERRY—The oldest ferry on the North River, of which any record can be found was that at Communipaw, which was legally established in 1661, and William Jansen was licensed to take charge of it. In 1669, Governor Carteret appointed Peter Hetfelsen to succeed Jansen, and in the document conferring this authorization we find the first legal authority for the now prevalent system of "dead-heading." The language of the last clause is as follows: "Always provided that the Governor and his family are to be freed from paying of anything for their transporting as aforesaid." It was required that the ferryman attend the ferry upon Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for the convenience of the public, so that only on three days in a week were the settlers on the Jersey shore certain of a means of transportation across the river. This ferry is now owned by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and accommodates the large population resident between Communipaw and Bergen Point, besides the great railroad travel of the Central.

THE OLD WEHAWKEN FERRY is of uncertain age. In 1717 (January 26th) a colonial ordinance was passed fixing the rates of ferriage at Wehauk as follows: "For man and horse, to or from New York, eighteen pence; single person, one shilling; everything per bushel, one penny; hogs, sheep, etc., two pence each; barrels, four pence; hogsheds, one shilling; pipes, eighteen pence." The law provided for a fine of forty shillings proclamation money for carrying goods or passengers for hire without a license from the Governor, and a penalty of ten pounds for practicing extortion. It is believed that the ferry was in operation fully twenty years before the date of this ordinance. It was then the principal ferry used by the inhabitants of the northern part of Bergen County in conveying their produce to New York, and continued to be so until another ferry was established at Hoboken. Its location was at the mouth of a little creek, just below King's Point. About sixty years ago it fell out of use, but was revived in 1879 by the incorporation of the Weehawken Ferry Company, now consolidated with the West Shore Railroad Company.

JERSEY CITY FERRY—The associates of the New Jersey Company are the legitimate successors of Michael Pauw, the thrifty burgomaster of Amsterdam, who, under a grant of the Dutch West India Company, appropriated to himself the southern portion of the New Jersey shore opposite to Manhattan Island, and secured the tract known as Hoboken-Hackingh (the land of the tobacco-pipe) from the Indian owners "for and in consideration of a certain quantity of merchandise," the deed being duly confirmed by the directors and Council of New Netherland. This deed was dated July 12, 1630, and was the first conveyance of land in New Jersey.

It is believed that the first ferry was established in this vicinity about the year 1661, and it is on record that in 1662 the ferryman complained that the authorities of Bergen had authorized the inhabitants to ferry themselves over whenever they pleased, to the great detriment of his monopoly. The more thorough establishment of a ferry with conveniently constructed boats for carrying over horses, carriages and passengers was in 1764, when the through stage line from Philadelphia was set up, and a suitable landing-place and wharf at Paulus Hook was secured at Maj. Hunt's tavern. The landing in New York was known as Messler's dock, now the site of the extensive ferry buildings of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at foot of Cortlandt Street. The ferry accommodations at this time were of a very limited character, comprising only a few row-boats, with two oarsmen to each and spare oars for the use of such passengers who chose to assist in the labor of propulsion, and two sail boats, which were used only when the wind was favorable for them.

Passing through three generations of Van Vorsts, the land and franchises attracted the attention of several capitalists, who opened negotiations for its purchase in 1804, and employed Alexander Hamilton to examine the title and act as counsel. An interesting sketch of the transfer of the property to the associates has been furnished the writer by Mr. Charles B. Thurston, the secretary and treasurer of the company, as follows: "On April 18, 1804, Anthony Dey and wife, of New York City, conveyed Paulus Hook to Abraham Varick, of the same city, merchant." The conveyance, which included the ferry-right and buildings, was subject to a mortgage to secure the payment of Van Vorst's annuity. The next day Abraham Varick conveyed to Richard Varick, Jacob Radeliff and Anthony Dey, as tenants in common, the lands on Paulus Hook, together with the right of ferry. Reference was made in the deed to a map that had been made for the projectors by Joseph F. Mangin, of New York. Hudson Street was projected along the river front. "Also," the deed continued, "the present wharves and the right of soil from high to low-water mark, to extend from north to south the breadth of four hundred and eighty feet on Hudson Street, and the right and title to the land under water in Hudson's River, opposite to the said premises above granted, together with the exclusive right of ferry from Paulus Hook to the city of New York and elsewhere." This document shows that the ancient proprietors of Paulus Hook made a claim no less sweeping of their rights to sell the water-front than that which is now made by their successors, "The Associates of the Jersey Company." This deed and the foregoing were acknowledged before Judge James Kent, afterwards New York's greatest chancellor. By a covenant in the deed it was agreed to affix such a rental of the land as would pay the six thousand dollars annuity to Van Vorst until it should be released or extinguished, when the money should be applied to their own use.

They also covenanted to unite with the purchasers of lots of the future city in an application to the New Jersey Legislature for a law to incorporate trustees for the fund so raised.

By an agreement dated Oct. 11, 1804, it appeared that Varick, Radcliff and Dey, with their associates, had divided up the land on Paulus Hook into one thousand shares, and the following list of share-holders gives the first record of the names of those associated with them in the purchase: Richard Varick, Jacob Radcliff and Anthony Dey, each 100 shares; Joseph Bloomfield, 20; J. N. Cumming, 50; William Halsey, 50; Alexander C. McWhorter, 30; Elisha Boudinot, 5; Samuel Boyd, 20; Archibald Gracie, 40; John B. Coles, 40; James Thomson, 20; David B. Ogden, 20; John Wells, 30; John Radcliff, 20; John Rhea, 20; David Hunt, 20; Joseph Lyon, 20; David Dunham, 20; Abraham Varick, 20; Peter W. Radcliff, 40; Samuel Hayes, Jr., 5; William S. Pennington, 20; L. S. Pambell, 20; William B. Wolf, 40; Aaron Ogden, 25; William Radcliff, Jr., 20; Samuel Pennington, 5; John A. Davenport, 10; J. E. A. Birch, 10; E. Leavenworth, 20; Isaac H. Williamson, 20; Amasa Jackson, 5; Thomas Ward, 10; Isaac Kibbe, 5.

Varick, Radcliff and Dey are well known in the history of New York. Elisha Boudinot, J. N. Cumming, William S. Pennington and Alexander C. McWhorter were distinguished citizens of Newark. Boudinot, brother of Elias Boudinot, of Revolutionary fame in the Continental Congress, was chosen secretary of the New Jersey Council of Safety during the Revolution, and was for seven years a justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court. Col. Aaron Ogden's term as Senator in Congress had ended the year before the purchase of Paulus Hook, and he was elected Governor in 1812. He had served with distinction in the Revolutionary war. He was succeeded in the Governorship by William S. Pennington, another of the associates, who had been a lieutenant under Washington. He also was a justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court, and afterwards a judge of the United States District Court in New Jersey. Boudinot, Pennington and Cumming were directors in the Newark Banking and Insurance Company, of which Boudinot was president. It was organized in May, 1804, during the negotiations for the purchase of Paulus Hook, and had secured authority to establish a branch at Paulus Hook, in contemplation of the success of this early speculation in Jersey City lots. It was Elisha Boudinot and Gen. Cummings, with other Newarkers interested in Paulus Hook, who started Robert Fulton with a capital of fifty thousand dollars in the building of steam ferry-boats for their new franchise.

Joseph Bloomfield, who held twenty shares in the associates' stock, was Governor at the time of the purchase of Paulus Hook. Three of the associates—Bloomfield, Ogden and Pennington—held the New Jersey Governorship during the twelve years from 1803 to 1815; a fourth, Isaac H. Williamson, father of ex-Chancellor Williamson, was Governor another twelve years, from 1817 to 1829. As before the Constitution of 1844 the Governor's term was but one year, it is apparent that the purchasers of Paulus Hook had associated with them the leading men in New Jersey affairs.

The Legislature, on Nov. 10, 1804, passed an act, drawn by Alexander Hamilton, granting a perpetual charter to the shareholders as "The Associates of the Jersey Company," and named Alexander C. McWhorter, Silas Condit and William S. Pennington as inspectors of an election for trustees of said company. The shareholders met at Paulus Hook on December 10th, and proceeded to elect nine trustees, as follows, seven hundred and fifty votes being cast: Richard Varick, Jacob Radcliff, William W. Woolsey, James Thompson, David Ogden, William Halsey, Alexander C. McWhorter, William S. Pennington, Isaac H. Williamson. The first meeting of the board of trustees was held on the 24th of December, at the house of Joseph Lyon, at Paulus Hook, and the purchase was then fully consummated. From that time the ferry accommodations began to improve with the needs of the growing community.

The first steam ferry-boat run on this ferry was a double-ended named the "Jersey." She made her first regular trips on July 17, 1812, and her accommodations gave general satisfaction. In the following year the "York," being of the same model, was finished and placed on the ferry. These steamboats were eighty feet long and thirty feet wide on the deck. They were in reality double boats of ten feet in breadth, the hulls being ten feet apart, and firmly secured by timbers and braces, thus forming a deck the full width of thirty feet. The paddle-wheel and machinery were placed between the two hulls, leaving ten feet of deck on one side for carriages, horses, cattle, etc., and the same space on the other side furnished with seats for the passengers. Below the deck was a cabin fifty feet long for shelter in cold or stormy weather.

A permanent night ferry was established in 1835, in response to a memorial presented to the proprietors by a committee composed of R. Gilchrist, J. Cassidy, C. Van Vorst, G. Dunmer, D. Henderson, J. Griffith and D. S. Gregory, who were appointed at a public meeting of citizens representing the interests of Jersey City, Newark and Paterson, held in Temperance Hall, Jersey City, Dec. 30, 1834.

During the year 1853 the directors of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company were impressed with the importance of securing extended privileges of ferriage and landings. After unavailing efforts to negotiate for a renewal of the lease and the purchase of the right to reclaim lands needed for extended accommodations, an offer was made by the associates to transfer to the railroad company all their ferry franchises and water-rights by a sale of their stock for four hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars, payable in the company's bonds for ten years, bearing six per cent. interest. The contract for the purchase was made on the 1st of August, 1853, and entire transfer was made to the company, whose successors, the lessees of the railroad, now control the immensely valuable water-front of Jersey City, upon which their terminus is situated.

The associates retain considerable property in the city, and maintain their organization, as follows: A. L. Dennis, president; Charles B. Thurston, secretary and treasurer; A. L. Dennis, Edmund Smith, F. Wolcott Jackson, C. B. Thurston, Joseph N. Du Barry, Henry D. Welsh, John Price Wetherill and Henry R. Houston, trustees.

THE HOBOKEN FERRY was established by law in 1774, and put into active operation by Cornelius Haring in the following year. It was subsequently leased to H. Tallman, and the landing in New York was at the foot of Vesey Street. John Stevens purchased the franchise in 1789, but for some years afterwards it passed through various ownerships and leaseings until 1811, when Col. Stevens resumed the control, and in September of that year made the trial trip of the first steam ferry-boat in the world. He obtained another ferry privilege from the foot of Spring Street, New York, but very soon abandoned the steamboat for the "more convenient" horse-bont. In 1818 the landing was removed from Vesey Street to Barclay Street, and in 1822 another steamboat, called the "Hoboken," of more convenient build than the original, made hourly trips across the river, and from that year steam has been constantly used. The first of this line of boats were but pigmies to the colossal floating structures that now make incessant trips across the great highway of maritime travel. The decks were open and the cabin placed below. The Christopher Street ferry was opened in 1836. All the property of the Hoboken ferry is now owned and controlled by the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company.

THE PAVONIA FERRY was an enterprise projected in 1793, when a royal patent was granted to Archibald Kennedy; but Kennedy failed to fulfill the conditions, and, consequently, all the extensive franchises of the grant were forfeited. Frequent projects were set afoot, but nothing was accomplished until the Erie Railroad, as the lessees of the Long Dock Company, erected their present ferry, in 1861, on the completion of the Bergen tunnel.

STATEN ISLAND FERRY.—A ferry between Staten Island and Bergen Point was legally established in 1750, but had been previously operated by Jacob Corson. It was an important landing-place for passengers between New York and Philadelphia, going by way of Perth Amboy; but, on the completion of the new road over the meadows from Newark, the ferry fell into disuse and operations were entirely suspended. Several ineffectual attempts have been made to revive this ferry.

CHAPTER XXVI.

STREET RAILROADS, HUDSON COUNTY.¹

The Jersey City and Bergen Railroad Company owns the several lines of horse-cars traversing Jersey City and all the southern portion of Hudson County. The company was incorporated March 15, 1859. A majority of the stock is owned by the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company, of which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is the lessee. The officers are Charles B. Thurston, president; W. E. Dennis, secretary; Thomas N. Sayre, superintendent.

The several routes of the company, covering a distance of about twenty-two miles, are as follows:

NEWARK AVENUE OR BLUE LINE.—Route, from depot at Bergen Avenue, through Bergen Avenue to Sipp, to Summit, Hudson City, to Newark Avenue, to Grove Street, to Gregory, to York, to depot at Jersey City. Returning through Montgomery to Newark Avenue.

MONTICELLO OR PLANK-ROAD LINE.—Route, from Jersey City ferry, through Montgomery to Vanvorst, to Grand, to Pacific, to Communipaw, to Harrison, to Monticello, to Fairmont, to Bergen, to Montgomery, to depot, on Montgomery Street, Jersey City Heights. Returns same to Grand, to Jersey Avenue, to York and to Ferry Streets; passes through Lafayette District.

MONTGOMERY STREET AND JERSEY CITY HEIGHTS LINE.—Route, from Jersey City ferry to Bergen car stables, through Montgomery Street. Returns by Montgomery, Grove and York to Jersey City ferry.

GREENVILLE AND OCEAN AVENUE LINE.—Route, from Jersey City ferry, through Montgomery, to Vanvorst, to Grand and Ocean Avenues, to Greenville, passing New York Bay Cemetery. Returns by same route to Grand, to Jersey Avenue, to York Street and to ferry.

ERIE STREET AND PAVONIA FERRY LINE.—Route,

¹By Henry Farmer.

from Jersey City ferry, through Montgomery, to Newark Avenue, to Erie Street, and Pavonia Avenue to Pavonia Ferry. Returning through Pavonia Avenue, to Erie, to Eighth, to Jersey Avenue, to Newark Avenue, to Grove Street, to Wayne, to Gregory and York, to Jersey City ferry.

The company have the privilege of extending their line to the Kill von Kull, under a supplement passed by the State Legislature in 1873, authorizing a ferry to Staten Island.

New stables were built in 1883 at the head of Montgomery Street, with accommodations for four hundred horses. The building is of brick, with slate roof, and is furnished with all necessary appliances to insure cleanliness and a healthy condition of the stock. Complete double tracks have been laid in the downtown streets. In track-laying the company have greatly benefited the city, especially on the hill, where Ocean Avenue, from Communipaw to Myrtle Avenue, was entirely repaved with Belgian blocks by the company, while two thousand loads of cinders were used to ballast the roadway of Pacific Avenue. In other streets the property-owners have improved the opportunity of dispensing with the old cobble stones by having the roadway paved from curb to curb with Belgian blocks in places where the company have delivered and laid the stone at its own expense. The report made to the State comptroller for the year ending Dec. 31, 1883, is as follows:

Capital stock authorized	$500,000 00
Capital stock paid in	250,000 00
Bonded debt	375,000 00
	<hr/>
	$625,000 00
	<hr/>
Cost of road and equipments	604,633 99
Dividends paid during the year 1883, in cash	25,990 00
Receipts and expenses for 1883—
Income from passengers	318,969 39
Income from other sources	4,601 02
Expenditures during the year for working the road, including repairs, maintenance of way, motive power, and contingencies	218,832 85
Interest on funded debt	26,250 00
Sinking fund	22,000 00

The North Hudson Railway Company are the owners of all the lines of horse-cars not included in the list of lines operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with but one exception. It was chartered in 1859, and since that time the president, Mr. John H. Bonn, has continuously filled that office, which is sufficient evidence of the efficiency he has displayed in managing the affairs of the company.

JOHN H. BONN was born on Sept. 14, 1829, in the city of Norden, East Friesland, in the extreme north-west of Germany. He received a good education first at the city schools, then at a classical high-school, and in later years under private teachers. After having made a voyage to the Isle of Java, East Indies, with his father, who for many years had been master of vessels in the East India trade, he attended a nautical school near Rotterdam, Holland, and passed an examination before the Royal Commission in Amsterdam, obtaining the first degree. In the fall of 1845 he entered a shipping, banking and commercial house in Emden, a city in his native province. Here he remained five years, having received a thorough commercial education. In October, 1850, he came to the United States with a view to gain more experience in commercial affairs, and he soon found employment as book-keeper and English and French correspondent in a large Greek shipping-house. Visiting North Hudson County accidentally in the summer of 1852, he was favorably impressed by its advantageous position as also by its beautiful scenery, and having received means from his father, invested in real estate, part of which he laid out into town lots. These investments prolonged his stay, and finally influenced him to make this country his home, of which he became a citizen. In the spring of 1856, after having made an extensive tour of eight months through the greater part of the United States and Canada, he visited his relatives in Europe (his parents were then dead), and there, in October, 1856, married Miss Angelina Boujer, of Emden, East Friesland. In April, 1857, they came to America, and lived first in Weehawken, then in Hoboken, and since 1867 have resided at their present home in Weehawken township, which had once been owned by Daniel Webster, the great Massachusetts statesman. They had eleven children, four of whom died young and seven of whom are living,—four sons and three daughters. Both Mr. Bonn and his wife and their ancestors belonged to the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Bonn is not a member of any Masonic or kindred society. He was a member of the first board of regents of the Hudson County Hospital. The "German-American Cyclopaedia," a work of eleven volumes, and the first of that character in the United States in the German language, was brought out chiefly by his aid, under the editorship of his old friend, the late Professor A. J. Schem. Many thousand copies of the work were sold in the United States. Mr. Bonn had no inclination for and never held a political office, except in 1857, when he was elected on both tickets as superintendent of public schools in old North Bergen township, which then contained five schools. In 1868 he was appointed, under a legislative act, by Judge (later Governor-Bedle,) one of seven commissioners, to lay out and improve public avenues on the elevated part of Hudson County, and made chairman of the board. A printed report and maps were presented proposing a system of avenues by straightening, widening and connecting existing roads and providing for their improvement. The plan, although very favorably received by the public and approved by the Board of Freeholders and by the Legislature of the State of 1869, was, however, not carried out, owing to a variety of causes. Much regret was afterwards expressed that the project was not accomplished, as the growth in population and wealth in Hudson County has been and continues to be hindered by the want of good roads throughout its length. Its proximity to New York and its beautiful and healthy location offer superior advantages as a place of residence and business, but it has no roads worthy of the name. In 1872, Mr. Bonn was appointed by the Legislature one of the three commissioners to widen and improve the Bulls Ferry road from Nineteenth Street in Hoboken, northerly, and to build a main sewer to the Hudson River, and was made chairman of the board. The improvement was completed in 1874 and 1875.

J. S. O. Down

Outside of his real estate business, Mr. Bonn was principally occupied in building and operating street railroads in the northern half of Hudson County. The enterprise commenced in 1859 finally resulted in an entire system of roads radiating from the Hoboken ferry in all directions. As early as 1864 cars were run by steam on one of the lines; but this was of necessity abandoned, on account of the steepness of the hill and for other reasons. In 1874 a steam elevator was built, the first one in this country, by which the cars, with horses attached, were taken up the hill in one minute. This formerly consumed seven or eight minutes, with four horses along the side of the hill. In 1884 an elevated road was built from the Hoboken ferry to Jersey City Heights, for the foundation of which piles had to be driven all along to a depth of from forty to ninety feet. The structure itself is of iron, from fifteen to ninety-five feet high. The cars are to be drawn by means of an endless steel cable, which itself is put and kept in motion by powerful stationary steam-engines on top of the hill. It is the first elevated cable railway in this country. Mr. Bonn was the first and only president of the old companies, and is thus far also president of the North Hudson County Railway Company, into which the old companies were consolidated in 1865.

It is proper to add that the establishment and development of the North Hudson County Railway system has been Mr. Bonn's life-work. From early manhood he has given to it his undivided attention. At the outset the obstacles to be overcome were great. The city of Hoboken was then little more than a country village, and the same may be said of Hudson City, now known as Jersey City Heights. North of this the country was only sparsely settled. The railroads were built over a deep swamp surrounding Hoboken, up steep hill-sides and along rough and very uneven country roads, neither macadamized nor paved, which the company had to supply themselves, besides spending very large sums of money for grading and blasting to secure a proper road-bed. In course of time the tracks were removed frequently to permit public improvements under and on the streets, and replaced again. Most of the tracks had thus to be laid three times. But Mr. Bonn foresaw that this was the site for a great and prosperous city, and this encouraged him to undertake the long and laborious task. He, however, did not foresee the narrow-minded and short-sighted policy of the large landed proprietors, which seriously retarded the justly expected increase of population. In building up his system of railways he has acted on the principle that a new line should be built slightly in advance of an actual necessity for it; that the convenience, comfort and safety of passengers should be duly considered and promptly provided for, and that improvements in the mode of transportation should be made whenever possible. A natural desire and an earnest effort to please and accommodate the traveling public have been the controlling elements of his management. While ever watchful of the interests of his company, he never demands from the State favors or privileges, which, in his own judgment, ought not to be granted, and always has due regard to the interest and wishes of the public. He has not only designed and studied the general plan of the work, but is equally familiar with all its details. He has the determined will, quick perception, the courage and perseverance which characterize the man of executive ability. These qualities, coupled with an active and well-trained mind and a strong sense of justice, have enabled him to overcome great difficulties, and to lead his company safely through trying, and often very discouraging, circumstances, until it has become a prosperous institution, which commands general respect and is freely acknowledged to have done more to develop the growth and prosperity of the northern half of Hudson County than any other.

The routes of the North Hudson Railway lines are as follows:

JERSEY CITY AND HOBOKEN LINE.—Route, from Jersey City ferry, through Montgomery, to Newark Avenue, to Grove Street, to Ferry Street, to Hoboken ferry. Return by same route.

UNION HILL AND WEEHAWKEN LINE.—Route, from Hoboken ferry, through Ferry Street, to Willow, to Bull's Ferry road (at Weehawken), to New, to Bergen Line Avenue, to Union Hill. Returning from Union Hill, through Union Street, to Bull's Ferry road, to Willow Street, to Washington, to Ferry Street, to the ferry.

UNION HILL AND GUTTENBERG LINE.—Route, from Union Hill, through Bergen Line Avenue and Hermance Avenue, to Guttenberg. Returning by same route.

WEST HOBOKEN AND JERSEY CITY HEIGHTS LINE.—Route, from Hoboken ferry, through Ferry Street, to Central Avenue, to Clinton Avenue, to New York Avenue, to Palisade Avenue, to Jersey City Heights. Returning by same route.

CENTRAL AVENUE LINE.—Route, from Hoboken ferry, through Ferry Street and Central Avenue, to turn-table at Central Avenue, to Paterson Plank-Road. Returning through Central Avenue to Franklin Avenue, to Palisade Avenue and Ferry Streets, to Hoboken ferry.

COURT HOUSE AND OAKLAND AVENUE LINE.—Route, from Hoboken ferry, through Ferry Street, to Palisade Avenue, to Prospect Street, to Oakland Avenue, to turn-table. Returning by same route.

WASHINGTON STREET AND ELEVENTH STREET LINE.—Route, from Hoboken ferry, through Ferry Street, to Washington, to Eleventh, to Park Avenue, to turn-table. Returning by same route.

The whole distance operated is about twenty-five miles.

In 1884 the company built an elevated road, a substantial iron structure, from Hoboken ferry to Jersey City Heights, thus dispensing with the inclined plane and stationary engine formerly employed at the head of Ferry Street for elevating cars and horses from the base to the summit of the Heights.

A single line of horse-cars is run from the Long Dock to the West End, on the Heights, a distance of about three miles. It is owned and operated by the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Company, whose ferry superintendent, Mr. Brown, superintends the horse car line.

CHAPTER XXVII.

BENCH AND BAR OF HUDSON COUNTY.¹

THE BENCH OF HUDSON COUNTY has ever been occupied by very distinguished men, who have been assigned by the Supreme Court to hold the courts of the county, and the local judges have been selected from among the best men of the county, and as a result the judicial ermine has been worn without a spot to stain it or a single thing to cast dishonor upon its fair fame.

If you can keep the fountain of justice pure and honest men sitting upon the bench in our court-house, the lives and property of the people of the county will be safe and their liberties preserved.

The first courts of the county were opened at the Lyceum Hall in Jersey City, April 14, 1840, Joseph C. Hornblower, chief justice presiding, and the courts continued to be held at the Lyceum Hall until Sept. 19, 1843, when they were removed to the "New-kirk House," at the Five Corners. Here the courts continued to be held until the new court-house was finished and opened, March 11, 1845, when the first session of the court was held there.

The session of the court was opened with prayer by Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D., and Chief Justice Hornblower delivered a very able and impressive address, which is given in Chapter XII of this work.

The court-house was a very imposing building for the time, considering the small population of the county, and was at the time probably the largest and best court-room in the State, and it is not now excelled by many, although the rapid growth of the county from a population of 9451 in 1840 to 187,944 in 1880, has required an addition and considerable changes to adapt the same to the wants of the present times.

THE BAR OF HUDSON COUNTY can properly start its history from the time of the creation of the county by act of the Legislature, passed Feb. 22, 1840. Prior to that time the territory now embraced in the county of Hudson was embraced in the county of Bergen, with the county seat at Hackensack, and although there was at the time only a very small population in Hudson County—only 9451 persons at the census of 1840—to set up and bear the expense of a county government, still these people did it.

Imprisonment for debt existed at that time, and it was the common practice for creditors to watch for New York merchants who were debtors at the Jersey City side of the ferry and arrest them, and carry them to the Hackensack jail; and Jersey City being largely interested in New York City, and dependent on it for its prosperity, took offense at this procedure, and this and other causes led to the formation of the county and also to the abolishment of imprisonment for debt in the State, except in causes of fraud. In the movement for the abolition of imprisonment for debt the Hon. Dudley S. Gregory took a very active part, being the leading spirit in Jersey City at that time.

At the formation of the county the bar consisted of eight persons,—Samuel Cassidy, J. Dickinson Miller, Peter Bentley, Edwin R. V. Wright, Thomas W. James, William S. Cassidy, Benjamin F. Van Cleve and Lewis D. Hardenberg. Of this number all are deceased except Thomas W. James, who is now the Nestor of the bar of the county.

The first lawyer to settle in the territory now known as Hudson County was James Williams, licensed at May term, 1812, but little is known of him except he had his office in Jersey City, and the second lawyer who settled in Jersey City was Samuel Cassidy, who took Mr. Williams' office and practice; and Mr. Williams left the State.

The first lawyer to settle in the city of Hoboken was J. Dunn Little, and it is a historical fact that Samuel Cassidy, in Jersey City, and J. Dunn Little, in Hoboken, started the legal business in these two cities; both of them had a large practice and wide influence, and proper sketches of them will appear in this chapter. Of the eight persons in Hudson at the formation of the county, six of them were quite distinguished persons, and filled large fields of usefulness in their profession; of the other two, Benjamin F. Van Cleve and William S. Cassidy, but little is known, as they both died very young in life. Mr. Van Cleve came from Hunterdon County, and is remembered as a man of much promise, but cut off early in life.

¹ By Hon. Jacob Warrant.

JOSEPH C. HORNBLOWER,¹ chief justice of the Supreme Court, opened the first courts in Hudson County April 14, 1840. When the corner-stone was laid for the new court-house, Oct. 17, 1844, very imposing ceremonies took place, in which the chief justice participated and made an address, and again, when the courts were opened in the new house, March 11, 1845, he delivered a formal address, dedicated "To the members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, of the Grand Jury, and my fellow-citizens at large of the county of Hudson."²

These services greatly endeared the chief justice to the people of this county.

He was a great lawyer, an upright judge, and a citizen worthy of the highest commendation.

HENRY WOODHULL GREEN, chief justice of the Supreme Court, was regularly assigned to the Hudson Circuit, following Chief Justice Hornblower, and held his first circuit in Hudson, at November term, 1846, and his last, at April term, 1853, when he was succeeded by Judge Haines.

Chief Justice Green was born at Lawrence, in Hunterdon County (afterwards Mercer) Sept. 20, 1804; he graduated at Princeton College in the class of 1820, at the age of sixteen. He studied law with Charles Ewing, afterwards chief justice, and was admitted to the bar at November term, 1825, and took up the practice at Trenton; was recorder of the city; represented Mercer County in the Legislature in 1842; was a delegate to the Whig National Convention in 1844; appointed chief justice by Governor Stratton in 1846; reappointed by Governor Fort in 1853; resigned to accept the office of chancellor, which was conferred upon him in 1860 by Governor Olden, which office he held until May 1, 1866, when he resigned in consequence of failing health, and was succeeded by Chancellor Zabriskie.

He was a trustee in the College of New Jersey, and devoted much of his time to its interests after his resignation as chancellor, and he was also a trustee of the Theological Seminary at Princeton.

As he never resided in this county, our special interest in him is as chief justice, circuit judge and chancellor, and in all these positions he had but few peers.

Probably no man ever sat upon the bench in New Jersey who gave it more dignity than he. In manners he was very dignified, in demeanor on the bench he impressed every one with the importance and dignity of the court, and when the court opened, you felt that a part of the sovereignty of the State was present, and everything proceeded as though his court was the very fountain of justice, and that no error could be committed there which industry, learning and a conscientious desire to do his whole duty could detect, and if one was beaten in a cause, the vanquished party never felt that defeat came to him through failure to attempt to grasp and understand the cause, but because the judge had himself mistaken the facts, and made an erroneous application of the law to the same. Governor William Pennington once said, "that he always liked to try a cause before Chief Justice Green, as he then felt that there was a God in Israel."

He gave to the causes he investigated both at law and in equity the most thorough investigation, and examined the authorities bearing upon the question with the greatest care; and when he prepared his opinions, they were in the best style of English literature, their diction faultless, the arrangement of authority such that the opinion itself showed that the deepest recess of search had been exhausted and every authority which bore on the question found; and questions which bore on the policy of the law were always illustrated by the views of great statesmen, which developed his general reading; in fact, he followed precedent and example very closely, and rested his opinions mainly on these, and never attempted, to any great extent, to formulate new principles and start new doctrines of law to meet the constant changing and advancing civilization of the present times.

His opinions, as reported in the law and equity reports, are high authority, and have been cited with great approbation in England. Chief Justice Green impressed every one with the importance and dignity of the court and of the duty of faithfulness which the bar owed to the court and their clients; and one of those duties to be practiced by the bar was thorough devotion to their client's cause, and that nothing should be left undone by the lawyer which industry and a faithful discharge of duty could bring out in both obtaining the facts and research for the law bearing on the facts. Such a man elevated himself, the court, the bar, and society in general, and his impress on the State will last even after the men with whom he associated have all passed away.

He did a great service to the people of this county. It was the custom for target companies to come over from New York City and make great disturbances here.

The Kelly Guards came over and got on a regular spree, discharged their fire-arms in Montgomery Street, and spread consternation everywhere; many of them were arrested, and Chief Justice Green sent every man to the State's prison for a long term; he broke up the outrages, and they have never been again repeated.

He died Dec. 19, 1876, at the age of seventy-two. EX-GOVERNOR DANIEL HAINES was the third justice of the Supreme Court regularly assigned to hold the Hudson Circuit; he succeeded Chief Justice Henry W. Green at the September term, 1853, and presided in this county until the end of the year 1855, and at the January term, 1856, he was succeeded by Associate Justice Elias B. D. Ogden.

¹ For a full sketch of Chief Justice Hornblower, see Bench and Bar of Essex County.

² For the address in full, see Chapter XII. of this county; also Rev. Dr. Taylor's "Classics of Bergen," and Winfield's "History of Hudson County."

Governor Haines was born in the city of New York in the year 1801, and graduated at the College of New Jersey in 1820; he studied law with the Hon. Thomas C. Peterson at Newton; was licensed as an attorney in 1823, and as counsellor in 1825, and was called to be a sergeant-at-law in 1837.

In 1824 he commenced the practice of the law at Hamburg, a small village in Sussex County, which was always his home, but during the period of his judgeship he resided mostly in Newark.

He was elected to the Council from Sussex County, and served two terms, being a member when the "broad seal question" agitated the State and nation; he took strong grounds with the Democratic party, and through the prominence thus gained he was elected Governor and chancellor in 1843, and was Governor at the time of the adoption of the new Constitution, in 1844.

In 1847 he was elected Governor by the Democrats, and held the office three years. In 1852 he was appointed by Governor Fort an associate justice of the Supreme Court, again reappointed, in 1859, by Governor Newell, and retired from the bench in 1866, after a service of fourteen years, greatly honored and beloved by all.

In 1845 he was appointed one of the commissioners to select a site for the State Lunatic Asylum, at Trenton, and was a member of the first board of managers. In 1870 he was appointed by Governor Randolph to the National Prison Reform Congress, and he was also a trustee of the College of New Jersey for many years.

He was a strong advocate of temperance, a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church, and led a very devoted Christian life.

Being located in a farming district, where the questions and disputes to be settled are of minor importance, Judge Haines had no very great opportunity to display his powers at the bar, but was always esteemed a sound and able lawyer. As Governor, he brought to the office sterling integrity and a great zeal for the education of the children of the State, and he advocated with great earnestness the adoption and perfection of the common-school system of the State.

As a judge, while he was not regarded as one of the most profound jurists, still his great sense of right and desire to be just led him to examine every case with great care; it was this element of his character that so much endeared him to the bar and people of the State.

Judge Haines again returned to Hudson County in 1873 as a commissioner appointed by the Supreme Court to review all unjust street and sewer assessments, and, in connection with Theodore Little, Esq., and Jesse Williams, Esq., reviewed and adjusted a large number of assessments, performing a very valuable service to the city of Jersey City.

He died Jan. 26, 1877, in the seventy-sixth year of his age.

ELIAS B. D. OGDEN a son of Governor Aaron Ogden, was born at Elizabethtown in 1800. He graduated at Princeton College in 1819, was licensed as an attorney in 1824, as a counsellor in 1829, and was made a sergeant-at-law in 1837, being the last lawyer to receive that honorary title in the State of New Jersey. Soon after his admission to the bar he removed to Paterson, where he continued to practice, being prosecutor of the pleas of Passaic County for two terms, and in 1844 member from that county to Constitutional Convention, in which he took an active part.

In 1848 he was appointed by Governor Haines an associate justice of the Supreme Court. He was reappointed by Governor Price in 1855, and again by Governor Olden in 1862, and died Feb. 24, 1865, having held the office over sixty years.

Judge Ogden was regularly assigned to the Hudson Circuit in January, 1856, and continued to hold it until the time of his death. He resided in Paterson until 1858, when he removed to the old homestead of his father, at Elizabethtown.

Probably no more fitting sketch can be given of his career at this circuit than to quote a part of the remarks of Jacob Weart, Esq., at the bar meeting of Hudson County on the occasion of his death.

Mr. Weart said, "For seventeen long years the deceased, as a judge, has gone in and out before the people of this State, receiving three successive appointments. He had held the office longer than any of his brethren upon the bench at the time. A man so long associated with our jurisprudence could not have failed to leave his imprint upon the same. In commercial and criminal law I think he excelled. Having held the circuits of two of the most important counties in the State for many years.—Essex and Hudson,—he had a wide field for the display of his talent in this direction, and he brought to these branches of the law a very marvelous and quick perception; indeed, it took a wily advocate to cope with and answer his ready suggestions."

"In criminal matters he was the terror of rogues and evil-doers, and did much to preserve the peace and good order of our county. Having a high Christian character, he looked to the elevation of society and the public morals, and had a deep and lasting reverence for the sanctity of the Sabbath, and we would all do well if we should strive to emulate his noble example in this direction. As a public patriot he loved his country, he loved good government, he cherished a respect for the laws, and during the trying hours of the republic he stood by his government; he stood by the flag under which his father reared him; he despised traitors and their sympathizers, and looked confidently for the overthrow of the Rebellion and the restoration of the Union."

"But, alas! he has gone to meet that great Judge who cannot err. Let us quietly submit him to the silence of the tomb; over his grave let us strew flowers, which will lift their incense to Heaven, and then our last duty will be to hold him and his beloved family in grateful remembrance."

JOSEPH DORSETT BLEDLE was born at Matawan, Monmouth Co., N. J., Jan. 5, 1831. He comes of an old American family on both sides, his maternal ancestors having emigrated to this country from Borinuda more than a century and a half ago. His father, Thomas J. Belle, whose immediate ancestors were Jerseymen, was a merchant, a justice of the peace for upwards of twenty-five years, and a judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the county of Monmouth. His mother, Hannah Dorsett, descended from a family that was among the early settlers of the above county. Their son, Joseph D., obtained his early educational training in the academy at Matawan, then known as Middletown Point. He at an early age manifested a predilection for the legal profession, and began his study of the law under the very able direction of Hon. W. L. Dayton, at Trenton, in 1848.

During this period of four years he attended the regular course of lectures at the law school at Ballston Spa, N. Y. One winter he passed in the office of Thompson & Weeks, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and in the spring of 1852 he was admitted to the bar of New York State as an attorney and counselor. Returning to New Jersey, he passed a short time in the office of Hon. Henry S. Little, at Matawan, and was admitted to the bar of that State in January, 1853.

He began the practice of his profession at Matawan, and in the spring of 1855 made Freehold, in the same county, his residence. Here he soon made his presence felt and won a place among the leaders of the bar. A large, valuable and lucrative practice fell to him, when he was offered by Governor Parker a seat upon the Supreme bench of the State. A high sense of the dignity of this position and of his duty to the community influenced him to accept this appointment, his commission bearing date March 23, 1865. His term expiring in 1872, he was reappointed by Governor Parker, this reappointment doing honor both to the Governor and the recipient. On accepting the first appointment he had made Jersey City his residence, that he might be at a convenient distance from all parts of his district, which comprised the counties of Hudson, Passaic and Bergen. Just prior to the close of his first term, in 1871, he was prominently named as a candidate for Governor, though he himself took no steps to secure the nomination, rather discouraging the movement in his favor. Notwithstanding this fact, his name was again brought forward in 1874, and an unanimous nomination tendered him by the Democratic State Convention. He accepted this nomination only at the persistent and earnest appeal of the party, declaring that as he had been nominated without any effort on his part, so he must be elected, if at all. This course he was constrained to adopt, not from any lack of disposition to serve the political organization with which he affiliated, or unwillingness to assume the dignity and responsibility of administering the government of his State, but simply from a high sense of the impropriety of any action having a political bearing by one holding judicial office. This high-minded determination was appreciated by the people, who elected him by one of the largest votes ever cast for Governor in the State, though opposed by a candidate of great personal popularity. Most unmistakably was he called to his honorable post by the popular voice, whose expectations were in no sense disappointed. His administration from the first was marked by ability, prudence and a patriotism inspired by desire for the public welfare. By his statesman-like views and noble aims he firmly entrenched himself in the respect and regard of the community. Governor Belle, on the termination of his official career, resumed the practice of his profession, and has since been identified with many important causes, being still engaged in active practice.

The College of New Jersey, at Princeton, in 1875 conferred upon him the degree of LL. D.

Governor Bledle was in 1861 married to Althea, daughter of Hon. Bennington F. Randolph, of Freehold, N. J. Their children are Bennington Randolph, Joseph Dorsett, Thomas Francis, Althea Randolph, Randolph and Mary (deceased).

MANNING M. KNAPP is the sixth Justice of the Supreme Court regularly assigned to the Hudson Circuit. He is still holding the court, and has done so since January, 1875.

The following sketch is taken from the "History of Bergen and Passaic Counties:"

"The subject of this sketch, although a resident in Hackensack for many years, is not a native of Bergen County. He was born at Newton, in the county of Sussex, in this State, on the 7th of June, 1815. He studied law at Newton, in the office of the late Col. Robert Hamilton, and was admitted as an attorney at the July term of the Supreme Court in the year 1846. In the winter of that year he removed to Hackensack, where he has since resided, practicing in his profession down to the time of his appointment on the Supreme Court bench. In January, 1850, he was licensed as a counselor. The late Chancellor Zabriskie, having about this time removed from Hackensack to Jersey City, vacated the office of prosecutor of the pleas of Bergen. Chief Justice Green, who then presided at the Bergen Circuit, appointed Mr. Knapp to prosecute for the State until the office should be filled by executive action. Acting under this appointment until February, 1851, he was then given the office by Governor Fort, and held it under that and subsequent appointments, until February, 1861. When appointed prosecutor he was acquiring, and soon was engaged in, an active practice in the civil courts. This he retained during all the time that he remained at the bar.

"Upon the election of Judge Bedle to the office of Governor of the State, a vacancy was created on the Supreme bench, and Governor Bedle nominated Mr. Knapp to be his successor. Upon confirmation by the Senate, Mr. Knapp entered upon the duties of the office, taking up the work which Judge Bedle had laid down, and after serving one term was reappointed by Governor Ludlow in 1882.

"The judicial district presided over by Judge Bedle embraced the counties of Hudson, Bergen and Passaic. The work in it was extremely onerous for one judge. In consequence of this, the Legislature, in 1875, divided the district, and set off Hudson County as an entire one. To this new district Judge Knapp was assigned by the Supreme Court, and has since presided at that circuit. The large population of Hudson County necessarily presents a heavy work in the courts, and renders the district, although comprising that county alone, not a light one in its judicial administration.

"Judge Knapp has always held to the political views of the Democratic party, but he has never held, or manifested any desire to hold, political office. His aspirations seem not to have gone beyond or outside of success in his professional career."

In 1850 he was married to Anna Mattison, a daughter of Capt. Joseph Mattison, of the navy. She was born in Woodbridge, Middlesex Co., in this State. They have two children, a son and daughter, the issue of the marriage. The elder, Anna M. (wife of Walter V. Clark), resides in Hackensack. The younger, Joseph M. Knapp, is temporarily in Colorado. He, it is understood, is preparing for admission to the bar of this State.

AARON OGDEN, a son of Robert Ogden, was born at Elizabethtown in the year 1756, graduated at Princeton College in 1773, before he had attained the age of seventeen; he then engaged as an assistant teacher in a grammar school, which he continued until he entered the army, in 1777. Ogden was appointed a lieutenant and paymaster in the First Regiment, and continued in service to the termination of the war as aide-de-camp, captain and brigade-major and inspector. He rendered very valuable services to his country during the Revolutionary war, and was a great favorite of Washington and Lafayette.

When dismissed from the army with the other officers at Newburgh, in 1783, Maj. Ogden returned to Elizabethtown, and took up the study of the law with his brother Robert, and was licensed as an attorney in 1784, and as counselor in 1794, and practiced his profession at Elizabethtown, and was clerk of the county of Essex. In 1801 the Legislature elected him to fill the unexpired term of James Schureman in the Senate of the United States, and he served from Feb. 26, 1801, to March 3, 1803, and was a distinguished and useful member of that body.

In 1812, Aaron Ogden was elected Governor of the State of New Jersey, and by virtue of his office also became chancellor of the State, and held the office for one year. While he held the office of Governor, President Madison nominated him as a major-general, with the purpose, as it was understood, of giving him the command of the forces operating against Canada, and his nomination was unanimously confirmed by the Senate; but he declined to accept, as he thought he could be of more service as Governor of the State. He was one of the commissioners to settle the boundaries between the States of New York and New Jersey in 1807, 1827 and 1833. He was elected a trustee of Princeton College in 1803, and held the office at the time of his death, and received from the college the degree of LL.D., in 1817.

About 1813 he engaged in the running of a steamboat between Elizabethtown and New York City, which brought him in contact with Thomas Gibbons and brought about the steamboat war, the State of New York and New Jersey having each granted the exclusive use of the waters of each State to certain individuals to navigate their waters exclusively; the monopoly was sustained by the courts of New York, but in the celebrated case of Gibbons vs. Ogden, in the Supreme Court of the United States, that court declared the laws unconstitutional. In this controversy Ogden lost his fortune.

In 1824 he succeeded Gen. Bloomfield as president of the Society of the Cincinnati, and continued to be its president until the time of his death.

In 1829 he took up his residence in Jersey City, where he was to some extent provided for, not only by his pension as an old soldier, but by an act of Congress creating a custom-house office at Jersey City, which he held during the remainder of his life. He died in Jersey City in 1839, at the age of eighty-three years.

SAMUEL L. SOUTHARD, known as "New Jersey's favorite son," is entitled to a short space in this chapter, from the fact that he was a resident of Jersey City at the time of his death, having been elected president of the Morris Canal and Banking Company in 1838; he took up his residence in Jersey City at that time.

A full sketch of his life is to be found in Elmer's "Reminiscences of New Jersey," and also in the histories of the counties of Hunterdon and Somerset, and Mercer and Burlington.

He was born at Baskingridge, Somerset Co., June 9, 1787, was a pupil in the celebrated school of Rev. Robert Finley, and in September, 1802, he entered the junior class at Princeton, and graduated in 1804, at the age of seventeen. He went to Virginia as a teacher of the classics, and was admitted to the bar there in 1809; was admitted to the bar here in 1811, and commenced practice at Flemington, and was appointed prosecutor of the pleas for Hunterdon County; in 1815 he was elected to the Legislature, and shortly after taking his seat, on Oct. 31, 1815, he was appointed an associate justice of the Supreme Court, and removed to Trenton. When appointed judge he was only twenty-eight years old. He was appointed law reporter, and published two volumes of reports. Jan. 26, 1821, he was appointed by the Governor to fill the unexpired term of J. J. Wilson in the United States Senate, and was elected by the Legislature for the full term, from March 4, 1821, and having been appointed Secretary of the Navy by President Monroe, Sept. 16, 1823, he resigned his seat in the Senate, and took a seat in the Cabinet, which he held through the administrations of President Monroe and President John Q. Adams, until 1829. After retiring from the navy he resumed his practice at Trenton, and on Feb. 20, 1829, was appointed Attorney-General of the State.

W. H. B. & Co. N. Y.

J. D. Beebe

He was appointed Governor and chancellor in 1832, but he only held one term of the Court of Chancery, being elected United States Senator for the term commencing March 4, 1833, he resigned the office of Governor. He, therefore, in less than a year, held the offices of Attorney-General, Governor and chancellor and United States Senator, from which he derived the title of "favorite son." In 1839 he was again elected to the United States Senate for the full term of six years. On March 11, 1841, he was elected president pro tempore of the Senate, and upon the retirement of Vice-President Tyler he was elected president of the Senate, May 31, 1841, and held that position at the time of his death, which occurred at Fredericksburg, June 26, 1842.

He was elected one of the electors and voted for President Monroe in 1820. He was appointed a trustee of Princeton College in 1822, and the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. in 1832.

It is not probable that any other such record can be produced in the State of New Jersey.

MATHIAS OGDEN was a member of the distinguished Ogden family of New Jersey, and a son of Governor Aaron Ogden, and was born at Elizabethtown in 1792. He received an academic education and entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, and graduated there in the class of 1810. He studied law, and was admitted as an attorney-at-law at November term, 1814, and as counselor-at-law at February term, 1818, and died in July, 1860, in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

He practiced law in Jersey City from the formation of the county, in 1840 to 1848, and is spoken of as a sound and able lawyer.

SAMUEL CASSEDY was really the first lawyer to settle in the territory now known as Hudson County who did any considerable amount of business, although he succeeded James Williams, who had settled here before him; Mr. Williams' business must have been small, as he was here but a short time, and the population was very sparse.

Mr. Cassedy was born at Hackensack, June 22, 1790, and was one of three brothers, all of whom were distinguished men in their day. George Cassedy was a distinguished member of the Hackensack bar, an able lawyer, and served several years in Congress, elected on a general State ticket. John Cassedy was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, represented Bergen County in the State Council and Hudson County in the State Senate, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention from Bergen County in 1844; he was also the chief organizer of the Hudson County Bank and the Bank of Jersey City.

Samuel Cassedy was educated at the schools in Hackensack, and removed to Kentucky, and was admitted to the bar of that State as an attorney and counselor Aug. 20, 1814; he removed to Jersey City and was admitted as an attorney at May term, 1816, and as counselor at September term, 1833; upon being licensed as an attorney, in 1816, he succeeded to the business of James Williams, and continued to practice in Jersey City until his death, which occurred Aug. 30, 1862, in the seventy-second year of his age.

On Dec. 23, 1831, Mr. Cassedy was placed upon Governor Vroom's staff as his deputy adjutant-general for the Second Division of the militia of New Jersey, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He also served in the war of 1812 as a volunteer. He was also prosecutor of the pleas for Bergen County.

He devoted his efforts mainly to office practice, and in the vigor of his manhood had a large clientage.

WILLIAM CULLIS MORRIS was descended from Revolutionary stock. His grandfather, Maj. James Morris, was fatally wounded at the battle of Germantown, and died January 7, 1777. He had his commission on his person, and it was stained with his blood. Judge Morris took great pride in exhibiting this commission. His father, Jonathan Ford Morris, was a physician, and practiced at Bind Brook, later at Somerville, where he died. He was a popular physician, successful surgeon, philanthropic citizen and a forcible writer. Judge Morris was born at Middlebrook, Somerset Co., Feb. 27, 1789. He was educated at the classical academy at Somerville, N. J., entered the law office of John Frelinghuysen, and also read a short time with George McDonald, and was admitted to the bar at November term, 1818, and entered upon the practice of the law at Belvidere, and continued in practice there for thirty-one years, when he removed to Jersey City, and took a position in the custom-house in the city of New York, which he held for four years, when he retired to an office practice in Jersey City, and in 1861 was appointed by Governor Olden a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and served for nearly a year, and was regularly elected to the office by the joint meeting of 1863, and took his seat on the bench April 1, 1863, and died May 17, 1870, aged eighty-one years.

Judge Morris held the office of prosecutor of the pleas for the county of Warren for twenty-five years, being five successive terms, and the great service which he rendered the State was his prosecution of what were known throughout the State as the Warren murder trials. These trials were probably the most celebrated of any in the criminal history of the State. Joseph Carter, Jr., Abner Park and Peter W. Park were severally indicted and tried for the murder of John Castner, Maria Castner, his wife, Mary M. Castner, daughter of John and Marie Castner, and John B. Park, brother of Peter W. Park. These trials lasted for a period of about two years; several judges of the Supreme Court sat at the various trials, and the persons convicted were convicted entirely upon circumstantial evidence, and these convictions were mainly due to the great industry and high moral character of Judge Morris, who abandoned his civil business to prosecute these murderers, and at the close of the long trials he found his civil business in the hands of other persons, and he took a position in the custom-house. His loss of practice was a meagre reward for the long and valuable services which he rendered to the county, the prosecutor being then paid by fees, and the fee was fifteen dollars for the trial and conviction of a murderer. The people of Warren County, through their Board of Chosen Freeholders, never made any adequate recompense to Judge Morris for these two years of service.

Judge Morris was an earnest, active Christian, and was in the eldership of the church almost constantly from 1828 until his death, a period of over forty years. He married a daughter of Adjt.-Gen. Stryker, by whom he had several children, which he brought up to be very useful and valuable citizens. Dr. Theodore F. Morris, of Jersey City, who has devoted so much of his time to the education of the children of Jersey City, in the Board of Education; William C. Morris, Jr., cashier of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; Francis B. Morris, superintendent of the coal transportation of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, are his sons; and a daughter married J. G. Shipman, Esq., a leading lawyer in West New Jersey.

JAMES S. NEVINS was born in Somerset County in 1786, and graduated at Princeton College in 1816. Having studied law with Frederick Frelinghuysen, he was licensed as an attorney in 1819, admitted as a counselor in 1823, and called to be a sergeant-at-law in 1837, among the last upon whom that honor was conferred in the State.

In 1838, upon the death of Judge Ryerson, he was chosen by the joint meeting a justice of the Supreme Court, and was again appointed by Governor Stratton in 1845, serving on the bench for fourteen years. At the expiration of his second term the politics of the State had changed, and Governor Fort appointed ex-Governor Daniel Haines to fill his place.

He followed his profession at New Brunswick until he was appointed judge, and always resided there until 1852, when he moved to Jersey City, and opened an office there and practiced his profession until the time of his death, which occurred in 1859, in the seventy-third year of his age.

The greater part of Judge Nevins' professional and judicial life was spent in the county of Middlesex, and he only spent the last seven years of his life in Hudson County, and these were the years of his old age. He was highly respected as a lawyer and a judge, and might be regarded as an independent thinker, as his dissenting opinions will show; and, in concluding one of them, he says, "I regret the necessity which constrains me to differ with my brethren on this point; but, thinking as I do, I would not fulfill my trust were I to yield my opinion before I was convinced."

In the early history of Jersey City there was a great controversy over the dedication of the market grounds at the foot of Washington Street, between Bergen Street and South Street, and lately occupied as a city hospital. The case is reported in Spencer's Reports, 86: Dummer ads. Selectmen of Jersey City. Dummer was represented by such eminent counsel as A. S. Garr and George Wood, and the city was represented by Peter Bentley and ex-Governor I. H. Williamson. The opinion of the court was delivered by Judge Nevins, sustaining the claim of the city, and he was ever after held in high esteem by the older citizens for thus sustaining them in a fierce and well-fought struggle.

He engaged in, and was one of the promoters of the Raritan Water-Works, to supply water-power for mill-sites at that place.

While Judge Nevins will be remembered as a judge of fair average ability, he was greatly endeared to the people by his kindly social disposition and his great fund of anecdote. He was always the centre in every social gathering, and he will long be remembered in the State.

LEWIS D. HARDENBERGH, one of the gentlemen who was settled at Hackensack and removed to Jersey City on the formation of Hudson County, was descended from one of the oldest and best-known families in New Jersey. His grandfather, Jacob R. Hardenbergh, was the first president of Queen's College (now Rutgers College), at New Brunswick; his father was named Jacob R. Hardenbergh, and was an attorney-at-law, admitted to the bar of New Jersey at February term, 1805, and was a man of large influence.

The subject of this sketch was born at New Brunswick in 1803. At the time when he should have received his college education Rutgers College was closed; he studied law with the celebrated George Wood, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at May term, 1825, and as a counselor at November term, 1828.

After practicing a short time in New Jersey he went to Utica, N. Y., and was admitted to the New York bar, and while there Governor Horatio Seymour was a student in his office. His health broke down in the cold climate of that State, and he returned to New Brunswick, and practiced there a short time; then removed to Hackensack, in Bergen County; was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of Bergen County in 1836, and resigned upon coming to Jersey City. He was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson County in 1849, and held the office for five years. His health failing, he accepted the office of secretary of the Hudson County Mutual Insurance Company, which office he held for many years, and until his death, in the fall of 1857.

The Third Reformed Church, now the Park Reformed Church of Jersey City, was initiated at the house of Judge Stephen Garretson in April, 1852, the gentlemen present being Stephen Garretson, Thomas Taber, John Smyth, Henry M. Traphagen and Lewis D. Hardenbergh; Mr. Hardenbergh was elected one of the first deacons of the church.

His son, Jacob R. Hardenbergh, who came to the New Jersey bar, practiced many years in Jersey City, where he was highly respected, and is now practicing at Omaha, Neb.

JOSEPH F. RANDOLPH, late an associate justice of the Supreme Court, was born in New York City, March 14, 1803, the son of Robert F. Randolph, a physician, who afterwards settled at Piscataway, in the county of Middlesex, where Judge Randolph's early life was spent. He was descended from a long line of God-fearing men, dated back to the Pilgrims and the "Mayflower." His early education was under his father's tuition and at the schools of his neighborhood. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at May term, 1825, as attorney, and at May term, 1828, as counselor, and opened his office at Freehold, and was soon after appointed prosecutor of the pleas for Monmouth County. At that time the members of Congress were elected on a general State ticket, and Judge Randolph had become so widely and favorably known throughout the State that, at the early age of thirty-one years, he was placed on the Whig ticket, and elected to Congress in 1834. He was afterwards twice re-elected, serving until 1841, and declining a fourth renomination. He was a member of Congress during the great broad seal controversy of 1849; he was the only member from New Jersey who retained his seat.

In February, 1845, he was appointed by Governor Stratton an associate justice of the Supreme Court, and served a term of seven years, highly esteemed by his brethren on the bench, and greatly respected by the people of the State, and always regarded as a painstaking, upright and impartial judge.

In 1854 he was one of the commissioners appointed to revise the laws of the State. Parts of their work, especially the acts for reorganization of the courts and the Practice Act of 1855, still remain on the statute book.

On the dissolution of the old Whig party Judge Randolph followed the fortunes of Fillmore and of Bell and Everett, and afterwards he joined the Democratic party, and acted with them until the time of his death. He was a member of the Peace Conference held in Washington, in 1861, to see if the difficulties between the North and the South could not be adjusted without a resort to arms. He was a Seymour and Blair elector in 1868.

Judge Randolph resided at Freehold until 1841. When he retired from Congress he removed to New Brunswick, and opened a law-office there, and practiced at that place until he was appointed a justice of the Supreme Court, and removed to Trenton in 1845, and continued to reside there until 1865, when he removed to Jersey City, and took up the practice of the law there, and continued to reside in Jersey City until the time of his death, which occurred March 19, 1873, when he was seventy years and five days old.

Judge Randolph was an out and out Jerseyman; he loved the State and the people thereof, and was greatly honored and respected by them. When a vacancy occurred upon the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States he called upon the writer of this sketch, and said, "Let us make an effort to seat a Jerseyman in the place." He and I immediately called a meeting of the bar of Hudson County in favor of Joseph P. Bradley. The meeting passed suitable resolutions, which were printed and sent to President Grant, and Judge Bradley was finally appointed, and Judge Randolph did not relax his efforts in that direction until it was accomplished.

Judge Randolph's great strength was in his friendships; he made friends and retained them; he was a noble and generous-hearted man, without any deception or guile in his composition. Kindness was the ruling passion of his life. He was diligent in business; this, united with a high Christian character and a faithful attendance on the services of the First Presbyterian Church of Jersey City, where he was a member, greatly endeared him to our people, and he died lamented by a large circle of friends here and elsewhere.

ABRAHAM O. ZABRISKIE, late chancellor of the State of New Jersey, was born at Greenbush, opposite Albany, N. Y., on June 19, 1807. His father was Rev. John Zabriskie, who was settled as pastor over the Reformed Church at Millstone, Somerset Co., N. J., in 1811, and he took up his residence there and continued to reside there until the time of his death, greatly respected for his Christian character and zealous work.

As Mr. Zabriskie was brought into this State at four years of age, and resided here during his whole life-time, he can fairly be claimed as a Jerseyman. After receiving an academic education he entered the junior class at Princeton College in 1823, and graduated with the highest honors in 1825. He immediately commenced the study of the law with James S. Green, Esq., of Princeton, and was licensed at November term, 1828, as an attorney, and at November term, 1831, as a counselor. He settled first at Newark, but removed to Hackensack in 1830, and took up the practice of the law there, and continued at that place until 1849, when he removed to Jersey City, where he continued to reside until the time of his death, which occurred at Truckee, Cal., June 27, 1873, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. After his term of office as chancellor had expired he was appointed one of the commissioners to revise the State Constitution, and was made president of the commission, and during an adjournment of the same had gone to visit the State of California, and was on his way home to assume his duties as president when death overtook him.

Mr. Zabriskie resided in Bergen County for nineteen years, and was the most conspicuous man of the county, both as a lawyer and civilian. In politics he was a Whig, was appointed surrogate in 1838, reappointed in 1843, and held the office for ten years. In 1842 he was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of the county of Bergen. He was reappointed by Governor Stratton, and resigned the office when he removed to Jersey City, in 1849. He was appointed law reporter by the Supreme Court at January term, 1847, and held the office until February term, 1855. He was, therefore, surrogate, prosecutor of the pleas and law reporter at the same time, and was also engaged as counsel in all the important civil suits that originated in Bergen County.

After his removal to Jersey City he went immediately into a large and lucrative practice, was engaged in most all the important trials in Hudson County, and tried many causes in the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Essex. He became identified in our local interests, and accepted positions of trust in banks and railroads, and took his full share of the responsible duties belonging to the private citizen.

He was appointed chancellor by Governor Ward, and entered upon the duties of his office May 1, 1866, and continued to perform them until the expiration of his office, May 1, 1873, when he was succeeded by Chancellor Theodore Runyon.

Chancellor Zabriskie brought to the high office of chancellor great industry, a very ripe experience at the bar, and a very extensive knowledge of the law, for he had always been a great student, and his published opinions will be his most lasting monuments, and will certainly perpetuate his fame.

It would be useless to cite cases where he has delivered learned and able opinions showing great research; but a reference to three reported cases will fully illustrate this statement.—Stevens vs. The Paterson and Newark Railroad Company (5 Vroom's r. 532), when he delivered in the Court of Errors and Appeals a dissenting opinion on the question of riparian rights; Fidler vs. Higgins and others (6 C. E. Green's r. 138), in this case the chancellor held that, under the sixth section of the statute of descent, lands descended by the rules of the common law, and not by the civil law, and the opinion is full of learning and research, but the doctrine was overruled by the Court of Appeals, and the civil law doctrine established; Black vs. The Delaware and Raritan

Canal Company and others (7 C. E. Green's r. 130), involving the question of the leasing of the railroads of the joint companies to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the chancellor sustained the lease in an opinion covering thirty-seven pages.

The short space which can be afforded in this chapter to so distinguished a citizen as Mr. Zabriskie will not suffice to do full justice to his memory. At the time of his death the bar of Hudson County prepared and published a memorial volume, containing the addresses of many members of the bar on that occasion, and an address by Hon. Isaac W. Scudder, and the funeral sermon by Rev. W. H. Campbell, LL.D., president of Rutgers College.

A few extracts from these addresses will properly show his full character.

Judge Bedle, presiding at the bar meeting,—among other things, said,

"Chancellor Zabriskie was a most remarkable man, both in physical appearance and in intrinsic mental strength. Those who saw him for the first time knew at once that he was no ordinary man, and those who were familiar with him, and especially those who experienced the weight of his power as a professional antagonist, well understood that it was great and formidable. He was a thoroughly read lawyer, and while at the bar excelled in the science of the common law. His mind was eminently practical, and could easily adapt itself to the plainest comprehension. In this was one of the secrets of his success as an advocate. He was fertile in analogies, and used the plainest facts and principles of every-day life with wonderful facility to illustrate his arguments. In this he had no equal at the bar. That quality was always felt before a jury, and frequently was dangerously effective against an adversary before educated minds. Though possessing that faculty in so high a degree, he was always profound and learned in a purely legal argument. His research was careful, and courts were always aided by the results of his labor and reflection. I heard an eminent judge, who for years adorned the bench of the Court of Errors and Appeals of this State, and whose just judgment of men all will concede, say that Mr. Zabriskie had no superior in strength before that Court.

"As a chancellor, he served the State with faithfulness, and promptly, ably and satisfactorily performed the duties of his office. His judicial record will always be regarded as a very valuable part of our jurisprudence.

"As presiding officer of the Court of Errors and Appeals, he was dignified, yet genial, and in the labors and conferences of that court I have seen some of the most striking evidences of his learning and fertility of thought."

Jacob Went, among other things, said: "I was a great admirer of his profound learning and ability as a lawyer; and his fame as a counsellor and advocate had become a household word to the bar and people of the State, as will be seen by a short reference to our political history.

"In the year 1859, His Excellency William A. Newell selected Mr. Zabriskie as his first choice for chancellor, and nominated him to the Senate, and the Senate being politically opposed to the Governor, declined to confirm the nomination, and the memorable struggle was entered into which left the State for a year without a chancellor.

"At the ensuing election His Excellency Charles S. Olden was elected Governor, but the Senate remained politically opposed to him. I remember to have visited Governor Olden at Princeton to present the name of Mr. Zabriskie for the office of chancellor, and after the Legislature convened Governor Olden advised me that he would nominate Mr. Zabriskie as chancellor, provided he could be confirmed, but if he could not be confirmed, he thought the interests of the State required that his name should not be sent in, but another nomination made, and he gave Mr. Zabriskie's friends time to see if the confirmation could be secured; but the memory of the struggle of the year previous was too fresh and bitter to allow of his confirmation. When His Excellency Marcus L. Ward was elected, in 1865, and it became known that the office of chancellor would become vacant, the bar of the State generally looked to Mr. Zabriskie as the coming man, and he was accordingly nominated and confirmed. I mention these facts to show what a strong hold he had upon the public confidence, having been the first choice for the office of chancellor of three Republican Governors.

"Our chairman (Judge Bedle) having spoken of him as a chancellor, I desire to call attention to a few other remarkable traits of his character. Mr. Zabriskie was a lawyer, and not a politician, yet he took a deep interest in all of the affairs of state, and the crowning act of his life was his opposition and defeat of the extension of the monopoly grants of the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company.

"I attended the great public meeting at Park Hall in this city, where he was the chief public speaker, and his power and eloquence on that occasion was so great that he fairly thrilled his audience, as it were, by an electric shock. He repeated his speech before a committee of the Legislature at Trenton, and the extension of the monopoly was dead. Great as Mr. Zabriskie's services were in the two highest courts of the State, where he presided, in my judgment they fall infinitely short of his great struggle for the rights of the people of the State in his successful effort to defeat the extension of the monopoly privileges, and the result is that to-day we have a free railroad law; without his aid we would most likely still have remained under the monopoly power, and would have so continued until 1889."

At the time of his death the Court of Errors and Appeals was in session at Trenton. Attorney General Gilchrist announced the death to the court, and Chancellor Remyon, in adjourning the court out of respect to his memory, among other things, said,—

"His long connection with this court as its presiding officer, his long and intimate connection with its business before he came to its bench, his identification with the administration of justice as lawyer and judge for nearly half a century, render eulogium unnecessary among those with whom he has been associated. His name is added to those of whose record New Jersey is proud. Much as she prizes her history and its associates, the valor and patriotism of her sons on field and deck; proud as she is of the character of her people, of her resources and the enterprise of her citizens; she reckons among her brightest jewels the lives of such as he,—the men who have given her her great character for justice, for law and order. To speak their names would be to utter the household words of her firesides. The deceased was a consummate lawyer, a just, patient and impartial judge, a citizen always on the side of the right as God gave him to see the right, conservative in his views, firm and positive in his convictions, an honor to the State and nation. When he left us his eye was not dim nor his natural force abated; he looked forward, as well he might, to future useful labor for the State after that vacation, which he intended should be but for a few days, but which God in His Providence has made eternal. His life was full of high and honorable example of duty conscientiously discharged and life's labor well and diligently done."

He served a term of three years in the State Senate, from Hudson County, before he was made chancellor, and had the degree of LL.D. conferred upon him.

BENJAMIN WILLIAMSON is descended from one of the most distinguished families in the State of New Jersey, being a son of Isaac H. Williamson, Governor and chancellor of the State from 1817 to 1829, and during his time one of the ablest lawyers at the bar of the State.

The subject of this sketch was born at Elizabethtown, and graduated at the College of New Jersey in 1827; was admitted as an attorney at November term, 1830, and was made counselor at November term, 1833, and practiced his profession at Elizabeth, and early took high rank as a lawyer, and won much distinction as a leader in the Democratic party, and became identified as counsel with the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

He was for several years prosecutor of the pleas for Essex County, and was appointed chancellor by Governor Fort, and succeeded Chancellor Oliver S. Halsted in 1852.

Under Chancellor Williamson's administration the Court of Chancery grew to be a popular court to the suitors of the State, and all matters that could be litigated in that court gravitated there, and the court under his administration gained so much strength that its power has continued to grow, and its juris-dition to expand, so that it now controls and settles a large part of the disputes arising in the State.

When Chancellor Williamson came into office he at once became the friend of all the young lawyers, by breaking down the barrier that no attorney could be commissioned as a master and examiner until he had obtained his counselor's commission; the writer of this sketch obtained from Chancellor Williamson a commission as master and examiner in Chancery in less than two months after he received his license as attorney, and this commission was of great service to the receiver and of much benefit to the public, as a large part of the testimony of the Court of Chancery taken in Hudson County was taken under this commission during the first years after it was granted, and the same can be said of many other masters and examiners commissioned by Chancellor Williamson as soon as they were admitted as attorneys; when he went out of office the old rule was again established, and the progress of young men struggling for a foothold in the profession greatly retarded.

Chancellor Williamson may be regarded as an original thinker, and while he paid due respect to established forms and precedents, still he advanced the principles of the law in his court to meet the progress of the age and the necessities of the times, and if a new question arose owing to the new modes of doing business, he formulated a new rule in the Court of Equity to meet the cases, and it was the advancing principles which he instilled into the court, and which have been continued by his successors in office, and especially so by Chancellor Runyon, that has made the Court of Chancery so deservedly popular that it has withstood all constitutional changes, while the Courts of Chancery in most of the States have been abolished, and equity powers given to courts of law.

When Chancellor Williamson retired from office, in 1859, he opened his office in Jersey City, and has continued it there ever since, and has for the last twenty-five years been a member of the Hudson bar, although he has always continued his residence at Elizabeth. When he retired from office he went immediately into a large practice, and drew his clientele from all over the State of New Jersey and largely from the States of New York and Pennsylvania; so much so that he has been engaged in almost all of the great litigation which has arisen in the State on one side or the other, and to enumerate these causes would be almost equivalent to making a digest of our reports.

Some lawyers are distinguished for their ability in the matter of the law of a case, and others in their ability to handle the facts of a cause with skill; but Chancellor Williamson unites these two great qualities more successfully than any other lawyer at our bar, and has for many years ranked as one of the very leading lawyers of the State, and is still engaged in the most important causes.

This sketch cannot be more appropriately closed than by quoting from the "History of Union and Middlesex Counties" the following:

"While he has avoided public office outside the line of his professional service, he has on more than one occasion been prominently urged by friends as United States Senator, and they only failed of his election by a few votes in 1863 or 1864.

"In 1860 he was a delegate-at-large from the State to the Democratic Convention at Charleston, and in 1861 was appointed one of the delegates to represent New Jersey in the Peace Congress which met at Washington, composed of delegates from every State, and which was called in the hope and for the purpose of averting, if possible, the impending conflict between the two sections of the country. Mr. Williamson has been all his life identified with the interests of church, of education and the development of the resources of the State. He has for years served as an officer of the church of St. John's Episcopal parish, and of the Union County Bible Society, as trustee of the State Normal School, as director and counsel for the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, of the State Bank of Elizabeth, and as director and trustee of the New Jersey Southern Railroad Company, as commissioner of the sinking fund of Elizabeth, and in other positions of trust, both public and private. He still lives at Elizabeth, on the place formerly the residence of his father."

PETER BENTLEY, SR., one of the founders of Jersey City, was born at the village of Half-Moon, in the county of Saratoga, in the State of New York, in the year 1805. His early life was devoted to farming and attending the county schools until he was twenty years of age, when he started out to seek his own fortune. In 1825 he came to Jersey City, and learned the occupation of a printer, which he followed for a few years, and earned and saved money enough to enable him to take up the study of the law, and about 1830 he entered the law-office of Samuel Cassedy, Esq., and was licensed as an attorney at May term, 1834, and took his counselor's license at the September term, 1839; he opened his office in Jersey City, and practiced there for forty-one years, and died Sept. 26, 1875, seventy years of age.

In 1833 he was clerk of the Board of Selectmen of Jersey City, and in 1843 he was elected mayor of Jersey City; these were the only political offices he ever held. He helped to organize several of the banks and insurance companies of the city, and served as a director or trustee, notably the Provident Institution for Savings; he was made a trustee when the bank was organized, and served until his death, a period of thirty years; he was a vice-president for fourteen years, and attorney and counsel to the bank for many years.

He was the leading spirit in the organization of the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank in 1853, and was its first president; this bank was afterwards merged into the First National Bank of Jersey City, and is now

Peter B. Sutley

J. W. Scudder

one of the most prosperous banks in the State of New Jersey. He helped to organize the Jersey City Fire Insurance Company, and was one of its directors; he was treasurer of the Jersey City and Bergen Plank-Road Company, a director in the Jersey City Gas-Light Company, and at one time treasurer, and he executed many trusts relative to property where individuals were concerned.

On the 15th of October, 1842, he married Miss Margaret E. Holmes, of Jersey City, who was of English descent; she still survives with two children,—Peter Bentley, Jr., a leading member of the Jersey City bar, and a daughter, Rosaline H., who married Thomas H. Tower, a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

Mr. Bentley came to Jersey City without fortune, and at the time of his death left a large estate; he had traveled extensively in Europe and in this country, and always took a very active part in all that pertained to Hudson County and Jersey City, and on the occasion of his death the bar of Hudson County published a memorial volume which contains addresses by Jacob Weart, Washington B. Williams, Charles H. Winfield, Stephen B. Ransom, and a eulogy by the late Isaac W. Scudder, and addresses on the occasion of his funeral by Rev. Mr. Putnam, Rev. Dr. W. W. Parnly, and the late Rev. Dr. Benjamin C. Taylor, who preached the funeral sermon by request of Mr. Bentley, expressed some twenty years before his death, because Dr. Taylor had served so acceptably at the funeral of one of Mr. Bentley's friends.

A few selections from these addresses will give a full view of Mr. Bentley's character.

Mr. Stephen B. Ransom said: ". . . Mr. Bentley was in some respects a remarkable man. Commencing his career here when our county was in its infancy, he became identified with its growth, and in no small measure assisted in shaping its destiny. Injustice, oppression, fraud and corruption in municipal, State or national affairs found in him an uncompromising foe. He was originally a Democrat, and acted with that party, but no party ties were strong enough to control his action in a direction which his conscience did not approve; and when, in 1848, the Democratic party, at the dictation of the South, proclaimed its purpose to force slavery into all our Territories, his free spirit revolted, and, united with similar spirits in the State, he took an active part in organizing the Free-Soil party. It was at the convention held in Trenton in the summer of 1848, to organize that party and nominate an electoral ticket, that I first became acquainted with him. He took a very active part in that movement, and although the ticket then nominated at the election in November following received but about one hundred and forty votes in the State, the principles of that party which he then advocated took deep root in the nation, and he lived long enough to see their complete triumph in the absolute overthrow of the hated institution of slavery."¹

Mr. W. B. Williams said: ". . . He had a quick and excellent perception of the right of a case and of its reasonable probabilities. He was noted for bringing about settlements, and fought his clients' battles as cunningly, and with as much tact, ingenuity and success, in office conferences, as many others do before the court.

"I think his shrewd judgment of the probabilities of success was well shown in his advocacy, with persistent energy and confidence, the celebrated case of Mrs. Bell, involving the question of the right of the State to lands below high-water mark. After twelve or fourteen years of contest, in which he secured the aid of some of the ablest counsel in the State, and it seemed likely that final success in the United States Supreme Court would justify his views, a satisfactory settlement was reached. The sale of the valuable rights in question to the Long Dock Company initiated the series of vast improvements which now line our shores for miles, and I believe that whatever may be said of the sure result, sooner or later, of the natural advantages of this shore, the persistent energy of Mr. Bentley greatly aided in hastening the advent of these improvements.

"My own friendly relations" (Mr. Williams was a student in his office) "with him remained unchanged after my admission to the bar, and I was glad and proud when I could in turn assist him, and when, as his years advanced, he would come and put questions to a younger mind fresh from the work-bench and the tools. Especially was I glad to receive at times his confidence, and to unite with him in his paternal anticipation of the usefulness and success of his only son, with whom we sympathize to-day, and to whom he so earnestly looked to inherit his honorably earned reputation and clientage, and to attend his gray hairs with honor to the grave."

Mr. Scudder said: ". . . Opposed to municipal extravagance, Mr. Bentley took an active part in all those plans designed to protect property from unnecessary taxes and assessments.

"Finding that extravagant and unjust assessments had been imposed on property in Jersey City, which provoked serious litigation, the result of which, if successful, would have thrown great burthens on the public at large, where they did not properly belong, in 1873 he conceived the plan of creating a commission, to be composed of men of high character, who should be empowered to review all such cases, and adjust them on sound and equitable principles. With his usual energy he engaged in this important subject; he carried his project before the Legislature, had a commission appointed, of which Judge Harris, who had been the Governor of the State and justice of the ¹ And when the army was reviewed at Washington at the close of the late civil war, Mr. Bentley went to Washington to witness the review.

Supreme Court, was made the head, and the result was a more just and proper distribution of the public burthens, and the assessments, having been fairly established, have been for the most part collected."

ISAAC WILLIAMSON SCUDDER was born at Elizabethtown, N. J. (now known as Elizabeth), in 1816. His father, Smith Scudder, was a lawyer, and licensed as an attorney in 1808, and as a counselor in 1813. He resided at Elizabeth and practiced his profession there. He was a very ardent admirer of the profession, as was shown by the names he gave to his two sons,—William Mansfield Scudder, after Lord Mansfield, one of the greatest judges in England, and Isaac Williamson Scudder after Governor Isaac H. Williamson, who was chancellor of New Jersey for twelve years, and a very great lawyer.

The subject of this sketch was licensed as an attorney at May term, 1838, and as counselor at May term, 1844, and settled in Jersey City shortly after the formation of the county of Hudson, and continued to reside and practice there until the time of his death, which occurred on Sept. 10, 1881. He never married, although he was very courteous to ladies, and seemed to enjoy their society very much, and always showed them great respect, and in their absence spoke kindly of them. The secret of his having led a bachelor's life was locked in his own heart, and was never revealed to his most intimate friends.

Upon coming to Jersey City he soon took rank in his profession, and in 1845 was appointed by Governor Stratton prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson County. The first important trial in which he was engaged was the case of the State versus Eliphelet M. S. Spencer for the murder of his wife, Adeline M. Spencer. The trial took place at August term, 1846, of the Hudson County Oyer and Terminer. Chief Justice Hornblower presided, and the State was represented by Mr. Scudder and Attorney-General Browning, a very eminent lawyer residing at Camden; Mr. Spencer was defended by Edgar B. Wakeman, ex-Chancellor B. Williamson and David Graham, Jr., one of the most distinguished criminal lawyers of New York City. The plea was insanity. Twenty-one witnesses were examined for the State and forty for the defense, and the verdict was "Not guilty."

Mr. Scudder's father had come over from Elizabeth to hear the argument of his son. His son had closed his great argument, and shortly afterwards his father expired in his chair in the court-room. His death was so quiet and peaceful that but few of the spectators observed that he had passed away.

Mr. Scudder's argument attracted much attention, and greatly aided him in acquiring civil business; his term as prosecutor expired in 1850, and he was again appointed prosecutor by Governor Olden in 1860, and served a second term of five years.

When the Hudson River police force was established, and the Police Department of Jersey City was placed under a commission, in 1866, Mr. Scudder was appointed by Governor Ward as one of the three commissioners.

In this office his services were of great value to Jersey City; he having for ten years been the prosecutor of the pleas, he had a thorough knowledge of the criminal law, and knew the various requirements for an efficient police force.

When Hudson County was set off into a Congressional district by itself, he was elected to Congress in 1872 as a Republican, while the district was largely Democratic. He served with much distinction, and retired at the expiration of his term to private life. He was frequently solicited by his friends to allow his name to be used as a candidate for a justice of the Supreme Court, and also for Governor of the State, but to all such solicitations he always answered, "No."

As a lawyer Mr. Scudder ranked as one of the first in the State, and he was engaged on either one side or the other of almost all of the great trials which took place in Hudson County during his time. He was employed by the large corporations,—he was the counsel for many years of the Associates of the Jersey Company, owning the ferries; of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company; of the United Railroads of New Jersey; and, lastly, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who took the roads on a lease for nine hundred and ninety-nine years. Mr. Scudder was the chief manager of the important litigation which terminated in the confirmation of the lease. He was also engaged in important land cases, and, in fact, in all kinds of litigation, civil and criminal, in which he was very successful, and much of his practice was in the highest courts of the State, and of the United States.

He was a great worker, and labored very hard in the preparation of his causes, and continued this until the close of his life. He was working on a cause on the day of his death, and was taken ill at his office at 11 A.M., and expired about ten in the evening, in his chair, as his father had done before him.

He had a large clientage, a warm circle of friends, by whom he was greatly respected. He came to Hudson County without an estate, and at the close of his life left an estate of four hundred thousand dollars, which he mainly bequeathed to the descendants of his deceased brother, William Mansfield Scudder.

BENNINGTON F. RANDOLPH is best known by the work of his busy life. Wishing to see him on a Saturday morning recently, I called at his court-room, but Judge Randolph was absent. I remarked that the judge was a very busy man. The clerk replied, "Yes; he works every day from 8 A.M. until 11 P.M." I said, "He can probably be found at the committee-room of the Equitable Life," and upon going there, the judge was found, hard at work.

He was born at Belvidere, then in Sussex (now Warren) County, Dec. 13, 1817. His grandfather was Dr. Robert F. Randolph. His father was Francis C. F. Randolph, who, after graduating at Queen's (now Rutgers) College, studied law with John Chetwood, Esq., at Elizabeth; was admitted to the bar in 1816, and settled at Belvidere; from there he removed to Elizabeth, where he engaged in law practice; represented the county of Essex in the Legislature; was by joint meeting elected surrogate of that county, and removed to Newark where he died during his term of office, in 1828. He married Phebe Halsey Crane, of Elizabeth, daughter of Benjamin Crane. Both the Randolph (formerly Fitz-Randolph) and the Crane families were among the very earliest settlers in East Jersey.

The subject of this sketch received an academic education at various schools, and then went to Lafayette College, at Easton, Pa.; studied law first with William C. Morris, Esq., at Belvidere, and afterwards with Joseph F. Randolph, Esq., at Freehold, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1839, and as a counselor, at February term, 1842. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office at Freehold, and practiced in the counties of Monmouth and Ocean until 1861, when he removed to Jersey City and opened an office there, and has continued to reside there ever since.

He was at one time a law-partner of Judge Joseph F. Randolph, and later Joseph F. Randolph, Jr., was admitted as a partner. He was admitted to the bar in the State of New York, and was at one time associated with Henry M. Alexander, James W. Alexander and Judge Ashbel Green as law-partners.

In 1868, when the office of law judge was created for Hudson County, he was appointed president judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Orphan's Court and Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace. He held this office for five years, and retired in 1873, owing to a change in the politics of the Legislature, which had the appointment.

In 1877 the Legislature created District Courts in Jersey City and Hoboken and various other cities. Two districts were created in Jersey City, and Judge Randolph was immediately looked to as one of the gentlemen for a judgeship. The Governor had the appointment, and ex-Governor Bedle being then in office, and a son-in-law of Judge Randolph, it was feared that Governor Bedle would not appoint him; but prominent members of the bar waited on Governor Bedle personally, and a very strong petition signed by most of the prominent lawyers of the city was also presented to the Governor, and the appointment secured; he was reappointed by Governor Ludlow in 1882, and is now (1884) serving his second term.

In 1859, Judge Randolph was associated with the gentlemen who organized and established the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, which, taking into consideration the date of its organization, is one of the largest and most successful societies in the world; he has always been one of its trustees, and has performed there a great deal of the work of its committees. He helped to organize in 1855 the Freehold Banking Company (now the Freehold National Banking Company), and was one of its directors until he removed to Jersey City. He is now one of the directors of the First National Bank of Jersey City, also of the Mercantile Trust Company and the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company of the City of New York; he is a riparian commissioner and a member of the State Board of Education, and is now President of that Board; he is at this time serving as a trustee or director in four important corporations, is a member of two very important commissions, holds an important court, and still finds time to do a considerable amount of church-work. He is a director of the Theological Seminary at Princeton, a trustee of the board of church extension of the Presbyterian Church, was an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Freehold, and continues in the service of that office in the First Presbyterian Church in Jersey City.

When the Riparian commission was created, in 1869, it was composed of Judge Francis F. Lathrop, ex-Governor Olden, Judge Peter Vredenburg, and Mr. Randolph, who is still serving; this commission has done a large work, and gathered into the school fund of the State three millions of dollars.

In 1854, when the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad was chartered, Mr. Randolph became one of its promoters, was counsel to the company, and at one time its treasurer. This road is now known as the Southern Railroad of New Jersey, and has been the means of developing the shore-front of the State, which has become so widely known all over the nation.

From 1865 to 1869, Mr. Randolph was a member of the Board of Education in Jersey City. He took great interest in the organization of the school in the then new building, No. 4, and in seconding the efforts to secure the site for the High School building. During nearly the whole period of his residence in Jersey City he has been a trustee of the State Normal School. Soon after he became connected with the institution the question of the purchase by the State of the very valuable property at Trenton, which Elias Cook then treasurer of the board had, at his own expense, built up, was considered, and he was appointed to confer with the legislative committee. Mr. Cook satisfied him of the original cost of the property, and offering to waive all interest, and to apply the whole income that had been realized from the Model School to reduce the amount to be paid by the State to a sum not much, if any, beyond the then actual cost of the property, Mr. Randolph urged the committee to advise the purchase. This was done, and the valuable property secured for the State.

In 1861, Mr. Randolph, with others, formed the steamship route between New York and San Francisco known as the Nicaragua route. They put steamers on the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and steamers on the San Juan River and Lake Nicaragua, and conveyances for the twelve miles of land carriage. After the company had been in operation some three years the harbor at Greytown was closed by the washing in of sand during a violent storm, which caused the close of the company's business.

In all the various trusts and undertakings in which Judge Randolph has been engaged he has always been known as having a high sense for the discharge of his official duties, and has always had the respect and confidence of his associate workers.

In 1841 he married Eliza, daughter of John B. and Hope Forman, of Freehold; her mother was a daughter of Dr. Thomas Henderson. The families of Mr. Forman and of Dr. Henderson were among the early settlers in that part of the State.

Judge Randolph has four daughters living,—Mrs. Althea R. Bedle, wife of ex-Governor Bedle; Mrs. Julia F. R. McGee, wife of Flavel McGee, Esq., of Jersey City; Miss Frances F. and Miss Isabella H. Randolph.

EDWIN RUTHVIN VINCENT WRIGHT was born at Hoboken, Jan. 2, 1812, and died in Jersey City, Jan. 21, 1871, in the sixtieth year of his age.

He studied law, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney-at-law at May term, 1839, and as a counselor at February term, 1844. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office in Jersey City, and was a partner with Thomas W. James, Esq. After that partnership was dissolved he moved his office to Hudson City, opposite the court-house. Governor Haines appointed him prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson County in 1850, and he served one term of five years. In 1857 he was appointed a major-general by Governor Newell. In 1836 he edited a paper called the Jersey Blue, published at Hoboken.

Gen. Wright's character was of a sociable and convivial nature, and he had no taste for the hard study necessary to make an eminent lawyer; but he was a strong and ardent Democratic politician. He was an able and fluent stump speaker, and in that capacity has addressed Democratic meetings all over the State.

At the early age of thirty-one years he was elected to the Council, in 1843, from Hudson County. In 1855 the city of Hudson was incorporated, with a mayor and Common Council, and Gen. Wright was elected the first mayor.

In 1869 he ran for Governor on the Democratic ticket against Charles S. Olden, who had received the Republican and American nominations, and was elected after a very active political campaign, in which both of the candidates took an active part.

In 1864 he ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket, in the district composed of the county of Hudson and the city of Newark, in the county of Essex, against Edgar B. Wakeman, the Republican candidate. Gen. Wright was elected and served one term, but did not run a second time owing to ill health.

For nearly thirty years Gen. Wright was one of the leading citizens of Hudson County, and a very conspicuous character in State politics.

THOMAS W. JAMES is now the Nestor of the Hudson County bar, being the only lawyer living of those who were settled here at the formation of the county. He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1812, his parents being temporarily resident in that city at the time; but he is a Jerseyman, descended from the Huguenots who settled in New Jersey before William Penn, and he can trace his lineage back for seven generations. Soon after he was born his parents removed to Camden.

Mr. James was educated in the schools and academies of his day, and took up the study of the law, and was admitted as an attorney at September term, 1839, and as counselor at November term, 1859.

Mr. James opened his office in Jersey City, and soon formed a partnership with Gen. Edwin R. V. Wright. The great work of his life was the founding of the Provident Institution for Savings, which was incorporated Feb. 27, 1839, but not organized until 1843, when a board of managers was selected, of which Hon. Dudley S. Gregory was president and Thomas W. James was secretary and treasurer. This is believed to be the oldest savings-bank in the State. Mr. James at first opened the bank on Saturday evenings, and the deposits he received he took home with him and placed under his pillow, took the same with him to church on Sunday, and placed the same under his pillow again on Sunday night, and on Monday morning he would take the deposits over to New York City, and place the same in the North River Bank. There was no bank in Jersey City at the time. This Mr. James did for nine years, and until the organization of the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank of Jersey City, of which Mr. James was a director, and then he deposited the funds in that bank. Mr. James continued to act as secretary and treasurer until 1856, when he resigned to remove to Wilmington, Del. Upon his resignation being accepted, the board of trustees presented him with a silver service as a token of their respect and appreciation for his long and faithful service. At the January statement, 1856, the bank had a deposit of $170,724.52; in January, 1884, the bank had on deposit $5,176,962.30, and a surplus fund of $493,369.57, and in the assets were embraced $2,224,125 in United States government bonds.

This bank has passed through all the financial troubles of the last forty years, and has never closed its doors, and has always paid on demand, or in accordance with the terms of its by-laws.

Mr. James remained in Wilmington but a short time, and returned to Jersey City and took up the practice of his profession, in which he has been engaged for the last twenty-five years.

Mr. James has mainly devoted himself to office business. He is a sound and able adviser, well read in the law, very accurate and methodical in his business, his opinions, when pronounced, always accurate, and his work to be relied upon. He is now counsel to the Hudson County National Bank, and has been for many years an earnest worker in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and has many devoted friends.

EDGAR BANKS WAKEMAN is descended from parents who came from Fairfield County, Conn. He was born April 17, 1816, at Monticello, Sullivan Co., in the State of New York. He received his early education in an old log school-house in the northern part of the State of New York, and finished it by teaching in the States of Massachusetts and Connecticut. He was admitted to practice as an attorney in the State of Pennsylvania in the year 1840, and to the bar in the State of New Jersey as an attorney at February term, 1843, and as counselor at February term, 1855. He was clerk of Jersey City from 1845 to 1848; he was an alderman in Jersey City for three years, and also held the position of corporation attorney for three years. He was a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket in 1864, in the district composed of the county of Hudson and city of Newark, against Edwin R. V. Wright, who was on the Democratic ticket, and was defeated by a majority of seven hundred, against a former Democratic majority of four thousand. He was an elector, in 1856, on the Fremont and Dayton ticket, and was an ardent Free-Soiler in 1848, and sustained Van Buren and Adams; was also a strong Republican, and still acts with that party.

Mr. Wakeman in the prime and vigor of his manhood had a large practice, and wielded a strong influence in Jersey City. He amassed what he considered was an ample fortune, mostly in real estate speculations, and retired from practice; but his fortune was mostly in vacant lands, and when the revulsion came which followed the financial panic of 1873 and the resumption of specie payments, lands depreciated in value so greatly that Mr. Wakeman's property was swept away, and he was too far advanced in life to again enter his profession with much success and regain his lost position.

STEPHEN BILLINGS RANSOM was born in the town of Salem, New London Co., Conn., on 12th day of October, 1814. His boyhood was spent in working on his father's farm and attending the common school of the neighborhood until the age of seventeen, when he engaged in school-teaching winters and continued to work on the farm summers, until he reached the age of twenty-one years. During this time he managed to attend an academy in an adjoining town for a couple of terms, where he commenced the study of the sciences and classics, which he pursued afterwards while engaged in teaching. In the fall of 1835 he left his native State, and went to the State of Virginia, with a view of engaging in teaching there. Not being able to find employment as a teacher readily, he spent the following winter in traveling through the States of Virginia and Maryland, spending some two months of the time in the city of Washington, examining the public buildings and listening to the debates in Congress. Andrew Jackson then occupied the Presidential chair, and on the floor of the Senate were such men as Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Thomas H. Benton, Garret D. Wall, Thomas Corwin and James Buchanan. In the fall of 1836 he came to the State of New Jersey, and engaged in teaching at Mendham, in the county of Morris, in the old academy. He remained there two years, and then went to Belvidere, in the county of Warren, where he taught for two years. Here he commenced the study of law with Hon. Phineas B. Kenney, a prominent lawyer of Belvidere, who was then county clerk. At Mendham he cast his first vote, in 1838, for the Democratic candidates for Congress, who were declared by the canvassers not elected, but were afterwards seated by Congress, being known as the "Broad Seal" question. From Belvidere he went to Hope, in Warren County, where he taught the village school one year. In 1841 he removed to New Germantown, in the county of Hunterdon, where he taught the school there for six months, when he finally bid adieu to a teacher's life, and entered his name in the office of Col. William Thompson, of Somerville, as a law student, with whom he finished his legal course, and on the 5th day of September, 1844, was admitted to the bar of New Jersey as an attorney, and as counselor at October term, 1847. He commenced practice at New Germantown, and at the same time engaged in land surveying. In the spring of 1848 he removed to Somerville, in the county of Somerset, where he continued the practice of his profession until 1854, when he removed his office to Jersey City, and two years later took up his abode there, where he has since resided. Politically, he remained with the Democratic party until 1848, when he joined the Free-Soil party, and supported Martin Van Buren for the Presidency against Mr. Cass.

In 1869 he took an active part in organizing the National Prohibition party, and has since that time been a prominent supporter of that organization, having been the nominee of that party for Governor of New Jersey in 1880. He is still actively engaged in that organization, and attended the National Convention of that party as a delegate to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President in 1884.

Mr. Ransom, from the time he opened his office in Somerville to the present time, has had a very large and extensive litigated practice. He has never had an office business; his work has been that of an advocate, and his practice had been very extensive in the various counties, in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court, Court of Errors and Appeals, and in the United States District and Circuit Courts.

The Law and Chancery reports will show that but few men in New Jersey have argued more causes in the higher courts for the last forty years than he. Mr. Ransom has been a laborious and painstaking lawyer, a man of great industry, who prepared his causes with care, and presented them to the court after thorough investigation of the law and the facts.

He is now engaged in the contest over the will of the late Elisha Ruckman, involving a very large estate, and although he is now seventy years of age, he performs as much work every day as he did when he commenced his practice.

He has led an active and useful life, and been an earnest worker in the Methodist Church.

JOHN LINN, son of Andrew Linn, was born at Harmonyvale, in Hardyston township, Sussex Co., N. J., May 15, 1821. He received an academic education, and entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, and graduated there in the class of 1841. He then entered the law-office of Daniel Haines, at Hamburg, and read law under him until he was elected Governor of the State, when he entered the office of ex-Governor William Pennington, at Newark, and remained there until he was licensed as an attorney at November term, 1844. He took his counselor's license at October term, 1848. Upon being admitted as an attorney he opened his office at Deckertown, in the county of Sussex, and practiced there until the spring of 1850, when he went to Wisconsin, with the idea of settling there, was admitted to practice in all the courts of that State, but only remained for six months, and returned to New Jersey, and opened his office at Newton, in Sussex County, in the fall of 1850.

There he became a rival of the Hon. Thomas N. McCarter, now of Newark, and one of the leading lawyers of the State. Mr. Linn and Mr. McCarter were two of the leading lawyers of Sussex County, and by their practice in the higher courts at Trenton became widely known throughout the State as two very able lawyers. Mr. McCarter removed to Newark about 1866, and in 1867 Mr. Linn, removed to the city of New York, and opened a law-office there, and remained two or three years, and then removed to Jersey City.

I quote a paragraph from the "Sussex and Warren History" in relation to him,—

"Mr. Linn was for many years one of the leading members of the Sussex bar, being well up in his profession, a good speaker and an able advocate and attorney; he is also a sound and safe counselor. A member of the present (Sussex) bar says: 'Mr. Linn stood very high while he lived in Newton, both as a lawyer and a man. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, a man of very dignified appearance and manners, and at one time was one of the reform commissioners of the State of New Jersey.' He was a candidate for member of Congress from the Fourth District against Andrew J. Rogers, in 1862. While here he was engaged in most of the important litigations of Sussex County."

The fame of Mr. Linn followed him to Hudson County. He formed a partnership with Joseph C. Potts, Esq., which lasted for some years, and he then took as a partner Robert O. Babbitt, Esq., who had been a student in his office; he is now without a partner. Immediately upon his coming to Jersey City, Mr. Linn entered upon a large and lucrative practice. He has been engaged in many of the most important causes arising in the county of Hudson, and in many others which have originated in the northern part of the State.

Being himself interested in iron-mining, he has been much consulted in mining interests, also in railroad litigation, and he has lately carried some very important causes in the United States Courts and the highest courts of the State. He is a student of literature, a hard law-student, well versed in all the principles of the law, and being a good debater and able advocate, he holds a high position at the New Jersey bar.

GEORGE W. CASSEDY is a son of Col. Samuel Cassedy, and was born in Jersey City, July 5, 1824, was educated in the schools of New York City, and prepared for college there, and entered Columbia College, and graduated at that institution of learning; studied law in the office of his father, and was admitted to the bar at the July term, 1845, and has resided in Jersey City ever since.

He was appointed city clerk of Jersey City in 1850, and held the office until 1865, when he was elected county clerk of Hudson County, which embraced also the office of register of deeds and mortgages.

As city clerk and county clerk, Mr. Cassedy was very efficient and painstaking, and his offices were models of accuracy, every paper and book being kept in the neatest manner, and all regulated with a system which was admirable. When he retired from office, in 1870, he took up the practice of the law, and is still engaged in it.

ROBERT GILCHRIST,¹ was born in Jersey City, Aug. 21, 1825, and has always resided there. His early education was obtained at the private school kept by Mr. Russell, and afterwards by Mr. William L. Dickinson in Jersey City, except three years spent at Crane's Academy, at Caldwell, Essex Co. His classical studies at school were limited, consisting, as he informs us, of "a little Latin and no Greek." Soon after leaving school, and about 1843, he entered the law-office of the late Joseph Annin, and at once became a close student both of law and literature, and formed the habits of unremitting application which he has ever since maintained. He completed his law studies with the late Isaac W. Scudder, and at the term of April, 1847, was admitted to the bar. He immediately became a partner in the law practice of Mr. Scudder, who was then one of our leading lawyers, which connection continued till 1857.

Mr. Gilchrist was elected to the Legislature of 1857, as a member of Assembly. At the breaking out of the civil war he joined the three months' men in response to President Lincoln's proclamation, and proceeded to Alexandria as captain of Company F

¹ By W. B. Williams, Esq.

(Montgomery Guard), Second Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers. At the time of the battle of Bull Run he was with his regiment, which formed part of the brigade under command of Gen. Theodore Runyon, then stationed at Alexandria. During the war Mr. Gilchrist was a staunch and active supporter of the government. In 1866 he ran on the Democratic ticket for Congress against George Halsey, but was defeated. In June, 1869, he was appointed by Governor Randolph as Attorney-General of the State, and in January, 1870, was reappointed for a full term of five years, during which some of the most important questions of local and State interest were agitated, including riparian rights and corporate franchises, on which subjects he watched and advocated the public interests with great industry and success.

Since 1875 he has remained in Jersey City engaged in private practice, and has been concerned in the most important controversies in our courts.

JOHN DUNN LITTELL was born at Port Richmond, Staten Island, Oct. 19, 1824. He was the son of Judge Richard D. Littell, who was an associate judge of Richmond County, N. Y., for many years.

He studied law with ex-Chancellor Williamson, at Elizabeth, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the July term, 1847, and as a counselor at the February term, 1855. He commenced the practice of the law at Hoboken, and was the first lawyer to settle there. He was city clerk of Hoboken, was appointed prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson County by Governor Price in 1855, and served one term of five years; he had previously served for two terms in the House of Assembly, and was instrumental in establishing the First Reformed Dutch Church of Hoboken, and died at Hibernia Fl., Feb. 19, 1861, where he had gone to restore his health, impaired by long-continued professional duties. He left a widow and three children, one of them being Bloomfield Littell, a member of the bar of the city of New York.

No more fitting tribute can be given to his memory than to make a few extracts from the published addresses made by the members of the bar on the occasion of his death.

Jacob Weart, the chairman of the committee on resolutions, said,—

"It is to be said of our departed brother that in his professional pursuits he had a high moral tone of character; he was eminently entitled to our confidence and respect, and we loved him and were endeared to him for his excellent social qualities.

"Mr. President, he brought to his profession a fair legal mind, accompanied with great patience and industry; and I think it can be said of him that there was no man at the bar who was more industrious in bringing out the facts of a case than he.

"As public prosecutor of the county for five years, and his term having closed less than a year ago, I think it can be said of him that his labors were of great value to the court and county at large. He was a faithful prosecutor; in season and out of season he was always found at his post of duty, and no public business ever failed for want of his attention; and while he was very watchful and zealous for the public good, he had a just regard for the rights of the criminal caught in the meshes of the law, and, I think, it cannot be said that he ever prosecuted through malice, hatred or revenge, and as a public prosecutor he is entitled to our grateful remembrance, and that the court, the bar and the community at large have sustained a great loss.

"But I do not wish to speak alone of him as a member of the bar, but as a Christian man and an officer of the church; and, as I said of him before he was zealous and arduous, 'in season and out of season,' in the performance of his duties to the church, and the Christian community have met with a sad loss, and while we mourn his early departure from our midst, we have great consolation in the belief that he has entered a better and brighter world than this."

Jacob R. Wortendyke "rose to second the motion for the adoption of the resolutions just offered. He could heartily concur with what had already been so well expressed concerning the professional fidelity and the moral and social excellence of our lamented and departed friend.

"It is true, that to many of us it had some time ago seemed, in his case, the citadel of life was being endangered by the approaches of an insidious disease, and we had learned that recently his sickness had taken a more alarming phase; yet it seems difficult to realize the event that has just been announced, that Mr. Littell is no more on earth, so tenacious are we of the things we value in life."

Mr. Wortendyke said "that he had seen much of his departed friend, engaged in the prosecution of his professional duties at this bar, and could bear testimony that those duties seemed to be always performed with zeal, fidelity and industry. But he (Mr. Wortendyke) had the additional satisfaction of having had the privilege of seeing much of Mr. Littell, specially during the past year, in other relations and in the prosecution and discharge of other duties besides those of a member of the legal profession. Mr. Littell was, and has long been identified with the Church of the Redeemer, and highly prized his duties, privileges, obligations and enjoyments in this sphere of his useful life. He often spoke of and manifested his great interest in these things. And it is now, in the midst of our sadness on this occasion, a source of great consolation and thankfulness that while he felt, as he has long done, the ravages that disease was making upon his constitution, he could cherish and enjoy the Christian's hope."

FREDERICK BEASLEY OGDEN, a son of Elias B. D. Ogden, late a justice of the Supreme Court, was born at Paterson, July 20, 1827, received an academic edu-education, and entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, and graduated there in the class of 1847; studied law, and was admitted to the bar at July term, 1850, as an attorney, and as a counselor at February term, 1854.

He opened his office in Hoboken in December, 1853, and soon became one of the leading lawyers of that city, and has participated in many of the most important trials which have arisen there. He is a good and reliable office lawyer, and ranks fairly as an advocate, and has argued many important cases in all the higher courts of the State.

In politics he is a Democrat, and has served as mayor of Hoboken, and is now a judge of the District Court of Hoboken, which position he has held for several years, and is an upright judge.

GEORGE M. ROBESON was born at Oxford Terrace, N. J., in 1829; received an academic education; was graduated at Princeton College in 1847; studied law with the late Chief Justice Hornblower at Newark; was admitted to the bar in 1850; commenced the practice of the law in Jersey City, where he remained only for a short time, and then opened an office at Newark, and afterwards at Camden; was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of Camden County in 1858; was appointed Attorney-General of New Jersey in 1867, and served until he resigned, June 22, 1869, to accept the position of Secretary of the Navy tendered him by President Grant, which office he held until the expiration of President Grant's second term, March 4, 1877, when he again resumed the practice of the law at Camden, and was elected to the Forty-Sixth Congress and was re-elected to the Forty-Seventh Congress as a Republican.

In Congress he was one of the leaders of the House and very able in debate.

Attorney-General Robeson is a very forcible and able stump speaker, and a great favorite in Hudson County, and in every important political contest is sent for to address one of the large mass-meetings of the Republican party there. He is now in private life, engaged in the practice of his profession, and has recently been employed in some of the heaviest railroad litigation in the State.

RICHARD D. McCLELLAND was born in New Brunswick in 1824. He was a son of Rev. Dr. McClelland, one of the professors in Rutgers College, at that place, a man greatly distinguished for his learning and piety.

Richard in his early life possessed a roving disposition, and to avoid rigid parental restraint, left home and went to sea, which he followed for seven years, rising to the position of mate. Upon his return he took up the study of the law with Gen. E. R. V. Wright and Thomas W. James, who were then partners and had an office in the Darcy building. Upon the discovery of gold in California, young McClelland left his Blackstone and went to the gold diggings; but failing to make his fortune, he returned and took up the study of the law again, and was admitted as attorney at November term, 1851, and as a counselor at November term, 1854.

Mr. McClelland, when licensed, opened his office in Jersey City, and immediately entered into a large practice, and was appointed corporation attorney of Jersey City, May 16, 1854, which office he held fourteen years, and until the time of his death, which occurred Aug. 23, 1868. Three years before his death he was appointed corporation counsel of Hudson City. In 1868 he was appointed by Governor Parker prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson County, and at the time of his death held these three offices; and the bar of Hudson County, the mayor and aldermen of Jersey City and of the city of Hudson assembled and each passed appropriate resolutions to his memory; Judge Joseph D. Bedle, in ordering the bar resolutions entered upon the minutes of the court, said: "Mr. McClelland and myself came in contact officially at the time I came to this county, and in all my intercourse with him I always found him to be frank and candid, honest in his purpose and having a great deal of legal ability. The court, and all the members of the court, desire to say that these resolutions were but a just tribute of his memory, and that no one could know him as well as the court knew him without seeing that he was an honest and efficient prosecutor."

Mr. McClelland was well read in that branch of the law governing municipal corporations. He took special charge of the assessments in Jersey City, and during the fourteen years while he was corporation attorney not a single assessment for street or sewer improvements was set aside.

He was a Democrat in politics, but held office under both Democratic and Republican administrations of the city government, for the reason that his services were too valuable to the city to be dispensed with, and no more fitting tribute can be made to his memory than the announcement of this fact.

He married Miss Helen Crindell, and left her as his widow, and four children, and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss.

JACOB WEART,¹ third son of Spencer Stout Weart and Sarah (Garrison), his wife, was born at Hopewell, Mercer Co., N. J., June 8, 1829. A full sketch of the genealogy of the Weart family will be found in the "History of Mercer and Burlington Counties." Mr. Weart was educated at the common school, and at the age of nineteen years began the study of the law with Hon. John Mannen, afterwards president of the Senate, at Clinton, N. J. His legal studies were finished with Mercer Bausley, Esq., at present chief justice of the Supreme Court, and he was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the June term, 1852, and was made counselor at June term, 1855. At the term at which he was admitted as counselor Mr. Weart argued the case of Den. Ex Dem. Boekover vs. Post, reported in 1 Dutcher, 285.

¹Sketch by Hon. John A. Blair.

In the case of Durant vs. Banta, reported in 3 Dutcher, 624, Mr. Weart succeeded in establishing the important principle that "where a note is fairly executed, and without uary between the parties, the payee may sell it at any rate of discount he chooses, and the purchaser will have a right to recover the full amount of the note of any party legally liable upon it," overruling a contrary doctrine established by the case of Freeman vs. Brittin (2 Harr, 191), and which had been the law of this State for twenty years. This case and the case of Watkins vs. Kirkpatrick (2 Dutcher, 84), also argued by Mr. Weart, are regarded as having largely fixed and determined the law of commercial paper in this State.

During the Legislature of 1866 an act passed the House of Assembly regulating the police government of Jersey City. The bill was engrossed, signed by the Speaker, went to the Senate, where it was amended, returned to the House, where the Senate amendments were concurred in; but by some oversight the amendments failed to get incorporated in the bill. So the bill, signed by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, went to the Governor, who also signed it, but as it had originally passed the House without the amendments, in Mr. Weart's opinion, the law as it was signed was legal and enforceable, and that no investigation could go behind the signatures of the proper officers to the law. Legal proceedings, based on this opinion, were thereupon instituted to carry the law into effect, and the court, in the case of the State, Pangborn et al. vs. Young (3 Vroom, 29), sustained Mr. Weart's view of the case. The political feeling which entered into this case made it one of a good deal of local interest. This was the beginning of the Police Commission in Jersey City.

Mr. Weart was retained by the county of Hudson in the important cases of the State, the Morris and Essex Railroad Company vs. the Commissioner of railroad taxation, and the State, United Railroad and Canal Company vs. Commissioner of railroad taxation, to establish the legality of the law of 1873, under which these companies were subjected to taxation. These cases are reported in 8 Vroom, 228-244.

The case of Galway vs. Fullerton (2 C. E. Green, 898), in which Mr. Weart, sitting as master for the chancellor, wrote the opinion, established a very important principle of equity law, which has been relied upon and confirmed by many subsequent cases.

On the 21st of March, 1867, on the recommendation of B. G. Clarke, James S. Davenport, Dr. Gautier, David Smithe, Francis Jenkins and other prominent citizens, Mr. Weart was commissioned by President Johnson as collector of internal revenue for the Fifth Revenue District of New Jersey, comprising the counties of Hudson and Essex. He held the office until 1871, about four years, when he resigned, having while holding said office collected about ten millions of dollars. As an evidence of the estimation in which Mr. Weart was held by his neighbors, the gentlemen who asked for his appointment voluntarily furnished his bonds, which were very heavy.

On the retirement of John Milton Holmes as pastor of the Congregational Church owing to his failing health, the church agreed to pay him annually fifteen hundred dollars, and in addition four thousand dollars a year to the pastor. No one was willing to act as treasurer of the church; but Mr. Weart although deeply engaged in other matters, was induced to act as treasurer temporarily, but which really ran into a service of years. Mr. Weart advanced the fifteen hundred dollars to Mr. Holmes out of his own pocket for six months, the church not being able to pay the same, and then organized a volunteer association, through whose agency and efforts the fifteen hundred dollars were paid annually to Mr. Holmes during the balance of his life, and the advances made by Mr. Weart were repaid by this association.

Mr. Weart was counsel for the Board of Chosen Freeholders for two years, and as such officer took great interest in the legislation affecting the county. He spent two winters in Trenton looking after the affairs of the county, and during that period drafted and had enacted probably twenty different acts, all of which are still upon the statute book, among the most important of which is the law creating a board of health and vital statistics in Hudson County, and the law equalizing taxation.

Mr. Weart and Hon. John Cassidy organized and started the Bank of Jersey City (now the Second National Bank), and Mr. Weart was a director and the counsel for the former bank for many years. He was largely instrumental in establishing the Jersey City Law Library, and has been its president ever since its organization. He is a member of the American Bar Association, has always taken part in its meetings since his membership, and has been one of its governing council (there being but one from each State) for the last four years.

In 1872, Mr. Weart published in the daily press a series of articles warning the people of Jersey City of the dangerous character of the rapidly growing debt, and the Hon. Dudley S. Gregory and Peter Bentley, Sr., published similar articles. These publications resulted in the formation of the "Committee of Twenty-eight," as it was then known, which committee appointed a sub-committee, composed of Messrs. Weart, P. Bentley, Sr., and Dr. J. M. Cornelison, who succeeded in getting the act of 1873 passed, greatly modifying the dangerous powers created by the charter of 1870. In 1872, Mr. Weart published a scheme for the government of municipalities, which has attracted much attention. In a public speech delivered at the court-house in 1873, at a meeting of citizens, Mr. Weart first called public attention to the important subject of railroad property exempt from taxation in Jersey City, which has since that time been so thoroughly ventilated and partially remedied. This address was published in pamphlet form.

Once, on the occasion of a visit by Mr. Weart to his home, his mother called his attention to the neglected grave of John Hart, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, who was buried in a field graveyard near by, with no stone or other memorial to mark the place of his interment, and suggesting the importance of doing something to keep his resting-place from oblivion. Mr. Weart, acting on the patriotic suggestion of his aged mother, at once drafted a bill making an appropriation to erect a monument to Mr. Hart's memory. The Legislature immediately passed the bill, and appropriated six hundred dollars for that purpose, which was afterwards, by voluntary subscriptions, increased to eleven hundred dollars. Mr. Weart was appointed chairman of the committee having the matter in charge, and on the 4th day of July, A.D. 1864, a monument was reared and dedicated with appropriate and imposing ceremonies over the spot where reposed the ashes of John Hart (his remains having been removed to the Hopewell Cemetery), one whose memory the lovers of liberty will not be likely ever to forget.

In 1881, on the occurrence of the death of President Garfield, Mr. Weart, as chairman of a committee consisting of himself, Hon. John J. Tolley and John M. Jones, Esq., prepared in handsome form a memorial volume containing the public addresses and sermons delivered, and an account of the action taken and resolutions passed by the different public bodies of Jersey City; and thus is preserved in permanent shape the sad memorials of one of the most tragic events recorded in the history of the world.

As a lawyer, Mr. Weart, as the reports show, has been an active, laborious and painstaking one. His presentation of causes has indicated research, and has shown a firm grasp of the fundamental and governing principles of the law, and his industry has been rewarded with the possession of a large and respectable clientage. In his intercourse with the bar Mr. Weart is free, courteous, obliging and sincere. As a citizen, Mr. Weart is active, generous, public-spirited, and in full sympathy and accord with the progressive spirit and advanced opinions of the times.

In politics Mr. Weart is a strong and ardent Republican. He married Catharine J. Van Winkle, daughter of Walling W. Van Winkle, of Passaic, N. J., and has two children,—a son, Spencer Weart who is a member of the bar, and a daughter, Ella Weart, now a young lady.

JOHN P. VROOM, son of ex-Governor Peter D. Vroom, received an academic education, entered Rutgers College, at New Brunswick, and graduated there in the class of 1849. He was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1852, and as a counselor at November term, 1857. He commenced the practice of his profession at Trenton, N. J., and removed to Jersey City in 1856, and opened his office, and continued to practice there until the time of his death, which occurred in the latter part of 1862 or the early part of 1863.

The Supreme Court appointed him law reporter in 1862, and he entered upon the discharge of his duties, and died before he issued his first volume, and his father was appointed reporter in his place, and held the office until his death, when his son, Garret D. W. Vroom, was appointed in his place, and still holds the office, and sixteen volumes of Vroom's reports have already appeared in the twenty-two years during which the office of reporter has been held by the Vroom family.

John P. Vroom died too early in life to win much distinction at the bar, and he had only been a counselor for five years; but he inherited his father's strong legal mind; he was a hard student, well versed in the principles of the law, and bid fair to win distinction in his profession. His early death was deeply lamented.

JACOB RYNIER WORTENDYKE was born at Pascaek, Bergen Co., N. J., Nov. 27, 1818, and died at Jersey City, Nov. 7, 1868, in the fiftieth year of his age. He was descended from a respectable Holland ancestry, of which he was justly proud. From his earliest childhood he manifested a great desire for study, and took up the study of the classics with the Rev. Isaac D. Cole, at Tappan town, and subsequently pursued the same in the school of Mr. A. Dockson, at Paterson, and finished at home under the care of his pastor, the Rev. John Manly. In the fall of 1837 he entered the junior class of Rutgers College, and graduated in 1839 with honor, and particularly excelled in the severe studies of philosophy and mathematics. He decided to take up the study of the law, and in order to acquire the means for his legal education he turned his attention to teaching. He taught at Piermont, at Saddle River, at Hackensack and at Spring Valley—ten years in all. While teaching school he took up the study of the Hebrew language, with the assistance of the Rev. Dr. John S. Mabon, and mastered it so far as to translate the book of Genesis into English. He also kept up the study of Latin and Greek, and as long as he lived he used nothing but the Greek Testament on the Sabbath at church. He read law with the Hon. Manning M. Knapp, now a justice of the Supreme Court, and completed his study with the Hon. A. O. Zabriskie, afterwards chancellor, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1853, and counselor at February term, 1859. Upon coming to the bar, he formed a partnership with Mr. Zabriskie, which lasted until Mr. Wortendyke was elected, in the fall of 1856, to the Thirty-fifth Congress, and took his seat in December, 1857.

His election to Congress was a great honor to him. The Democratic Convention had met to nominate a candidate for Congress, and he was elected chairman of the convention. The convention could not agree upon a candidate, and adjourned to a future day. When the convention again assembled they failed to agree upon a candidate, and after a long struggle a delegate proposed to nominate the chairman of the convention, and his conduct as presiding officer had been so fair and just to all parties that he was nominated by acclamation, and served with distinction in Congress.

Jacob Weart
"

James Flemming

He was an alderman in Jersey City, and for a long time one of the water commissioners and president of the board. As a water commissioner he did a vast amount of gratuitous work for the city of Jersey City, and the citizens of Jersey City owe him a lasting debt of gratitude for this service. He was also one of the riparian commissioners, and did a valuable service for the State in that board.

He was one of the trustees of Rutgers College, and served with marked distinction, being the gentleman in whom the trustees placed the greatest confidence in the investment of the college funds, and he was constantly consulted about all the interests of the institution.

He was very zealous in the work of the church, and in the Sabbath-school was always at his post of duty. He was a member of the General Synods of 1860 and of 1866, and was regarded as one of the pillars of the Reformed Church. He was a very able lawyer, and took high rank in his profession, and at the time of his death he was counsel to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County. No higher eulogium can be paid to his professional standing than a reference to the fact that on the death of Judge E. B. Dayton Ogden, the members of the bar of his judicial district, without distinction of party, petitioned the Governor for his appointment as a justice of the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy.

The petition was signed by every lawyer of any prominence in the counties of Hudson, Bergen and Passaic, which constituted the judicial district; but Governor Parker decided to honor one of his own townsmen, and sent the commission to Judge Joseph D. Bedle. In 1865 he was elected president of the Fifth Ward Savings-Bank, and held that position at the time of his death.

He married Susan Jane, daughter of Mr. Nicholas Doremus, of Pompton Plains. His widow and four children are still living—three sons and one daughter.

WASHINGTON B. WILLIAMS, one of the leading lawyers of Hudson County, was born in Jersey City, Aug. 18, 1832. His early education was acquired at the school of William L. Dickenson, at that time quite celebrated in Jersey City, and he afterwards completed a full collegiate course of classics and mathematics, under special tutorship, at Solomon Jenner's classical and business school, in Henry Street, New York City.

He studied law with the late Peter Bentley, Esq., in Jersey City, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1853, and as counselor at February term, 1857. He opened his office in Jersey City, and has practiced there ever since. At one time he was in partnership with James Fleming, and is now in partnership with Elijah S. Cowles.

Mr. Williams has always had a very large practice, and has been engaged in many of the most important trials which have originated in Hudson County, and he has practiced in all of the highest courts of the State. He is regarded as a sound and able lawyer.

His services have been greatly sought as referee, and he has tried and decided many important causes, and his decisions have given him the confidence of the court and the bar. He has also been often selected by the Court of Chancery as receiver to wind up broken savings-banks and other institutions falling into bankruptcy, and in the discharge of these duties he has given the greatest satisfaction.

He was one of the founders of the Jersey City Law Library, and has always been one of its trustees, and has taken a deep interest in its welfare.

Mr. Williams' reputation is not confined to his native county and State, but is widely known throughout the nation and abroad. He made one extended trip over Europe some years ago, and a shorter one more recently. He is a member of the American Bar Association, and at the national convention of the Bankers' Association, at Saratoga, in 1882, he delivered an address on "savings-banks," which was a valuable paper, and published in full in their volume of proceedings; and again, at their convention at Saratoga, in 1884, he read a paper on the "Bankrupt Law," which is also published in full in their proceedings.

He is a trustee of the Provident Institution for Savings, in Jersey City, and takes an active interest in its management.

In society he is much beloved, is a warm friend, and takes an active interest in those matters which tend to promote the welfare of the community.

JAMES FLEMMING, JR., the oldest son of James Flemming, and a grandson of Isaac Edge, was born in Jersey City, January 24, 1834. He received an academic education, attending first the old school in Sussex Street, and he afterwards graduated at the High School in the city of New York, and prepared to enter the university, but instead thereof took up the study of medicine, which he pursued for a short time, and then entered the law-office of Edgar B. Wakeman, Esq., and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the February term, 1855, and as a counselor at the June term, 1858. Upon coming to the bar he entered into partnership with his late preceptor, Edgar B. Wakeman, Esq., which continued for some years. He then formed a partnership with Washington B. Williams, Esq., and upon the termination of the same he opened an office by himself, and has since conducted his law business alone.

The first distinction which Mr. Flemming won after he came to the bar was the defense of Margaret Hogan, who was indicted for the murder of her infant child. John P. Vroom, Esq., was associated with him, they having been assigned by the court to defend the woman. Mr. Flemming brought into this cause all of his youthful ardor and zeal. He was untiring in research for every scrap of evidence which would tend to throw light on the woman's innocence, and so able and thorough was the defense that the woman was acquitted, and her counsel were highly commended by the public press of that day.

In Mr. Flemming's riper years he engaged in the defense of Jennie E. Smith and Covert D. Bennett, indicted for the murder of Mrs. Smith's husband. Before the coroner's jury Mr. Flemming and Mr. Edgar B. Wakeman appeared for the prisoners, and upon their defense Messrs. Charles H. Winfield, William T. Hoffman, Gilbert Collins and Mr. Flemming appeared for the defense. This was one of the most celebrated murder trials of modern times. The evidence was entirely circumstantial, and the defendants were convicted of murder in the first degree. The cause went to the Court of Errors and Appeals, where the verdict was set aside, and upon a second trial they were acquitted. All these gentlemen served without fee or reward, all bore their personal expenses, but Mr. Flemming advanced from his private purse a considerable sum to defray the expenses of the trials, which lasted over eighteen months. A subscription was raised in New York City and sent to Rev. Dr. Spencer M. Rice, which went to defray the expense of printing the case and other minor charges, and the balance was handed over to Mrs. Smith and Mr. Bennett when they were liberated from the prison.

While all the counsel in the cause bore their full share of responsibility, none were more active and zealous than Mr. Flemming, and it is understood that the successful exceptions upon which the verdict was set aside originated with him.

It can be truly said of Mr. Flemming that in the defense of a person on trial for murder, no fee however large, could incite him to greater zeal and energy in the defence of the case than the life of the prisoner placed at the bar of the court; and in both of the murder trials in which he has been engaged he has been successful.

Mr. Flemming has conducted some very important civil suits, which have gone through all the courts of the State, and in which he has won much distinction. Notably among them was the Sisson and Donnelly case, and one other, where the validity of a bond was called in question. The defense claimed that the bond was a forgery. The trial was long and protracted, and at the proper time Mr. Flemming sprung the trap which ruined the cause of the plaintiff, and terminated the suit. The bond was stamped by an internal revenue stamp issued by the government some two years after the bond was claimed to have been executed. This Mr. Flemming ascertained. He visited Washington and got the necessary proofs, which he kept secret until it was divulged in open court, and then no time was allowed to his adversary to ward off the blow.

Mr. Flemming is fond of foreign travel, and has visited Europe on two occasions, spending some time there on his last trip with his family, on which occasion he corresponded with the Evening Journal of Jersey City, and his letters in that paper covered a period of many months, descriptive of the various parts of Europe, and particularly of the Passion Play, which he witnessed at Ober-Ammergau. These letters were instructive and highly enjoyed by the citizens of Jersey City. He has also written considerably for the papers and magazines on the topics of the day, and he has also delivered some lectures.

He has never held office, but has been very zealous in the welfare of his native city, and has always been willing to devote his time and means to press forward urgent and necessary reforms and procure needful legislation.

He married Miss Sarah Latou, daughter of Robert Latou, Esq., of New York City, and has three children,—one son, Robert, and two daughters, named, respectively, Alice and Sallie, all of whom reside with their parents in Jersey City.

CHARLES HARDENBURG WINFIELD was born at the town of Deer Park, near Port Jervis, Orange Co., N. Y., Nov. 8, 1829; was prepared for college at Doekertown, N. J.; entered Rutgers College, at New Brunswick, in 1849, and graduated in 1852; studied law with the late Chancellor A. O. Zabriskie, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1855, and as a counselor at February term, 1860, and took up the practice of the law in Jersey City, where he is now in active practice.

He was elected to the State Senate as a Democrat in 1865, and served a term of three years. As Senator he had an opportunity of performing an act of justice to his late preceptor in the law. Mr. Zabriskie had opposed with great energy the extensions of the monopoly grants of the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, and when nominated for chancellor by Governor Marcus L. Ward his confirmation was in great doubt, the Senate being Democratic, and the railroad power of the State being arrayed against him, and his confirmation was only secured by the vote of Mr. Winfield—a handsome reward rendered to the gentleman who had directed his course of education for the bar.

Mr. Winfield prepared a "History of Land Titles in Hudson County," in 1872, a book of great usefulness; but his most enduring monument is his "History of Hudson County," published in 1874. This history was prepared with great care and pains, and in it are treasured up with great care the early traditions of the county, and the work is regarded as high authority.

He has recently published a law book entitled "Adjudged Words and Phrases," which appeared in 1882, and has been so well received by the American bar that the first edition is already exhausted, and a second edition is now going to press.

The literary work of Mr. Winfield has engrossed so much of his time that he has not been able to devote that attention to commercial law and general practice on the civil side of the courts as that branch of the law demands, but he has argued many important civil suits, and one of the most celebrated is the case of Pangborn vs. Young, reported in 3 Vroom's R. 29.

On the criminal side of the court, Mr. Winfield's practice has been very extensive, and he has been engaged in nearly all the great criminal trials which have occupied the attention of our courts for the last twenty years. One of the most celebrated was the trial of Jennie E. Smith and Covert D. Bennett for the murder of Mrs. Smith's husband, reported in 12 Vroom's R. 370.

He is now prosecuting the pleas of Hudson County, having been appointed by Governor Ludlow in 1883. In this office he is performing his duties acceptably to the people of the county.

Mr. Winfield has also won distinction as a stump orator, and in this line he has but few peers in the Democratic party of this State. In the campaign of 1880 he was employed by the Democratic National Committee to canvass what were considered doubtful States for Hancock and English, and in this capacity he spent a month in the State of Indiana and a considerable time in the States of New York and Connecticut. It is also a fact worthy of note that the Republican National Committee had employed Maj. Z. K. Pangborn, Editor of the Jersey City Evening Journal, to canvass the State of Indiana also. Maj. Pangborn is one of the most effective stump orators in the Republican party, and these two orators were selected by their respective parties to canvass the same State on opposite sides.

On Mr. Winfield's return from Indiana he addressed a great Democratic meeting at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, in company with ex-Governor Seymour and ex-Governor Hoffman.

In all his undertakings he has been eminently successful; he is now only in the prime of his life, and further fields of usefulness are doubtless before him.

GARRICK M. OLMSTED was born at Montrose, Susquehanna Co. Pa., Dec. 8, 1830. He received an academic education, and graduated at Lafayette College, at Easton, Pa. Immediately after his graduation he entered the law-office of Alexander H. Reeder, who afterwards became so famous as the Territorial Governor of Kansas. Mr. Olmsted removed to Jersey City, and entered the office of Gen. E. R. V. Wright, completing his course of study with the late J. Dickinson Miller, Esq., and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the February term, 1856, and as counselor at the February term, 1868. After he was licensed he continued in the office of Mr. Miller for a time, and then opened an office on his own account.

Mr. Olmsted never sought a court practice, but confined his attention to what is termed an office practice; in this he was very useful, and excelled to an eminent degree, and had a large clientage. He was well read in all those branches of the law which appertain to office practice, and could be relied upon in every branch of business pertaining to that practice.

Mr. Olmsted was a Democrat in politics, and was frequently spoken of as surrogate of the county, but he never cared to enter into a contest for the office, as his whole nature was of a retiring and modest disposition.

He married Miss Virginia Schadale, who survives him as his widow. Mr. Olmsted died May 7, 1881, very suddenly, with scarcely an hour's sickness, and his early death was deeply lamented.

JAMES HARVEY LYONS, was born at St. Mary's Isle Parish, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, October, 1828. He was educated at Salem, N. Y., and was admitted to the New York bar and afterwards the New Jersey bar as an attorney at February term, 1856, and as a counselor at February term, 1859, and died at Hoboken, Nov. 21, 1874 from the results of an injury he received from being thrown from his carriage.

He was a practitioner at the Hudson County bar for a period of eighteen years. Upon the death of Mr. McClellan he was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson County by Governor Ward, and held the office for a few months.

Mr. Lyons was an able lawyer. A hard student, he gathered around him a large law library, and was for several years one of the leading lawyers of Hoboken, having a large court and office practice. He was an able advocate, and frequently appeared in the highest courts of the State.

CHARLES H. VOORHIS, of Jersey City, was born at Spring Valley, Bergen Co., N. J., March 13, 1833; graduated at Rutgers College with first honor in 1853; admitted as attorney 1856, counselor 1859; located in Jersey City; resided in Hackensack from 1859 to 1881; was one of the incorporators of the First National Bank of Jersey City in 1864, and its notary till 1876; several years trustee of Burlington College, member of standing committee of diocese of Northern New Jersey, treasurer of convocation of Jersey City, and trustee of the General Theological Seminary; in 1869 was elected into the Hackensack Improvement Commission; was its president till 1872, its treasurer till 1873. During his term it graded the streets, paved the sidewalks, and built all the sewers. He was one of the founders of the Hackensack Academy, also of Christ Church, and gave the lot on which its rectory stands; organized the First National Bank of Hackensack in 1871, the Hackensack Savings-Bank in 1873; was president of both till October, 1879, and owned a majority of their capital stock; organized the Hackensack Water Company in 1873, and completed its works in 1874; was delegate to the National Republican Convention in 1864; appointed law judge for Bergen County in 1868, and elected member of Congress as a Republican, by the Fifth District, in 1878.

Judge Voorhis was one of the leading lawyers in the transaction of the law business of the county of Bergen, and the Law and Chancery reports will show that he has argued very many important cases in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court, and Court of Errors and Appeals, and was one of the foremost men in Bergen County, but undertook the enterprises in which he was engaged at an unfortunate time in the financial history of the county. All the enterprises in which he engaged were started after 1870, and were overtaken by the great financial crash of 1873 and by the greater distress which prevailed for three years before resumption of specie payments of 1879, which resulted in the overthrow of the institutions which he had founded and wrecked his private fortune. But Judge Voorhis is still in the prime of vigorous manhood, with none of his powers abated, and has started out to achieve a new success, which it is hoped will be more enduring.

ABRAHAM S. JACKSON is descended from the widely-known Jackson family, which formerly resided at Passaic, in Passaic County, N. J., his grandmother having recently died at Newark after she had passed her one hundredth birthday. He is a son of James Jackson, received an academic education, entered Columbia College, and graduated there in the class of 1853. He studied law with the late Chancellor Zabriskie, was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1856, and as a counselor at November term, 1859.

Upon coming to the bar he retained some time with Chancellor Zabriskie, and then opened an office on his own account in Jersey City, and continues to practice there. He is a good lawyer, but his advancement in his profession was greatly retarded by ill health from disease contracted in the Sunday-school room in St. Matthew's Church, Jersey City, the room being in the basement of a stone building, and very damp. Mr. Jackson devoted much of his time to his Sabbath-school, and still continues the work. After several years of lingering sickness, he is again restored to quite good health.

PHILIP J. RYALL was born at Freehold, in Monmouth County. His father was Daniel B. Ryall, one of the prominent lawyers of Monmouth County. He received an academic education, and entered Rutgers College, at New Brunswick, and graduated there in the class of 1854. He entered the office of ex-Governor Joseph D. Bedle, at Freehold, and studied law with him, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1857, and as a counselor at November term, 1860.

Upon coming to the bar he opened his office in Jersey City, and practiced there a few years, when his health gave way, and he was obliged to return to Freehold, where he died early in life.

The early death of Mr. Ryall was deeply lamented, as he bid fair to become an eminent lawyer and a very worthy man. He made many warm friends during his short stay in Jersey City, and was highly respected in Freehold, where he closed his short career.

NATHANIEL COWPERTHWAITESLAIGHT¹ was born at Tuckerton, Burlington Co., N. J., Feb. 26, 1837. His father's name, Borat Slaughter; his mother's name, Ruth; her maiden-name was Cowperthwaite.

He received an academic education and graduated from the Philadelphia High School. He next devoted himself to the study of law in Jersey City, in the office of Edgar B. Wakenan, and was admitted as attorney in New Jersey at February term, 1858, and as counselor at February term, 1861.

On coming to the bar he opened an office in Jersey City, and by his industry, energy and ability soon acquired an active and flattering practice.

He was a member of the General Assembly of New Jersey from Jersey City, for the year 1860, and by the ability shown in his office as legislator, and his zeal in the discharge of his legislative work, he gained a reputation honorable alike to himself and pleasing to his friends. From this time on his practice largely increased.

In 1863 he formed a partnership with William A. Lewis, Esq., which continued up to the time of Mr. Slaughter's death, in February, 1868.

Mr. Slaughter's health having become seriously impaired with pulmonary trouble in the fall of 1867, he visited the warmer climate of France, and after a struggle with disease died at Nice, France, Feb. 13, 1868. His remains are interred in the cemetery at Morristown, N. J., beside his wife and son, whom he had survived. His daughter, Sara Taylor Slaughter, has since died. His wife's maiden-name was Sarah Taylor; she was the daughter of David Taylor, Esq., of Jersey City.

Mr. Slaughter was a member of the Methodist Church and a zealous Christian. In a letter written home from Nice just before his death, he writes: "Though far away from home, I am as near Heaven in infidel France as in Christian America," thus beautifully exhibiting his resignation and trust.

Had he not been cut off in early life, Mr. Slaughter gave promise of taking a commanding position at the bar, having already acquired the esteem of both the bench and the bar in his short period of successful practice.

LANSING ZABRISKIE, eldest son of the late Chancellor Zabriskie, was born at Hackensack, N. J., April 29, 1837. He was educated at Columbia College, New York, studied law in the office of his father and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1859, and as counselor at November term, 1862. After coming to the bar, he commenced practice in Jersey City with his father, and has been in practice there for the last twenty-five years, and is now the head of the firm of L. & A. Zabriskie. He has resided for several years at Rahway, N. J.

¹Sketch by Hon. William A. Lewis.

His practice is principally in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court and Court of Errors and Appeals. He is largely engaged in the settlement of estates and the care of large trust properties. His ability as a lawyer has brought him a large clientele.

Mr. Zabriskie is fond of travel. Some years ago he visited the wild and historic frontiers of North Carolina. He afterwards made a visit to Mexico, and spent some time in the city of Mexico. He has just returned from a trip around the world, which took seven months, and he enjoyed his trip very much.

HENRY HARRISON WOOLSEY was born at Pennington, Mercer Co., N. J., April 1, 1837. He was the son of Ephraim Woolsey, who descended from George Woolsey, who came from Jamaica, L. I., about 1700, and settled at Maidenhead. Henry received his academic education at the Pennington Seminary; entered Princeton College, and graduated there in the class of 1856; studied law with the Hon. Edward W. Scudder, now a justice of the Supreme Court, and was admitted to the bar at June term, 1859, and opened his office in Hoboken, and practiced there until he joined the Fifth Regiment of New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, enlisted for three years in August, 1861. He was commissioned by Governor Olden as second lieutenant in Company E, and mustered into service Aug. 28, 1861, and made acting commissary of the regiment; commissioned first lieutenant May 9, 1862; was commissioned as captain of Company H, June 6, 1863. He participated in the following battles: Siege of Yorktown, Williamsburgh, Fair Oaks, Seven Pines, Savage Station, Glendale, Malvern Hill, first and second Bristow Station, Wapping Heights, McClellan's Fort, Mine Run, Cold Harbor, and before Petersburg he was wounded seriously Aug. 30, 1862, and returned home but recovered, and re-entered the service in the summer of 1863. He was in command of the regiment before Petersburg, June 17, 1864, and gallantly leading the same, received five different wounds, one of which proved fatal, and he died June 19, 1864.

He was provost marshal of the First District of New Jersey during April and May, 1864.

I take from a Trenton paper the following obituary notice:

"Woolsey.—On Sunday, 17th instant, near Petersburg, Va., of wounds received in the battle of the 18th, Capt. H. H. Woolsey, of the Fifth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, in the twenty-eighth year of his age."

The friends of that brave soldier, the late Capt. H. H. Woolsey, will be interested in the following letter written by Surgeon Edward Livingston Welling to his father, Dr. H. P. Welling, of Pennington:

"Hospital Third Division, Second Corps, near Petersburg, Va., June 19, 1864, 3.30 P. M.

"I write you, feeling extremely sad. Scarcely an hour has elapsed since I closed the eyes of Capt. H. H. Woolsey in death. He was wounded yesterday morning, at five o'clock, by a Mini-ball passing into his body just below the diaphragm, and entering some six or eight feet. I saw him when he arrived at the hospital, and had him removed immediately to my tent, where Dr. Vandewater, the surgeon of this regiment, and myself have been constantly with him. He has suffered much, and in the last night at two o'clock, swung to the back of his system, he has been insensible. He knew me up to that hour, and called me 'Ned.' Yesterday afternoon, as I sat beside him, he told me he could not live, and said: 'Remember me to my wife, tell her I die in a glorious cause. I feel that I have not lived in vain in this world, and for the world to come.' These were his last intelligent words. He died today at 2.30 P. M. as I was sitting beside him, with his hand in mine. I think God it was my privilege to have him near me and to witness his sufferings, bear his last message to his wife, and say that I had his eyes in death. His body is beside me as I write, and will be sent North by Rev. W. Knowles, who bears this to you."

It is known to most of our readers that the wife of Capt. Woolsey died on the 19th inst., and both lie in the same grave.

JAMES MANNERS WEART¹ was born in 1828, at Hopewell, Mercer Co., N. J., being the seventh son of Spencer S. Weart and Sarah Garrison, his wife. He was educated at the common schools of his neighborhood, and took up the study of the law with his brother, Jacob Weart, in Jersey City, and had not completed his course of reading when Fort Sumter was fired upon, in April, 1861. The President's proclamation was issued for seventy-five thousand volunteers to suppress the Rebellion on Monday, April 15, 1861. A call was issued on the afternoon of that day for a meeting at the Hudson House for Tuesday evening, April 16, 1861. This meeting was organized by electing Hon. Isaac W. Scudder chairman, and Thomas Potter, Esq., offered a resolution that a roll be opened for volunteers. Upon this resolution being passed, James M. Weart came forward as the first man to put down his name, and some thirty others followed immediately afterwards, amidst great enthusiasm, and the meeting gave such an impetus to the movement that the whole Second Regiment volunteered in a body a few days afterwards, and the companies were filled by volunteers who had never before belonged to any military organization.

Mr. Weart was the first man to volunteer from Hudson County, and this meeting is believed to have been the first organized meeting in the State, and if so, he was the first volunteer in the State. His brother, George W. Weart, was in business in New York City, and he volunteered also, and they both joined Company C, commanded by Capt. Frederick Grain, Jr.

While in the field Mr. Weart was the war correspondent of the Courier and Advertiser of Jersey City, and wrote many letters which were published in that paper. On his return he again resumed the study of law, was licensed at November term, 1861, and opened an office at Hoboken, where he continued to practice until September, 1862, when he was commissioned by Governor Olden as second lieutenant in Company H, commanded by Capt. Foster W. Van Kirk, in the Twenty-first Regiment, of nine months' volunteers, commanded by Col. Gilliam Van Houten.¹ Soon after the regiment reached the field Mr. Weart was transferred to the general's staff, and placed in command of an Ambulance Corps, which position he held until the regiment returned and was mustered out of service.

¹ It has not been our purpose to give sketches of the young men of the Hudson bar who have not, as yet, won some distinction, but no apology is needed in giving the sketch of this gallant and brave officer and the sketch of James M. Weart, the first volunteer from Hudson County.

In the fall of 1863, Mr. Weart removed to Independence, Iowa, and opened an office there for the practice of his profession. When the town was incorporated he was elected the first city clerk, and held the office until his death. He was appointed assistant secretary of the Iowa Senate, and afterwards elected secretary of the Senate. After serving his term out he was elected clerk of the Iowa House of Assembly, which office he held at the time of his death. He accidentally shot himself while out gunning for prairie chickens, and died in 1872, in the thirty-fourth year of his age.

WILLIAM T. HOFFMAN was born Nov. 8, 1836, in Middlesex County, N. J. He was educated at Freehold, N. J., and studied law with ex-Governor Joseph D. Belle, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1862, and as counselor at November term, 1872.

He prepared for college with the idea of studying for the ministry, but abandoned it for business, and chose the laborious profession of the law.

Upon coming to the bar he commenced his practice at Hightstown, and remained there until the spring of 1863, when he entered into the pay department of the United States army, and was stationed at Newberne, N. C., and Norfolk, Va., and held that position until the close of the war. He then commenced the practice of the law at Hoboken, and afterwards removed to Jersey City, and has been a practitioner at the Hudson County bar for the last sixteen years.

He was made president of the Board of Education of Hoboken, and held that position for three years, being the only Republican member of the board. He was appointed president judge of the Hudson County Court of Common Pleas April 1, 1873, and held that office for five years. He is a United States commissioner, and is now (1884) a member of the Republican State Committee and one of the executive committee of the State Committee.

While judge he presided over the Orphans' Court business of the county and presided at most of the criminal trials, and gave good satisfaction as a judge.

As a lawyer he is an able advocate, and his services are largely sought after in the defense of criminals, in which he displays great ability.

In politics he is an ardent Republican, and in the campaign of 1884 he was engaged in stumping the State of New Jersey for Blaine and Logan.

JOHN GARRICK was born at Bolton, England,

Nov. 15, 1841, and removed to Jersey City when he was six years old, and has resided there ever since. He was educated at St. Mary's College, Wilmington, Del., and St. Francis Xavier's College, New York City. He studied law with the Hon. Isaac W. Seudder, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at June term, 1862, and as a counselor at February term, 1869. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office in Jersey City, and has practiced there ever since.

In 1878 he was appointed by Governor McClellan a judge of the Second District Court of Jersey City, and served a term of five years. He is now secretary and treasurer of the Law Library of Jersey City.

Judge Garrick made an upright and capable judge; he is faithful to his professional duties, and has a large circle of warm friends.

ISAAC ROMAINE, son of John R. Romaine, was born in Jersey City; received an academic education; entered Rutgers College, and graduated there in the class of 1859; studied law in the office of the late Chancellor Zabriskie; was admitted to bar as an attorney at November term, 1862, and as a counselor at November term, 1865. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office in Jersey City, and continues to practice there.

He was president of the Board of Aldermen of the city of Bergen during the years 1869-70. He was corporation attorney of the city of Bergen during 1865-66-67.

He was a member of the Board of Education of Jersey City from 1880-82, and in 1883 he was again elected for two years.

Mr. Romaine has devoted his life to taking testimony in causes pending in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court and the United States Courts; his office is constantly crowded with suitors and their counsel engaged in the examination of witnesses, so that he has become very expert in that branch of the profession.

As a citizen he is highly respected, and he is filling a very useful sphere in Jersey City. He was elected, in November, 1884, to the House of Assembly from the Fifth District of Hudson County.

JONATHAN DIXON,²—This distinguished advocate and judge has lived in Jersey City since 1862. For the last ten years, during which he has been upon the bench, his judicial duties have been elsewhere performed; but from preference he has here retained his home, and has been and is thoroughly identified with Hudson County. He was born July 6, 1830, in Liverpool, England, of English stock. He was the second son of Jonathan Dixon, who came to this country while the son was yet a lad, and settled in New Brunswick, in this State, and died in Jersey City recently, leaving sons and daughters, all occupying useful and honorable stations in life, of whom one ¹Killed in the battle of Fredericksburg.

²Sketched by Hon. Gilbert Collins.

Wm A. Lewis.

only, Joseph M. Dixon, a successful lawyer in New York City, has since died. The widowed mother is still living. The family readily imbibed the spirit of institutions which they held in hearty sympathy, and it has been a surprise to many who have known Judge Dixon for years to learn that he is of foreign birth, so typical an American does he seem. He attended the public schools of New Brunswick and prepared for further education at home. He entered Rutgers College at the age of fifteen, maintained a high rank of scholarship throughout the entire course and was graduated in 1859, the valedictorian of his class. He has always held close relations with his college, which, in turn has delighted to honor him, its last distinction being the degree of Doctor of Laws. His only son is now in the junior year in the same institution. After graduation he read law, first, with Warren Hardenbergh; second, with George Dutton; and lastly with the late Robert Adrain, in New Brunswick, and being of slender means, taught special classes in a local academy while pursuing his legal studies. Admitted to the bar at November term, 1862, he came, almost an entire stranger, to Jersey City, and began the practice of law, at first with Edgar B. Wakeman, and afterwards for about two years by himself. In 1870 he formed a partnership with Gilbert Collins, who had been a law-student with him, and the firm of Dixon & Collins continued until his elevation to the bench, in April, 1875. To this post of honor and labor he was first appointed by Governor Belle, and re-appointed in 1882 by Governor Ludlow, both of them political opponents. In 1883, against his wishes, the Republican party named him as its choice for Governor. In a characteristic letter he accepted the nomination as part of a citizen's duty, and remained quietly at his place. It is a strange commentary on our political methods to note that while the "liquor interest" strongly opposed him because of certain of his judicial acts, the Prohibitionists ran a ticket of their own, and that while no public man in our State has ever more clearly shown his sympathy with and intelligent appreciation of the just claims of workmen, the so-called "Labor" party also entered the field with its candidate. Between Judge Dixon and his successful Democratic competitor, Leon Abbott (now Governor), there was a plurality of 6809 votes in favor of the latter, while the combined Prohibitionist and Labor vote was 7113. So far as it affected his personal fortunes, Judge Dixon was more than content with this result, and the people of the State are to be congratulated that they have not lost from the bench a judge who possesses in so marked a degree the public confidence.

In person, Judge Dixon is small, but well knit and of great vitality; while not averse to out-door life, he has no great fondness for it, and his activities have been almost entirely mental and in the line of his profession. His career at the bar was phenomenal. Supplementing an almost unerring intuition with exhaustive research in his cases, he became within a very few years an acknowledged leader of the bar of the State. His was no long novitiate. Whoever heard young Dixon try a cause saw that he was a thorough master of his art. In his legal speeches he presented the rare combination of the logician and the rhetorician. He was equally strong with the jury and with the court, and as, with the lapse of time, he justly gained the reputation of complete integrity, his success was assured. Before leaving the bar, by his own skill and industry, put forth strictly within the legitimate lines of his profession, he had acquired a moderate fortune. Assuming judicial duties, he brought to them a thorough but unpretentious competency. Many eminent advocates have failed as judges. He has not. Suitors feel instinctively that he is impartial. Lawyers know that he is unprejudiced, and that, notwithstanding his quickness of apprehension and great experience, he will listen attentively to all they have to say, and is glad of their help. By his brethren on the bench he is much esteemed, for to an absolute independence of thought and action he joins respect and deference. In private life Judge Dixon is simple and unostentatious. Retiring and reticent, he is not apt to make advances, but he responds warmly to those of others, and is a firm friend and a delightful companion. In early life he professed Christianity, and during his residence in Jersey City has been an active member of the Congregational Church.

He married, in 1864, Elizabeth, daughter of Henry M. Price, a well-known citizen of New Brunswick, and has a large family, his son being the oldest child. Of strong domestic tastes and habits, he finds his chief pleasures with his family, to whom he is devotedly attached.

WILLIAM ALLEN LEWIS was born in the township of Shrewsbury, near Red Bank, Monmouth Co., N. J., May 16, 1836. He is of New Jersey ancestry, of an old family. His grandfather, Jacob Lewis, was born in New Jersey, Aug. 19, 1773, and was married, March 25, 1800, to Mary Brown, who was born in New Jersey, August, 1778. Their second son, Joseph B. Lewis, was born at Middletown, Monmouth Co., N. J., Sept. 17, 1804, and was married, March 19, 1834, to Mary Allen, who was born at Howell, in Monmouth County, N. J., Aug. 8, 1812, and the subject of this sketch was their eldest son. His maternal grandparents were William Allen and Mary Allen his wife whose maiden name was Mitchell, both born in and residents of New Jersey, and their youngest child and only daughter, Mary, married Joseph B. Lewis, as stated, and was the mother of the subject of this sketch. His mother died March 5, 1869. His father died July 2, 1878.

William A. Lewis, the subject of this sketch, attended school at Freehold Institute, in New Jersey, receiving an academic education. He then prepared for college and entered Madison University, at Ham-Ilton, N. Y., in 1834, and graduated there in the class of 1859, with the degree of A.B. He is a charter member of the Mu Chapter of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, and in his senior year was president of the Adelpian Society, a college literary society.

In the fall of 1859 he commenced the study of law in the office of Hon. James S. Nevins, in Jersey City, late a justice of the Supreme Court, and continued, after Judge Nevins' death, with his nephew, Daniel Voorhies, counselor-at-law, comprising in all a period of one year. In 1860 and 1861 he attended the full course of lectures and study at the Albany Law School, and received the degree of LL.B., and on examination was admitted as attorney and counselor to the bar of the State of New York. Thence he returned to Jersey City and completed the course of study requisite in New Jersey in the office of the late Hon. Isaac W. Scudder, and was admitted to the bar of New Jersey as an attorney-at-law at the November term of court, 1862, and as counselor in 1867. Upon admission to the bar of New Jersey, in 1862, he commenced the practice of law in this State, settling in Jersey City.

In 1863 he formed a partnership with the late Hon. Nathaniel C. Slaight, which continued up to the latter's death, in February, 1868, since which time he has practiced his profession alone. In 1863 he received his college degree of A.M. in course.

In 1868 he was appointed attorney and counsel for the city of Bergen, and held the office one year.

In April, 1872, he was elected, in the First District of Jersey City, a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County, re-elected in 1873, and served two terms as chosen freeholder. During this period important interests of the county came before the board. Mr. Lewis took an active part as member of the board, and by his broad and matured views was a valuable member, and rendered substantial service to the county.

In 1872 he was appointed city attorney for Jersey City, succeeding Hon. Jonathan Dixon, holding the office about one year, and was then appointed corporation counsel of Jersey City under the law of 1873, which created the separate offices of attorney and counsel for the city, which law was enacted on recommendation of the "Committee of Twenty-eight," in view of the vast labor devolving on the law department of the city in the necessary consideration and examination of street and sewer assessments, amounting to millions of dollars, then about to be reviewed under the law to adjust unpaid assessments, most of which were claimed to be illegal.

In the work of sustaining the great bulk of these assessments Mr. Lewis performed very important and valuable public service. The duties of the office of corporation counsel Mr. Lewis discharged with fidelity and marked ability. Notably, on a public question respecting the title to office of police commissioners convicted of malfeasance, he was sustained by the Supreme Court and the Court of Errors and Appeals in a written opinion he had given adverse to the opinion of the Attorney-General and the action of the Governor in the premises. The office of corporation counsel he held for three years, and resigned in the spring of 1876, and was succeeded by Hon. Leon Abbott.

In June, 1873, he delivered, by invitation, the annual address before the Alumni Association of Madison University, at Hamilton, N. Y. The address received high encomiums, and was deservedly praised by the Examiner and Chronicle, and the Baptist Weekly of that date, in their report of commencement exercises.

In November, 1875, he was elected on the Republican ticket a member of the General Assembly from the First Assembly District of Jersey City, then a Democratic district, and served as a member of the State Legislature of 1876, the first Legislature held under the amended constitution providing for a system of general laws. Mr. Lewis devoted all his energies and learning to the important work of that session. He drafted and introduced the bill, which passed, making it a penal offense for municipal and other boards to exceed their appropriations, thereby effectively restraining public boards from a practice which yearly resulted in large deficiencies and accumulations of debt. He prepared, introduced and advocated the first bill to bridge the "gap" at Washington Street, in Jersey City. On the vital question to Hudson County respecting mortgage taxation, in seeking legislation to relieve mortgages under the amended constitution, Mr. Lewis ably championed the measure on the floor of the House, and was styled in the papers the "wheel-horse" of that measure in the Assembly. His legislative services were highly commended. He was spoken of as one of the ablest members of the House, serving with marked credit on several of the most important committees, and occupying a commanding position in the discussions on questions of public interest.

In 1881 he made an address, by invitation, at one of the meetings held in Jersey City on the occasion of the death of President Garfield.

Mr. Lewis is an able lawyer and a good advocate. His practice is in all the courts, and his clients are numerous.

He is a member of the Baptist Church, and resident of Jersey City.

Aug. 15, 1872, he was married to Virginia H. Post, daughter of Ira H. and Minerva Post, of Hamilton, N. Y.

JOHN C. BESSON, the subject of this sketch, is descended from French Huguenot stock. His great-great-grandfather on the paternal side was François Besson, one of the first settlers of Hunterdon County, N. J. His son John was an ensign in the patriotic army of Washington. He served through the War of

John L. Besson

Independence, was honorably discharged, and died on the ancestral homestead at an advanced age.

His son John married Rachel Traut, of Amwell township, Hunterdon Co. Soon after this marriage they settled on a farm in Alexandria township, where they reared a family of twelve children,—seven sons and five daughters. Four of the sons—John, Jacob, Jeremiah and Theodore—left home at an early age, and making the city of New York their residence, engaged in mercantile pursuits. The remaining three—Samuel, George and William—were farmers, and remained in their native town. William, in the year 1835, married Margaret A., daughter of Godfrey and Elizabeth Case. To this union were born nine children, four of whom died in infancy. The death of a daughter, Hannah, occurred after a short illness in September, 1868. The mother, Margaret A., died at nearly the same time. Both were buried on the same day in the church-yard at Mount Pleasant.

William Besson remains active and vigorous at the age of seventy-seven years, still residing on the farm at Everettstown, Hunterdon Co., which he purchased in the year 1851.

His two living daughters, Mary Elizabeth and Catharine Frances, reside with him. His two sons are John C., the subject of this sketch, and Samuel Austin, also a lawyer of Hoboken, N. J.

John C. Besson was born on the 30th day of April, 1838, in the township of Alexandria, Hunterdon Co., N. J. In early youth he attended the common school, and later enjoyed the advantages of an excellent private school, taught by Rev. C. S. Conkling, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Mount Pleasant, in Hunterdon County. On leaving this school he spent a short time at Cooperstown Seminary, Cooperstown, N. Y., and later one term at Pennington Seminary, New Jersey. He commenced teaching at the age of seventeen years, and continued in that employment about two years, giving general satisfaction to his patrons.

In February, A. D. 1859, he began the study of law under E. R. Bullock, Esq., and the following year entered the Poughkeepsie Law School, of which John W. Fowler was then president. At the end of the school year he received the degree of LL. B.

During the succeeding two years he continued his legal studies under the direction of Abraham V. Van Fleet, Esq., of Flemington, then one of the leading lawyers of Hunterdon County, and now senior vice-chancellor of New Jersey.

Both preceptors (Mr. Bullock and Mr. Van Fleet) were men of character and of deservedly high reputation for learning and integrity. Mr. Besson remembers with gratitude their kindness to him, and loves to speak of them in terms of praise.

He was admitted to the bars as an attorney February term, 1863, and three years later as a counselor-at-law.

Immediately after receiving his attorney's license he began the practice of law at Millyville, Cumberland Co., N. J.

Charles K. Landis, Esq., the founder of Vineland, was his first client, by whom he was entrusted with important business as long as he remained in that county. Not satisfied with the business prospects of Cumberland County, in less than a year he returned to his native Hunterdon, and continued the practice of his profession until April, A. D., 1867, at which time he removed to the city of Hoboken, in Hudson County.

In this new field, though having few acquaintances, he soon secured a considerable clientele.

In May, 1868, he was appointed corporation attorney of the city of Hoboken, and held the office for six consecutive terms, during which time the city was a party in many important suits.

In the year 1875 he edited and published a collection of law precedents in one volume, adapted to the practice in New Jersey. From the date of his settlement in Hudson County to the present time his civil practice has been constantly increasing.

He is often employed as counsel by the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company.

For several years he has been employed as attorney and counsel by the First National Bank of Hoboken, and also by the North Hudson County Railway Company.

On the 22nd day of June, 1868, he married Hasseltine J., daughter of Rev. George P. and Sarah K. Nice, of Baltimore, Md. They have two sons—Leonidas H. and John William Rintus.

In politics Mr. Besson has always been a Democrat of the Jeffersonian school.

He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

ISAAC STUART TAYLOR is a son of the late Rev. Benjamin C. Taylor, D. D., who was pastor of the Bergen Reformed Church in Jersey City for more than half a century, and one of the celebrated divines of the Reformed denomination. He has two sons,—his eldest, William J. R. Taylor, D. D., is a celebrated divine settled at Newark; his younger (the subject of this sketch) was born in Bergen, (now Jersey City) Dec. 14, 1842. He received an academic education, entered Rutgers College, at New Brunswick, and graduated there. He studied law with Hon. A. O. Zahriskie, afterwards chancellor, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the June term, 1864, and as counselor at the November term, 1871. He was engaged in commercial pursuits for four years, and then took up the practice of the law in Jersey City, and has since practiced there, and is now a partner with the Hon. A. T. McGill, Jr. He is a well-read lawyer, a good advocate and stands well in his profession, and has a high Christian character.

Mr. Taylor some years since visited Europe for pleasure, and traveled there extensively, and later, under severe mental strain brought on by overwork, his health gave way, and he went to Mexico and California for the recovery of the same, and after returning home and engaging in practice for a short time, he felt the necessity for a more prolonged rest, and he repaired to the Isle of Wight, and spent a considerable time at Ventnor, a celebrated resort on the island. In the winter of 1883, Mr. Taylor gave an illustrated lecture in the lecture-room of the Bergen Reformed Church descriptive of the Isle of Wight, which was highly enjoyed by the congregation. He is now actively engaged in his profession with restored health.

HENRY TRAPHAGEN is descended from one of the original families of Jersey City. His great-grandfather, Henry Traphagen, was a trustee of Queen's College, at New Brunswick, N. J., in 1782; his grandfather, Henry Traphagen, Jr., graduated at Queen's College in the class of 1791, and married a daughter of Cornelius Van Vorst; his father, Henry M. Traphagen, was a gentleman of wide influence in Hudson County, and participated largely in public affairs.

The subject of this sketch was born June 1, 1842; he received his academic education under the late William L. Dickson, his collegiate education was at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, and at Brown University at Rhode Island. He studied law with the late Hon. Isaac W. Seudder, and was admitted to the bar at the November term, 1864, and as a counselor at the November term, 1867.

In the spring of 1874 he was elected mayor of Jersey City, and served two years. After retiring from the office of mayor he was appointed corporation attorney for Jersey City in 1876, and filled that office until 1879. He recently entered into partnership with H. M. T. Beekman, under the firm-name of Traphagen & Beekman, and they are now engaged in the practice of the law.

LEON ABBETT, the present Governor of the State of New Jersey, is also a distinguished member of the Hudson County bar. He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 8, 1836. He attended the public schools in Philadelphia. In 1853 he graduated from the High School of that city, and soon thereafter entered the law-office of the Hon. John W. Ashmead, a distinguished lawyer of Philadelphia. He was admitted to the bar of the State of New York, and entered into partnership with William J. A. Fuller, and the firm of Fuller & Abbett has been practicing law in New York City for the last twenty-five years. In 1862 Mr. Abbett took up his residence at Hoboken, and was elected corporation counsel of Hoboken in 1863. He was admitted to the bar in the State of New Jersey, both as an attorney and counselor, at June term, 1865.

In the fall of 1864 he was elected to the House of Assembly, and was re-elected in 1865, and in 1866 he removed to Jersey City. In 1868 he represented the First Jersey City District in the Legislature, and was chosen Speaker of the House. He was returned again from the First District in Jersey City, in 1869, and again chosen Speaker. In the fall of 1874 he was elected to the Senate from Hudson County, and took his seat in 1875, and served in the Senate for three years. The last year, 1877, he was elected president of the Senate. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore in 1872, and was chosen one of its secretaries. In 1876 he was again chosen as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention that convened at St. Louis, and he was again a delegate to the Democratic National Convention which convened at Chicago in July, 1884, and nominated Cleveland and Hendricks for president and vice-president.

Governor Abbett was named during the session of the convention in connection with the vice-presidency.

In 1883 he was elected Governor of New Jersey over Jonathan Dixon, a justice of the Supreme Court, the Republican candidate.

Governor Abbett has held several minor offices, he was a member of the Board of Education of Jersey City, and in 1869 was chosen its presiding officer; he has been corporation counsel for Bayonne City and the town of Union; in 1876 he was elected corporation counsel of Jersey City, and held the office for eight years, and resigned it upon taking the executive chair.

Governor Abbett has taken high rank at the bar of the State, and while he has at the same time been in practice in New York City, he has devoted much of his time to the trial and argument of New Jersey cases in all the courts of the State. He is a sound lawyer and able advocate, and while he has devoted so much of his time to politics and political office, he has always been a lawyer, and has made all his other duties yield to the law, which with him he made the chief avocation of his life, and for this reason he has been so successful at the bar.

ABRAM QUICK GARRETSON, son of Martin Schenck Garretson, was born in Franklin township, Somerset Co., N. J., March 11, 1842. He received an academic education entered Rutgers College, and graduated there in the class of 1862. He entered, after graduation, the law-office of the late Hon. A. O. Zabriskie afterwards chancellor, and studied with him, except one year, when he attended the Harvard Law School, at Cambridge, Mass. He was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1865, and as a counselor at November term, 1868. He opened his office in Jersey City, and has continued it there ever since.

He was appointed prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson County by Governor Randolph, Feb. 2, 1869, and was reappointed by Governor Parker, Feb. 2, 1874, and resigned March 31, 1878, after having held the office over nine years. It will be observed that Mr. Garretson had only been at the bar a little over three years when he was appointed prosecutor. The criminal business of Hudson County was very large, and he was to succeed such distinguished lawyers as Hon. Isaac W. Seudder and Richard D. McClellan, and the question was raised whether it was prudent to put so young a practitioner into so important an office. Chancellor Zabriskie was consulted on this point, and said, "that he is as competent to fill the position as any man of his age in the State." The chancellor's predictions proved true; upon coming into the office he managed the criminal business with skill and ability, and it can be safely said that he made one of the best prosecutors the county ever had.

He was appointed president judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Hudson County by Governor McClellan, April 1, 1878, and served a term of five years, resigning (his resignation to take effect at the expiration of his term) for the purpose of forming a partnership with James B. Vredenburg, Esq., which firm is still in existence.

Judge Garretson presided over the criminal business of the county and the business of the Orphans' Court with dignity and dispatch. He was very zealous in upholding the law for the purpose of punishing crime and protecting the peace of society, and in this he was eminently successful.

It is an interesting historical fact that the ship "Gilded Beaver" brought to this country, in May, 1658, four emigrants, one John Garretson, another William Van Vredenburg; it is believed that these two persons were the ancestors of the members of this law firm.¹

WILLIAM BRINKERHOFF is a member of the old Brinkerhoff family of Bergen County. His ancestry resided in that part of Bergen County now embraced in Hudson County. His father, Judge John Brinkerhoff, has been long known for his active Christian work and his public services in Hudson County; for some time he was a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders and director of the board, and for the last fourteen years has been almost constantly on the bench as a judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

The subject of this sketch was born in Bergen (now embraced in Jersey City), July 19, 1843. He received an academic education, and then entered Rutgers College; he studied law with the late Hon. Jacob R. Wortendyke, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1865, and as counselor at February term, 1869.

In 1867 he was a member of the Board of Aldermen of Bergen, and was president of that body; and the office of mayor becoming vacant, he was ex-officio mayor for the unexpired term. He was a member of the House of Assembly in 1870, and was appointed by Governor Parker a member of the constitutional committee in 1873.

He was a member of the Democratic State Executive Committee from 1880 to 1883. In the fall of 1883 he was elected State Senator from Hudson County for three years, and at the session of 1884 took an active part in the taxation of railroads and other corporations for the benefit of Jersey City and Hudson County. In January, 1884, he succeeded Governor Leon Abbett as corporation counsel of Jersey City, which office he now holds. He succeeded the Hon. Jacob R. Wortendyke as counsel to the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and held the office from November, 1868, to May, 1872; and he is a director in the First National Bank. The above sketch will show that Mr. Brinkerhoff leads a very active and industrious life, he is a good lawyer, has an extensive clientele, and is highly respected.

ELIJAH T. PAXTON was born near Jamesburgh, Middlesex Co., N. J. He was educated in the public schools of his native county, and at the Englishtown Academy. He commenced his legal studies in the office of ex-governor Joseph D. Bedle, at Freehold, and completed them at the Harvard Law School at Cambridge, Mass. He was admitted to the New Jersey bar as an attorney at June term, 1866, and has since then been in active practice in Jersey City. He was for several years corporation attorney for Union Hill; in 1877 he represented the Eighth District in the House of Assembly. During the latter part of that year he was appointed one of the Common Pleas judges of Hudson County to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge John Wiggins. He was elected to the State Senate in the fall of 1880, and took his seat in 1881, and served for three years. He is now corporation attorney of Jersey City, and assistant prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson County.

JAMES B. VREDEBURGH is descended from one of the oldest and best-known families in the State of New Jersey. His great-grandfather, Peter Vredenburg, kept a store in New Brunswick, and was one of the most influential men in Middlesex County. He was a justice of the peace in 1780, was elected to the Legislature, and served in the Assembly from 1790 to 1795, and was county collector of Middlesex County from 1782 to 1823,—a period of forty-one years. By his industry and high character he elevated his family to the first position in society, and they have maintained that position ever since.

Peter Vredenburg had two sons, Rev. John S. Vredenburg, a celebrated divine, and Peter Vredenburg, M.D., who was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, and who had a son Peter Vredenburg, being the third person bearing that name, and who graduated at Rutgers College, studied law at Somerville, and settled at Freehold, who rapidly rose in distinction, was prosecutor of the pleas of Monmouth County, served in the Legislature as a member of the council and was associate justice of the Supreme Court for fourteen years, and greatly honored as a judge, having prepared some of the ablest opinions pronounced in that court while he was upon the bench, and notably the opinion in the Court of Errors and Appeals, in the case of Proprietors of Bridges vs. Hoboken Land Company, (2 Bentsley R. 504), which pre-mitted the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company to bridge the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers for railroad purposes, the proprietors of the bridges across those rivers claiming a monopoly until Nov. 24, 1889. Judge Vredenburg held that the bridge in question was a viaduct for a railway, and not contemplated by the act of 1790 and the supplements thereto which created the monopoly, and his opinion was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States.

¹ In the "Gilded Beaver," in May, 1658, came Charles Van Tien, John Garretson, Cornelius Houtland and William Van Vredenburg, who was, doubtless, the ancestor of the Vredenburgs who settled along the Raritan. (Early Emigrants to New Netherland, 1637-1664; Documentary History of New York, vol. III., p. 33.)

The subject of this sketch is the third son of Judge Peter Vredenburg and Eleanor Bruikerhoff, his wife, and was born at Freehold, N. J., Oct. 1, 1844. He was prepared for college and entered the sophomore class of the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, while he was in the fifteenth year of his age, and graduated in 1863, and immediately took up the study of the law with the late Hon. Aaron R. Throckmorton, at Freehold, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at the June term, 1866, and as a counselor at June term, 1869, and settled in Jersey City, where he soon took high rank as a young lawyer, and so rapid was his rise at the bar that when the Hon. Isaac W. Scudder was elected to Congress in 1872, he selected Mr. Vredenburg as his partner, and made him equal with himself in the profits of the business, and left him in charge of his large and lucrative practice when he had only been seven years at the bar; this partnership continued until the death of Mr. Scudder, in 1881, when Mr. Vredenburg continued the business, and succeeded Mr. Scudder as counsel to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He afterwards took Judge Abram Q. Garretson as his partner, and the partnership still continues. Mr. Vredenburg has acted as counsel in many of the most important cases which have gone to the higher courts from this county, both at law and in equity, and when he has not appeared as counsel in the reports, because the rules of the court only allow two counsel on a side, he has assisted in the preparation and trial of the causes, and notably the case of Sisson vs. Donnelly, the case of Black vs. The United Railroads, being the case involving the lease of the railroads of the United Companies to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He also argued the causes involving the questions of taxing the railroads under the act of 1873.

He was placed on Governor Bedle's staff, and commissioned as an additional aide-de-camp, with the rank of colonel, and is a member of the American Bar Association. He is an indefatigable worker, and enjoys the confidence of the community, and has many warm friends.

AUGUSTUS ZABRISKIE, youngest son of the late Chancellor Zabriskie, was born at Hackensack, N. J., March, 1843. He received an academic education, entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, and graduated there in the class of 1863, and in due course he received the degree of A.M. He entered the Law School at the University of Harvard, and graduated there in 1866 with the degree of LL.B.

He also studied law in the office of his father, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at June term 1866, and as counselor at June term, 1869.

He resides in Jersey City, and has been a practitioner at the Hudson County bar for the last eighteen years; is a member of the firm of L. & A. Zabriskie, and transacts a considerable part of the business of that firm, being a well-read lawyer. He is a director in the Hudson County National Bank.

ABEL I. SMITH is descended from one of the oldest families of Hudson County. His great-grandfather, Abel Smith, purchased a tract of land at Secaucus in 1752, and is described in the deed as "a gentleman." He had a son, John, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, and his father was Abel I. Smith.

The subject of this sketch is the fourth generation of the Smith family after they settled in this county, and was born June 12, 1843, on the Smith homestead at Secaucus. He attended school and then was for eight years under the tutorship of Rev. William V. V. Mahon, D.D., now a professor in the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. He entered the junior class at Rutgers College, and graduated there in the class of 1852. He then entered the law-office of J. Dickinson Miller, Esq., in Jersey City, and studied his profession with him, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at June term, 1866, and as a counselor at June term, 1873. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office in Hoboken, and continues to practice there, although he has resided in Jersey City for nearly ten years.

In the fall of 1869 he was elected, as a Republican, to the House of Assembly from the Eighth Assembly District, and served during the session of 1870. He was the first Republican elected from that district. He declined a renomination, because he preferred the work of his profession.

Mr. Smith is an able lawyer. His practice is in all the highest courts at Trenton. As a citizen he is kind and amiable, public-spirited, and has a large circle of warm friends.

WILLIAM PESHINE DOUGLASS was born at Duaneburgh, Schenectady Co., N. Y., Aug. 7, 1844. He was educated at Trinity School and graduated at Columbia College, in the city of New York, in 1863; was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1867, and as a counselor at February term, 1870. Upon coming to the bar he commenced the practice of the law in Jersey City, and is now in active practice there.

He was corporation attorney of Jersey City from May, 1873, to May, 1876, and was a member of the Board of Education of Jersey City from May, 1872, to May, 1874, and was chairman of the committee which organized the Jersey City High School in 1872. In politics he is a Republican.

JOB HILLIARD LIPPINCOTT belongs to the well-known Lippincott family of West Jersey. He was born near Mount Holly, N. J., Nov. 12, 1842. He received a common-school education, and was for three years under the tutorage of Mr. John G. Herbert (a graduate of Yale College), at Vincentown, N. J. He then became a student at the Mount Holly Seminary, conducted by the Rev. Samuel Aaronson, where he remained as student and teacher from 1861 to 1863, when he entered the law-office of Edward Merritt, Esq., as a law student. In September, 1863, he entered the Harvard Law-School, at Cambridge, Mass., and remained as a student in that institution for two years, taking therefrom, upon graduation, a degree of Bachelor of Laws. He was admitted as an attorney at February term 1867, and as counselor at June term, 1870. Upon being licensed he removed to Hudson County, opening his office at the court-house, where he has remained ever since.

He succeeded Jacob Weurt, Esq., as counsel to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County in May, 1874, and has held that office for the last ten years, and now holds it.

Mr. Lippincott is a good lawyer, an able advocate, and has a large practice. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has not been an office-seeker, although he is one of the leaders of his party, often presides at Democratic conventions, and could have gone to Congress, but always refused to allow his name to go before the Democratic conventions, upon the ground that he could not afford, at his early age in life, to give up his law practice for the hazards of party politics. He was a member and president of the Board of Education of old Hudson City for about three years, before its consolidation with Jersey City.

JOSEPH F. RANDOLPH, JR., a son of Joseph F. Randolph, late justice of the Supreme Court, was born at New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 1, 1843. Great pains was taken by his father in his education; he received his academic education at the Trenton Academy, graduated at Yale College and Columbia College Law School, and his father sent him abroad, and he studied at Berlin, Heidelberg, Paris and Göttingen. He was admitted to the bar of New Jersey at November term, 1867, as an attorney, and as counsel at November term, 1870, and has practiced in Hudson County since 1868. He married a daughter of the late William H. Talcott, who was the secretary of the Morris Canal, and formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, William Talcott.

Randolph & Talcott edited the fifth American edition of "Jarman on Wills" in 1881, which was fully annotated by them with the American decisions, and is regarded as an able and valuable edition, and has met with a large sale.

Mr. Randolph is now engaged in writing a book which will be known as "Randolph on Commercial Paper."

Mr. Randolph is an able lawyer, a good advocate, and has practiced considerably in the higher courts of the State.

He partakes of the kindly disposition of his father, and his hospitable home is now at Morristown, where he has resided for some time.

ALEXANDER T. MCGILL, JR., son of Prof. Alexander T. McGill, of Princeton Theological Seminary, was born at Allegheny City, Pa.; was educated at Princeton, N. J., and was admitted to the bar of New Jersey as an attorney at November term, 1867, and as counselor at November term, 1870; resides in Jersey City, and practiced law in Hudson County since 1868.

Mr. McGill graduated at the College of New Jersey in 1864, with degree of A. B., and received the degree of A. M., in 1867; graduated at Columbia Law School in June, 1866, studied law with Judge Edward W. Scudder, of Trenton, N. J., and upon being admitted to the bar became associated with ex-Attorney-General Robert Gilchrist as assistant and partner until Sept. 1876; he then practiced alone until 1878, when he formed a partnership with Isaac S. Taylor, and is still his partner.

Mr. McGill was corporation attorney for the city of Bayonne from May, 1872, to May, 1875; was member of the House of Assembly from First District of Hudson County for the years 1874 and 1875; was prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson County from April, 1878, to April, 1883, when he was appointed president judge of the Hudson Common Pleas, which office he now holds. In every position Mr. McGill has conducted himself with the courtesy of a gentleman, and with the ability of a trained and able lawyer.

ELIJAH STRONG COWLES, of the firm of Williams & Cowles, was born at Coventry, Vt., April 30, 1836; he was educated at St. Johnsbury Academy, Vt.; studied law and was admitted to the Vermont bar in 1865; removed to Jersey City and was admitted in New Jersey as an attorney at February term, 1868, and as counselor at February term, 1871. He has been a practitioner here since 1868; he is a well-read lawyer, very attentive to business, presents his causes to the court with clearness and with much energy, being quite an able advocate.

As a citizen he is much respected, and takes an active interest in the work of the church.

PETER BENTLEY, JR. (he having now dropped the junior since his father's death), is the only son of Peter Bentley, a sketch of whom appears in this chapter. He was born in Jersey City Dec. 5, 1845. He was early put under the tutorage of Rev. R. D. Van Cleek, D.D., who prepared him in the classics and mathematics for entering college; but instead thereof, he entered the office of his father as a student-at-law, and was admitted as an attorney at the June term, 1868, and as counselor at the June term, 1871. He immediately took a good rank at the bar, and succeeded to the large practice of his father, who was then in failing health, and upon his death succeeded him as trustee and counsel of the Provident Institution for Savings. He is also a director in the Hudson County National Bank. His father having accumulated a large estate, the protection of which and his spirit for the general welfare made him very active to see that the city of Jersey City and the county of Hudson were properly governed, as a sequence these traits followed down to the son, and the subject of this sketch has taken a deep interest in all public matters that pertained to this community.

In 1874, when the measure was pending for the building of a boulevard at a time when Jersey City was staggering under a heavy load of debt, Mr. Bentley was very active in its defeat, and probably entitled to its final overthrow, which proved very advantageous in the light of future events.

When the constitution was amended equal and uniform rules of taxation were established. The act known as the Five County Act, which exempted mortgages from taxation, was in peril, and the principle was maintained mainly through the efforts of Mr. Bentley and Governor Abbott. The rate of taxation being nearly three per cent. in Hudson County, if mortgages had been taxed that form of security would suddenly have disappeared.

When it was agreed by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County to purchase the Harrison estate for a court-house site, at a cost of over three hundred thousand dollars, which was believed to be a scheme to sell some barren lands to the county, Mr. Bentley was one of the active men who engaged in the defeat of the scheme. He argued the cause in the Supreme Court, in connection with the Hon. William Brinkerhoff, and filed the bill in the United States District Court by which the contract was finally cancelled.

Mr. Bentley is a good lawyer. He ranks well as an advocate, has a large clientage, and is highly esteemed as a citizen.

JOHN FLAVEL MCGEE is descended from distinguished parentage, paternally and maternally. His paternal grandfather, Patrick McGee, came to this country from the county Down, Ireland, in the year 1812, and settled at Paterson, N. J., where he engaged in the manufacture of Irish linen, which he continued until he was unable to compete with the power-loom, when he relinquished business, and died at Paterson between 1850 and 1860. His son, William C. McGee, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born at Paterson in 1816, graduated at Princeton College in 1836, at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1840 or 1841, and in the year 1841 was called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Churches of Hardwick and Marksboro'. The Hardwick Church stood on the line between the counties of Sussex and Warren; the pulpit was in Sussex and the pews in Warren. The other church was in Warren. He enjoyed a very successful pastorate there for twenty-six years, and until his death, on May 25, 1867.

His maternal great-grandfather was Rev. Joseph Clark. At the breaking out of the Revolutionary war he was a student in Princeton College. He enlisted as a private, rose to the rank of an adjutant, and after the war returned to the college and graduated, and afterwards graduated at the Princeton Seminary. He was a tutor in the college many years, a trustee, and after the college was destroyed by fire he traveled and collected considerable sums of money for rebuilding the same. He was settled for a short time at Allentown, Monmouth Co., but a greater part of his life he was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at New Brunswick, N. J. His son, and the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was Rev. John Flavel Clark, a celebrated divine, and brother of Peter I. Clark, of the New Jersey bar, who resided at Flemington, and was once a candidate for Governor. His daughter, Anna Sherrerd Clark, and the mother of the subject of this sketch, was a sister of Dr. Samuel S. Clark, of Belvidere, and she died in Belvidere in 1883.

The subject of this sketch was born in the township of Frelinghuysen, Warren Co., April 6, 1844. He received his academic education at the Presbyterian Academy at Blairstown, entered the junior class of the College of New Jersey, and graduated in 1865. He took the first prize for debate in the class of 1865 in Clio Hall. In the spring of 1865 he was appointed principal of one of the public schools in Belvidere, which he held one year. Studied law first with John M. Sherrerd, Esq., and afterwards with J. G. Shipman, Esq., both of Belvidere, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at June term, 1868, and as counselor at June term, 1871, and at the same term argued two causes in the Supreme Court and one in the Court of Errors and Appeals, and this probably cannot be said of any other member of our bar.

Upon coming to the bar he removed to Jersey City, and entered into a business arrangement with Stephen B. Ransom, Esq., and afterwards formed a partnership with William Muirhead, and later ex-Governor Joseph D. Bede was added to the firm, and the firm is now Bede, Muirhead & McGee, and they conduct a large and extensive practice. Mr. McGee married, first, Francis Eureka Harris, daughter of the late Dr. Henry S. Harris, of Warren County, and upon her death he married Julia F. Randolph, daughter of the Hon. Bennington F. Randolph.

Mr. McGee has inherited many of the qualities of his distinguished ancestry. He is a sound lawyer, an able advocate, and a kind, genial and warm friend.

M. T. NEWBOLD is a son of Thomas Newbold, now residing at Mount Holly, N. J., at the advanced age of eighty-two years. While he would never hold office, he was one of the electors in New Jersey in 1849, and voted for Gen. Harrison for President.

The subject of this sketch was born at Springfield, Burlington Co., N. J., May 11, 1843. He received an academic education, entered Yale College and graduated there in 1865, and took the degree of A.M., in 1868. After graduating he entered the law-office of Frederick Voorhees, Esq., at Mount Holly, and studied with him, except that portion of the time when he was at the Albany Law School, where he graduated with the degree of LL.B., in 1868. He was admitted to the bar as an attorney at June term, 1868, and as counselor at June term, 1871.

Upon coming to the bar he opened his office at Jersey City, and is now engaged in practice there. He is a well-read lawyer, excels as an able advocate, and is a rising man at the Hudson bar.

WILLIAM TALCOTT is a son of the late William H. Talcott, who resided at Jersey City the latter part of his life, and was a distinguished civil engineer. He was secretary of the Morris Canal Company, and erected the inclined planes on the canal which have made the same so successful in later years.

The subject of this sketch was born at Fort Plains, Montgomery Co., N. Y., on the 3d day of May, 1843; was educated at Phillips Academy, at Andover, graduated at Williams College and at the Columbia College Law School, and was admitted to the bar in New Jersey as an attorney at November term, 1868, and as counselor at November term, 1877. He has practiced law in Hudson County for ten years, and now resides at Paterson. Mr. Talcott was admitted to the bar of Illinois in February, 1871, and lived and practiced law in Chicago for six years. He was admitted to the bar in New York in January, 1882, and now practices law both in New York and New Jersey. Mr. Talcott is an occasional contributor to law magazines, and has recently, with Joseph F. Randolph, Esq., issued the fifth American edition of "Jarman on Wills," with American notes, which is highly regarded by the profession.

GILBERT COLLINS, the present mayor of Jersey City, was born at Stonington, in the State of Connecticut, Aug. 26, 1846. He was educated at Stonington, under the tuition of Dr. David S. Hart, A.M., an eminent mathematician and classical scholar, who devoted his life to study and taught a few pupils occasionally. He studied law with Jonathan Dixon, Jr., now a justice of the Supreme Court, and was admitted as an attorney at the February term, 1869, and as a counselor at February term, 1872.

Upon coming to the bar he entered into a partnership with Mr. Dixon, which continued until Judge Dixon took his seat on the bench. Mr. Collins shortly after formed a partnership with Charles E. Corbin, and a little later William H. Corbin was taken in, and these three persons now constitute the law-firm of Collins & Corbin, who are conducting a large legal business.

Mr. Collins has taken a high rank as a lawyer, and but few men at the New Jersey bar have won as much distinction as he so early in their professional career. The case in which he has won the most distinction is that of Smith and Bennett, who were indicted for the murder of Mrs. Smith's husband, and who were convicted for murder and afterward acquitted. Mr. Collins taking one of the leading parts through all the various trials, and the case was twice tried in the Hudson Oyer and Terminer and was twice in the Court at Errors and Appeals. Mr. Collins is now practicing in all the higher courts of the State.

In politics he is a Republican, and ran for Congress on the Republican ticket in 1882, but the district being largely Democratic, he was defeated. He has been in sympathy with every good movement in Jersey City, and when, in the spring of 1884, it was felt that the interests of Jersey City should in a measure be taken out of party politics, a citizens' association was organized, composed of the best men of all political parties, who nominated Mr. Collins for mayor, and elected him by a large majority for a term of two years, until the spring of 1886. In office Mayor Collins has sunk the spirit of a partisan, and is exercising the powers of his office for the general welfare of all. Individually he is very courteous, kind and considerate, and has many warm friends.

JOHN A. BLAIR belongs to the distinguished Blair family of Warren County, and was born at Knowlton, Warren Co., N. J., July 8, 1843; was educated at Blairstown Presbyterian Academy, where he was prepared for college, and entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, and graduated there in the class of 1866. After graduating he entered the law-office of J. G. Shipman, Esq., at Belvidere, as a student-at-law, and was admitted as an attorney at June term, 1869, and as a counselor at June term, 1872. In January, 1870, he opened his office in Jersey City, and has resided and practiced law there ever since. On the passage of the law creating the District Courts in Jersey City, Governor Bedle appointed the Hon. Bennington F. Randolph and the subject of this sketch to fill the positions. Judge Blair presided over the Second District Court, and discharged its duties to the satisfaction of all. He was a very upright and impartial judge, and retired from the bench with the confidence of the public.

Judge Blair is Republican in politics, and while he takes a very active part in political affairs and frequently presides at Republican meetings and conventions, he is not an office-seeker and has never held any political office.

Judge Blair is ranked as a sound lawyer, a good advocate, and is a fine classical scholar, and his address on the death of President Garfield, published in the "Garfield Memorial Volume of Jersey City," is admitted to be one of the most scholarly productions in the book.

RODOLPH F. RABE.—The parents of Mr. Rabe were Charles L. and Wilhelmin Rabe, who were residents of Otterndorf, at the mouth of the River Elbe, in Hanover, where the former was by trade a watchmaker. Their son Rudolph, the eldest of five children, was born Aug. 4, 1841, in Otterndorf, and educated at the gymnasium of the city, where he remained until fifteen years of age, when, having a desire to follow the life of a sailor, he shipped on board an American vessel, and after various vicissitudes not tending to confirm his early enthusiasm for a mariner's career, landed in New York. Having abandoned all idea of a seafaring life and decided upon a mercantile career, he entered the store of a relative in the city, and continued five years in his employ. At the expiration of this period, and in 1864, he deter-the same year, under the firm-name of Rabe & Keller. Mr. Rabe as a lawyer has, from the beginning of his practice, been successful, and retained an extensive clientage, but as a legislator has won more distinguished honors. He was, in 1873, elected as an independent Democrat from the district embracing the city of Hoboken to the State Legislature, and re-elected in the years 1874-75-76. During the beginning of the latter term, in the year 1877, one of unusual political excitement, the election for Speaker of mined to make the law his profession, and entering the office of Conable & Elliott, attorneys, remained until his admission to the bar, in 1869, meanwhile having become a student of the Columbia College Law School, from which he graduated in the class of 1869. He at once began the practice of his profession, and formed, in 1870, a co-partnership with Hon. Edward Browne, who, on his election, in 1883, to the position of judge of the City Court, retired from the firm, and F. W. Keller was admitted as a partner the House resulted in a tie, and after several days balloting, Mr. Rabe, by virtue of seniority of membership, won the suffrages of the members. His official career was characterized by ability and fairness. He manifested a thorough knowledge of parliamentary laws, was prompt in the dispatch of business, quick in his perceptions, and in the most trying periods of the session manifested a firm yet courteous bearing which won for him the regard of the House, irrespective of party. In the fall of 1877 he was elected to the State Senate, and served for the term of three years, since which time he has retired from politics and devoted his time to his profession. Mr. Rabe, having made Hoboken his residence in 1863, was, three years later, married to Miss Lizzie Lusby, of New York, by Rev. Morgan Dix of Trinity Parish, in the latter city. Their children were Carrie and Rudolph F. Mr. Rabe participated actively as a delegate in the National Democratic Convention which nominated Samuel J. Tilden for President in 1876. He is keenly alive to the interests of the city of his residence, more especially those pertaining to education, being a member of the board of trustees of the Hoboken Academy.

Judweph. F. Rabe

CHARLES KINSEY CANNON is descended from one of the distinguished families of New Jersey. His grandfather, Rev. James Spencer Cannon, was professor of theology in the Dutch Reformed Theological Seminary at New Brunswick for thirty years, and held for a long period the chair of metaphysics in Rutgers College. His father, Garret S. Cannon, is still living and is a distinguished member of the Burlington County bar. He has served as a member of the Assembly, for five fifteen years prosecutor of the pleas of Burlington County, and was United States district attorney for the State of New Jersey, under the administrations of Presidents Pierce and Buchanan.

The subject of this sketch was born at Bordentown, N. J., Nov. 12, 1846. His early education was at Burlington, N. J.; he graduated at Yale College in 1867, and from the Columbia College Law School in 1870, and was admitted as an attorney at November term, 1870, and as counselor at November term, 1873. He opened his office in Hoboken, and was corporation attorney for the city of Hoboken in 1877-78. He is attentive to his professional duties, and is regarded as a rising lawyer.

CORNELIUS S. SEE is a son of the Rev. John L. See, D.D., corresponding secretary of the Board of Education of the Reformed Church in America. The subject of this sketch was born in New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 29, 1847. He received an academic education, and entered Rutgers College, and graduated in the class of 1867. He entered the law-office of Hon. A. V. Schenck, now State Senator from Middlesex County, and completed his course of legal studies with him, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1870, and as counselor at November term, 1873. Upon coming to the bar he removed to Jersey City and opened his office there, and has since continued to practice at that place.

In politics he has been an active Republican. He held the office of clerk of the Board of Finance and Taxation in Jersey City for some four years. He has been for twelve years a member of the Hudson County Republican Committee, and for the last four years its chairman.

In the fall of 1883 he was elected, in the First Assembly District of Jersey City, to the House of Assembly, and served during the session of 1884, taking an active part in the legislation affecting Jersey City in relation to the taxation of corporations, and was re-elected in November, 1884, from the same district. He has been admitted to the bar in the State of New York, and about two years ago he opened an office in the city of New York, and now has offices in Jersey City and New York. He is a good lawyer, a fluent speaker and a rising man in his profession.

CHARLES L. CORBIN was born in McDonough, Chenango Co., N. Y., on the 22nd of January, 1846; was educated at Hamilton College and admitted to the bar as an attorney at the November term, 1871, and as counsel at February term, 1876. Upon coming to the bar he commenced practice in Jersey City, where he is now in practice, being a member of the firm of Collins & Corbin.

The air of Jersey City did not agree with Mr. Corbin; he therefore took up his residence in Metuchen, N. J., where he has resided for many years.

Mr. Corbin is an able painstaking lawyer, has the confidence of his clients and is a man of industry.

The net of his life which has given him the most fame is his address on "Taxation of Railroads in New Jersey," delivered before the Kent Club of Jersey City, June 11, 1883, which was published in pamphlet form and circulated throughout the State, which has made Mr. Corbin quite widely known, and doubtless exercised quite an influence in bringing about the legislation procured on this subject at the session of 1881. This address exhibited a good deal of research, the points are well put and it reflects credit upon its author.

CHARLES HOPKINS HARTSHORNE was born in Jersey City on the 22d day of November, 1851. Mr. Hartshorne was educated mainly at home, and was admitted to the bar of the State of New Jersey as an attorney at the November term of the Supreme Court, 1872, and as counselor at November term, 1875, and has ever since resided in Jersey City, and practiced law there. He is now a member of the firm of Bentley and Hartshorne. Mr. Hartshorne has taken great interest in municipal matters in Jersey City, and by his intelligent and earnest work has aided much in bringing about reform in that City.

He is a well-read lawyer, prepares his cases with care, and presents them to the court with force and ability, and is one of the rising young lawyers of Hudson County.

In his friendships he is warm and sincere, and to his professional brethren he always bears an obliging disposition, which has given him many warm friends.

HENRY SIMMONS WHITE, who is both a doctor and a lawyer, was born at Red Bank, Monmouth Co., N. J., July 13, 1844. He received an academic education, and then took up the study of medicine, and graduated as a medical student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons with the degree of M.D., and entered the practice of medicine at Red Bank, N. J. where he practiced for two years, and during the war of the Rebellion was an assistant surgeon of the United States army.

Dr. White concluded that the law would be more congenial to his taste than medicine; he took up the study of the law, and graduated at Columbia Law School, and was admitted to the bar in New York State in June, 1870, and in New Jersey as an attorney at the November term, 1872, and as a Counselor at the November term, 1875.

Upon being licensed as an attorney he opened an office in Jersey City, and for some time he was a partner with ex-Judge John A. Blair, and afterwards by himself until the present time, and lately he has opened an office in New York City, and now practices both in New Jersey and New York. He had some time ago erected a summer residence at Red Bank, and in November, 1888, went there to reside.

Dr. White was appointed by President Hayes assistant collector of the port of New York, with an office in Jersey City, and he held that position for four years.

He has a good standing at the bar for a man of his age, and has been retained in several important cases. The most celebrated case in which he has been engaged was the case of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company vs. the Hudson Tunnel Railroad Company, organized to erect a tunnel under the Hudson River, to connect Jersey City with New York City by a railroad. It was contended that the company could not be legally organized to make the tunnel, because the railroad was incident to a tunnel, while the tunnel company held that the tunnel was incident to the railroad. It was also contended that the tunnel company could not exercise the State's rights of eminent domain. The litigation took various forms, and was conducted in the Court of Chancery, Supreme Court, Court of Errors and Appeals, and in the United States Circuit Court, and lasted for about four years. Mr. White, who had associated with him able counsel, was successful in all the courts. The Hudson Tunnel Railroad Company was sustained, and two thousand feet of the tunnel actually constructed under the river. The work was suspended for the want of money to carry it forward. It is hoped that the project will be revived and carried to a successful completion.

Dr. White is a courteous gentleman, highly esteemed among his friends; is an active and ardent Republican in politics, and takes a deep interest in the affairs of his native State and the nation.

ROBERT O. BABBITT was born at Morristown, N. J., Nov. 5, 1848. He is a son of Robert M. Babbitt, now residing at Mendham. He received an academic education, and then entered the office of Frederick G. Burnham, Esq. at Morristown, and from there removed to Jersey City, and entered the office of Potts & Linn, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1873, and as a counselor at November term, 1878.

Upon coming to the bar he entered the law-firm of Potts & Linn, and it was for one year, Potts, Linn & Babbitt, when Mr. Potts retired, and the firm of Linn & Babbitt was formed, which continued for seven years. Mr. Babbitt is now in partnership with Robert L. Lawrence, Esq., and has his office in Jersey City.

Mr. Babbitt stands well as one of the younger members of the Hudson bar; is a man of industry, a good lawyer and is rising at the bar.

MALCOLM W. NIVEN was born at Monticello, N. Y., Nov. 26, 1851. He was educated at Monticello Academy and Riverside Institute at Wilkesbarre, Pa.; was admitted to the bar as an attorney at February term, 1874, and as counselor at February term, 1877. Upon coming to the bar he opened his office at Hoboken, where he is now engaged in practice, being a partner of the Hon. F. B. Ogden, and is residing at present at Montclair, N. J.

Mr. Niven was corporation attorney of the city of Hoboken for four years, and during his term of office he has been engaged in several important causes affecting the city. As a young member of the bar he has a good standing, and is highly respected by his professional brethren.

J. HERBERT POTTS was born at Trenton, N. J., July 3, 1851. He was educated at the Trenton Academy, the Lawrenceville High School, and graduated at Princeton College in the class of 1872. He studied law with Edward T. Green, Esq., of Trenton, and was admitted to the bar at February term, 1874, and opened an office in Jersey City, and has been in practice at that place ever since.

He was assistant clerk of the House of Assembly in 1876, 1877 and 1879. He was elected a member of the House of Assembly from the Sixth District of Hudson County in 1879, and re-elected from the same district in 1880. While a member of the House he was chairman of the committee on revision of the laws and the committee on judiciary.

Mr. Potts has discharged all his public duties with credit to himself, and is highly esteemed in the State.

AUGUSTUS A. RICH, is one of the younger members of the bar, and has obtained political distinction early in life. His residence is at West Hoboken, and his office in the northern part of Jersey City.

He was born at Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1851; educated in the public schools; admitted to the bar in the State of New York, 1873, and in the State of New Jersey as an attorney at November term, 1874, and as a counselor at February term, 1878, and has practiced law in Hudson County for the last seven years.

In 1882 he was elected to the Assembly from the Tenth Assembly District of Hudson County, and re-elected in 1883, serving in the one hundred and seventh and one hundred and eighth sessions of the Legislature.

He is now counsel to the town of West Hoboken and township of Weehawken. In all his public positions he has discharged his duties to the satisfaction of his constituents.

WILLIAM HORACE CORBIN, member of the firm of Collins & Corbin, was born at McDonough, Chenango Co., N. Y., on the 12th day of July, 1851; educated at Oxford Academy, New York, Cornell University, and at Columbia Law School. He was admitted to the bar of the State of New York at Binghamton, September, 1872, and to the bar of New Jersey as attorney at the November term of the Supreme Court, 1874, and as counselor at November term, 1877. Mr. Corbin resides at Elizabeth, N. J., and practices law in Jersey City, and has done so since November, 1874. Mr. Corbin was elected member of the Board of Education of Elizabeth, and served for five years. He also issued a pamphlet edition of the "Act Concerning Corporations" in this State, with notes and forms, in 1880, of which the third edition has been published. In 1881, Mr. Corbin issued a book of "Forms of Contracts, Conveyances, and Legal Procedure under the New Jersey Statutes," which is a work of great value and the leading authority in the State upon those subjects, and has had an extensive sale. He is a good lawyer, and highly esteemed by his professional brethren. He was elected, in November, 1884, to the House of Assembly of New Jersey from the county of Union.

HAMILTON WALLIS is a son of the late Alexander H. Wallis, a distinguished lawyer in the city of New York, of the late firm of Coe, Marsh & Wallis. Mr. Wallis removed to Jersey City prior to 1850, and became thoroughly identified with the interests of Jersey City; he served in the Board of Aldermen, was twice collector of internal revenue of the Fifth District of New Jersey, and at the time of his death was president of the First National Bank of Jersey City.

Hamilton Wallis was born in the city of New York, Nov. 25, 1812. He received an academic education, entered Yale College and graduated there; he afterwards entered the Columbia College Law School and graduated there, and was admitted to the bar of the State of New York, and also in the State of New Jersey as an attorney at February term, 1875, and as counsel at November term, 1878. He practices in both States. In New York City the firm is Marsh & Wallis; in Jersey City, Wallis & Edwards. Mr. Wallis now resides at East Orange. He succeeded his father as a director in the First National Bank of Jersey City. He is an able lawyer, a good advocate, and very highly respected.

LISSELY ROWE, although not now a member of the Hudson County bar, was so highly respected when he practiced here as to be worthy of a place in the bar chapter.

Mr. Rowe was born in New York City, Jan. 19, 1848. He was educated in New York City, and in 1871 he entered the law-office of Muirhead & McGee, afterwards Belle, Muirhead & McGee, and was admitted as an attorney at June term, 1875, and as counselor at November term, 1878, and opened his office in Jersey City in 1875, where he continued to practice until 1882, when he removed to Trenton.

He was appointed deputy clerk in admiralty of the United States District Court May 10, 1879, to look after the admiralty business at Jersey City, which was then growing, and which during his term became one of the most important branches of the court's business; he was also appointed a United States commissioner in October, 1879, and as such had charge of many important criminal cases. He was appointed clerk of the United States District Court on June 13, 1882, to succeed William S. Belville, deceased, and still holds that office, making an efficient clerk, and highly respected by the bar and suitors at the court.

EDWARD D. GILLMORE is one of the young men of the Hudson bar. He was born at Fortress Monroe, Va., Nov. 9, 1851. He graduated at Rutgers College, and was admitted to the bar as an attorney at November term, 1875, and as a counselor at November term, 1878. Upon coming to the bar he commenced his practice with ex-Attorney-General Gilchrist in Jersey City.

Mr. Gillmore is a well-read lawyer, a man of great activity, an indefatigable worker, and is a rising man in his profession.

JOHN W. HERBERT, JR., has been a practitioner at the Hudson County bar for the last eight years. He was born at Marlboro', Monmouth Co., N. J., Aug. 3, 1853; he graduated with honors at Rutgers College in 1875; took up the study of the law and graduated at the Columbia Law School in 1876. He was admitted to the bar in New York State in May, 1876, and in New Jersey as attorney at June term, 1876, and as counselor at June term, 1879.

In politics Mr. Herbert is a Republican, takes a lively interest in the welfare of his native State, and a more general interest in the nation. He is quite an effective stump-speaker, and has acquired in Jersey City during the short time he has practiced here many warm friends, and gives good promise of a valuable and useful life.

ALLAN LANGDON McDERMOTT was born in South Boston, Mass., March 30, 1853. In 1869 he entered a printing-office and worked "at case" until 1871, when he commenced his legal studies with Governor Leon Abbott, and completed the same with Alfred B. Dayton, Esq., also entering the Law School of the University of the City of New York, where he received his degree of Bachelor of Laws in May, 1877. He was admitted to the bar in New Jersey, as attorney, at November term, 1877, and as counselor at June term, 1881.

In April, 1879, he was appointed corporation attorney of Jersey City, which position he held for several years, and resigned the same after being appointed judge of the Second District Court of Jersey City, which he now holds. He represented the Fourth District of Hudson County in the House of Assembly in 1880 and 1881. He is a member of the Board of Finance and Taxation of Jersey City and president of the board; he is also a member of the State commission appointed in 1884 to tax the railroad corporations and other corporations of the State, and is also president of that commission.

It will be seen that Mr. McDermott's advancement has been very rapid; in a year and a half after he was admitted to the bar he received the important position of corporation attorney of Jersey City, and he has constantly held important offices from that day to this. He is now only thirty-one years of age, and is at the present time a judge of the Second District Court of Jersey City, president of the Board of Finance and Taxation of Jersey City, and president of the State Board of Tax Commissioners. In politics he is a Democrat, and is a ready and forcible public speaker.

JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURTS REGULARLY ASSIGNED TO HOLD THE HUDSON CIRCUIT.

Joseph C. Hornblower, chief justice from April 14, 1840, to August, 1846.

Henry W. Greene, chief justice from November term, 1846, to April term, 1855.

Daniel Baldwin, justice from September term, 1853, to December, 1855.
Elias B. D. Ogden,¹ justice from January, 1856, to January term, 1865.

Joseph D. Beale,² justice from May, 1865, to January, 1875.

Manning M. Knapp, justice, from January, 1875, to the present time.

JUDGES OF THE COMMON PLEAS.

Feb. 27, 1840, John J. Van Buskirk, Cornelius V. V. Kingsland, Stephen Garretson,³ Peter H. Kipp,³ Joseph Clark.³

Nov. 13, 1840, Richard Outwater.³

Nov. 3, 1841, Gilbert Merritt,³ Richard Outwater.

Nov. 10, 1841, Stephen H. Lutkins.³

Oct. 27, 1843, Cornelius Van Winkle,³ John G. Speer, Michael Sander,³ James Striker, James J. McDonald.

Nov. 10, 1843, John Griffith,³ George C. De Kay,³ Jabez Wakeman.

Under the New Constitution of 1844 (term five years.)

March 3, 1847, Stephen Garretson.

March 2, 1848, Thomas A. Alexander.

Feb. 28, 1849, Cornelius Van Winkle, John Griffith, vice Alexander.

March 6, 1850, George Thomas.

Feb. 21, 1851, Edmund T. Carpenter.

Feb. 5, 1852, Samuel M. Chambers,¹ Samuel Browning, vice Carpenter.

March 4, 1853, John Griffith, Richard Kinley, Jr., vice Van Winkle, deceased.

March 8, 1854, Edmund T. Carpenter, Selah Hill, vice Chambers.

Feb. 8, 1856, Samuel Browning.

Feb. 18, 1856, Edmund Charles, Charles Fink, vice Browning, deceased.

March 17, 1859, Jacob M. Merselos.

March 15, 1860, James Pope, vice Charles, deceased.

April 9, 1861, William C. Morris (commissioned by the Governor.)

March 5, 1862, Samuel M. Chambers.

March 11, 1863, John Sturges.

April 1, 1863, William C. Morris, vice Merselos.

March 2, 1864, Frederick W. Bohmstedt.

Feb. 27, 1867, Stephen Quafie (resigned April 1, 1870).

March 11, 1868, John Sturges.

April 9, 1868, Benjamin F. Randolph, first law judge.

March 20, 1869, Frederick W. Bohmstedt.

March 16, 1870, John Brinkerhoff, vice Quafie, resigned.

April 1, 1872, James M. Nowkirk.

April 1, 1873, William T. Hoffman, second law judge.

April 1, 1873, James Wiggins.¹

April 1, 1874, Stephen Quafie, to April 1, 1876.

April 1, 1877, John Brinkerhoff, vice Newkirk.

Oct. 4, 1877, Elijah T. Paxton, to April 1, 1878, vice Wiggins.

April 1, 1878, Abram Q. Garretson, third law judge.

April 1, 1879, Asa W. Fry, to April 1, 1884, vice Quafie.

April 1, 1882, John Brinkerhoff re-appointed.

April 1, 1883, Alexander J. McGill, Jr., fourth law judge.

April 1, 1884, Marcus Beach, vice Fry.

PROSECUTORS OF THE PLEAS.

Lewis D. Hardenbergh, 1840-45.

Isaac W. Scudder, 1845-50.

Edwin R. V. Wright, 1850-55.

J. Dunn Littell, 1855-60.

Isaac W. Scudder, 1860-65.

Richard D. McClelland, 1865-68.

J. Harvey Lyons (appointed by the Governor), from September, 1868, to January, 1869.

Abram Q. Garretson, 1869, to April, 1878.

Alexander T. McGill, Jr., 1878-83.

Charles H. Winfield, from April 1, 1883, (present prosecutor).

COUNSEL TO THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.⁴

Abram Q. Zabriskie, from May, 1857, to May, 1859.

Isaac W. Scudder, from May, 1859, to May, 1866.

Jacob R. Wortendyke, 5 from May, 1866, to November, 1868.

William Brinkerhoff, from November, 1868, to May, 1872.

Jacob Weart, from May, 1872, to May, 1874.

Job H. Lippincott, from May, 1874, to present time, he being in office in 1884.

ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS.

Loon Abbott, admitted attorney June, 1865; admitted counselor June, 1865.

Halsey W. Allen, admitted attorney November, 1881.

Mervyn Armstrong, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1879.

Joseph Annin,⁶ admitted attorney November, 1842; admitted counselor January, 1846.

Robert O. Babbit, admitted attorney February, 1873; admitted counselor November term, 1878.

John V. Bacon, admitted attorney February, 1881; admitted counselor February, 1884.

William S. Baker, admitted attorney June, 1882.

Johnson D. Banghart, admitted attorney June, 1862.

William B. Barricklo, admitted attorney November, 1881.

Albert H. Balliet, admitted attorney February, 1883.

G. H. Barron, admitted attorney February, 1881.

Peter Bentley, admitted attorney May, 1834; admitted counselor September, 1839.

Peter Bentley, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1868; admitted counselor June, 1871.

Joseph D. Beale, admitted attorney June, 1853; admitted counselor June, 1856.

John C. Besson, admitted attorney February, 1863; admitted counselor February, 1866.

Samuel A. Besson, admitted attorney June, 1879; admitted counselor June, 1882.

H. M. T. Bookman, admitted attorney June, 1880.

William H. Bell, admitted attorney November, 1877.

John W. Russell, admitted attorney June, 1873; admitted counselor June, 1880.

Charles C. Black, admitted attorney June, 1881.

John A. Blair, admitted attorney June, 1869; admitted counselor June, 1872.

Adonijah S. Boyd, admitted attorney April, 1847.

William Brinkerhoff, admitted attorney November, 1865; admitted counselor February, 1869.

James N. Braden, admitted attorney June, 1876.

George R. Brown, admitted attorney June, 1875.

Morris Bretzfeld, admitted attorney February, 1865; admitted counselor February, 1868.

¹ Died July 21, 1877.

² Died in office Aug. 23, 1868.

³ Resigned to accept office of law judge.

⁴ An examination of the minutes does not show that any regular counsel was appointed prior to the appointment of Mr. Zabriskie, in 1857.

⁵ Died in office Nov. 7, 1868.

⁶ Died.

¹ Died Feb. 31, 1856.

² Resigned to accept office of Governor.

³ Judge and Justice.

⁴ Resigned.

Henry Bretzfeld, admitted attorney June, 1874.
 Archibald K. Brown, admitted attorney June, 1851; admitted counselor February, 1866.
 Francis M. Brown, admitted attorney November, 1866.
 A. B. Bunting, admitted attorney November, 1867; admitted counselor June, 1881.
 William G. Bunstead, admitted attorney June, 1879.
 Lewis C. Bush, admitted attorney June, 1864.
 S. Cassedy, admitted attorney May, 1846; admitted counselor Sept. 1866.
 William S. Cassedy, admitted attorney September, 1846.
 George W. Cassedy, admitted attorney July, 1845.
 Samuel W. Carey, admitted attorney June, 1863; admitted counselor June, 1856.
 Thomas Carey, admitted attorney June, 1855.
 Charles K. Cannon, admitted attorney November, 1869; admitted counselor November, 1874.
 Marshall H. Casady, admitted attorney November, 1879.
 Charles J. Carrick, admitted attorney November, 1888.
 James M. Chapman, admitted attorney April, 1846; admitted counselor July, 1849.
 James Chapman, admitted attorney February, 1881.
 Cornelius C. Carr, admitted attorney February, 1890; admitted counselor February, 1863.
 James J. Christie, admitted attorney June, 1876; admitted counselor November, 1873.
 Albert S. Clark, admitted attorney February, 1892; admitted counselor February, 1881.
 Henry L. Clayton, admitted attorney November, 1866; admitted counselor November, 1868.
 Frank L. Clark, admitted attorney November, 1877; admitted counselor November, 1881.
 M. C. Cleveland, admitted attorney June, 1892.
 Gilbert Collins, admitted attorney February, 1860; admitted counselor February, 1873.
 Duane Conant, admitted attorney November, 1875.
 Henry V. Condit, admitted attorney November, 1877; admitted counselor November, 1881.
 Charles L. Corbin, admitted attorney November, 1871; admitted counselor February, 1875.
 William H. Corbin, admitted attorney November, 1874; admitted counselor November, 1877.
 Elsie S. Cowles, admitted attorney February, 1868; admitted counselor February, 1871.
 Edward B. Cox, admitted attorney June, 1876.
 William Cranston, Jr., admitted attorney February, 1871.
 M. Craven, admitted attorney February, 1882.
 James M. Cullver, admitted attorney June, 1873.
 Mark Curlew, admitted attorney November, 1867.
 W. C. Culpp, admitted attorney June, 1864.
 Mangus Currie, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1862.
 Alfred B. Dwyer, admitted attorney June, 1869.
 William D. Daly, admitted attorney June, 1874.
 Frank Davis, admitted attorney February, 1875.
 William H. Davis, admitted attorney November, 1865; admitted counselor June, 1880.
 George R. Davis, admitted attorney November, 1882.
 William J. Davis, admitted attorney June, 1884.
 Edward D. Deacon, admitted attorney February, 1867; admitted counselor November, 1878.
 John S. De Hart, admitted attorney June, 1864; admitted counselor June, 1867.
 Edward P. De Matt, admitted attorney November, 1874.
 Jonathan Dixon, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1862; admitted counselor November, 1865.
 Asa W. Dickinson, admitted attorney June, 1869.
 William F. Douglas, admitted attorney February, 1867; admitted counselor February, 1870.
 William M. Douglass, admitted attorney June, 1881; admitted counselor June, 1864.
 Clarence A. Erew, admitted attorney February, 1879.
 R. S. Darling, admitted attorney June, 1872.
 Frederick W. DeFord, admitted attorney June, 1879.
 William D. Edwards, admitted attorney June, 1878.
 Luther S. Elmer, admitted attorney February, 1844.

Anthony E. Everett, admitted attorney June, 1862.
 James S. Eves, admitted attorney February, 1881.
 Henry Ewell, admitted attorney June, 1884.
 William F. Fisk, admitted attorney June, 1876.
 George W. Finckel, admitted attorney February, 1871.
 James Finning, admitted attorney February, 1850; admitted counselor June, 1866.
 William D. Fisher, admitted attorney February, 1874.
 Frederick Foubach, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1866.
 William T. Foxworth, admitted attorney June, 1876.
 Charles W. Fuller, admitted attorney November, 1879.
 James J. Fuss, admitted attorney November, 1876.
 Abram Q. Garrison, admitted attorney November, 1861; admitted counselor November, 1861.
 J. Garvey, admitted attorney June, 1862; admitted counselor May, 1869.
 H. A. Gault, admitted attorney November, 1878.
 Robert Gilchrist, admitted attorney April, 1837; admitted counselor April, 1850.
 James Gilchrist, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1867.
 E. D. Gilchrist, admitted attorney November, 1867; admitted counselor November, 1858.
 William B. Gilman, admitted attorney November, 1870; admitted counselor November, 1866.
 William S. Gilbert, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1876; admitted counselor November, 1862.
 David Gould, admitted attorney June, 1862.
 George Grubrecht, admitted attorney February, 1874.
 William Gray, admitted attorney February, 1869.
 David H. Greig, admitted attorney June, 1867.
 Andrew S. Greig, admitted attorney June, 1884.
 John C. Griffin, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1881.
 Harvey Grubb, admitted attorney November, 1872.
 Lewis D. Grunbergh, admitted attorney May, 1823; admitted counselor November, 1868.
 Jacob R. Harbo, admitted attorney June, 1856; admitted counselor February, 1869.
 Samuel D. Harlow, admitted attorney February, 1864.
 Charles H. Harshorn, admitted attorney November, 1872; admitted counselor November, 1875.
 C. B. Harvey, admitted attorney November, 1873; admitted counselor February, 1877.
 John W. Heck, admitted attorney November, 1876.
 Nelson T. S. Henry, admitted attorney November, 1877.
 John W. Herbert, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1876; admitted counselor June, 1879.
 William T. Hoffman, admitted attorney February, 1862; admitted counselor November, 1871.
 George Holmes, admitted attorney February, 1861.
 Remondus C. Howard, admitted attorney November, 1867.
 R. S. Hudson, admitted attorney February, 1861.
 William E. Huges, admitted attorney June, 1879.
 Earl Husley, admitted attorney June, 1862.
 John L. Inverigt, admitted attorney November, 1883.
 Thomas W. James, admitted attorney September, 1830; admitted counselor November, 1856.
 Abram S. Jackson, admitted attorney November, 1866; admitted counselor November, 1869.
 William H. Jelliff, admitted attorney June, 1863.
 Ferdinand S. Jeline, admitted attorney June, 1870; admitted counselor November, 1871.
 Thomas J. Kennedy, admitted attorney June, 1874; admitted counselor June, 1877.
 Thomas H. Kelly, admitted attorney February, 1881.
 Walter Kip, admitted attorney June, 1878.
 Joseph M. Knapp, admitted attorney June, 1861.
 John A. Landregan, admitted attorney November, 1871; admitted counselor February, 1875.
 William A. Lawrence, admitted attorney November, 1889; admitted counselor November, 1862.
 Robert L. Lawrence, admitted attorney November, 1876.
 Wm. A. Lewis, admitted attorney Nov., 1867; admitted counselor Nov., 1867.
 William Henry Lewis, admitted attorney June, 1879; admitted counselor June, 1879.

- Clara M. Deane, admitted attorney June, 1873; admitted counselor June, 1875.
- W. K. Leight, admitted attorney Feb., 1875; admitted counselor Feb. 78.
- John Linn, admitted attorney Nov., 1844; admitted counselor Oct., 1848.
- J. Dean Little, admitted attorney July, 1847; admitted counselor February, 1850.
- John I. Livingston, admitted attorney February, 1867; admitted counselor June, 1870.
- George Finn, admitted attorney June, 1886.
- Jonathan L. Lyons,¹ admitted attorney February 1854; admitted counselor February, 1867.
- Theodore F. Lutzler, admitted attorney November, 1879.
- J. Harry Lyons,² admitted attorney February, 1869; admitted counselor February, 1880.
- William J. Lyon, admitted attorney November, 1870; admitted counselor February, 1874.
- John S. Malon, admitted attorney June, 1893; admitted counselor, June, 1893.
- Howard MacSherry,² admitted attorney February, 1876.
- E. A. S. Man, admitted attorney November, 1868; admitted counselor November, 1871.
- G. E. Mar, admitted attorney November, 1879.
- Thomas J. Marz, admitted attorney February, 1879.
- Edwin Manners, admitted attorney November, 1889.
- James D. McAnitt, admitted attorney February, 1873; admitted counselor February, 1877.
- John J. Mara, admitted attorney June, 1892.
- Hiram E. Mason,² admitted attorney June, 1877.
- Wm. McVee, admitted attorney November 1874; admitted counselor February, 1879.
- H. P. McBurney, admitted attorney February, 1874.
- Richard D. McClelland,¹ admitted attorney November, 1851; admitted counselor November, 1854.
- George J. Metcalf, admitted attorney February 1880.
- William McCuskey, admitted attorney November, 1878; admitted counselor November, 1881.
- Joseph A. McCreery, admitted attorney November 1874; admitted counselor November, 1879.
- D. W. McCrea, admitted attorney November, 1882.
- A. L. McDermatt, admitted attorney November, 1877; admitted counselor June, 1881.
- P. H. McDermott, admitted attorney June, 1873; admitted counselor June, 1876.
- J. Flavel McGee, admitted attorney June, 1868; admitted counselor June, 1871.
- Alexander T. McGill, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1877; admitted counselor November, 1870.
- Samuel H. McGill, admitted attorney February, 1881.
- Francis J. McGowan, admitted attorney June, 1881.
- John A. McGrath, admitted attorney February, 1876; admitted counselor February, 1879.
- Charles Meyer, Jr., admitted attorney June, 1877; admitted counselor June, 1881.
- Jonathan D. Miller, admitted attorney May, 1827; admitted counselor May, 1831.
- Wm. D. Mills, admitted attorney Nov., 1876; admitted counselor Nov. 1880.
- James J. Minturn, admitted attorney November, 1880.
- William C. Morris,¹ admitted attorney November, 1818; admitted counselor November, 1824.
- Charles Morgan, admitted attorney June, 1899.
- Samuel C. Mount, admitted attorney June, 1870; admitted counselor June, 1876.
- Frank W. Moore,² admitted attorney November, 1877.
- William Mitchell, attorney June, 1866.
- George B. Mulgrew, admitted attorney November, 1880.
- Thomas M. Nash, admitted attorney February, 1876.
- Michael T. Newbold, admitted attorney June, 1868; admitted counselor June 1874.
- James S. Nevins, admitted attorney November, 1819; admitted counselor September, 1823.
- Morison W. Niven, admitted attorney February, 1871; admitted counselor February, 1877.
- Charles P. Neill, admitted attorney Nov., 1879; admitted counselor Nov. 1882.
- Joseph M. Noonan, admitted attorney November, 1881.
- James P. Northrup, admitted attorney November, 1880.
- John A. Nugent, admitted attorney June, 1874.
- James W. Nugent, admitted attorney November, 1881.
- Aron Ogden,² admitted attorney February 1784.
- Mathias Ogden,¹ admitted attorney November, 1814; admitted counselor February, 1818.
- F. B. Oglet, admitted attorney July, 1880; admitted counselor Feb. 1884.
- Garrick M. Olmstead,¹ admitted attorney February, 1856; admitted counselor February, 1868.
- John Olmstead, Jr., admitted attorney February, 1876; admitted counselor November, 1883.
- Eljah T. Paxton, admitted attorney June, 1866.
- Charles Partridge,¹ admitted attorney November, 1869.
- James Palmer, admitted attorney February, 1873; admitted counselor February, 1876.
- Randolph W. Parry, admitted attorney June, 1878; admitted counselor June, 1881.
- Joseph Parker, Jr. admitted attorney November, 1878; admitted counselor November, 1881.
- John B. Perry, admitted attorney November, 1863.
- William Pintard,² admitted attorney November, 1878; admitted counselor November, 1881.
- Joseph C. Potts,¹ admitted attorney September, 1843; admitted counselor June, 1870.
- J. Herbert Potts, admitted attorney February, 1874.
- Stacy G. Potts, admitted attorney November, 1879.
- Henry Puster, admitted attorney June, 1879.
- Joseph F. Randolph,¹ admitted attorney May, 1825; admitted counselor May, 1828.
- Bennington F. Randolph, admitted attorney February, 1839; admitted counselor November, 1842.
- Joseph F. Randolph, Jr. admitted attorney November, 1867; admitted counselor November, 1870.
- Stephen B. Ransom, admitted attorney September, 1844; admitted counselor October, 1847.
- Edward A. Ransom, admitted attorney November 1874.
- Charles A. Ransom, admitted attorney November, 1881.
- Carl Raish, admitted attorney February, 1881.
- Hugh P. Reilly, admitted attorney November, 1876.
- A. A. Rich, admitted attorney Nov., 1874; admitted counselor Feb., 1878.
- George M. Robeson,² admitted attorney July, 1830; admitted counselor February, 1834.
- William E. Rogers, admitted attorney November, 1867.
- Isaac B. Roome, admitted attorney November, 1862; admitted counselor November, 1865.
- James A. Roney, admitted attorney June, 1873.
- Maximilian T. Roseborough, admitted attorney November, 1881; admitted counselor November, 1884.
- Lensley Rowe,¹ admitted attorney June, 1875; admitted counselor November, 1878.
- Norman L. Rowe, admitted attorney November, 1867.
- Walter Rutherford,¹ admitted attorney September, 1834; admitted counselor September, 1837.
- Ludvic Rusor, admitted attorney February, 1877.
- Edward Russ, Jr., admitted attorney February, 1879.
- T. Ryerson, admitted attorney June, 1877; admitted counselor Feb., 1879.
- George A. Ryerson, admitted attorney February, 1883.
- Phillip J. Ryall, admitted attorney November, 1857; admitted counselor November, 1860.
- Max Sadinger, admitted attorney February, 1882.
- William W. Sanderson, admitted attorney June, 1874.
- Philip A. Sayles, admitted attorney November, 1876.
- James J. Schofield, admitted attorney May, 1829; admitted counselor May 1833.
- Charles E. Schofield,¹ admitted attorney May, 1843.
- Edward S. Seel, admitted attorney November, 1882.
- Isaac W. Seidler,¹ admitted attorney May, 1838; admitted counselor May, 1844.
- Patrick H. Seabill, admitted attorney June, 1875.
- Cornelius S. See, admitted attorney November, 1870; admitted counselor November, 1874.
- William G. See, admitted attorney November, 1878; admitted counselor November, 1882.

Ezra K. Segoria, admitted attorney November, 1879.
 Robert B. Seynour, admitted attorney June, 1887; admitted counselor June, 1897.
 H. B. Shrop, admitted attorney June, 1876.
 Albert Simon, admitted attorney June, 1881.
 Nathan L. C. Slight, admitted attorney February, 1869; admitted counselor February, 1893.
 Abel J. Smith, admitted attorney June, 1868; admitted counselor June, 1875.
 Samuel L. Southall, admitted attorney May, 1871; admitted counselor May, 1874.
 William C. Spencer, admitted attorney February, 1876; admitted counselor February, 1879.
 Theobald F. Stevens, admitted attorney June, 1883.
 H. Stout, admitted attorney June, 1861; admitted counselor, Feb., 1884.
 John A. Straley, admitted attorney June, 1884.
 William H. Studt, admitted attorney November, 1880.
 F. C. Stumpt, admitted attorney November, 1879.
 William Tuley, II, admitted attorney November, 1868; admitted counselor November, 1877.
 Isaac S. Taylor, admitted attorney June, 1864; admitted counselor November, 1871.
 Henry C. Terry, admitted attorney June, 1879.
 Aaron R. Throckmorton, admitted attorney May, 1811; admitted counselor October, 1846.
 Henry Trajason, admitted attorney November, 1864; admitted counselor November, 1865.
 Martin L. Trimmer, admitted attorney February, 1868; admitted counselor November, 1871.
 Benjamin C. Tinson, admitted attorney June, 1881.
 D. Turner, admitted attorney June, 1871; admitted counselor June 1874.
 Benjamin F. Vanelsve, admitted attorney May, 1849.
 James Van Blarcom, admitted attorney November, 1844.
 Alexander B. Vandevosout, admitted attorney November, 1877.
 John T. Van Clee, admitted attorney June, 1872; admitted counselor June, 1876.
 H. L. B. Van Dyck, admitted attorney June, 1862; admitted counselor June, 1873.
 Abraham Van Horn, admitted attorney June, 1877; admitted counselor June, 1876.
 George Van Horn, admitted attorney November, 1864; admitted counselor November, 1868.
 Daniel P. Voorhees, admitted attorney June, 1883; admitted counselor November, 1893.
 Charles H. Voorhis, admitted attorney November, 1866; admitted counselor November, 1898.
 William Voorhis, admitted attorney June, 1856.
 James B. Vredenburg, admitted attorney June, 1866; admitted counselor June, 1893.
 Stephen S. Vreeland, admitted attorney June, 1880.
 James W. Vroom, admitted attorney June, 1867; admitted counselor February, 1873.
 John P. Vroom, admitted attorney November, 1882; admitted counselor November, 1887.
 Edgar B. Wakeman, admitted attorney February, 1843; admitted counselor February, 1855.
 Alexander Watson, admitted attorney June, 1854.
 Hamilton Walls, admitted attorney February, 1874; admitted counselor November, 1878.
 Sharon H. Waples, admitted attorney June, 1865.
 Charles L. D. Washburn, admitted attorney June, 1878; admitted counselor June, 1881.
 J. Wwart, admitted attorney June, 1862; admitted counselor June, 1866.
 James M. Wwart, admitted attorney November, 1861.
 Spencer Wwart, admitted attorney June, 1879; admitted counselor November, 1882.
 Charles L. Welling, admitted attorney February, 1876.
 Charles White, admitted attorney November, 1862.
 Henry S. White, admitted attorney November, 1877; admitted counselor November, 1879.
 James Williams, I, admitted attorney May, 1812.
 Washington B. Williams, admitted attorney November, 1869; admitted counselor February, 1877.
 Benjamin Williamson, admitted attorney November, 1830; admitted counselor November, 1833.

Benjamin Williamson, Jr., admitted attorney November, 1833; admitted counselor February, 1869.
 Daniel L. Wood, admitted attorney June, 1867; admitted counselor June, 1880.
 William K. Woodson, admitted attorney June, 1857.
 Alexander H. Wood, admitted attorney February, 1877.
 Henry E. Wills, admitted attorney November, 1879; admitted counselor November, 1882.
 Charles H. Wood II, admitted attorney November, 1865; admitted counselor February, 1880.
 H. Westervick, admitted attorney June, 1870; admitted counselor June, 1882.
 Henry Harrison Wessely, admitted attorney February, 1866.
 William H. Wood, admitted attorney November, 1875.
 William P. Wood, admitted attorney November, 1869.
 Joseph B. Woodruff, admitted attorney February, 1863; admitted counselor February, 1869.
 B. P. Wortendyke, admitted attorney June, 1869; admitted counselor February, 1872.
 Edwin R. A. Wright, admitted attorney May, 1835; admitted counselor February, 1841.
 James H. Wright, admitted attorney June, 1860.
 Samuel C. H. Wright, admitted attorney November, 1862.
 E. D. Wicks, admitted attorney June, 1871; admitted counselor February, 1877.
 Abraham Zabriskie, admitted attorney November, 1828; admitted counselor November, 1831.
 Ludwig Zabriskie, admitted attorney February, 1859; admitted counselor November, 1862.
 Augustus Zabriskie, admitted attorney June, 1866; admitted counselor June, 1869.
 David D. Zabriskie, admitted attorney November, 1862.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

MEDICAL PROFESSION IN HUDSON COUNTY.

Prior to Feb. 27, 1840, Hudson County formed a portion of the county of Bergen, and its medical history, independent of that county and the neighboring county of Essex, is necessarily of very recent date. Its territory is smaller than that of any other county in the State, and its entire population in 1840 was but 9436. No distinct medical society existed here before 1851, in which year, on the 13th of May, the present society was instituted. Until that time the territory of the Passaic District Medical Society extended over Hudson County. On the organization of the District Medical Society of Hudson County, in 1851, the names of thirty-seven members were enrolled. In 1883 the number enrolled is found to be forty-one. In connection with this last statement, it may be interesting to compare the total number of physicians registered in each county with the number belonging to their respective District Medical Societies, and in order to do this the report of the State Board of Health for 1883 and the Transactions of the State Medical Society for the same year have been used.

Atlantic . . .	40 registered,	17 members of County Society
Bergen . . .	31 "	23 "
Burlington . . .	82 "	31 "
Camden . . .	118 "	77 "
Cape May . . .	33 "	None "
Cumberland . . .	41 "	19 "
Essex . . .	510 "	102 "

¹ Diss.

² Removed.

³ Diss.

⁴ Removed.

Gloucester	1 st Register	14 members of County Society.
Hudson	175	41
Hunterdon	74	18
Monroe	68	45
Middlesex	70	18
Morris	156	30
Morris	54	25
Ocean	20	6
Passaic	98	43
Salmon	40	13
Somerset	45	13
Sussex	27	20
Union	102	37
Warren	25	17
	1675	382

The number of physicians belonging to the Sussex Society is somewhat extraordinary, especially if the whole number registered be taken into consideration. In the other counties the average number of society members is about one-third of the number registered. The Hudson County District Medical Society was at the height of its prosperity in 1874, when it had sixty members, a larger number than that of any other society in the State. The next year, however, the number of its members decreased to forty, and in 1879 was reduced to twenty-seven. During the last three years its number has remained at forty-one.

Within the territory of Hudson County, while it still formed a part of Bergen County, resided several eminent physicians, whose names are favorably associated with the early medical history of the State, but concerning some of them very little of a personal nature can be ascertained. The same thing is true in regard to a large number of physicians who have resided in Hudson County during the last forty or fifty years. Many of them have practiced there but a short time and then removed, while others have died without leaving for the future historian any record of their lives.

JOSIAH HORNBLOWER, son of Josiah Hornblower, an engineer, who came from England to America about the year 1753 for the purpose of erecting a steam-engine at the copper mines then belonging to Col. John Schuyler, near Belleville, N. J., was born at that place May 23, 1767. His elementary education was obtained under the direction of his father, who, though not liberally educated, was a great student, and especially devoted to scientific investigations. At a suitable age young Josiah entered on the study of medicine with Dr. Thomas Steele, who, as far as can be known, was the earliest established physician in Belleville, and who was a surgeon in the British army during the Revolutionary war. On assuming the responsibilities of a physician, Dr. Hornblower began, in 1789, to practice in the town of Bergen, now a part of Jersey City. The territory over which he traveled in the discharge of his professional duties included all of Hudson County as now described, Old Hackensack and Fort Lee and the northern end of Staten Island. For more than eighteen years there were but two physicians besides himself in that district. In the war of 1812 he was appointed a surgeon in the United States army, and was assigned to duty on Governor's Island and at the arsenal in Bergen. In 1828 to 1832 he was professor of the practice of medicine in Rutgers Medical College. Until 1844 he continued actively engaged in practice, and died May 8, 1848, leaving two sons, Josiah and William, both of whom became physicians. One of his brothers was the late Joseph C. Hornblower, chief justice of New Jersey.

JOHN MESIER CORNELISON was born April 29, 1802, in the old town of Bergen, Hudson Co., N. J., and was the son of Rev. John Cornelison, pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church of that place for thirty-five years. His preparatory education was obtained in Columbia Academy of his native place, and having subsequently entered Union College, he was graduated therefrom in 1822. He soon after began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. Valentine Mott, and in 1825 received his degree of M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. On entering upon the practice of his profession he opened an office at Bergen, but his field of labor extended from Bergen Point to Bull's Ferry, including Hoboken and Paulus Hook, and there were but two physicians besides himself within all that territory. In 1840 he removed to Jersey City proper, retaining, however, his old practice, and continuing active therein until 1862, when he withdrew from professional labors.

Notwithstanding his large practice and his devotion thereto, Dr. Cornelison found time for the discharge of public duties, and accordingly we find him, in 1832, a member of the State General Assembly. In 1851 he was appointed by Governor Fort one of the lay judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, to fill the four years' unexpired term of Hon. Garret Wall. On the expiration of this term he was reappointed for six years, and thereafter for another term of six years, thus holding this important position for a period of sixteen years. Prior to the breaking out of the Rebellion he had been a staunch Democrat, but after that event he took his stand in support of the war measures of the government, and ultimately became a warm Republican. In 1869 he retired from the bench, and was soon after elected mayor of Bergen, to which place he had returned after withdrawing from practice in 1862. In 1873 he was appointed a member of the Board of Works, and was made its chairman. At the time of his death, which occurred May 24 1875, he was president of the board of regents of the Hudson County Hospital.

JOSIAH HORNBLOWER, son of Dr. Josiah Hornblower above noticed, was born at Bergen, N. J., Aug. 7, 1792. He studied medicine with Dr. Valentine Mott, and was graduated from Rutgers Medical College, New York, in 1823. Soon afterwards he became associated in practice with his father, giving promise of the highest skill as a surgeon, but unfortunately he contracted pneumonia, which resulted in hasty consumption, and terminated his life Jan. 23, 1824. He left a widow and four children.

THOMAS BROWN GAFFIER was born near Jersey

City, July 25, 1795. He was descended from a Huguenot family of that name, who settled in New York during the latter part of the seventeenth century. His father and grandfather were both educated men and lawyers, though it does not appear that either of them ever engaged in the practice of law. Thomas Brown Gautier was a graduate of Columbia College, and in 1823 received the degree of M. D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. The same degree was again conferred upon him by Rutgers College in 1831. He began the practice of his profession in Bergen, where he remained until 1835, when he removed to Jersey City. Here he continued to practice with great success until the time of his death, which occurred Dec. 23, 1845.

Dr. Gautier married, in 1816, Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Josiah Hornblower, by whom he had eight children, the second being Josiah Hornblower Gautier, who also became a physician, and is elsewhere noticed in this volume.

SILAS L. CONDIET was born in Morristown, N. J., in August 1805. His father was Dr. Lewis Condiect, who was eminent not only as a physician, but as a statesman, having been from 1805 to 1810 a member of the State General Assembly, and from 1811 to 1817, also from 1821 to 1833, a Representative in the United States Congress. Young Silas received such a thorough preparatory education that he was able to enter the junior class of the College of New Jersey, and was graduated from that institution in 1824. He began immediately afterwards the study of medicine with his father, and in 1826-27 attended his first course of medical lectures in New York. In 1827 he entered the office of Dr. Thomas Sewall, in Washington City, and attended a second course of lectures, receiving the degree M. D., in March, 1828. For the first two years after graduating he practiced medicine in his native place, and then removed to Newtown, Long Island, where he entered into partnership with Dr. Ezekiel Ostrander. Here he suffered so much from miasmatic disease that he was unable to attend to his professional duties, and consequently returned to Morristown, whence, after a few years, he removed to Jersey City.

Dr. Condiect was a zealous laborer in the cause of temperance. He was among the earliest members of the order of the Sons of Temperance, and took a very lively interest in that organization. Of Fidelity Division in Jersey City he was several times the presiding officer. He became a Grand Worthy Patriarch of the order in the State of New Jersey, and finally the head of the order in North America. About a month before his death he stated his views in relation to the diseases and condition of inebriates before the State Medical Society, to which he was a delegate, and urged upon the society the propriety of memorializing the Legislature in favor of establishing an inebriate asylum by the State. The matter was favorably received and a committee was appointed. Dr. Condiect died Feb. 4, 1846, highly respected as a physician and beloved as a man of noble and unselfish nature.

WILLIAM T. V. H. HORNBLOWER, brother of the last-mentioned Josiah Hornblower, was born at Bergen, N. J., Oct. 22, 1809. He studied medicine under the supervision of Professor John B. Beck of New York, and after a thorough preparation matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of that city, and was graduated therefrom March 1832. Soon thereafter he returned to his native place, and entered upon the practice of his profession in partnership with his father, whose field of labor extended from Bergen Point to English Neighborhood. In 1844, the father, being well advanced in years, retired from active service, and the business devolved upon the son, who continued to conduct it alone for two years after the father's death, which occurred in 1848. In 1850, Dr. Hornblower removed to Illinois, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits. Of these, however, he grew weary, and in 1853 returned to his native place and resumed the practice of his profession, in which he continued until near the time of his death, which occurred April 3, 1881. He was highly esteemed as a physician and greatly beloved for his deeds of charity to the poor and his manifold kindness to every one. He left two sons who became physicians,—Josiah and Theodore Romeyn, both of whom are elsewhere noticed in this volume.

CHARLES S. SHELTON was born in Huntington, Fairfield Co., Conn., Aug. 28, 1819. He was graduated from Yale College in 1840, and subsequently received the degree of M. D., from the Medical Department of the same institution. The early years of his professional career were spent as a missionary physician and surgeon in India, in the service of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. In this field of labor his health became so much impaired that he was obliged to return to his native country. In 1856 (about a year after leaving India) he repaired to Davenport, Iowa, whence, after remaining three years, he removed to Springfield, Ill. Here he continued to practice until 1867, with the exception of the years 1861 and 1862, during which time he served as a surgeon in the Union army.

In the year 1867, Dr. Shelton became converted to the teachings of the homœopathic school, and settling in Jersey City, began to practice in accordance therewith. He was very successful, and was also highly esteemed by all who knew him, but his health, which had been so injured during his residence in India, gradually gave way entirely, and he finally died, greatly lamented, May 21, 1879.

JOSIAH HORNBLOWER GAUTIER, son of Dr. Thomas Brown Gautier, elsewhere noticed in this volume, was born in Bergen, Hudson Co., N. J., Nov. 12, 1818. He was educated at the University of New York, and in 1843 was graduated from the Medical Department of that institution. Soon after graduation he settled as a practitioner in Jersey City, where he continued in the work of his profession until 1853. During those ten years he won a high reputation as a physician, but finally retired from practice in order to engage in business pursuits. In accordance with this design, he formed a connection with Joseph Dixon in the crucible works in Jersey City, and subsequently became interested in the steel works in the same place. He is now the leading partner in the firm of J. H. Gautier & Co. and of Gautier, Parker & Co.

THEODORE ROMEYN VARIK, M.D., was born June 24, 1825, in Dutchess County, N. Y. His father, John Vredenburg Varick, was a native of New York City. His mother, Anna Maria Romeyn Varick, belonged to the Romeyn family of Hackensack, N. J. Members of that family have for the last three generations ministered to the congregation of the Reformed Dutch Church in that place, and the pulpit is at present filled by one of them. His great-uncle, Col. Richard Varick, leaving his profession, that of the law, enrolled himself during the Revolutionary war among his country's defenders, and was attached to Gen. Benedict Arnold's staff at the time of the traitor's defection. Subsequently Col. Varick became private secretary to Washington and continued in that office until the close of the war. He was recorder of New York City from 1783 to 1788, being also from 1787 to 1788 member of Assembly. From 1788 to 1789 he served as Attorney-General of the State of New York. In the latter year he was elected mayor of the city of New York, holding that office for eleven consecutive years. He died in 1831, "full of years and honors," and was buried at Hackensack. In 1832, Dr. Varick's father removed to Jersey City, occupying as a country residence Col. Varick's old homestead and remaining there until his death in 1835. In 1845 the family removed to New York, returning to Jersey City in 1848. In 1841, Theodore R. Varick entered the Collegiate Department of the New York University, and in 1843 began the study of medicine in the same institution, graduating in 1846, before attaining his twenty-first year. Soon after graduation he received an appointment as assistant physician in the New York Dispensary, corner White and Centre Streets, and the following year became one of the corps of attending physicians, serving in that capacity for two years. During this period (1847) the ship fever prevailed as an epidemic, and three out of a medical staff of six succumbing to the disease, fell martyrs to their noble profession. In the fall of 1848 he returned to Jersey City, where he has since resided. In 1851 he became one of the incorporators of the District Medical Society of Hudson County, N. J., and is at the present time, with one exception, the only surviving charter member. In 1853 he was elected a member of the American Medical Association. He is also a fellow of the New Jersey State Medical Society, and was its president in 1864. In that capacity he addressed them upon the occasion of their annual meeting in a learned and suggestive dissertation upon the "Attributes of Mind: their Operations and Effects." He belongs to the New York Academy of Medicine, and has been an honorary member of the New York State Medical Society since 1869. Of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine he was the first president. His address to the society, in 1875, upon the "Causes of Death after Operations and Grave Injuries," was reported by the New York Medical Journal in October of that year. He is also connected with the Jersey City Pathological Society and with the Neurological Society of New York City. In 1869 he was appointed by Governor Randolph surgeon-general of the State of New Jersey, and still holds that position. He is medical director and surgeon of St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, and also surgeon to the Jersey City Charity Hospital. He is also manager for the State Asylum for the Insane, located at Morris Plains, N. J. He was a member, in 1876, of the Centennial Medical Commission for New Jersey. In 1867 he reported to the Medical Record a case of "Complete Lateral Luxation of the Radius and Ulna Outward to the Radial Side." The records of medical science contain but thirteen similar cases, those having occurred in France. He also published an article on "Urticaria produced by Hydrocyanic Acid." This was as early as 1847, and in the same year he wrote another paper on "The Use of Nitrate of Silver in Acute Laryngitis." In 1859 he contributed to the medical press an account of the removal of a fibro-cellular tumor from the tongue with the caesaree. In 1869 he recorded a case of "Sub-periosteal Resection of the Clavicle." Among other papers were "A Case of Femoral Aneurism successfully treated by Intermittent Pressure," New York Medical Journal, March, 1878; "Cases of Sub-periosteal Resection," New York Medical Journal, July, 1878; "Statistics of Amputations Performed at St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, from 1871 to 1881," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, April 1881; "Distal Compression applied in a Case of Inguinal Aneurism, with a Successful Result," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, July, 1881; "A Case of Amputation at the Hip-Joint in which Professor Trendelenburg's Method of Controlling Hemorrhages was Resorted to with Recovery of Patient," American Journal of the Medical Sciences, October, 1882; "On Railroad Injuries of the Extremities of the Human Body, with Observations on the Site of Amputation and Subsequent Treatment of the Stump," read before the American Medical Association at Washington, May 7, 1884.

Dr. Varick's contributions to the medical literature of his day are numerous and important. Written, as they have been, at times snatched from the sterner duties of the profession, they show that he is a physician "born, not made,"—one who loves science for its own sake, as well as for the power it gives him of alleviating human suffering. Dr. Varick was married, in 1846, to Aleina J. Woolsey, of Jersey City. Their children are William Woolsey (a practicing physician in Jersey City and surgeon of the St. Francis Hospital), Anna Maria Romeyn (Mrs. Charles E. Grosbeck), Theodore Romeyn, Caroline Adelia (Mrs. E. K. Martin), George Clippinger, Mary Louise (died in infancy), and Edgar F. Randolph.

Theodor R. Varick M.D.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS DURRIE was born in New Haven, Conn., July 21, 1822. In 1843 he was graduated from Yale College, and in 1846 received his degree of M.D., from that institution. After practicing medicine according to the allopathic system for one year in his native place, he determined to give his attention to the homœopathic method of treatment, and City until 1884, when he removed to East Orange, Essex Co., N. J., where he is at present residing.

LORRENZO WELTON ELDER was born in Guilford, Chenango Co., N. Y., on the 15th of April, 1820. His advantages of education were obtained at the district school in Guilford, after which he chose medicine as a profession, and entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, graduated from that institution in 1847. He settled in Hoboken, and speedily secured a lucrative practice, which has continued until the present time. He has occupied a prominent position in the various professional organizations of the county, having been president of the Hudson County Pathological Society, and a member for that purpose, removing to New York, entered the office of Drs. Gray & Hull, then in partnership in that city. Under these preceptors he devoted himself sedulously to this mode of practice, and in 1847 removed to Jersey City, N. J., where he established himself as a practitioner of the new school of medicine. Dr. Durrie is regarded as the pioneer of homœopathy in Jersey City, being the first physician of that school to practice there. He was among the founders of the State Homœopathic Medical Society, and was the third president of that institution. For five years he was the physician to the almshouse of Hudson County. He continued to practice in Jersey City until 1884, when he removed to East Orange, Essex Co., N. J., where he is at present residing. From 1870 to 1872 he was physician to the Hudson County Hospital; is now president of the Board of Health and Vital Statistics of Hudson County, and from 1851 to 1861 was brigade surgeon of the State militia. He was deputy adjutant-general on the staff of Gen. Rodman M. Price, and is local examiner of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark and of the New York Life Insurance Company.

Lorenzo W. Elder

From 1859 to 1863, he was superintendent of the public schools of Hoboken, and for three years has been tax commissioner of the city.

He was mayor of Hoboken in 1863, a critical period in the country's history, and contributed greatly by his loyalty and zeal to the recruiting service and furtherance of measures for the conduct of the war. Dr. Elder was married, in 1853, to Miss Helen Hall Craig, of Philadelphia. Their children are a daughter, Josephine Lippincott, married to Gasper C. Barnette, and a son, George Wilks.

HENRY DOBBS HOIT was born in New York City, Feb. 20, 1814, and was educated in the private schools of that place. In 1847 he was graduated from the Medical Department of New York City University, and soon after entered upon the practice of his profession in Harlem, N. Y. He subsequently practiced in Medina, N. Y., Madison, Wis. Oswego, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., and in Jersey City and Peapack, N. J. His practice from 1856 to 1879 was more or less combined with the drug business, and he gave also a great deal of time and attention to newspaper enterprises, with which he was, to some extent, identified as far back as 1835, and even earlier. Since 1879 he has retired from active practice.

ALFRED AUGUSTINE LUTKINS was born in the city of New York, Oct. 16, 1828. At a very early age his parents removed to Jersey City, and there he obtained his academic education. In 1846 he matriculated at the Medical Department of the University of New York, and on passing the required examination was licensed by the New Jersey State Medical Association in 1848. On arriving at his majority, and receiving his diploma, he began to practice in Jersey City, where he has since been occupied in the work of his profession. Dr. Lutkins was for several years president of the District Medical Society, and a member of the medical staff of the Jersey City Charity Hospital, as well as of the Hudson County Hospital. For five years he was city physician of Jersey City, and is said to enjoy a very extensive and lucrative practice.

JOSEPH EDWIN CULVER was born in Groton, New London Co., Conn., Feb. 9, 1823. Here he obtained his early education, and with such diligence did he apply himself to study that at the age of sixteen years he passed the necessary examination, and taught a public school in his native town. In 1839 and 1840 he was a student at the Connecticut Literary Institution, at Sudfield, where he was selected to deliver an oration at the commencement exercises. He made considerable progress in the Latin, Greek and French languages, but showed a decided preference for mathematics and natural sciences. Thus it was that he fixed upon the medical profession, and having mastered the necessary studies, matriculated at the Berkshire Medical College, at Pittsfield, Mass., in 1847, where he attended one course of lectures. In the fall of 1848 he attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and in the spring of 1849 was therefrom graduated M.D. On receiving his diploma he removed to that part of North Bergen which was subsequently included in Hudson City, and is now a portion of Jersey City. Entering at once upon the practice of his profession, he soon became quite successful, and was within a very short time chosen physician for the township of Bergen and North Bergen, as well as for Hudson County. These positions he occupied for several years.

Having become a member of the Passaic District Medical Society, he was, in 1850, sent as a delegate to the State Medical Society, and was there empowered to organize the District Medical Society of Hudson County, which was chartered the following year. In this society he took a very prominent and active part. He has held every office within its gift, and has been its historian and the custodian of its archives. In 1871, 1872 and 1873 he was one of the standing committee of the State Medical Society of New Jersey. Of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine he was a charter member, and was at one time its vice-president. So of the Jersey City Pathological Society he was one of the founders, and was also its first president. For many years he was a member of the New York Pathological Society, and of the Neurological Society of that city, of which he has been a member since its reorganization. He has been one of the attending physicians at St. Francis Hospital from its foundation. Dr. Culver has, at various times, made valuable contributions to medical literature, in which he has exhibited not only skill as a writer, but a profound knowledge of matters appertaining to his profession. Though attentive to the duties of his vocation, he has not neglected his duties as a citizen, and thus, during his residence of four years in Hudson City, he was city superintendent of public schools and one of the County Board of Examiners of Public School Teachers. To the schools themselves he gave a great deal of his personal attention, aiding in every way to build them up and to elevate the standard of instruction. In 1869 he was elected treasurer of Hudson City, a position which he held for eight years. He was one of the trustees of the Hudson City Savings-Bank, and the by-laws for the management of that institution were written by him.

NELSON R. DERBY was born in Lodi, Seneca Co., N. Y., July 20, 1823. His education was chiefly obtained in Ithaca, N. Y., and in Williamsport, Pa. In 1849 he was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo, New York, and soon after established himself in the practice of his profession in Elmira, N. Y., where he remained for several years. He subsequently removed to Hudson County, N. J., and there continued in practice for sixteen years. At the beginning of the war of the Rebellion Dr. Derby entered the United States army as a brigade-surgeon, and served in Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Louisiana. He was promoted to be medical director of the Sixteenth Army Corps, and while upon duty in this capacity was seriously wounded on the Red River expedition. In consequence of his wound he was laid aside from the practice of his profession, and is at present residing in Morristown, N. J.

ERST J. LOEWENTHAL was born at Heldingsfeld, Germany, in April, 1817. He received his education at the University of Wurtzburg, and from the same institution obtained his degree of M.D. After practicing medicine for several years in his native country he came to the United States, and settled in New York City. Here he remained some time, and subsequently, in 1857, removed to Hoboken, where he established himself in the practice of his profession, and where he still resides.

FRANCIS E. NOLLE was born at Rochester Monroe Co., N. Y., July 1, 1824. He was educated at Dayton and Ann Arbor, Michigan, and was graduated from the Medical Department of the Western Reserve College, Ohio, in 1851. He practiced his profession for some time in Michigan and in California. In 1860 he removed to Hudson County, N. J., and is at present a practitioner in Jersey City. He is a member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County, and belongs to the medical and surgical staff of Christ Hospital, Jersey City Heights.

JOSEPH HARRISON YONDY was born in the province of New Brunswick, Dominion of Canada, Oct. 9th, 1829. Having received a good preliminary education, he began the study of medicine in his native province, and subsequently entered the Medical Department of the University of New York City, and was graduated therefrom in 1851. He soon after began the practice of his profession in Jersey City, where he is at present successfully engaged. Since the establishment of the Jersey City Charity Hospital, in 1868, he has been a member of the medical staff, and is, besides, one of the physicians to the Hudson County Church Hospital. Of the District Medical Society of Hudson County he is a member, and has also been a delegate to the American Medical Association.

ALEXANDER H. LAIDLAW was born in Scotland, July 11, 1828. His preliminary education was received in the Central High School of Philadelphia, and in medicine he was graduated from the Philadelphia Medical College, and subsequently, in 1851, from the Homeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania. He began to practice in Philadelphia, whence he removed to New York, where he remained two years. For twenty-three years past he has been in Hudson County, his professional work being now limited to chronic diseases.

OTFOCAR E. KOPETZNY was born in Neuhaus, Bohemia, Jan. 2, 1821. He was educated at the University of Vienna, and on removing to the United States obtained his degree of M.D., from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. He is still practicing medicine in Jersey City, where he has resided during the last thirty-three years.

NATHANIEL FORTE was born in Colchester, Conn., Aug. 8, 1831. His early education was obtained at Bacon Academy, in his native place. Having made choice of the medical profession, he first entered the Medical Department of Yale College, and subsequently Berkshire Medical College, at Pittsfield, Mass., from which he was graduated in 1852. After engaging for a few years in the practice of his profession, his health failed to such an extent that he was obliged to retire therefrom, and removing to Jersey City in 1860, became the president of the Jersey City Insurance Company, a position which he at present occupies.

ELEAZER BOWEN was born at Rehoboth, Bristol Co., Mass., in October, 1829, and having received a careful preliminary education, entered Amherst College, but was obliged, on account of ill health, to leave in his junior year. He then applied himself to the study of medicine, and in 1853 was graduated from the Pittsfield Medical College, Mass. Soon thereafter he settled as a practitioner in Barnstable, Mass., and while there was led to investigate homoeopathy. His interest in it became so great that he was induced to go to New York in order to make a more thorough study of it, and after spending eight months in that city returned to his native State, settling successively in Lynn and Marblehead. In 1864 he removed to Jersey City, N. J., where he has been since engaged in active and successful practice. He is a member of the County Society and of the National Institute.

SAMUEL R. FORMAN was born in Freehold, Monmouth Co., N. J., May 22, 1835. Having received a good preparatory education, he entered the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, in 1851, and was graduated therefrom in 1854. Soon thereafter he was matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and having received his degree of M.D., at that institution, became connected with Bellevue Hospital as interne physician, and continued in that capacity for eighteen months. He then removed to Hoboken, N. J., where he engaged in private practice, and where he remained until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he entered the United States Army as assistant surgeon, and was appointed to duty on the supply steamers to the Gulf Squadron. In this position he remained until the close of the war, and then returning to private practice, established himself in Bergen, now incorporated with Jersey City, and continues in the work of his profession. He has always been an active member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County and a physician to the Hudson County Church Hospital.

HUGO H. E. SEIFELDEN was born in Crauz, East Prussia, Aug. 14, 1832. He was educated at Frederick's College, and was graduated M.D., from the University of Königsberg, East Prussia, in 1854. During the first two years of his practice he was an assistant surgeon in the British-German Legion, and subsequently, from 1857 to 1860, he was house surgeon at the Berlin University clinique. In 1860 and 1861 he was resident physician to the Hydropathic Institute at Berlin; in 1862 and 1863 physician to the Agricultural Academy near Königsberg; then, until 1866, a country practitioner in East Prussia. From that time until 1871 he was a staff surgeon in the Prussian army, and served before Metz, Paris and Dijon. On leaving the army he went to England, and was registered as a medical practitioner in Charlton (London District), and practiced thereafter almost exclusively as a ship surgeon, visiting various ports in Canada, Australia, Cape of Good Hope, Brazil, West Indies and the United States. In April, 1883, he registered as a physician in Hudson County, N. J., and is now engaged in practice in Hoboken. Dr. Scuttleben has written extensively on various subjects connected with his profession. He has been a contributor to the London Lancet and to other medical journals, as well as to the general press.

EDWARD PAYSON BUFFETT was born at Smithtown, Long Island, N. Y., Nov. 7, 1833. Having received his preliminary education at Burr Seminary, Manchester, Vt., he entered Yale College, and was graduated therefrom in 1854. In 1857 he received his degree of M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and the following year began the practice of medicine in Jersey City, N. J., where he is still occupied in the work of his profession. Dr. Buffett is a member of the visiting staff of Christ Hospital, Hudson County, and has been such since its foundation. He is also a member of the Hudson County Pathological Society and of the District Medical Society. To the public schools of the county he has rendered efficient aid as a member of the Board of Education of Jersey City, as well as the city of Bergen.

JOHN J. YOULIN was born in Rupert, Vt., Dec. 31, 1821, and received a good academic education at the Auburn Lyceum, Auburn, N. Y. After studying medicine for some time in the office of Dr. Augustus Willard, he attended a partial course of lectures at Geneva College, and subsequently a full course at the University of New York. In 1854 he was graduated from the Western Reserve Medical College, at Cleveland, Ohio, and was subsequently connected with the New York Dispensary, in White Street. He was originally a practitioner of the old school, but investigation and experiment induced him to become a homœopath, and as such he established himself in Jersey City, where he soon acquired an extensive and lucrative practice. Dr. Youlin was president of the New Jersey State Homœopathic Medical Society for eleven years, remaining in that position until a charter for it was obtained, in 1870. For several years he was president of the Hudson County Homœopathic Medical Society. He was also a medical director of the Jersey City Dispensary, vice-president of the American Institute of Homœopathy in 1870-72, and president of the Hudson County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Dr. Youlin died in October, 1881, highly esteemed by all who knew him.

THEODORE FRELINGHUYSEN MORRIS was born in New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 30, 1831. He was educated at the classical academy in Belvidere, Warren Co., N. J., and subsequently began his preparatory studies in medicine. In the winter of 1854-55 he attended lectures at the University of New York, and in the spring of the latter year, having been licensed to practice medicine by the New Jersey State Medical Society, he settled in Jersey City, and there began the work of his profession. To make himself as proficient as possible, he attended a course of lectures at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in the winter of 1862-63, and then obtained the diploma of this institution. Dr. Morris is a member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County, and has several times represented it in the State Medical Society. In 1876 he was a delegate to the American Medical Association. His interest in the Jersey City Hospital has been great from the time of its organization, and he is, and always has been, on its medical staff. The same is true in regard to the Hudson County Church Hospital, as well as of St. Francis Hospital, to both of which he has given his professional services. For several years he was physician to the Children's Hospital in Jersey City, and for a long time acted as city physician.

ROMEO F. CHABERT was born in London, England, Aug. 9, 1828, and is of French descent, his father having been a native of Avignon, France, and once an officer under Napoleon Bonaparte. In 1830 the family removed to the United States, and settled in New York City. Having received a good education at the celebrated French school of Peugnet & Brothers in that city, Romeo Chabert began and pursued the study of medicine under good preceptors until 1854, when he entered the Medical Department of the University of New York, from which institution he was graduated M.D., in 1856. During the following year he not only engaged in general practice, but attended the New York Ophthalmic School, and was graduated therefrom. In 1858 he removed to Hoboken, N. J., and there resumed the professional labors which have occupied him until the present time. Dr. Chabert is a member of various societies, among which are the District Medical Society of Hudson County, the New Jersey Academy of Medicine and the Jersey City Pathological Society. He has been a delegate to the State Medical Society of New Jersey, as well as to the State Medical Societies of New York and Massachusetts. In 1864 he represented the Hudson County Medical Society in the American Medical Association. For one year he was physician for the city of Hoboken, and one year its Superintendent of Public Schools. For fifteen years he was attending surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital of Hoboken, and during the last two years its consulting surgeon. In 1869 he was commissioned division surgeon of the Second Division New Jersey State National Guard, under Gen. E. R. V. Wright.

PHILIP M. SENDERLING was born in Brunswick, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., March 19, 1831. He was educated at Williams College, Massachusetts, from which institution he was graduated A.B., in 1852 and A.M., in 1854. Soon afterwards he entered the University of Pennsylvania, and there, in 1856, received his degree of M.D. He began at once the practice of his profession in Jersey City, where he remained until 1862, when he decided to offer his services in behalf of the Union in the war of the Rebellion. They were accepted, and he was appointed, in May, 1862, assistant surgeon First New Jersey Volunteers, which position he occupied until May, 1864, when he was promoted to be surgeon to the Eighth New Jersey Volunteers. From that time he was on active duty until July, 1865, when he was mustered out of service, the war having been brought to a close. In August following Dr. Senderling settled in Berwick, Columbia Co., Pa., where he resumed private practice. Here he remained until September, 1877, when he returned to Jersey City, and here he is still residing and is still laboring in the line of his profession.

JAMES HENDERSON McDOWELL was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 1, 1825, and received his academic education in Boston, Mass., and in Baltimore, Md. In 1857 he was graduated M.D., from the University of Maryland. In 1863 he established himself in the practice of his profession in Jersey City, where he still resides.

GILBERT D. SALTONSTALL was born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., June 19, 1831. He received his education at Trinity School, New York, and was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of New York. After practicing for some time in that city, he removed to Hoboken, N. J., where he has been engaged in the duties of his profession during the last twenty-six years.

ISAAC N. QUIMBY, M.D.,¹ was born at Bernardsville, near Basking Ridge, Somerset Co., N. J., Aug. 5, 1831, and was the son of Nicholas Emmons and Rachel Stout Quimby, whose family consisted of eight sons and one daughter. His father was a farmer, and had served as a soldier in the war of 1812. He was a grandson of Judge Nicholas Emmons, of the Supreme Court of New Jersey. His mother was highly esteemed as a lady of great executive ability and most excellent social qualities. Both grandfathers served in the army during the Revolutionary war. The subject of this sketch lost both his parents in early life, and was thrown almost entirely upon his own resources to achieve a position for himself. As he was unwilling to be a mere hewer of wood and drawer of water, he concluded to obtain employment in a grist-mill, where he learned thoroughly the management of that business. About 1850 he went to the West, and located at Zanesville, Ohio, where he assumed charge of a flour-mill. While thus employed as superintendent of the mill he made the acquaintance of Dr. Barr, of Zanesville, Ohio, who, perceiving his aptness and turn of mind, persuaded him to study medicine, which being more congenial to his tastes, he readily assented to.

He thus jointly pursued his labors and studies for about three years. Being of an economical turn of mind, he was enabled to save a sufficient sum to pursue a higher course of education.

Returning to his native State and home, and finding his education insufficient for the profession he had chosen, having only then received the advantages the country school afforded, he decided, with characteristic determination to educate himself. With this end in view, he overcame obstacles that would have discouraged and disheartened any ordinary youth; but with that courage and indomitable will-power which has so strongly marked him thus far through life, he entered Chester Institute, Chester, N. J., then a flourishing collegiate school, under the management of the late Professor Rankin. While there pursuing his studies with faithfulness and assiduity, he fitted himself for college.

He did not enter Princeton, as was intended but became a student of the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, and graduated from that institution at the close of the session of 1858-59. In 1859, acting upon the advice of his preceptor, Dr. Valentine Mott, he came to Jersey City, where he has since resided, and began the practice of his profession.

Dr Quimby first married, in 1863, Helen Stark, daughter of the late Thomas McKie, Esq., of New York, by whom he had three children, two of whom died in infancy. One son survives his mother who died in 1868. In 1875 he married Frances H., daughter of the late James Flemming, Esq., of Jersey City, by whom he has one son.

When the civil war broke out, yielding to his patriotic impulse, he left a lucrative practice and entered the army as a volunteer surgeon. He was with Gen. McClellan through the swamps of the Chickahominy, and in the Seven Days' battle and retreat to Harrison's Landing. In the battle of Antietam, and after the battle of the Wilderness, being ill, he returned home, and resumed the practice of his profession, in which he has been actively engaged from that time. He was formerly one of the lecturers in the spring course of the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York. He was also assistant to Professor A. C. Post, in his surgical clinic at the above university. He was the originator of the Hudson County (now Christ's) Hospital, and for some years one of its leading surgeons.

He is also the author and originator of several important surgical operations, viz.: May 5, 1868, he read before the American Medical Association meeting at Washington, D. C., a paper entitled, "A New Mode of Treatment of Congenital Tulipes (club foot)." Vide Transactions, vol. xix.

¹ Contributed.

In 1870 he read an original paper on "A New Method of Amputation at the Ankle-Joint," being an important modification of M. Pirogoff's (of Russia) operation. (See Transactions, vol. xxi.) In May, 1879, he read before the American Medical Association at Atlanta, Ga., an original paper describing an operation on parallel bones, resulting from "A case of Compound Fracture of the Tibia and Fibula." (See Transactions, vol. xxi.) In June, 1880, he read a paper before the American Medical Association on "The Criminal Use of Chloroform," describing the results growing out of his experiments as an expert in the celebrated trial of the Smith-Bennet murder case. See Transactions, vol. xxxi.

He is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society, a permanent member of the American Medical Association, a member of the American Public Health Association, and a member of the British Medical Association. In 1875 he visited Europe, going through many of the prominent hospitals and public institutions.

In 1881 he was delegated by the American Medical Association to the International Medical Congress, which convened in London, and took an active part in its proceedings.¹

During the same year he attended the meeting of the British Medical Association at Ryde, Isle of Wight, England. In 1884 he was again appointed a delegate from the American Medical Association to the International Medical Congress, held at Copenhagen, Denmark.

Dr. Quimby is and has long been an ardent advocate of abstemiousness from alcoholic drinks. He has closely studied the subject from a professional standpoint and from experiments and observations of its effects upon the system. He is firmly convinced of the pernicious influence of alcohol on the human economy. He read a paper, by invitation, before the New Jersey State Temperance Alliance, at Newark, Dec. 5, 1882, on the "Pathological Action of Alcohol in Health and in Disease," which was so well received by the society that five thousand copies were ordered to be printed. This pamphlet has received very flattering commendations from some of the prominent members of the medical profession, as well as from clergymen and laymen.

On reading the pamphlet, Professor Palmer, of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, says, "I therefore hail with pleasure such publications as yours, and hope soon to see more truth and less error on this subject in our standard medical literature."

Dr. Quimby was nominated for Governor by the Prohibition party in 1883, but, for various reasons, he was obliged to decline that honor. In the Presidential canvass of 1884, he has taken an active part with the Prohibition party, being one of the Presidential electors on the Prohibition ticket.

Dr. Quimby has always taken a deep interest in the reform movements of the city, State and nation. The breadth of his humanity is such that he believes in the theory that whatever affects any human being directly or remotely affects him. He believes with the poet that

"Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn."

He takes for his motto the words of Terence: "Nil humani a me alienum puto."

His earlier political life was developed in the school of Democracy, but when the civil war began, not liking the attitude of his party on the secession question, he followed his principles out of the Democratic party and joined the Republican ranks. He thus showed his strong conviction that the needs and claims of his country were matters of higher and more enduring interest than the claims of party. Dr. Quimby has always been an active participant in the political affairs of Jersey City and the State, and wields an extended influence. He has never been connected with any corrupting political schemes, but is always an irritating thorn in the side of political schemers, who have grown and flourished to such an alarming extent within the past quarter of a century. He was president of the first Citizens' Association of Jersey City, in 1870 and the following years, which did much towards breaking up the "Bumstead" ring. He was also one of the originators of the Anti-Monopoly Union of Hudson County, which did such good service in checking the inroads of the corrupting influences of railroad corporations, which have done much to destroy the growth and prosperity of Jersey City. It was largely due to his untiring industry and zeal that the monstrous railroad land-grabbing water-front bill known as Bill 167 was defeated in the Legislature.

Few men in the State are more dreaded by corrupt and corrupting corporations than Dr. Quimby. He is uncompromising, fearless, watchful, and never relinquishes his interest in any cause he seriously espouses.

JAMES WILKINSON was born at Accrington, England, April 27, 1837. In infancy he was removed to the United States, and reared and educated by an uncle at New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. His preliminary education was received principally at the boarding school of Rev. Thomas Towel, at Clifton Staten Island, and at the classical institute of Solomon Jenner, in New York. Thus prepared, he entered the University of the City of New York, and completed the course of study pursued in that institution. Soon after leaving the university he made the tour of Europe, and on his return entered, as a student, the office of Prof. Jas. R. Wood, with whom he studied medicine for three years. In 1858 he was graduated M. D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and soon afterwards established himself in the practice of his profession at Bergen, N. J.

¹See Transactions International Medical Congress, 1881, vol. iv.

Isaac Quincy, M.D.

Unambitious of political preferment, Dr. Wilkinson has confined himself strictly to his vocation, and has therein met with a success that is seldom surpassed. In 1875, his health becoming somewhat impaired by overwork, he visited Europe, and on his return resumed his labors in Bergen, now a part of Jersey City, where he is at present actively employed.

JOHN WESLEY HUNT.—The great-great-grandfather of Dr. Hunt emigrated from England to one of the New England colonies at an early day. His great-grandfather, William Hunt, was born in Rhode Island, and having married, removed to New Jersey, where his son, John Hunt, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born. He married and removed to Pennsylvania, the native State of Elijah Hunt, his son. The birth of John Wesley, son of the latter, occurred Oct. 10, 1834, in the town of Groveland, Livingstone Co., N. Y. His first opportunities of education were afforded at the district school of his native town and later at the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, Lima, N. Y., after which he became a student of medicine and graduated from the Medical Department of the University of New York City, in March, 1859.

During the following April he was appointed a member of the house staff of Bellevue Hospital, New York City, and performed the various duties of junior assistant, senior assistant, and house surgeon in turn, and satisfactorily completed his term of service Oct. 1, 1860, when Jersey City became his place of residence, and has since been the scene of his professional labors. He was, in May, 1861, commissioned surgeon of the Tenth Regiment New York State Volunteers, which he accompanied to Fortress Monroe, remaining with the command until May, 1862. Having then been commissioned brigade surgeon United States Volunteers, he was ordered to the charge of the Mill Creek General Hospital, near Fortress Monroe. While regimental surgeon his success in the treatment of what was subsequently known as "Chickahominy" fever was exceptional, the mortality being reduced to the low figure of two to the two hundred or more cases treated. While in charge of the Mill Creek Hospital he demonstrated the feasibility of perfectly ventilating a large building crowded with wounded men. In the main building, which was exclusively devoted to surgical cases, with two hundred and fifty patients, nearly all with injuries of sufficient gravity to confine them to bed, and most of them with suppurating wounds, the atmosphere was so free from taint that it was common for visitors to remark upon it and inquire if there were no bad cases in the hospital. To this perfect ventilation he attributed in a great measure the slight mortality and the rapid convalescence of his patients. Having, in August, 1862, been attacked with fever, he returned to the North, and for a period retired from the service. In March, 1863, he visited New Orleans as surgeon of a government transport, and returning, much improved in health and strength, the following May he resumed practice in Jersey City, having been in 1864 appointed examining surgeon of recruits drafted into the service. Dr. Hunt is an active member of the District Medical Society of the county of Hudson, of which he was secretary in 1863, vice-president in 1864, president in 1865 and treasurer in 1867. He has from time to time read essays and delivered addresses before the society, while the Transactions of the New Jersey Medical Society have also been enriched by his contributions. He was one of the organizers of the New Jersey Charity Hospital in 1869 and the first president of its medical board. He is one of the attending surgeons of the institution, as also attending surgeon to the Hudson County Church Hospital. Dr. Hunt was married, Oct. 10, 1866, to N. Adeline Reynolds, daughter of H. S. Reynolds, of Springfield, Mass. Their children are John Wesley, Jr., and an infant.

JOSIAH HORNBLLOWER was born in Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 15, 1836, and is a descendant of Josiah Hornblower, who, in 1753, came to the United States for the purpose of superintending the working of a copper mine in Belleville, N. J. The father and the grandfather of our subject were both physicians, practicing in Hudson County, and elsewhere noticed in this work. Josiah, the younger, received his preparatory education in the Bergen Academy, and having studied medicine for some time with his father, entered the Medical Department of the University of New York City, and was graduated therefrom M.D., in 1859. Since that time he has resided and practiced his profession in Jersey City, where he is highly respected as a physician and as a citizen. In 1870 he represented his district in the General Assembly of the State. In 1871, 1872 and 1873 he was treasurer of Jersey City, and at the present time is a member of the Board of Education.

FREDERICK SEUCAL was born in Offenbach, Germany, Aug. 31, 1842, and was educated at the gymnasium at Darmstadt and at the University of Giessen, from which he obtained his degree of M.D. He began the practice of his profession in his native town, in the hospital of which he was for some time an attendant physician. On removing to the United States, his medical diploma was indorsed by the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and he was also licensed by the New Jersey State Medical Society. In 1868 he established himself as a practitioner in Jersey City, and is still actively engaged in his profession in that city.

JAMES CRAIG was born in Glasgow, Scotland, Jan. 22, 1834. His education was commenced in that city, and on his removal to America was continued in the University of the City of New York, from the Medical Department of which he was graduated M.D. in March, 1861. In 1863 he became a licentiate of the Medical Society of New Jersey, and is now practicing medicine in Jersey City, where he established himself soon after graduating. Dr. Craig is a member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County and of the New York Medico-Legal Society. To medical literature he has contributed various papers, which have been read before the county and State societies. He was attending physician to St. Francis Hospital for some time after its organization.

WILLIAM HENRY NEWELL was born in the city of New York, Feb. 19, 1837, and is the son of the late Rev. Daniel Newell, a distinguished Presbyterian divine. He received his preliminary education at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and was then member of the American Institute of Homœopathy and a member of the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons of the Jersey City Dispensatory.

FRANK NICHOLS, M.D.—Edmund Nichols, the grandfather of Dr. Nichols, though of English descent, was a native of Massachusetts, and born at Sturbridge, in that State, where he was a prosperous farmer. He married Miss Sallie Wilder, and had children—Liberty, Proctor, Mary and Wyman. Liberty, the eldest of these, was born in Sturbridge in 1800, and succeeded to the land of his father, which he cultivated. He was, in 1822, married to Miss Polly Rich-graduated from Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. Soon afterwards he entered the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1859 obtained therefrom the degree of M.D. Instead of settling down at once in the practice of his profession, he spent some time in traveling and visiting various hospitals throughout the country, with a view to becoming more familiar with diseases in their different forms. On the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion, Dr. Newell, being in Baltimore, reunited with the Fifth Maryland Guards, of which he had formerly been a member, and went with them to Virginia. Here he was commissioned as surgeon, and served in the Confederate army until the close of the war, when he returned to the North and settled in Jersey City as a medical practitioner. He is a ardson, whose children are Harriet P., (Mrs. William L. Warner) Edmund L., George (a physician in Brooklyn) and Frank. The last named was born March 20, 1833, in Sturbridge, Mass., and until the age of eighteen remained upon the homestead devoting the winter months to obtaining such advantages of education as the neighboring school afforded, and aiding during the remainder of the year in the labor of the farm. He then became a pupil of the Wesleyan Academy, at Willbraham, Mass., and also engaged in teaching until twenty-one, when he entered the State Normal School, at Bridgewater, Mass., and graduated in 1856. He spent the following year as principal of the Reading Institute, at Reading, Pa., and acting in the same capacity in the grammar school

Frank Nichols

J. M. Smith

B. A. Watson M.S.

at New London, Conn. Having already begun the study of medicine, he entered the Pittsfield Medical College, at Pittsfield, Mass., and later became a student of the Homeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1861. Dr. Nichols' first field of labor was at Grafton, Mass., where he remained two years, and whence he removed to Somerville, N. J. After a brief residence at the latter point, he, in the fall of 1864, located in Hoboken, N. J., and speedily established an extended and lucrative practice of a general character, his labors having at times been so arduous as to have directors of the Hoboken Savings-Bank. Dr. Nichols is in politics a Republican, and although not an aspirant for official honors, has filled the responsible office of tax commissioner of the city of Hoboken.

His religious belief is in harmony with the creed of the Baptist Church. He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Hoboken, of which he has been for ten years treasurer and is now a deacon. Dr. Nichols was married, in 1857, to Miss Mary A., eldest daughter of J. H. Barton, of Worcester, Mass. Their children are four sons,—Frank Barton, Harry Frederick, George Lewis and Walter Edmunds.

J. T. Field

rendered cessation from professional employment absolutely imperative. He therefore, in 1868, devoted a period to rest and recuperation, and made a European tour, embracing England, Scotland, France and Switzerland. Dr. Nichols is one of the incorporators of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the State of New Jersey, in which he has filled the office of president. He is also a member and has been the president of the New Jersey Medical Club, and was in 1867 made a member of the American Institute of Homeopathy. He has devoted some attention to matters outside the profession, and is one of the

JACOB T. FIELD, M.D.—The progenitors of the Field family, who were of English extraction, early settled in Bound Brook, N. J. The father of the doctor was Jeremiah Field, who engaged in the labor incident to farm-life at North Branch, Somerset Co., N. J. He was married to Martha Longstreet, whose children were three sons,—Deputy, Aaron and Jacob T. The last named was born Aug. 3, 1839, at North Branch, N. J., where much of his youth was spent. He became a pupil of the common school near the place of his birth, and later enjoyed private instruction under Rev. Dr. Blauvelt. He entered the grammar school of Rutgers College in 1853, and became a student of the college in 1855, from which he graduated in 1859. Having determined upon medicine as a profession, he began his studies in the office of Dr. William Johnson, of Whitehouse, N. J., and received his diploma from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1861. The same year he entered the United States navy as assistant surgeon, and was assigned to active duty in the Gulf and Mississippi squadrons. He subsequently assumed charge of the hospital-ship "The Raven," in the Mississippi squadron, and retiring from the service in 1865, became a resident of Bayonne, N. J., where he has since been engaged in the pursuit of his profession. Here he enjoys an extended practice, not less as the result of his surgical skill than for the knowledge displayed in diagnosis.

Dr. Field is married to Miss Mary E. Minifie, of Baltimore, Md., and has one daughter, Frank. The doctor is a member of the Hudson County Medical Society, and active in the promotion of its interests.

B. A. WATSON, A.M., M.D.—Dr. Watson, the subject of this sketch, is a great-grandson of Perry Watson, a native of Rhode Island, a Revolutionary patriot, who participated in the battle of Bunker Hill. The father of the doctor, Perry Watson, a son of Beriah and grandson of this continental soldier, was born in the same State where his father and grandfather had first seen light on this mundane sphere; but in early life he moved to Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., and became a farmer, which occupation he followed here and in the adjacent county of Warren. He married, while living at Greenwich, Maria Place, but their third son, Beriah A., was born at Lake George, Warren Co., N. Y., on the 26th of March, 1836. Here the subject of this biography was early made acquainted with farm labor, but was allowed to encourage his taste for study, and enjoyed more than the ordinary advantages accorded to the sons of farmers. He early became a member of the family of Jonathan Streeter, an intelligent Quaker of that locality, where superior opportunities for mental discipline were afforded, and that orderly and systematic pursuit of knowledge acquired which laid the foundation for future success as a student and medical writer. After two years spent with the Quaker family he taught school with a view to acquiring sufficient means to prosecute his studies. At the age of twenty-one he entered the office of the late Dr. James Reiley, at Succasunna, Morris Co., N. J., where he studied medicine, and in the autumn of 1859 became a student of the Medical Department of the University of New York, where he took his degree of Doctor of Medicine in the spring of 1861. After graduation he located at White House, N. J., and in the fall of 1862 entered the United States service as a contract surgeon, after having passed a creditable examination before a board of examiners appointed by the Surgeon-General of the United States, of which Dr. Valentine Mott was president. He reported for duty at Newark on the 1st of September, and was engaged in hospital service until March 26, 1863.

He then reported to the commander of the Fourth New Jersey Regiment, to which he had been commissioned by Governor Parker as assistant surgeon, but was soon detached from that command, and ordered to report to Dr. Asch, medical director of the Artillery Reserve, and by him directed to take charge of the artillery brigade then located at Falmouth, Va. After the battle of Gettysburg he was ordered to return to his regiment (Fourth New Jersey), of which he was commissioned surgeon, with the rank of major, on the 4th of November. Shortly after he was detailed as one of the operating surgeons to the First Brigade, First Division, of the Sixth Army Corps, at this time stationed in front of Petersburg. After a few months' service in this capacity, he was ordered to take charge of the First Division, Sixth Army Corps Hospital, and also was made acting medical purveyor of the corps. He retained these positions and discharged the duties until the close of the war, retiring from the service July 10, 1865. Returning to civil life, he chose Jersey City as his future residence, and resumed the practice of medicine. Amid the arduous labors of his profession he still finds leisure for study and literary work. The passage of the act legalizing the dissection of human cadavers in this State was secured principally through his efforts and those of his friend, Dr. J. D. McGill, and the same may be said in regard to the formation of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine. Dr. Watson is fellow of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine, the American Surgical Association, permanent member of the American Medical Association, member of the New York Neurological Society, New York Pathological Society, New Jersey Microscopical Society, and also of the Jersey City Pathological Society. He has been president of the New Jersey Academy of Medicine and also of the District Medical Society for the county of Hudson, N. J.

He was appointed attending surgeon to the Jersey City Charity Hospital at the time of its organization, in 1869, and was also appointed attending surgeon to the St. Francis Hospital in 1873, which duties he continues to discharge. Dr. Watson received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Rutgers College March 7, 1882. He has from time to time contributed essays and reports of cases to medical journals, among which may be mentioned the following: "A Case of Facial Neuralgia treated by Extirpation of the Superior Maxillary Nerve," The Medical Record, Oct. 16, 1871; "A Case of Hematoma of the Thigh; Two Operations; Death," The Medical Record, Feb. 20, 1875; "The Pathology and Treatment of Chronic Ulcers," New York Medical Journal, July, 1875; "Cases of Rabies Canina treated with Strychnia and Woorara; Recovery," The American Journal of Medical Science, July, 1876; "Femoral Aneurism treated by Plugging the Sac; Death caused by Hemorrhage from Ephraim C. Groff M.D.

Deep Epigastric Artery on the Eighteenth Day; Autopsy; Remarks," The American Journal of Medical Science, October, 1876; "Stomach-Pump, Aspirator and Syringe," The Medical Record, New York, vol. ii, p. 805; "Woorara in Rabies; Report of Two Cases with Remarks," The American Journal of the Medical Sciences, vol. lxxiii, p. 413. "Liver Exsection Sac," The Medical Record, New York, vol. xiii, p. 38; "Discotomic," Ibid, vol. xiv, p. 78; "Gunpowder Disfigurements," The St. Louis Medical and Surgical Journal, vol. xxxv, p. 145; "Pyæmia" and "Septicæmia," New York Medical Journal, vol. xxvi, pp. 367-451; "Disease Germs, Their Origin, Nature and Relation to Wounds," Transactions of the American Medical Association, vol. xxix, p. 263; "An Experimental and Clinical Inquiry into the Etiology and Distinctive Peculiarities of Traumatic Fever," Transactions of the American Medical Association, vol. xxxii, p. 409, 1881; "Woorara; Its Medical Properties and Availability for the Treatment of Diseases," Virginia Medical Monthly, vol. ix, p. 1, et. seq.; "Lister's System of Aseptic Wound Treatment versus Its Modifications," Transactions of the American Surgical Association, vol. i, p. 205, 1883; "An Experimental Study of Anæsthetics, read before the American Surgical Association at Washington, D. C., April 30, 1884; "Pyæmia and Septicæmia," a chapter in vol. i. of the American System of Practical Medicine, edited by William Pepper, M.D., LL.D., in press; "Amputations and their Complications," an octavo volume, in press. Translations from the German: "Woorara in Tetanus," extract from a "Contribution to the Knowledge of Tetanus," by A. C. Knecht, physician to the prison of Waldheim (reported in Schmidt's Jahrbücher, band 173, §94), New York Medical Journal, vol. xxv, p. 626; "Remarks on Treatment of Stumps after Amputation, a New Method," London Lancet, vol. i, p. 536, 1879. Translations from the French: "New Mode of Surgical Treatment" ("Histoire de la Chirurgie Française," par le Docteur Jules Rochard, edit., 1875, page 635, et seq.), St. Louis Medical and Surgical Journal, vol. xxxvi, p. 412, vol. xxxvii, pp. 23, 439, vol. xxxviii, p. 478, vol. xxxix, p. 484; "A Contribution to the Treatment of Compound Fractures of the Skull," Richmond and Louisville Medical Journal, vol. xviii, p. 1; "Antiseptic Treatment of Wounds: Carbolic Acid vs. Alcohol," The Medical Record, New York, vol. xvi, p. 46; "The Proper Period for the Performance of Amputation in Cases of Traumatic Injuries," Gillard's Medical Journal, vol. xxx, p. 1 (formerly the Richmond and Louisville Medical Journal); "A Contribution to the Study of the Action of the Carbolyzed Spray in the Antiseptic Treatment of Wounds," The American Journal of the Medical Sciences, vol. lxxx, p. 419.

Dr. Watson was married, Sept. 24, 1868, to Miss Phebe A., only daughter of the late H. M. Traphagen, of Jersey City, and has two children.

JOHN JOSEPH CRAVEN was born in Newark, N. J.,

Sept. 8, 1822. With nothing more than a plain common-school education, he was first apprenticed to David G. Ayres, a house-carpenter, of Newark, N. J., with whom he learned his trade and worked until he had reached his majority. Soon afterwards he was employed in the erection of the Passaic Chemical Works, and on their completion was retained by the proprietor as superintendent of construction and repairs.

Here he first acquired his taste for scientific pursuits, and in 1845, when Morse's telegraph was in course of construction across New Jersey and through Newark, he became greatly interested in the work, and entered the service of the company as superintendent of construction. At Fort Lee, under the instruction of Professor Morse, he began a series of experiments with submarine telegraph cables, but throughout the years 1845 and 1846 these experiments were unsuccessful for want of a proper insulation of the wires. The following year a piece of gutta-percha, then unknown commercially, was shown to him as a curiosity. Learning its peculiar qualities, he saw in it at once the very thing that he had so long sought in vain in order to accomplish the task that had been assigned to him. He purchased a quantity of the article, and in August, 1847, having coated a copper wire with gutta-percha, with the assistance of his wife, submerged it in a small stream near the southern extremity of Newark. Applying the battery, he found that he had overcome all difficulties, and that the submarine cable was at last achieved. He next submerged his wire in the Passaic River and connected it with the land wires on both sides. It proved a success. Before the end of the year he placed his prepared wires at various points, where telegraph lines crossed navigable streams, and in all cases found that they answered the purpose for which they were designed. He applied for a patent for this invention, which has brought all the countries of the earth within speaking distance of each other, but, disgraceful and incomprehensible as it may seem, a patent was refused to him. The Hon. William D. Kelley, in his address delivered in Philadelphia, at the cable celebration, 1858, thus alluded to Dr. Craven: "But we celebrate the laying of a submarine cable, and let me with my poor efforts draw from the obscurity in which has fallen the name of that toiling worker of days-work who first laid a magnetic telegraph wire, coated in gutta-percha, under a body of water near his native town of Newark, N. J. He laid four thus coated, and for the use of one of them he received from a powerful corporation one dollar and twenty-five cents per day. He applied for a patent, but, on grounds which, if I understand the case rightly, were very inadequate for such a decision, his claim was rejected, and he lost even his poor revenue from the work which the corporation used. JOHN J. CRAVEN, of Newark, N. J. made and laid the first practical substantial, available submarine telegraph, and let his name stand out in its proper place."

In 1831 he began the study of medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. Gabriel Grant, of Newark, N. J., whose name elsewhere appears in this volume, and having subsequently attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, he entered upon the practice of his profession in his native city. On the breaking out of the Rebellion he was appointed surgeon of the First New Jersey Regiment, and on the expiration of the term of service of that regiment he passed an examination before a board of army surgeons, sitting at Washington, and was appointed brigade surgeon in Sherman's expeditionary corps. In February, 1862, he was promoted to be chief medical officer of General Wright's brigade, and accompanied that force to Florida. In September of the same year he was made medical purveyor of the Department of the South, with headquarters at Hilton Head. In May, 1864, he was made chief medical officer of field operations against Forts Wagner, Gregg and Sumter. On the organization of the Tenth Army Corps, he proceeded with it to Virginia as medical director, and remained with that corps until 1865. On the 17th of January he was assigned to duty as medical purveyor and chief medical officer of the Department of Virginia and North Carolina, with headquarters at Fortress Monroe. In March, 1865, he was brevetted lieutenant-colonel for faithful and meritorious services during the war, and on the 16th of December was honorably discharged from the service. In 1867, Dr. Craven established himself in the practice of his profession in Jersey City, where he is at present located.

GEORGE SCHUYLER RUGG was born in Martinsburg, Lewis Co., N. Y., May 7, 1821. He was principally educated at the institute in Watertown, Jefferson Co., N. Y., and at the academy in Lowville, in his native county. He subsequently entered upon the study of medicine, and was graduated M.D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1862. In this city and in Brooklyn he was a practitioner of medicine until March, 1862, when he entered the army as a surgeon in behalf of the Union during the war of the Rebellion. He was first attached to the Eighth New York militia, and subsequently to the One Hundred and Fourth New York Volunteers. During a portion of the years 1864 and 1865 he had charge of the Second Division Hospital, Fifth Army Corps, at City Point, Va. He was on duty in connection with an artillery brigade in front of Petersburg during the battle which preceded the surrender of Gen. Lee. In June, 1865, he resigned his commission and returned to his home, and subsequently established himself in Jersey City, where he is at present engaged in the practice of his profession.

HENRY EMORY RÖTBE was born in New York City, Dec. 25, 1840, and was educated at the Collegiate School in Thirty-ninth Street, in that city. He is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. In the war of the Rebellion he was surgeon's steward and assistant surgeon on the "Mercedita," United States navy. In the army he had charge of brigade medical supplies, Ninth Army Corps Field Hospital, before Petersburg, Va., under Surgeon Chief W. R. D. Blackwood, Second Division. He is at present deputy county physician for Hudson County and surgeon for the Pennsylvania Railroad for East Newark.

NOAH SANBORN was born in Tamworth, N. H., May 14, 1839. His elementary education was obtained in Parsonville (North) Seminary, and at Phillips' Exeter Academy, and his degree of M.D., was received from the Medical Department of Dartmouth College. On the breaking out of the Rebellion he joined the Fourth Vermont Regiment, and in 1862 was appointed acting assistant surgeon therein, and assigned to duty at the convalescent and distribution camps, near Alexandria, Va. He was in the battles of Lee's Mills, Warwick Court-House, Yorktown, Whitehouse Landing, Gaines' Farm, Fair Oaks, Seven Pines, Seven Days' Battle before Richmond, White Oak Swamp, Malvern Hill, South Mountain and Antietam. On several occasions he was wounded, and on all occasions he was commended for good conduct "under fire" and for faithful services. After leaving the service Dr. Sanborn settled in Bayonne, Hudson Co., N. J., where he has practiced his profession for more than twelve years and where he still remains.

H. MORFIMER BRUSH was born in the city of New York, Dec. 8, 1836. He received his education in part at Mount Washington Collegiate Institute and in part at the University of the City of New York, from the Medical Department of which he was graduated in 1862. For some time he practiced medicine in New York, but during the last thirteen years has been located at Bergen Point, Hudson Co.

PIERSON RECTOR was born in Duanesburg, Schenectady Co., N. Y., Jan. 11, 1839. He was educated at Milton Academy and at Racine College, Wisconsin. In May, 1863, he was graduated M.D., from the Albany Medical College, and immediately after received an appointment as assistant surgeon in the United States army, a position which he held until April, 1877. For the last seven years he has been a practitioner of medicine in Jersey City.

E. DE GROFF, M.D.—Dr. de Groff was born May 3, 1843. After having received a finished education, he chose the science of medicine as his profession. In the study of his profession, at home and abroad, he had the advantage of being privately tutored by some of the great masters. The degree of Doctor of Medicine was finally conferred upon him, in March, 1863, by the University of Pennsylvania, after which his hospital and military experience was very extensive. In the spring of 1866 he determined upon a "local habitation and a name," and selected North Hudson County as a point of vantage, where he finally settled June 4th the same year. Being a celebrated diagnostician, and having great tact and experience, his reputation became rapidly established, and has steadily increased until it is far beyond local.

† This sketch was furnished by a friend.

Dr. de Groff is a progressive man in every sense of the word. He is alive to all improvements, as well as generous and philanthropic, and has really added materially to the development of North Hudson County, for all of which he has received his reward. He is noted for firmness of purpose and decision of character, as of a genial and social disposition, and a true, firm friend. Dr. de Groff was married, Feb. 12, 1882, to Florida W. Schmidt, of Weehawken, an estimable lady, and beloved and respected by all who know her. In politics the doctor is a Democrat.

GEORGE B. CORNELL was born in Dukes County, Mass., April 24, 1833. In 1857 he received the degree of A.B., from Madison University, and in 1864 was graduated with honor from the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York. For one year he held the position of physician to the Lying-in Asylum of the City of New York, and for two years filled the chairs on diseases of children and of women and children in the Northwestern and Demitt Dispensaries. During these years he investigated homoeopathy, and in 1869 adopted it. He is now successfully engaged in practice in Jersey City, N. J.

WILLIAM N. CLARK was born in New York City in 1844, and received his education in the public schools of that metropolis. After graduating from the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, he established himself in practice in Jersey City, where he has his residence. He is at present surgeon on the steamship "Penland," running between New York and Belgium.

HENRY MITCHELL was born in Norwich, Chenango Co., N. Y., Aug. 6, 1845. His early education was received in the public schools of his native county, and subsequently he attended the Catskill Academy and the Phillips' Exeter Academy. On leaving school he entered, as a student, the office of Dr. H. K. Bellows, of Norwich, N. Y., and there pursued his preliminary reading. In 1866, having been graduated M.D., from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, he began the practice of his profession in his native town. Here his success and popularity gave to him the office of coroner of Chenango County. In 1868 he was appointed surgeon of the One Hundred and Third Regiment New York State National Guards, a position which he held until 1870, when he removed to New Jersey, and established himself in Jersey City. In this place he became speedily and favorably known, and was soon connected with St. Francis Hospital as a visiting physician, a position which he held for three years. He was also for some time one of the visiting physicians to the Hudson County Church Hospital, and for several years held office in the County Medical Society.

AUGUSTUS VILLEROY HILL was born at Salem, Washington Co., N. Y., Aug. 6, 1845. Having pursued his preparatory studies at Washington Academy, Salem, Norwich University, Vermont, he entered Union College, New York, from which institution he was graduated in 1866. Soon afterwards he began the study of medicine and in 1869 received the degree of M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. In that city he commenced at once the practice of his profession, and continued therein until February, 1872, when he removed to Guttenberg, Hudson Co., N. J., where he still resides. Dr. Hill has been physician to the out-door poor-patients of the Northeastern Dispensary since he first settled in Guttenberg. He is, and has been for some time past, deputy county physician. During the last four years he has been clerk of the Board of Councilmen, and since 1879 a justice of the peace.

JAMES A. PETRIE was born at Liberty, Sullivan Co., N. Y. After receiving his degree of M.D., from the University of Pennsylvania, in 1866, he settled in Jersey City, where he practiced medicine for ten years. He is at present residing in Phillipsburg, N. J.

MORTIMER LAMPSON was born in Rose, Wayne Co., N. Y., Oct. 23, 1844. His education was obtained at Union School, Lockport, N. Y., and at the University of Michigan. In October, 1863, he entered the military service as a medical cadet, and served 18 such in the hospitals at Portsmouth and Fortress Monroe until June, 1864. On July 4, 1864, he was commissioned assistant surgeon, and assigned to the Thirty-sixth Regiment United States Colored Troops in which capacity he was with his regiment before Richmond and Petersburg until the close of the war, when he received an honorable discharge. Returning to the North, he attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated therefrom M.D., May 8, 1866. After this Dr. Lampson practiced some time in Sussex County, N. J., and finally settled, June, 1873, in Jersey City, where he is at present engaged in the work of his profession.

JAMES ANDERSON EXTON was born in Clinton, N. J., Nov. 7, 1844. His education was obtained at the Rawsonian Institute, Thompson, Conn., and he was graduated M.D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1866, having previously served in the army during the Rebellion as brigade hospital steward, Third Brigade, First Division, First Army Corps. Honorable mention was made of the thesis presented by him at the close of his college course. The first nine years of his professional life were passed in Hightstown, Mercer Co., N. J., whence, on account of asthma, he removed to Illinois, and finding his health much improved, he therefore soon after returned to New Jersey, settling at Arlington, where he has since resided. Dr. Exton has been vice-president of the Hudson County Medical Society, and for three years was president of the Board of Education of Kearny township. He is secretary of the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington, as well as of the township Sunday-school.

WILLIAM REDWOOD FISHER was born in Mobile, Ala., Nov. 1, 1844. Having received a good preparatory education, he entered Columbia College, New York, and was therefrom graduated A.B., in 1863. In 1867 he obtained the degree of M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of that city, and from the time of graduating until 1870 was connected professionally with the Department of Public Charities of New York. After retiring from this position he devoted himself to private practice in the same place until January, 1874, when he removed to Hoboken, N. J., where, in addition to the daily labors incidental to a large practice, he gives much time and attention as attending surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital, of that city.

CHARLES OTTO VEIRS was born in Brook County, Va., April 10, 1841. He was educated at West Liberty, Va., where he spent four years in preparation for Bethany College, from which it was his intention to graduate, but was prevented by the breaking out of the Rebellion. After three years' service in the Confederate army as a member of the Virginia Cavalry, he was honorably discharged Aug. 25, 1864, at Winchester, Va. He subsequently entered upon the study of medicine, having as preceptors Dr. John M. Cooper, of Wellsburg, Va., and Professors Sayre, Janeway and Southack, of New York. In 1867 he was graduated M.D., from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and during the last fifteen years has practiced in Jersey City.

GEORGE NELSON TIBLES was born at Cooleyville, Athens Co., Ohio, May 2, 1842. He received his elementary education at an academy in Illinois, and was still a pupil in that school when the war of the Rebellion broke out. Fired with a desire to serve his country, he threw aside his books and enlisted in the Fourth Iowa Volunteers early in 1861, at the age of nineteen years. In this regiment he served until March 14, 1864, when he was taken prisoner by the enemy during a night attack on Claysville, Ala., the outpost of the Fifteenth United States Army Corps.

He was carried to Andersonville, where he was held for seven months. At the end of that time he succeeded in making his escape, and, worn out by sickness and hardships, reached the North. After sufficiently recovering his health, he applied himself to the study of medicine, and was in due time graduated from the New York Medical College (homoeopathic). For sixteen years he has practiced in Hudson County, and is at present located in Hoboken.

JOHN Q. BIRD was born in Bernardsville, Somerset Co., N. J., April 20, 1845. In 1868 he was graduated from the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York, and soon after began to practice at Everettstown, Hunterdon Co., N. J. Remaining in that place but a short time, he removed to Jersey City, where he has since continued to practice his profession. He is a member of the Hudson County District Medical Society and of the Hudson County Pathological Society, as well as of the Medico-Legal Society. For four years he acted as coroner's physician as well as jail physician in Hudson County. He was also for six years police surgeon of Jersey City, and for two years house surgeon to Hudson County Hospital.

JAMES F. MORGAN was born at Mystic Bridge, Conn., May 6, 1838. After receiving a good education at the Mystic River Academy, he passed some time at the New York College of Pharmacy, and in 1868 was graduated from the Long Island College Hospital. Dr. Morgan practiced eight years in Jersey City, during three of which he was city physician. He has been credited with a correct diagnosis of aneurism of the abdominal aorta at an early stage.

JULIUS FEHR was born in Germany, March 29, 1825, and was educated in his native country, at the College of Darmstadt. In 1850 he emigrated to the United States, and settled in New York City as a pharmacist, a business in which he had been already engaged for more than ten years. In 1854 he removed to Hoboken, N. J., of which place he is still a resident. He is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and from 1869 to 1880 was engaged in the practice of his profession. At present he is a manufacturer of hygienic, pharmaceutical and medicinal preparations.

HUGH THOMAS ADAMS was born at Portlenc, County Antrim, Ireland, January, 1846. He was educated at the Royal Academical Institution, Belfast, Queen's College, Belfast, Carmichael School of Medicine, and Home of Industry Hospital, Dublin, and on the 14th of October, 1869, received his degree of M.D. from Queen's University, Ireland. After practicing for about five years in his native place, he removed to America, and in May, 1874, established himself as a physician and surgeon in Jersey City, where he is still engaged in the work of his profession.

ROBERT MAITLAND PETRIE was born at Liberty, Sullivan Co., Aug. 15, 1849. He received his education at Blairstown Academy, New Jersey, Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, and the College of New Jersey, Princeton. He was graduated M.D., from the University of Pennsylvania, and subsequently established himself in Jersey City, where he has been engaged in the practice of his profession during the last fourteen years.

WILLIAM JAMES CADMUS was born in Bergen County, N. J., Aug. 30, 1839. He was educated chiefly at the common schools in the vicinity of his residence. Having a desire to become a physician, he entered upon the study of medicine, and in 1870 received his degree of M.D., from the University of the City of New York. Since that time he has been a medical practitioner in Hudson County, N. J.

CONRAD WIENGES was born in Charleston, S. C. Aug. 20, 1848, and was educated at Carroll's Academy of that city. In 1871 he was graduated from the New York College of Pharmacy, and after engaging some years in the drug business, entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which institution he received the degree of M.D., in 1883, since which time he has practiced medicine in Jersey City.

THEODORE R. HORNBLOWER, son of the late Dr. William Hornblower, elsewhere noticed in this volume, was born in Bergen, N. J., June 9, 1844. Having received a classical education at the South Bergen Institute, he was matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and therefrom graduated M.D., in 1871. After practicing medicine for a short time in New York he established himself in Jersey City, where he has been engaged in the work of his profession during the last thirteen years.

JOHN DALE MCGILL was born in Allegheny City, Pa., Dec. 23, 1846. Having been graduated from the College of New Jersey, Princeton, in 1867, he began the study of medicine, and in 1871 received the degree of M.D., from the University of Pennsylvania. Soon afterwards he commenced practice in Jersey City, where he is still occupied in his profession. Dr. McGill has been several times elected a member of the Board of Education, and thrice chosen as president of that body. He served two years as a commissioner of finance and taxation, and in the spring of 1884 received the nomination for mayor of Jersey City, but was defeated by the joint nominee of the Citizens' and Republican parties.

JOHN LOEHNER was born in Albany, N. Y., Aug. 3, 1842. After a careful preliminary education, he attended lectures at the Albany Medical College, and subsequently at the University of the City of New York, from which he was graduated M.D., in 1871. He soon after established himself in practice in Jersey City, N. J., where he is at present employed, and where he has held the office of city physician. Dr. Loehner is a member of the New York Medico-Legal Society, of the District Medical Society of Hudson County and of the Hudson County Pathological Society.

HIRAM McEDDY was born in Springfield, N. Y., July 14, 1848. He was graduated from the University of the City of New York in 1872, and immediately afterward established himself in practice in Jersey City. Dr. McEddy is a member of the Medico-Legal Society of New York and of the District Medical Society of Hudson County. For one year he held the position of house physician of the New York Asylum for the Insane, on Ward's Island, and from 1873 to 1875 was medical superintendent of the Hudson County Lunatic Asylum.

JOHN ROBERT EVERITT, JR., was born in Birmingham, England, May 6, 1846. He received his education chiefly at the public schools of Jersey City, at Bergen Institute, Jersey City, and at Manchester, Md. In the latter part of 1865 and the early part of 1866 he taught in the public school at Scotch Plains. In the same year he attended two courses of lectures at Long Island College Hospital, and was subsequently a pupil at Bellevue Hospital Medical College. Having attended a third course of lectures at Long Island College Hospital, he was graduated M.D., in 1872. Dr. Everitt has been a practitioner for twelve years past in Jersey City, where, in 1873, 1874 and during the last three years, he has been city physician. He holds this office at the present time, and is also a member of the Board of Health.

HENRY LEE NORRIS was born in the United States, Jan. 3, 1851. He received his education at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, and at the Lycee Imperial of Rouen, France. From the former institution he was graduated M.D., in 1872, and afterwards held therein the position of demonstrator of anatomy. He was also lecturer on anatomy pro tem. in the University of Durham, England. At another time he was house surgeon at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, and for four years held the appointment of professor of surgery in the Central Turkey College, Aintab, Syria. Dr. Norris is at present a practitioner in West Hoboken, N. J., where he has resided during the last four years.

MARTIN FREDERICK SQUIER was born in Livingston, Essex County, N. J. His education was chiefly obtained in the public and private schools of Caldwell, in the same county. In 1872 he was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and soon after he began to practice in Harrison, Hudson Co., where he is at present located. He is a member of the District Medical Society.

HORACE G. BIDWELL was born at Greenville, Hudson Co., N. J., May 24, 1849. His education was obtained in the Twenty-eighth Street Public School of New York, and in the New York College. In 1872 he was graduated from the Bellevue Hospital College, and after practicing for a short time in Norfolk, Conn., settled in Jersey City, where he has been engaged in the labors of his profession for the last eleven years.

JOHN D'RYEA VAN SANN was born in Jersey

City, N. J., March 21, 1851, and was carefully educated under the direction of private tutors until well prepared to enter upon the study of medicine, which he decided upon as his profession. Having been matriculated at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and passed the required examination, he was graduated therefrom in 1873. Soon afterwards he began the practice of his profession at Newburgh, N. Y., whence, after remaining about one year, he removed to his native city, where he became a practitioner, and where he still resides.

EDWIN W. PYLE was born in Unionville, Pa., Sept. 16, 1849. He was a pupil of the Millersville Normal School, Pennsylvania, where he received a good elementary education. In 1873 he was graduated M.D., from the University of Pennsylvania, and after practicing his profession for a short time in Philadelphia, removed to Jersey City, where he has since been successfully employed as a physician and surgeon.

JOHN VAN VOORST was born in Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 18, 1850. Having entered, as a student, the College of New Jersey, at Princeton, he was graduated therefrom A.B., in 1870, and in course received the degree of A.M., from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and during the last five years has been a practitioner of medicine in his native city.

CLEMENT C. YOUNG was born in Washington, D. C., March 1, 1853. He received his education at Rock Hill College, Ellicott City, Md., and pursued his medical studies at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, from which institution he was graduated in 1874. Soon after graduating he settled in Jersey City, where he became quite successful as a practitioner. He was an active member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County, and from 1874 to 1876 was its secretary. For some time he was house physician and surgeon to the Jersey City Charity Hospital, and from March, 1876, to October, 1877, was city physician to the Fifth district, Jersey City.

WILLIAM J. McDOWELL was born in Baltimore, Md., Feb. 23, 1854, and obtained his education in the schools of that city and of Oxford. In 1874 he was graduated M.D. from the University of Maryland, and during that year and the following was attending physician to the Baltimore Infirmary. From 1875 to 1881 he was surgeon to the Baltimore Eye and Ear Infirmary and to the Presbyterian Eye and Ear Hospital of the same city. During the years 1880 and 1881 he was assistant professor of eye and ear diseases in the University of Maryland and for the year 1879 was president of the Baltimore Medical and Surgical Society. He was also, during his residence in Maryland, a member of the Clinical Society and of the State Medico-Chirurgical Society. In 1882 he established himself as a practitioner in Jersey City, where he at present resides.

WILLIAM LACEY DARLINGTON was born in West Chester, Pa., Nov. 5, 1849. Having received a good elementary education in the schools of Philadelphia and in West Chester Academy, he studied medicine, and was graduated from Jefferson College, Philadelphia, March 11, 1875. His first settlement as a practitioner was in Philadelphia, where, in addition to his private practice he was connected professionally with the Episcopal Hospital and with the Philadelphia Eye and Ear Dispensary. In 1883 he established himself in Jersey City, where he is now practicing medicine.

WILLIAM J. MACKAY was born in Dublin, Ireland, Feb. 23, 1847. He was educated at the College of the Jesuits, in his native city, and subsequently removing to America, was matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, whence he was graduated M.D., in 1875. Soon afterwards he established himself in the practice of his profession in Jersey City, where he has since resided.

WILLIAM W. VARICK was born in New York City, Jan. 16, 1844. He was graduated from Bellevue Hospital Medical College in 1875, and soon after settled in Jersey City, where he has practiced medicine during the last eight years.

SAMUEL ALEXANDER HELFFER was born in Budapest, Hungary, April 6, 1843, and obtained his education in the city of Vienna, Austria. In 1875 he was graduated M.D., from the University of the City of New York, and since that time has practiced medicine in Hoboken, N. J.

CHARLES ABBOTT LAMBURNER, son of an American sea captain, was born on the ocean Nov. 18, 1854. Having received his preparatory education at New Paltz, N. Y., he entered Rutgers College, and was graduated therefrom in 1876. In 1879 the degree of M.D., was conferred upon him by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and soon afterwards he began practice in Brooklyn, N. Y., Subsequently he removed to Jersey City, where he has been occupied in the work of his profession for the last four years.

RUDOLPH BOGRAEM LIENAN was born at New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y., Oct. 21, 1846. He was educated at the Vitzthum Gymnasium, at Dresden, and was graduated M.D., from the University of Würzburg, Germany. Returning to his native country, he settled in Jersey City, where he has practiced medicine for eight years.

WALTER RAE, M.D.—Dr. Rae is the second son, among four children, of John Rae, a farmer of Broom, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, the family having been one of prominence in the South of Scotland for a century. He was born in Dumfriesshire on the 29th of September, 1849, and educated at the Cummertrees parochial school, after which he served an apprenticeship of five years at the science of pharmacy. He came to the United States in 1872, and having decided upon a medical career, entered the Medical Department of the University of the City of New York in 1873, from which he graduated in 1876. He at once located in Jersey City, and soon acquired an extended practice of a general character, much of it being in connection with midwifery. Dr. Rae was, on the 28th of February, 1880, married to Miss Frances James Hicks, only daughter of E. J. Hicks, Esq., of Troy, N. Y. He is medical examiner for several of the Connecticut and New York life insurance companies, and drew up the medical form of examination at present in use by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. Dr. Rae's arduous professional labors have precluded his connection with dispensary or hospital service. His political associations are with the Republican party, though he is not active in the field of politics. He was reared in the Established Church of Scotland ("and Kirk"), but is now an attendant upon the services of the Reformed (Dutch) Church in Jersey City.

Walter Rice

CHARLES ALBERT JULIUS LIGNOT was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 3, 1852. In 1873 he was graduated Bachelor in Science from the Scientific Department of the University of the City of New York, and in 1876 received the degree of M.D., from the Medical Department of the same institution. Subsequently he pursued his medical studies in Paris and Vienna, during the years 1876, 1877 and 1878. On returning to his native country, he established himself in Jersey City, where he is now engaged in the work of his profession.

WILLIAM TELL KUDLICH was born in Hoboken, N. J., July 24, 1856. He obtained his academic education in the University of New York and in the University of Zurich, Switzerland. His studies in medicine were pursued in the University of Vienna, Austria, and in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, from which latter institution he was graduated in 1876. Subsequently he became connected with the Chambers Street Hospital, in New York, where he remained for some time, and then removed to his native city, in which he has practiced his profession during the last four years.

CHARLES W. CROPPER was born at Rock Island, Ill., June 13, 1848. His education was chiefly conducted at home under a private tutor. He was also for some time at the Princeton (Ill.) Military Academy. In 1876 he was graduated M.D., from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and soon after settled as a practitioner in Jersey City, where he still resides.

JOHN KEATING was born in Ireland, June 28, 1845, and was educated in a private school in his own country. After pursuing for some time his preliminary studies in medicine, he attended lectures at Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and was graduated therefrom in 1877. He began to practice in New York City, but subsequently removed to Jersey City, where he is now successfully engaged in his profession.

HARRIS R. SIMMONS was born in New York City, Jan. 7, 1851, and received his elementary education in the public schools of that place. In 1877 he was graduated from the Homeopathic Medical College of New York, and soon afterwards settled in Jersey City, where he established himself in practice, and where he still resides.

GRONTO E. TITUS was born in New York City, July 1, 1855. In 1874 he was graduated A.B., from Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, and in 1877 received in course his degree of A.M. In the latter year he obtained the degree of M.D., from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and soon afterwards became connected professionally with the Jersey City Charity Hospital.

STEPHEN VREELAND MORRIS was born in Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 12, 1845. His education was received at Hasbrouck Institute and at Jersey City High School. In 1877 he was graduated M.D., from Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and began at once the practice of his profession in his native city. Dr. Morris is at present one of the city physicians and a member of the Board of Health. He has served as house physician to Christ Hospital, also as assistant house physician to Jersey City Charity Hospital, and is one of the medical examiners of the Germania Life Insurance Company of New York.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS DURRIE, JR., was born in Jersey City, June 11, 1855. In 1876 he was graduated from Yale College, and subsequently attended two courses of lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York. He then entered the New York Homeopathic Medical College, and was therefrom graduated in 1878. Since that time he has practiced medicine in Jersey City.

ALEXANDER DALLAS was born at Nairn, Scotland, April 25, 1850. His education was obtained at the academy of his native town, and at Edinburgh University. On removing to the United States he entered upon the study of medicine, and in 1878 was graduated from the University of the City of New York. In that city he practiced medicine for a short time, and then removed to Kansas. Here he remained until the latter part of 1881, when he returned and established himself in Bayonne, Hudson Co., N. J., where he is at present located.

WILLIAM PERRY WATSON was born in Balton, Warren Co., N. Y., May 17, 1854. Having received a thorough preparatory education, he entered Rutgers College, and was graduated therefrom A.B., in 1875 and A.M., in course in 1878. In the latter year he received the degree of M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and immediately afterward began as a practitioner of medicine in Jersey City, N. J. Dr. Watson was one of the organizers of the Central Dispensary in Jersey City, in 1881; since then has been in charge of the Department of Diseases of Children in that institution. In 1883 he was appointed assistant visiting physician and surgeon to Christ Hospital (children's ward). In 1878-79 he was assistant surgeon to St. Francis Hospital. In January, 1884, he established The Archives of Pediatrics, a journal devoted exclusively to the diseases of children. At the present time (1884) he is president of the District Medical Society for Hudson County.

J. LAWRENCE NEVIN was born in North Sewickly, Beaver Co., Pa., Jan. 21, 1853. He was educated at Oakdale Academy, Pennsylvania, and for six years taught in the public schools of Beaver County. After devoting some time to the study of medicine, he attended lectures at the New York Homoeopathic Medical College, and was graduated therefrom M.D. in 1878. He established himself soon afterwards in practice in Jersey City, and is at present in that place.

ALFRED AUGUSTUS LUTKINS, born Oct. 16, 1828, was graduated M.D., from the University of the City of New York in 1878, and is a practitioner of medicine in Jersey City, N. J.

SAMUEL J. MYERS was born at Middletown, N. Y., Dec. 21, 1854. After receiving a good elementary education in Walkill Academy, he attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and was graduated M.D., in 1878. Since that time he has been a practitioner of medicine in Bayonne, N. J.

THOMAS LYNCH was born in Ireland, May 29, 1838. He was educated at Loughash Agricultural Seminary and at Foyle College, in his native country. Having chosen the profession of medicine, he entered, as a student, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, and was graduated therefrom M.D., in 1879. Since then he has practiced medicine in Hoboken, and is a member of the District Medical Society of Hudson County.

CHARLES H. SHELTON, son of Dr. Charles S. Shelton, an old-school physician, practicing in India under the American Board of Foreign Missions, was born in Jaffnaputnam, a coast island off Ceylon, May 14, 1854. His preparatory education was received at the Hasbrouck Collegiate Institute, and in 1877 he was graduated A.B., from Yale College. In March, 1880, he obtained his degree of M.D., from the New York Homoeopathic Medical College, and immediately established himself in Jersey City, where he continued to practice until about the 1st of January, 1884, when he removed to Montclair, Essex Co., N. J., where he is at present engaged in the work of his profession.

FLAMOR ALLEN was born in Warren County, Ohio. His academic education was obtained at the public schools of Cincinnati, New York and Jersey City. In 1880 he was graduated from the University of the City of New York, and soon afterwards he settled as a practitioner in Jersey City, where he still resides.

HENRY ALLEN was born in New York City, Nov. 8, 1856, and was educated at Martha Institute, Hoboken, N. J. In 1881 he was graduated from the University of the City of New York, and immediately afterwards began to practice medicine in Hoboken. He has held the position of district physician of the city, and at present is examining physician of Kearny Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 195, and of Golden Star Fraternity.

VICTOR C. B. MEANS was born at Concord, N. C., May 1, 1860. After receiving a good elementary education at Bingham Military Academy, in his native place, he studied medicine, and was graduated M.D., from the University of the City of New York in 1881. For a short time he practiced in New York, and was then appointed physician to the Jersey City Charity Hospital, with which he was connected eighteen months. He has been recently appointed surgeon in the United States Navy.

CALVIN F. KYTE was born in Eldred, Sullivan Co., N. Y., and was educated at Bryant, Stratton & Packard's Business College of New York, and at Monson Academy, Massachusetts. His degree of M.D., was received from the University of the City of New York in 1881, since which time he has practiced in Jersey City, N. J.

SAMUEL W. CLARK, JR., was born in Newark, N. J., May 29, 1857, and is a graduate of the Public High School of that city. In 1881 he received the degree of M.D., from the New York Homoeopathic Medical College, and for a time was connected professionally with Ward's Island Hospital. During the last two and a half years he has practiced in Jersey City.

JOHN POWELL HENRY was born in New York City, Jan. 23, 1858. In the public schools of that place, and under the direction of private tutors, he received his elementary education. In 1881 he was graduated M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and subsequently settled in Jersey City, where he has continued to practice his profession.

PHILEMON HOMMELL was born in Alsace, France, July 16, 1836, and was educated at the University of Strashbourg. For about twenty years before receiving his license to practice medicine he was a pharmacist and chemist in Jersey City. In 1881 he was graduated M.D., from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and since that time has been a medical practitioner, and is still a resident of Jersey City.

HENRY DE LACY SHERWOOD was born at Deposit, N. Y., March 19, 1860. After receiving his academic education at the High School of Jersey City, he studied medicine, and was graduated with honors from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York in 1882. He settled as a practitioner in Jersey City, where he has been for the last two years.

FENIMORE C. SMITH was born at Guttenburg, N. J., April 2, 1862, and received his education at home. At the age of twelve years he was prepared to enter college, but was prevented from so doing by reason of ill health. At fifteen he began the study of medicine, and at nineteen completed his medical course at the University of the City of New York. Having passed the required examination, he received a certificate to that effect, his diploma being withheld until he should reach his majority, in 1882. In the mean time he was appointed dress surgeon to the Jersey City Charity Hospital, and was an assistant to Dr. B. A. Watson in his practice. On receiving his diploma he was appointed one of the resident physicians to the Ward Island Insane Asylum, a position which he held until June, 1884, when he became surgeon to the New York Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled, where he is at present occupied.

JOSEPH WOLFSON was born in New Brunswick, N. J., May 8, 1860. After a good preparatory education he entered Rutgers College, and was graduated from that institution in 1880. His medical studies were pursued in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, from which institution he received the degree of M.D., in 1883, when he established himself in practice in Jersey City, where he at present resides.

CHARLES E. JACQUEL was born in Baltimore, Md., April 7, 1862. He received his academic education in the public grammar schools and in the High School of Jersey City. In March, 1884, he was graduated from the New York Homeopathic Medical College, and since then has practiced his profession in Jersey City.

Alphabetical list of physicians concerning whose personal history nothing could be obtained, except what is here transcribed from the Medical Registry of Hudson County,— Abercrombie, William H., Feb. 29, 1872, Homeopathic Medical College, New York.

Abernethy, H. H., 1826, University of Pennsylvania.

Adams, Clovis, 1877, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Andrews, B. A., Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Alton, Charles D., 1875, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Appleton, George F., March 25, 1878, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Avery, A. G., March 9, 1840, Medical Institute, Louisville, Ky.

Bell, Henry, March 19, 1874, Georgopolitan college.

Beltner, Randolph, Feb. 28, 1878, University of the City of New York.

Balmer, R., 1878, University of City of New York.

Bever, John A., 1870, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Bier, Sophie, Aug. 19, 1879, Midwifery Institute, New York City.

Blake, James A., March 1, 1869, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Brulford, George A., March 1, 1882, Eclectic Medical College of New York.

Brickner, M. F., March 6, 1864, Eclectic Medical College of Philadelphia, Pa.

Bridgford, Mrs., June 11, 1860, M. S. R. C. S., Edinburgh.

Briegleb, William, March 6, 1881, United States Medical College, New York.

Bucher, John B., March 1, 1873, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York.

Bullard, W. E., March 3, 1874, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Burdett, I. B., March, 1856, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Canfill, Hugo H., Feb. 19, 1873, Medical Eclectic College of New York.

Carpenter, B. D., 1851, University of City of New York.

Cass, C. H., 1868, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Clawson, S. W., March, 1867, University of the City of New York.

Cone, H. E., March 10, 1873, University of the City of New York.

Congdon, E. H.

Converse, C. R., 1871, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York.

Crosby, Henry L., 1854, Metropolitan Medical College.

Culver, Daniel W., Nov. 2, 1843, Medical College, Castleton, Vt.

De Hart, Sarah K., March 23, 1870, Female Medical College, New York.

De Lanater, Charles H., Jr., Feb. 23, 1881, New York College of Dentistry.

Dewey, Raphael P., Jan. 20, 1870, Eclectic Medical College of Pennsylvania.

Demetrios, Edward J., July 10, 1882, University of the City of New York.

Dickinson, G. K., March 1, 1877, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York.

Drain, John S., 1861, University of the City of New York.

Eckardt, Edward, Nov. 26, 1864, University of Berlin.

Falser, John, March 2, 1878, College of Frobenius and Alexander, Bavaria.

Ferguson, Benjamin F., March 22, 1871, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Finn, Joseph F., 1854, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Finnerty, John H., May 8, 1884, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Fish, Henry G., 1863, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Fonda, Edward S., March 3, 1870, United States Medical College, New York.

Freeman, Harry, 1857, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Fry, Henry D., Feb. 23, 1876, University of Maryland.

Fry, Richard Watson, June 27, 1872, University of Virginia.

Geary, I. C., June, 1877, Harvard College.

Gilmore, R. B., 1867, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Gilman, Marini E., 1878, University of Geneva.

Glasford, Robert W., March 1, 1878, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Golding, I. Frederick, March 1, 1875, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Gordon, John, February, 1860, University of New York.

Gordon, Leonard J., March 1, 1875, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Gray, P. D., 1863, University of New York.

Green, George S., 1841, University of New York.

Hause, Henry W. A., March 8, 1876, University of the City of New York.

Hardenberg, D. S., May 28, 1863, Albany Medical College.

Hat H., William B., 1837, Vermont Medical College.

Henke, Adolph, Dec. 9, 1879, Midwifery Institute, New York City.

Heppenheim, F. C., March 18, 1880, University of Bavaria.

Hetzl, Charles J., March 6, 1880, Eclectic Medical College of New York.

Hickman, John, 1870, University of Toronto.

Holagas, Willard, March 4, 1881, Albany Medical College.

Hinchman, M. Ross, Feb. 3, 1878, Eclectic Medical College New York City.

Hoff J. A., March 9, 1860, University of City of New York.

Hoffman, A. C., March 1, 1876, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Hoffman, Peter, July 9, 1881, University of the City of New York.

Holcombe, Alonzo J., 1874, Eclectic College of New York.

Holcombe, Holbart J., March 18, 1885, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Hunt, Hart Eben, March 1, 1882, Eclectic Medical College, New York City.

Johnson, William M., June 30, 1881, University of State of Michigan.

Julian, John M., June 23, 1860, Long Island College, Brooklyn, N. Y.

King, George W., 1879, University of Michigan.

Kirk, Thomas H., March 3, 1883, University of the City of New York.

Kitchen, George H., June 6, 1876, Eclectic Medical College of Philadelphia, Pa.

Kweckler, Fredericka, Sept. 28, 1869, I. L. I. and M. Institute of Hannover.

Kriston, Adolph, 1867, University of New York.

La Rue, Frank E., July 9, 1880, University of the City of New York.

Lathrop, C. C., 1876, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Lawrence, Elijah W., Sept. 28, 1863, Philadelphia Medical College.

Lewybren, Anna A., April 5, 1870, New York Free Medical College for Women.

Lesser, Adolphus M., March 1, 1882, Eclectic Medical College of New York.

Lester, Frank W., March 1, 1878, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Lindstrom, Charles A. T., March 2, 1881, United States Medical College, New York City.

Linnell, E. H., 1876, New York Homeopathic Medical College.

- Lookwood, Hilliard L., March 12, 1879, Homoeopathic Medical College, New York City.
- Loenthal, August E., 1879, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Long, Harace A., March 10, 1881, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Lutkins, William C., March 15, 1856, University of the City of New York.
- Lutz, Frederick H., March 16, 1872, Homoeopathic Medical College, New York City.
- Lynch, Henry H., March 11, 1878, University of the City of New York.
- Mabon, William, Aug. 1, 1881, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- MacMartin, D. M., March 1, 1877, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Mallahan, A. W., March 1, 1875, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Manaton, J. P., June 23, 1880, Brooklyn Medical College, New York.
- McBride, John C., Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- McBride, Lewis A., March 1, 1881, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- McCallina, George B., July 1, 1880, University of the State of Michigan.
- McClellan, David, March 14, 1880, Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago.
- McDougal, Joseph H., 1877, New York Homoeopathic College.
- McLean, Henrietta, April 14, 1877, Hygie's Therapeutic College, Florence Heights, N. J.
- McLaughlin, T. J., College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- McNeil, C. Holmes, Feb. 29, 1872, Homoeopathic Medical College, New York.
- McNaughton, George, Feb. 28, 1878, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Metzlf, George R., March 3, 1874, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Meyer, George Irving, March 1, 1878, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Michael, Louis, 1837, New York Medical College.
- Mohn, John, Oct. 30, 1866, University of Jena, Germany.
- Moir, Henry C., March 1, 1872, University of the City of New York.
- Moorhouse, Elias W., March, 1882, University of the City of New York.
- Murray, Daniel, March 1, 1868, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Nest, Hugo, March 9, 1875, Jefferson College, Philadelphia, Pa.
- O'Callahan, Thomas A., 1862, University of New York.
- Olde, Edward L., Feb. 28, 1856, Western Reserve Homoeopathic College, Cleveland, Ohio.
- Olsen, Genanda P., March 3, 1883, College (name not legible).
- Omni, Louis Philip, Feb. 24, 1876, Washington Medical University, Baltimore.
- Pape, Gotthold, March 17, 1880, University of the City of New York.
- Parker, William J., March 1, 1879, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Paul, James, April 30, 1869, University of Glasgow.
- Payne, F. G., 1865, Jefferson College, Philadelphia.
- Peacock, Rufus W., June 15, 1875, University of City of New York.
- Pendegast, John J., Feb. 28, 1868, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Peterson, Anna, March 28, 1876, Midwifery Institute, New York City.
- Petigrew, F. W., Jan. 30, 1845, Royal College of Surgeons, England.
- Pindar, John, April, 1853, University of Pennsylvania.
- Pitte, George F., March 10, 1872, University of the City of New York.
- Prym, Eliza G., March 1, 1882, Eclectic Medical College, New Jersey.
- Rodmans, Michael C., June, 1881, New York Medical College.
- Reeve, Daniel L., April 14, 1845, University of the City of New York.
- Rein, Louis, May 24, 1870, Medical Society State of New Jersey.
- Row, Carrie L., April 1, 1874, New York Medical College for Women.
- Roth, Edward, March 1, 1880, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Rue, Henry Bergen, May 15, 1880, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.
- Saorhi, Angelo, Nov. 15, 1876, University of Naples.
- Salter, Joseph E., March 10, 1881, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Schull, Charles A. G., May 24, 1882, Medical College, State of New Jersey.
- Selnows, Frederick, 1861, Yalsingen, Germany.
- Smith, Charles, 1879, Jefferson Medical College.
- Smith, Henry M., March 1, 1871, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Somerville, John A., May 9, 1882, University of the City of New York.
- Sommer, Ida, Oct. 22, 1882, Midwifery Institute, New York City.
- Stoddard, Freeman, March 10, 1864, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Stout, Stephen V. W., Feb. 28, 1868, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Straughn, Frederick, March 1, 1870, Maryland Academy, Baltimore.
- Strubel, Julius, March 4, 1880, New York Eclectic Medical College.
- Swan, Albert T., 1879, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Taylor, Paul I., March 14, 1875, University of the City of New York.
- Taylor, William H. O., March 8, 1881, University of the City of New York.
- Thompson, James W., March 10, 1875, Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia.
- Toepper, Albert, March 13, 1874, University of the City of New York.
- Van Horne, J. P., March 1, 1877, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Van Houton, H., March 6, 1883, United States Medical College, New York.
- Van Mater, John H., March 15, 1880, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.
- Waldmeyer, Joseph R., May 26, 1875, Medical College of New Jersey.
- Ware, William P., March 1, 1883, Eclectic Medical College of New York.
- Warner, William B., March 9, 1882, University of the City of New York.
- Whittamere, F. H., February, 1874, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Wigg, Culbert, March 1, 1880, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Wilkinson, George, March 9, 1882, Bellevue Hospital Medical College.
- Williams, John, March 1, 1877, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Wolfe, Theodore F., Feb. 28, 1868, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Wright, William G., March 1, 1876, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.
- Yennington, C. H., June, 1870, University of New York.
- Zabrieke, William A., Oct. 11, 1881, College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

Hospitals.—ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL, situated at the corner of Willow and Fourth Streets, in Hoboken, N. J., was founded by the "Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis" in 1863. It is a general hospital, in which patients, in case of accident, are admitted immediately. In other cases application must be made to the sisters. In the year 1883 an addition was made to the building, increasing the capacity to one hundred and fifty beds, with the newest and best facilities for the comfort of the sick. Nearly one thousand patients were treated, and notwithstanding the large number of those whose cases on entering the hospital were incurable, the death-rate compares favorably with that of past years in kindred institutions.

The medical board is constituted as follows: Surgeons, Romco F. Chabert, M.D., William R. Fisher, M.D.; Assistant, G. F. Pitts, M.D.; Physicians, William T. Kerdlieh, M.D., Henry B. Rue, M.D.; Secretary of Medical Board, Hill S. Warwick.

THE CITY CHARITY HOSPITAL was established by an ordinance of the Board of Aldermen reorganizing the Alms Department, passed Dec. 15, 1868. It was effected, in some degree, after the consolidation of the cities by an ordinance passed June 18, 1870, and by an act of the Legislature reorganizing the local government of the city. This hospital while under the charge of the Alms Department was located at the old almshouse, foot of Washington Street. It was placed under the management of the Board of Police Commissioners April 5, 1871, and in 1881 twenty-eight city lots and a small building at the corner of Montgomery Street and Baldwin Avenue being bought, the hospital was removed there and a large building erected with the proceeds of the sale of the old almshouse.

The medical board is constituted as follows: Visiting Physicians, Theodore F. Morris, M.D., Joseph H. Vondy, M.D., Alfred A. Lutkins, M.D., S. R. Forman, M.D.; Visiting Surgeons, John W. Hunt, M.D., Daniel I. Reeve, M.D., Theodore R. Varick, M.D., B. A. Watson, M.D.; House Physician and Surgeon, W. L. Russell, M.D.; Assistant House Physician and Surgeon, C. L. G. Anderson, M.D.; Apothecary, Samuel D. Kay.

CHRIST HOSPITAL, situated at the head of Magnolia Avenue, Jersey City Heights, was originally known as the Hudson County Hospital, and was under the control of the board of regents. It passed into the control of the Episcopal Church of the diocese of Northern New Jersey in 1872, and its name was changed in 1879. In 1880 it was placed under the direct charge of the Sisterhood of the Good Shepherd of New York City. This hospital can accommodate thirty-two patients. They are received without distinction as to race or color. The institution has no revenue except from donations and subscriptions, but beds are endowed in the children's, or "Daisy Ward." The number of patients admitted from Nov. 1, 1882, to Nov. 1, 1883, was 156, of whom 122 were discharged, 12 died and 22 remained under treatment.

Consulting Staff, Austin Flint, M.D., A. C. Post, M.D., A. A. Lutkins, M.D., J. Hilton, M.D.; Visiting Staff, B. D. Carpenter, M.D., E. P. Buffitt, M.D., J. Van Vorst, Jr., M.D., F. E. Noble, M.D., J. B. Burdett, M.D., B. A. Watson, M.D.; Assistants, W. P. Watson, M.D., H. M. Smith, M.D., G. K. Dickinson, M.D., House Physician, H. A. Loomis, M.D.

ST. FRANCIS HOSPITAL is situated on Hamilton Square, Jersey City. It was founded in 1872, and is under the charge of the Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis. During the year 1883 thirteen hundred and twenty-nine patients were admitted, which is the greatest annual total ever treated in the institution since its foundation, notwithstanding it was a year of unprecedented healthfulness, not only in Jersey City and everywhere throughout Hudson County, but in all the region round about and through out the State. This hospital has been recently enlarged by the addition of forty beds, but the increase in numbers of the sick and disabled poor has far outrun the growth of hospital accommodations. Of the thirteen hundred and twenty-nine patients treated, one hundred and twenty died, or about eight and three-fifths per cent., a larger death-rate than in former years.

The medical board is constituted as follows: Medical Director, Theodore R. Varick, M.D.; President of Medical Board, F. G. Payne, M.D.; Physicians, Joseph F. Finn, M.D., F. G. Payne, M.D., Joseph E. Culver, M.D., Thomas J. McLaughlin, M.D.; Surgeons, Theodore R. Varick, M.D., John McGill, M.D., William W. Varick, M.D., Beriah A. Watson, M.D.;

Medical and Surgical Assistants, William J. Parker, M.D., Gordon K. Dickinson, M.D., Secretary of Medical Board, William J. Parker, M.D.

CHAPTER XXIX.

BOARD OF HEALTH AND VITAL STATISTICS.¹

By an act of the Legislature, approved March 27, 1871, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County was authorized to appoint two commissioners, who, together with the county physician for the time being, should constitute a Board of Health and Vital Statistics. The board for the first year consisted of Dr. L. W. Elder, Dr. J. J. Youlin and Dr. S. V. W. Stout. This board continued in office until the death of Dr. Youlin, Oct. 30 1881, when Dr. Daniel McNeil was chosen his successor. He died Nov. 9, 1883, when his son, C. Holmes McNeil, succeeded him. The board for 1883 is composed of Dr. Elder, Dr. O'Neil and County Physician Charles B. Converse. The first clerk was E. H. Curtis, who was succeeded in 1875 by C. J. Rooney, Jr., the present chief clerk. The health inspector is Dr. Gilbert D. Saltonstall, and the health inspectors of the several cities and townships of the county are made by the law the executive officers of the board in their respective jurisdictions. Mr. John A. McGrath succeeded Hon. William McAdoo as counsel to the board on the election of the latter to a seat in the national House of Representatives.

The board has accumulated a vast amount of valuable statistical information relative to the county, and issues annually a comprehensive report of the work it has accomplished. Their system is so complete that the record of deaths is considered absolutely correct. Superfluous removal or burial of the body of a human being would be very difficult, owing to the check established by the board in virtually making superintendents of cemeteries and transportation agents exercise a continual surveillance of the burial and removal of bodies, and seeing that permits have been obtained in all cases.

The quinquennial increase of population since 1855 was as follows: 1855-60, 20,894; 1860-65, 25,122; 1865-70, 41,449; 1870-75, 33,712; 1875-80, 21,500. There were in 1883 4792 deaths in an estimated population of 204,618, being 714 less than in 1882 and 447 less than in 1881. The death-rate per 1000 persons was 23.1, the lowest since 1883, and 7% below the nine years' average. During this period the highest rate was 27.5, in 1882, and the lowest 20.6, in 1879.

Zymotic diseases were distinguished in 1883 by the lowest rate yet recorded, 5.3 per 1000. The death-rate of constitutional diseases was 4.9 per 1000 per-sens, just up to the average of the nine years. Only one case of smallpox occurred during the year.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

In 1883 there died 2531 males and 2263 females. This would give a death-rate of about 24.8 for the males, and 22.1 for the females, per 1000.

The following table shows the total population, the number of deaths and the death-rates in the several cities and townships of the county:

	Population 1883.	Deaths.	Rate per 1000.
Jersey City	128,142	3,064	23.9
Hoboken	35,441	749	21.1
Bayonne	11,494	194	17.
Town of Union	6,752	165	24.4
West Hudson	5,630	146	26.
Clintonsburg	1,296	31	23.8
North Bergen	1,275	101	42.7
Kearny	2,623	40	15.4
Union Township	1,310	37	28.2
Westawaken	1,402	30	21.4
Harrison	7,858	146	24.7

The mortality in North Bergen shows a decrease of 11.1 from that of 1882, mainly due to an abrupt fall of the number of deaths from typho-malarial fever, smallpox and consumption, though the fall extended to the entire list, excepting brain and nervous diseases, from which an increase was observed. In this township are situated the penitentiary, the smallpox hospital, the lunatic asylum and the almshouse. In the last two named 89 deaths occurred in 1882.

The annexed table shows the deaths in the whole county at different ages and of each sex for each month in the year 1883:

From a supplemental report made by Mr. Rooney for the month of July, 1884, the following facts are gathered: Deaths, 483; births (reported), 347; marriages, 180. The annual death-rate in the whole county, based on the mortality of July, is 27.7; in Jersey City, 28.2; in Hoboken, 25.3. The county's rate for July fell 4.3 below the average rate for seven July's. Deaths of children under five years of age gave a rate of 3.7, and deaths of persons over five years of age fell six-tenths below the average rate for seven past July's. Some of the causes of death are given as follows:

Accidents	27
Cerebrospinal fever	1
Consumption	49
Croup	3
Diarrhea	106
Ephtheria	4
Typhoid fever	9
Typhoid malarial fever	3
Scarlet fever	9
Puerperal fever	1
Smallpox	1
Pneumonia	15
Congestion of the lungs	5
Bronchitis	7
Measles	3
Whooping-cough	2

There were reported and recorded in 1883, 4238 births, of which 2145 were males and 2093 females. This gives a birth-rate of 20.7 per 1000 persons in the county, the highest since 1877, which was 21.1.

The fact that these events are neither completely nor promptly reported renders the birth-rates founded upon them misleading. There is, however, a constant improvement, and the return of 1883 in point of number is much the best yet made. The efforts of the State Board to educate public opinion to the point of valuing properly, records of births, deaths and marriages are no doubt contributing to a better carrying out of the laws regarding their being reported.

Of marriages there were reported during the year 2086, the largest number since the records have been kept, the increase being due probably to a growing conviction of the necessity of some central office of deposit, giving guarantee of the safety and permanence of these records, and at which a list of the whole county's marriages can be viewed at a glance.

The manner in which the records of this bureau are kept does credit to the efficiency of Chief Clerk Rooney, whose tabulated statistics are prepared with great care and precision.

The following table shows the principal causes of

	Jan.		Feb.		Mar.		April.		May.		June.		July.		Aug.		Sept.		Oct.		Nov.		Dec.		Total Number.	Total Female.	Total Deaths.
	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F	M	F
Under 1 month	10	15	9	11	10	16	11	13	16	12	11	7	17	23	12	22	19	16	16	15	11	15	17	16	17	167	176	343
1 month - 1 year	21	31	27	19	21	26	18	37	28	47	40	128	87	53	54	40	37	13	18	21	18	28	17	478	388	866
1 1/2 - 2 years	19	17	26	16	18	15	12	12	17	12	9	16	21	13	24	15	15	14	17	9	14	8	18	180	363
2	12	15	8	10	8	11	12	6	9	8	15	1	5	4	8	4	3	3	7	8	10	5	6	100	84	182
3	5	7	7	10	9	7	8	3	4	6	6	2	4	3	4	7	6	2	7	2	5	7	5	47	51	121
4	8	5	4	9	4	9	6	5	5	3	4	5	2	1	4	2	3	4	1	9	2	4	4	56	51	107
5	11	12	13	8	9	12	9	23	10	11	11	10	9	10	8	5	12	5	7	9	5	8	9	108	127	235
10	3	11	11	9	10	11	19	8	9	8	7	13	12	8	7	8	8	10	10	15	15	16	122	130	252
20	17	19	17	14	25	20	28	45	18	9	16	10	25	26	22	21	15	22	26	17	26	24	17	257	225	480
30	24	18	19	16	25	29	35	19	27	21	16	21	23	22	14	14	11	21	21	16	13	22	11	249	216	465
40	23	19	21	16	32	12	19	13	24	20	15	21	15	28	13	18	20	18	15	23	20	11	269	191	460
50	12	9	16	11	20	12	23	15	16	9	18	12	9	11	15	13	11	13	11	13	11	13	11	182	144	325
60	12	18	16	8	9	13	17	7	15	17	13	9	8	7	8	16	11	12	14	19	14	6	189	135	294
70	10	14	8	9	8	12	10	10	9	8	2	6	8	5	7	5	8	2	8	15	7	14	8	96	115	201
80	5	7	1	2	2	7	2	6	4	4	3	2	4	4	3	3	2	8	3	9	3	4	3	33	60	93
90				1	1														1	1					4	6	10
For all years	81	98	77	72	77	77	92	80	74	53	1270	141	92	114	92	78	62	57	71	47	76	56	1054	978	1987
Under 5 years	117	127	123	97	140	118	136	146	121	103	112	81	111	110	114	83	107	102	102	123	129	124	144	93	1479	1326	2806

deaths in the cities, townships, and towns of Hudson County in the year 1883, compiled from the tables of the board:

The Jersey City Advertiser and Bergen Republican. This paper was issued Dec. 2, 1857, with Henry N. Holt as editor. Dec. 14, 1838, it became a

	Jersey City.	Hoboken	Boonville	Harrison.	Town of Union	W. Hoboken	Guttenberg	S. Hudson	Keeney	Union Township	Westhaver
All Diseases	3084	743	134	146	143	146	1	131	43	37	30
All Zymotic Diseases	736	17	3	14	65	1			1		9
All Miasmatic	688	140	2	11	75	41	3		6	4	9
Intermittent Fever	5	2		1
Malaria and Typho-Malarial	35	4	2	11			3		2
Typhoid Fever	36	13	8	9	1	5		1		1
Typhus Fever
Smallpox	1
Scarlet Fever	121	25	2	9	2	5		1	1
Measles	1	1	1	1		1
Whooping-Cough	1
Group	90	20	5	2	6	6			1
Diphtheria	6	21	3	3	26	7		2			3
Diarrhoeal Diseases	271	44	16	1	18	10				2
Consumption	461	161	15	24	12	17		28	6	6	1
Acute Lung Diseases	477	30	6	16	11	20		31	3	6	4
Brain and Nervous Diseases	387	110	23	24	1	24	1	76	3	1	1
Diseases of the Heart and Circulation	145	36	8	2	1	4		7	1	2	1
Diseases of the Urinary System	161	26	6	3	5	6	1	11		5	1
Erysipelas	1			1	1	2
Digestive and Intestinal Diseases	187	61	13	2	13	1				1	2
Cancer	13	3		4		3			2
Acute Rheumatism	7
Puerperal	20	12	1	1	2	1			1	1
Cerebro-spinal Fever	32	1	2
Accidents	130	37	24	4	4	2	1	7	8	1	8

CHAPTER XXX.

PRESS OF HUDSON COUNTY.¹

The Bergen County Gazette and Jersey City Advertiser.—This was a weekly paper, established in 1830 by E. B. Spooner, son of the editor of the Long Island Star. It was printed in Hackensack. Mr. Spooner soon abandoned the enterprise, when his brother, George Spooner, took it in charge, and after a few months it expired.

The Bergen County Courier was a weekly paper, first issued Feb. 1, 1832. It was printed in Jersey City by John Post and Joseph E. Handy, who not only furnished the matter, but printed and distributed the paper. Enterprise and economy were not equal to the emergency and the occasion, and the paper died Nov. 14, 1832, with the forty-second issue. Part of its material went to make up the outfit of the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Jersey City Gazette and Bergen County Courier was a semi-weekly, first issued Feb. 11, 1835, by Robert W. Long, son of the then editor of the New York Gazette. The paper was printed at No. 2 Haver Square, New York City, and destroyed by fire December, 1835.

The Jersey Blue and Bergen County Democrat.—This was a weekly paper, established at Hoboken, in July, 1835, by Childs & Devoc. The paper was destroyed by fire Aug. 8, 1838, weekly paper, and when Hudson County was formed its name was changed to the Jersey City and Hudson Republican, and in 1848 united with the Sentinel.

The Jersey City Democrat was first issued May 14, 1842, as a weekly publication, with M. Cully as editor, and Jan. 14, 1848, the publication of the paper was suspended.

The Morning Sentinel made its first appearance on Aug. 26, 1845, as a daily, with Mr. Reynolds and Luther A. Pratt as editors. It united with the Jersey City and Advertiser and Hudson Republican in 1848, and was then known as the Sentinel and Advertiser.

The Daily Evening Sentinel was established in December, 1884, by Luther A. and William W. Pratt, publishers.

The Jersey City Telegraph was first issued March 15, 1847, as a semi-weekly, with John H. Vourch as editor. It subsequently became a daily, and suspended publication June 25, 1859, when John A. Ryerson was editor. Its material went to the outfit of the American Standard.

Hudson County Union made its first appearance Aug. 12, 1852, as a weekly paper, with A. R. Sizer as editor, and on Jan. 21, 1854, it was changed to a daily, with S. P. Hull and William T. Rodgers, Jr., editors. The paper suspended publication in June, 1854, when its material went to the outfit of the Hudson County Democrat, at Hoboken.

The Hoboken Gazette was issued Sept. 12, 1853, as a weekly, with Thomas W. Whitley as editor. In February, 1855, it became a semi-weekly, and in August, 1855, changed to a daily, and suspended publication in October of the same year.

The Hudson County Democrat was established in September, 1854, as a weekly paper, with Augustus

¹ Winfield's "History of Hudson County," 374.

O. Evans as editor. It was published in Hoboken, and became a daily in 1869.

The Jersey City Courier was first issued Aug. 1, 1855, as a weekly, with William B. Dunning and H. C. Milligan as editors. In a short time it became a daily, and was merged with the Sentinel and Advertiser in June, 1856, then known as the Courier and Advertiser; suspended in May, 1861.

The Hudson County Courier and Advertiser was a weekly paper, published in connection with the Sentinel and Advertiser, and suspended publication in 1861.

The City Gazette and Hudson County Chronicle and Cultivator.—This paper was issued for a short time, with Thomas W. Whitley as editor, subsequent to the suspension of the Hoboken Gazette.

The Circuit Judge.—This paper was started by Mr. Whitley after the suspension of the Gazette, and ran but a few weeks, when it died.

The Hoboken City Standard.—This paper was first issued Oct. 9, 1856, with P. M. Reynolds as editor.

The American Standard arose from the ashes of the Daily Telegraph Aug. 8, 1859, and was published by Metz & Brother as a daily till Oct. 14, 1859, when it was purchased by John H. Lyon.

The People's Advocate was a daily paper, established by John C. Clark & Co., of Jersey City, and subsequently was merged in the Jersey City Times.

The Jersey City News was established in 1854 by Daniel E. Gavitt as a weekly, who continued its publication one year, when the paper died.

The Jersey City Herald was issued as a weekly July 19, 1864, by Hugh McDermott. It subsequently was merged with the Hoboken City Gazette.

The Evening Journal (daily), the best known and most widely circulated newspaper in Hudson County, and with a much larger circulation than any other daily newspaper printed and published in the State of New Jersey, was originally established by its present editor-in-chief, Maj. Z. K. Pangborn, the first number of the paper being issued May 2, 1867. It is now owned and published by the Evening Journal Association, a stock company which is controlled by Mr. Pangborn and Mr. Joseph A. Dear, the business manager and treasurer of the association, who are also the sole proprietors of the extensive book and general job printing establishment doing business under the name and title of the Jersey City Printing Company. When the Evening Journal was first issued, Mr. Pangborn associated with himself in its publication, Capt. Wm. B. Dunning, a practical printer, who had considerable experience in the newspaper publishing business. Eighteen months later Messrs. Pangborn & Dunning sold an interest in the Evening Journal to Mr. Joseph A. Dear, and until 1877, and a short time prior to the death of Mr. Dunning, the publishing firm was Pangborn, Dunning & Dear. The firm was then dissolved and the property was transferred to the Evening Journal Association. The general business conduct and financial management of the publishing department have, during the entire period since his entrance into the firm, been chiefly in the hands of Mr. Dear, while the editorial control of the newspaper has remained with Maj. Pangborn. The career of the Evening Journal has been one of marked, almost unequalled, prosperity. Its daily circulation, now averaging more than ten thousand copies, is greater than that of any other daily newspaper in New Jersey, and more than double that of all the other newspapers published in Hudson County.

It has been from the first conducted on the strictest cash basis, no credit being given in any instance in the sale of copies of the paper. Five regular editions of the Evening Journal are published daily, and the paper is taken in nearly all the most respectable families in Jersey City and Hudson County. Its columns are largely devoted to the giving of local news, and this has secured for the Journal popularity and general circulation. The pecuniary success of the enterprise enabled the proprietors of the newspaper to build for their use a large and commodious printing-office, which was completed in 1874, and is probably the most extensive and best-equipped printing establishment in New Jersey. It is located at 37 Montgomery Street in close proximity to the river front opposite Cortlandt Street, in the city of New York. The several daily editions of the Evening Journal are printed on the first completed perfecting press which was ever successfully used, all the processes of printing, cutting and folding being automatically performed with great rapidity. This style of press is now in general use in those daily newspaper establishments where large and frequent daily editions are issued, but the Evening Journal of Jersey City has the distinction of being the first newspaper in the world that was printed on this most perfect of all printing presses. The beginning of the enterprise of publishing the Evening Journal was comparatively humble; its proprietors had little capital, and few besides themselves believed it could or would prove a financial success. It had at that time two established daily papers in Jersey City as competitors with itself for the patronage of the public; yet in less than a year from the date of its first issue it had secured a regular daily circulation exceeding that of both its rivals, and its growth has since been steady and its prosperity unchecked, until it is now practically without any competitor in journalism in Hudson County. Its marked success is largely due to the energy and tact of the business manager, Mr. Dear, and to the fact that its editorial control has always remained in the hands of Mr. Pangborn, who has always taken care to secure the assistance of a full, competent and well-paid corps of reporters. Under this management the Evening Journal has become conspicuous as the best and most reliable newspaper in the city or county, and has attained a special popularity as a purveyor of local news.

Its large and secure circulation has gained for it a patronage of great value, and the merchants and business men of New York City use its columns for advertising purposes as freely as they do those of the New York City daily papers. The proprietors of the Journal have never spared either expenditure of money or labor in their efforts to make it a first-class and a deservedly popular daily newspaper; the result is an ample and gratifying vindication of the energy and liberality of their conduct of the enterprise.

Z. K. Pungborn

In politics the Evening Journal is, and ever has been, the pronounced and vigorous advocate of Republican principles and the general policy of the Republican party. It has supported and advocated the election of the national and State candidates of that party. In city politics and local elections, however, it has often waived considerations of national and State politics, and aided the election of local officers without regard to their political affiliations. It gave the earliest and most energetic support to the Citizens Association in its efforts to reform the administration of the city government of Jersey City. While distinctly and positively Republican, the Evening Journal has been noted for its independence and its progressive spirit and action within its own party. It has always been foremost and uncompromising in urging whatever its editor deems to be in the line of a progressive Republican policy. It was the pioneer in New Jersey of the movement for granting the right of suffrage to the colored citizens of this State; the initial number of the Evening Journal, May 2, 1867, contained the call, written by the editor, for the first State convention ever held for the purpose of demanding equal civil political rights for the colored man. The Evening Journal is never neutral or without opinions on any subject of public importance or interest, and its editorial utterances are of an explicit and positive character. It never caters for popular favor by pandering to the wishes or schemes of the base elements in the community, and is known as the uncompromising foe of whatever it deems to be a sham, or fraudulent or immoral, and as the earnest advocate of whatever will benefit the community in which it is published.

In pursuance of the plan of its founder to make the Evening Journal a newspaper of special interest and value as a disseminator of news of a local character, the reportorial corps of the paper is always ample, and it is the aim of the editors and reporters to make the Journal a complete and accurate daily chronicler of all current local events. The working force employed in the newspaper office is usually forty to fifty. At the present date (November, 1884) Mr. Frederic W. Pangborn is the first assistant or managing editor, and Mr. C. H. Benson city editor. The Journal is supplied with all the news collected and furnished by the New York Associated Press simultaneously with its transmission to the New York evening daily papers. There are usually employed in the work of the Jersey City Printing Company, the job printing establishment of the Journal, about fifty men. The route-owners, carriers and newsboys connected with the Evening Journal number upwards of two hundred and fifty persons.

Z. K. PANGBORN.—Zebina Kellogg Pangborn, editor-in-chief of the Jersey City daily Evening Journal, was born July 31, 1829, at Perham, Vt. His father was a physician and surgeon of considerable eminence in his profession, and was of Scottish descent. The subject of this sketch after leaving the common-school had the advantage of an academic training and preparation for a collegiate course at the Black River Institute, at Watervtn, N. Y., and at the academy at Malone, N. Y., and was also a private pupil of Rev. James Millar, formerly a professor in the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. The death of his mother when he was thirteen years of age gave young Pangborn an early incentive and opportunity for self-exertion, and he commenced his career as a school-teacher in the winter after his fourteenth birthday, and in the nine years succeeding he taught in schools in New York and Vermont, during portions, or the whole, of those years attaining distinction as a successful and popular instructor. At the age of seventeen he entered the freshman class in the University of Vermont, at Burlington, and graduated with the class in 1850, taking the highest rank in scholarship and the class honors. He earned, by teaching school and by literary work, his own support during his collegiate course, and on leaving college, at the age of twenty-one he possessed no capital except his education. He was offered the position of tutor in the University, but declined it, and accepted the position of principal of the Lamoille County Grammar School, which in the two succeeding years, under his charge became one of the largest and most popular academic schools in Vermont. While in college Mr. Pangborn was occasionally employed as a writer and reporter on the Daily School, a newspaper at Burlington, and there acquired the inclination for journalism which, perhaps, finally determined his choice of a profession for life. In 1851, while at the head of the institution above referred to, he commenced the publication of a monthly educational journal, called The Teacher's Voice, the first publication of the kind ever issued in Vermont. Its publication was continued two years. It was popular and attained a fair circulation, chiefly among the teachers of the State, but it was not pecuniarily a success,—it was in advance of the times, educationally. Mr. Pangborn removed to St. Albans, Vt., and taught the academy at that place one year, and during that period was also one of the editors of the Vermont Tribune, a weekly newspaper, established as the first distinctive Republican newspaper in Vermont. In the spring of 1855, Mr. Pangborn assumed the editorial management of the Worcester Daily Transcript, at Worcester, Mass., and eight months later accepted an offer of the place of editor-in-chief of the Boston Daily Bee, which soon after was consolidated with the Boston Daily Atlas, the old Whig organ of Boston, and the newspaper was thereafter published as the Boston Daily Atlas and Bee. Mr. Pangborn remained its editor until the summer of 1861. Before the outbreak of the great Rebellion the period of Mr. Pangborn's editorial work in Boston was one of the most exciting in the political history of the country, and he took a very active part, both with his pen as an editor and as a political speaker "on the stump." He was conspicuous in the Fremont campaign of 1856 as an advocate of the election of Fremont and Dayton, and in the following year in the State canvass which resulted in the election of Hon. Nathaniel P. Banks as Governor and in the defeat of Governor Henry J. Gardner for re-election, and the final disbanding of the American, or "Know-Nothing" party in Massachusetts. As a political stump speaker Maj. Pangborn soon became well-known and popular, and he has actively participated in all the Presidential contests since 1852, except that of 1864, as an advocate of the election of the Republican candidates. He has addressed many hundreds of political meetings, in all the New England States, and in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia and Indiana. His services as a public speaker have always been in demand by the National Republican Committee. He has been four times a delegate and three times an alternate delegate in the National Conventions of the Republican party, and was for several years a member of the State Committee of the Republican party of New Jersey. In 1861, Mr. Pangborn accepted the position of paymaster of volunteers in the army, and served acceptably in Virginia, South Carolina and Florida. A short time before the conclusion of the war of the Rebellion, in 1865, Maj. Pangborn accepted the editorship of the Jersey City Daily Times, a Republican newspaper established by an association of Republicans of Jersey City at that time. The Times in a few months, under Maj. Pangborn's editorial management, attained a circulation of more than twenty-five hundred, but it was not wisely managed in the publication department, and was sold to Gen. E. Jarline, who continued its publication. Maj. Pangborn resigned the editorial care of the Times in the autumn of 1866, and in May, 1867, he commenced the publication of the daily Evening Journal, a sketch history of which is given elsewhere in this volume. Maj. Pangborn is one of the two proprietors of this eminently successful daily newspaper, and its editor-in-chief, and gives his personal attention to its management. He has always kept the Evening Journal on the most advanced and positive line of progressive Republicanism, and made it recognized as one of the leading and influential organs of Republican opinion in the State of New Jersey. But he has never allowed the political department of the Evening Journal to over-shadow or cease to be neglected the more important department of news gathering and news disseminating. The best test of the popularity which the Evening Journal has attained under Maj. Pangborn's direction is the fact that although it is published in a community which is overwhelmingly Democratic, it has been so successful that it is practically without any competitor, or rival, in the field of journalism in Hudson County. Maj. Pangborn has never been an office-seeker, preferring his position, independence and opportunities as an editor to any position which his party might offer him. He has been twice married,—first, in 1853, to Miss Harriet Wood, of Malone, N. Y.; and the second time, in 1881, to his present wife, Miss Georgiana L. Walton, of Boston. He has two children living, both by his first wife, Frederic W. and Harry L.; the eldest of these is the managing editor of the Evening Journal.

Jersey City Times was first issued as a daily paper Sept. 14, 1864, with Z. K. Pangborn as editor. Nov. 8, 1873, the paper was changed to a weekly, and soon after its publication was suspended.

The Hudson City Gazette was established in March, 1867, with William D. McGregor as editor, and subsequently merged with the Jersey City Herald.

Jersey City Chronicle was a semi-weekly paper, first issued Feb. 14, 1863, by Davidson & Colston, and Aug. 24, 1864, was merged with the Jersey City Times.

The Hudson County Volksblatt, a weekly paper, was established in 1868, in Hudson City, by Deitz & Tirum.

The Bayonne Herald and Greenville Register, a weekly paper, was first issued Dec. 25, 1869, with Roswell Graves as editor. The office was removed from Greenville to Bergen Point.

The Hudson County Journal, a German (weekly) paper, published in Hoboken by Rabe and Bayer, the first issue of which made its appearance Dec. 19, 1868. It was subsequently published by Bayer & Kaufmann.

Jersey City Herald and Gazette is a weekly publication, established in 1870 by McDermott & McGregor as the result of the merging of the Jersey City Herald and the Hudson City Gazette.

Hudson County Register was issued first, July 23, 1870, as a weekly paper, at West Hoboken, by Peter Y. Everett as editor.

Palisade News was established, Aug. 6, 1870, at West Hoboken, by Alfred E. Gregory, who is still the publisher and editor. It is a weekly paper, independent in politics, and has a large circulation.

Bayonne Times was established at Bergen Point in August, 1870, under the name of Hudson County Times, by the Times Printing Company of Jersey City, and subsequently sold to Edward Gardner, the present publisher, with his son, Bloom Gardner, as editor.

Die Wacht am Hudson, a weekly paper, was established in 1871, in Jersey City, by the Hudson County German Publishing Association.

Highland Sentinel, a weekly publication was first issued March 29, 1873, at West Hoboken, with Joseph Paul Bugie as editor.

Hudson County Independent was established as a weekly May 3, 1873, by Augustus O. Evans, at Hoboken, and was discontinued after a few numbers had been issued.

Dispatch, a weekly paper, was established at East Newark, in 1873, by Trelease, Simonds & Co.

The Evening Palisades was a daily publication, established June 30, 1873, at West Hoboken, by the Palisades Publishing Company.

CHAPTER XXXI.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS OF HUDSON COUNTY.¹

THE earliest settlement by Europeans in the State of New Jersey was within the present limits of Hudson County. At the incorporated town of Bergen were organized the first court the first church and the first school in the State. That part of Jersey City around Bergen Square still shows the plan of the ancient town, and a school building now stands where the first log school-house was erected by the enterprising people who went over from New Amsterdam to cultivate the land "behind Communepah." When the State was divided into counties the greater part of what is now Hudson County was known as Bergen township, in Bergen County, and it was not until 1849 that Hudson County was set off from Bergen County by act of the Legislature. Since its incorporation many changes have been made, both in its boundaries and in its political divisions, and in 1854 there was in Hudson County three cities (Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne), three towns (Harrison, Union and Guttenberg) and five townships (North Bergen, Weehawken, Union, West Hoboken and Kearny). The former townships of Van Vorst and Greenville and the cities of Bergen and Hudson have been added to Jersey City. Under the State school law the county was divided, in April, 1871, into seventeen school districts, and there are now sixteen of those districts, Greenville, which was District No. 14, having been annexed to Jersey City in 1873. These districts are as follows: Nos. 1 to 5 inclusive, in North Bergen; No. 6, town of Union; No. 7, Weehawken; No. 8, Guttenberg; Nos. 9 and 10, township of Union; No. 11, West Hoboken; No. 12, Hoboken; No. 13, Jersey City; No. 15, Bayonne; No. 16, Harrison; No. 17, Kearny.

Bergen. The early records show that on Aug. 16, 1639, the director-general and Council of New Netherland granted a petition asking "for permission 'to begin' to cultivate farms and plantations on the west side of the river, behind Communepah, and to make a village or concentration." Pursuant to this consent, Bergen was laid out and settled.

A church and a school were very soon organized, and the first school master, employed as early as 1662, was Engelbert Steenhuyzen. Regarding him, Mr. Winfield says, in his "History of Hudson County," "He was a tailor by trade, and came from Soest, the second city in Westphalia; arrived at New Amsterdam, . . . April 25, 1659, paying for his fare and freight thirty-six florins." He was licensed Oct. 6, 1662, which is probably very nearly the date of the opening of the first school in the State of New Jersey. During the following year a controversy arose between him and the authorities about the payment of taxes, and the following memorial, dated Dec. 17, 1663, was presented to the Governor-General and Council of New Netherland. It contains so much information regarding the manner in which local affairs were administered at that early day that an account of this contest is inserted in this sketch:

"Show reverently the sheriff and commissaries of the village of Bergen, which they presume is known to your Honor that before the selection of the new commissaries were selected (a Michael Jansen, licensed to be favored with the appointment of a clerk (respondent) who should at the same time keep school, to instruct the youth, the person of Engelbert Steenhuyzen, who possessed the required abilities, so is that the sheriff and commissaries, new a year past, proposed it to the community, whether they approved it, and resolved to engage him not only as clerk (respondent) but with the express stipulation that he, besides his function, was to keep school, which the aforesaid Steenhuyzen agreed to do, and did so during five-quarters of a year, for which he was well hired 250 in salary annually, besides some other stipulations besides the school money, so as reason and equity shall demand. Now, so is that the aforesaid Engelbert Steenhuyzen, whereas he has a lot and house and a double farm, situated in the jurisdiction of the village of Bergen, is by the complaint of a majority of the community, obliged, with the other inhabitants, to provide for the maintenance of a soldier, by which the aforesaid Engelbert Steenhuyzen considers himself highly aggrieved and resigned his office, pretending that a schoolmaster and clerk ought to be exempt from all taxes and burthens of the village, which he says is the common practice through the whole Christian world, which by the sheriff and commissaries is understood that only that can take place where such a clerk or schoolmaster does not possess anything else but the school-wharf, but by no means when a schoolmaster is in possession of a house and lot and double farm, that he in such a case should pay nothing from his lot and lands, and the community at large lose of themselves anything, as he receives his salary as clerk, and not only is obliged to pay well in his capacity as clerk (respondent), but even to look out and provide himself a proper and convenient place to keep school, which he thus far neglected, and pretends that the community must effect this, so that he may keep his school in it. They cannot perceive how Engelbert Steenhuyzen can be permitted to resign his office when he neglected to vacate his intention a half year before; wherefore the supplicants address the petition to your Honor, humbly soliciting them to instruct him to the aforesaid Engelbert Steenhuyzen to continue in his service this second year, and to declare if the aforesaid Engelbert Steenhuyzen is or is not obliged by his possession of a lot and farm, to provide in the maintenance of a soldier, so well as the other inhabitants."

The parties interested in the above memorial were summoned before the Council and heard at length, and Steenhuyzen was commanded to serve his time according to his contract. From this communication it appears that the school-house was not yet built. One was, however, shortly afterwards constructed on the lot where the school-house now is. It was built of logs. The Columbia Academy was erected on the same lot in 1790, and taken down in 1897 to make room for the present structure, situated on the east side of Bergen Square, and known as school building No. 11. As was customary in all new settlements, the school-house was used for the holding of religious services until 1680, when a meeting-house was erected. No settled pastor for the congregation was procured for several years, and to the duties of school-master were added those of clerk. A traveler visiting Bergen in 1679 wrote that the people had "agreed with the minister of the city to administer the Lord's Supper three times a year, for which he receives thirty bushels or fifteen bags of wheat. This service he performs on week-days because he cannot be absent from the city on Sundays, where he is the only minister."

¹ By Edward S. Peck.

For many years the church and the school were closely connected, and were sustained by taxes levied upon all the inhabitants. In the charter granted September, 1668, by Sir Philip Carteret to the town of Bergen, it was provided,

"Totally. That the Freeholders aforesaid, or the Major part of them, have Power to chose their own Minister for the preaching of the word of God, and the Administering His Holy Sacraments, and being so chosen, all persons, as well the Freeholders as the Inhabitants, are to contribute according to their estates and proportions of land for his maintenance, or lay out such a proportion of Land for the Minister, and the Keeping of a Free School for the Education of Youth, as they shall think fit, which land being once laid out is not to be alienated, but to Remain and continue forever from one incumbent to another, Free from Paying any Rents, or any other Rate or Taxes whatsoever, notwithstanding it shall and may be lawful for any particular person or persons to Keep and Maintain any other Minister at their own Proper Cost and charges."

As the population increased, and all the lots within the village were occupied, new settlements were formed at inconvenient distances from Bergen. The people living in these outlying hamlets felt it a hardship to be taxed for the support of the school, when they were too far away to be greatly benefited by it. From this cause a second controversy arose about school matters; this time it was between the authorities of Bergen and the people living in some of the dependent hamlets. Dec. 18, 1672, the schout and magistrates of Bergen ordered all to pay the tax, but the order was not obeyed, and, as in the first case, there was an appeal to the authorities at New Orange. The law was on the side of the powers in authority, and when the appeal was decided, on the 24th of December, 1673, it was ordered "That all the said inhabitants, without exception, shall, pursuant to the resolution of the magistrates of the town of Bergen, dated 18th Novr. 1672, and subsequent confirmation, pay their share for the support of said Presentor and School-master."

This order, however, was not effectual, and subsequently the authorities at Bergen again applied to the authorities at New Orange, who thereupon made the following order:

"The Schout and Magistrates of the town of Bergen, complaining, by petition, that some of the inhabitants of their dependent hamlets in disobedience of the previous order of the Governor-General and Council, dated the 24th X^r last, obstinately refuse to pay their quota in the support of the Presentor and School-master. Ordered, The Governor-General and Council persist in their previous mandate of the 24th X^r last, and order the Schout to proceed to immediate execution against all unwilling delinquents."

The contumacious inhabitants of "Mingagque and Penrepegh" were still determined not to submit to this taxation, and therefore selected Laurens Andries and Joost Van der Linde to present their case again to the Governor-General and Council. This was done on the 15th of June, 1674, when the following order was made:

"On petition of Laurens Andries and Joost van der Linde, agents for the inhabitants of Mingagque and Penrepegh, requesting to be excused from contributing to the support of the school-master at Bergen. Ordered, A Copy hereof to be furnished the Magistrate of the town of Bergen, to answer the same."

The magistrates of Bergen thus having notice of the application, we may suppose that the matter was fully argued on behalf of both parties, when the court, apparently out of patience at the continued obstinacy of the petitioners, made the following order dated the 7th of July:

"The Governor and Council of New Netherland having seen the complaint of the town of Bergen against the inhabitants of the villages of Penrepegh, Mingagque, etc., and the answer given by them, in regard to what the inhabitants of Penrepegh and Mingagque aforesaid owe for the support of the school-master and presentor of the town of Bergen, it is, after due inquiry, resolved and ordered, that the inhabitants of Penrepegh and Mingagque shall promptly pay their share for the support aforesaid, on pain of proceeding against them with immediate execution."

This order, obtained after a contest of nearly two years, apparently terminated the first litigation within the State of New Jersey respecting the support of schools.

The sixth section of the charter quoted above indicates that the people had a due regard for the spiritual welfare of the settlement, and it is probable that the school, though supported by public tax was under the direct control and supervision of the consistory of the R-formed Dutch Church, at that time the only church in the town. In his "Annals of the Classis of Bergen," Dr. Taylor says,—

"The Consistory appointed the school-master, who, in addition to the ordinary instruction in the elementary branches of education, was required to hear recitations on the catechism of the church, and at stated times to receive the pastor and elders of the church, when all the pupils of the school were to be catechised and instructed in the elementary truths of religion. . . . This arrangement precisely corresponds with the provision in the Constitution of the Reformed Dutch Church. In accordance with these requirements were the provisions of the charter granted to the church at Bergen, in 1571."

It is not known how long the school thus remained under the control of the church. Dr. Taylor, who became pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church at Bergen in 1828, heard some of his aged parishioners speak of their school-days, when "they and their schoolmates were busied with their lessons in Dutch and English, using principally as a reading-book the Psalter and New Testament, and rather dreading the day for the good old dominie's catechise." The land not actually set off to individual settlers was used in common, and the encroachments upon and misuse of this public property formed the chief source of dissension in the community. A commission was therefore appointed by the Legislature, Dec. 7, 1763, to make a survey. This was done, and out of the common lands three lots were set apart "for the free school of the town of Bergen." The first was on the east side of the square, where school building No. 11 now is; the second was a small triangular lot lying in the S angle formed by the junction of Bergen Avenue and a short street through which the horse-cars now pass from Bergen Avenue to Monticello Avenue; the third lies east of Bergen Avenue, and extends from Magnolia Avenue on the south to about one hundred feet north of Peasport Street, or Pavsania Avenue. About the year 1790 the trustees of the Bergen Columbia Academy claimed the school lots, took possession of them, and afterwards sold most of the second and third lots, and invested the proceeds for the benefit of the academy. There was, however, a strife between the trustees of the academy and the "Trustees of the Freeholders, Inhabitants of the Township of Bergen," which continued several years, until the trustees of the academy, wearied by litigation, by five of their number, being a majority, conveyed the lands and other property of the academy to the trustees of the freeholders. This deed was dated Sept. 28, 1812, and the names of the trustees who signed it were Jeremiah Van Winkle, Peter Sip, Martin Winne, Gerrit J. Newkirk and Gerrit Van Reyepen. The bonds transferred amounted to the sum of "three thousand and five hundred dollars and forty-two cents." This fund was intrusted to a committee consisting of Messrs. George Vreeland and Cornelius C. Van Reyepen, who afterwards reported that "by adding the interest of said school fund to the principal yearly, and taking therefrom the expenses every year, said fund was expended in the year 1819." In its day the old academy had two departments, one for classical, the other for elementary instruction. It was the chief, if not the only, school in the town, and probably received many pupils residing abroad.

The following advertisement, taken from a New York paper of Aug. 16, 1796, probably refers to that school:

"Agreeably to an advertisement of the Trustees of Bergen Academy, New Jersey, in April last, the Grammar School was opened the first of May and continues. The pleasant and healthy situation of the place, its proximity to New York and the low rate at which board may be had are advantages meriting the attention of the public, especially the people of New York, who may be assured that the best care and attention will be given to the education and morals of the children by the Teachers, Elijah Rossmont. N. B.—The price of Boarding will be from 20 to 25 pence a year. The distance of the Academy from Powleshook Ferry is one mile and a half only."

The township of Bergen suffered many changes as its population increased. Out of its territory cities and other townships were erected, and in 1855 the township became the town of Bergen and was divided into three districts or wards,—Columbian, Franklin and Communipaw.

FIRST BOARD OF EDUCATION.—A Board of Education was established in 1864, before which time the schools had been under the control of the various trustees of the school districts. The board consisted of nine members, three from each district, besides the chairman of the Town Council Committee on Education and the town superintendent, who were members ex officio. The members of the first board were: Franklin District, John Patterson, Jacob Van Riper, and Henry Lindsay; from Franklin District, Arthur L. McDuff, James Soper, and James G. Craighead; from Communipaw District, Daniel W. Culver, Jeremiah B. Cleveland, and John Van Horn, Jr.; the ex-officio members were A. A. Hardenbergh, chairman of the Town Council Committee, and Rev. Benjamin C. Taylor, the town superintendent of schools. D. W. Culver was the first president, elected June 13, 1864; the next was the Rev. J. G. Craighead, elected May 13, 1865; the third, J. W. Atwood, elected to the office June 11, 1864, was president until the consolidation of Bergen with Jersey City. The secretaries of the board and the dates of their election were Rev. B. C. Taylor, June 13, 1864; John W. Patterson, May 18, 1865; Dr. E. P. Bullitt, June 14, 1866; and Daniel Bowley, June 11, 1868. The superintendents were Rev. B. C. Taylor, who was elected at the annual township election April 8, 1861, and held the office when the Board of Education was organized, and until April, 1866, when L. C. Brigham was elected, and held the office until the consolidation in 1870. In 1868 the town became a city, having four wards, and the board was increased to twelve members, besides the four ex-officio members, the mayor and the president of the Board of Aldermen being made ex-officio members of the Board of Education.

NORMAL SCHOOL ESTABLISHED.—At the organization of the board there was a school population in the town numbering one thousand seven hundred and thirty-six, for whom were provided three schools and fourteen teachers, Columbia District employing six teachers, and each of the other two four teachers. Almost as soon as the board was organized steps were taken to establish a Normal School, a resolution to that end being passed at a meeting held June 29, 1864, and Messrs. Craighead, Taylor and Culver being the committee appointed for the purpose. By the rules adopted July 1st, the school was held on Saturdays, from nine to twelve o'clock, and was to be under the care of the male principals. All teachers not especially excused were required to attend. The school was opened in the following fall, the male principals conducting it in turn, each for a month. The number of teachers was fourteen, and the male principals were Mr. George W. Beale, Mr. William Lyman and Mr. — Crosby. Though attendance was required of the teachers, there was great irregularity, and principals and the board were obliged to use considerable exertion to maintain the school in a satisfactory condition. As the number of scholars increased, and more teachers were required, so difficult was it to procure competent teachers that the chairman of the committee on teachers and salaries was requested to correspond with the principal of the State Normal School at Oswego, N. Y., for the purpose of obtaining teachers. The Normal School, however, was continued until the consolidation, and accomplished good results.

The period during which the Board of Education was in existence was one of marked increase in the population of Bergen, and the school authorities found it difficult to provide correspondingly increased advantages. The estimated amount required for the support of the schools in 1864-65, was $8000; in the year ending May, 1869, the sum of $27,244.33 was actually expended for the same purpose. The number of teachers had increased from 14 to 23, and the salaries of male principals from $1000 to $1600, of female principals from $350 to $900, and of first assistants from $250 to $650, and others in proportion.

The value of school property at the time of the consolidation was estimated to be as follows:

School	Valuation of Houses and Lots.	Valuation of Furniture and Fixtures.	Total.
First Ward, 14 lots	$10,000	$2,000	$12,000
Second Ward, old, 4 lots	12,000	800	12,800
Second Ward, new, 14 lots	73,050	1,000	74,050
Third Ward, 4 lots	2,000	2,500	4,500
Fourth Ward, 12 lots	70,000	3,000	73,000
	$220,050	$10,300	$230,350

To procure this property a debt had been incurred and school bonds issued amounting to $166,930, leaving an excess of the school property over the school debt of $74,020.

Hudson City.—In 1852 the territory formerly included in Hudson City was set off from the township of North Bergen, and incorporated as "The town of Hudson in the county of Hudson." April 11, 1855, "The city of Hudson" was incorporated, and July 7, 1855, the first Board of Education was organized, with Mr. Jesse West president and Charles E. Newham clerk. The board consisted of the following nine members: James Cumming, William Nangle, — Smith, James R. Dey, Jesse West, David Conklin, — Platt, Charles E. Newham and Jacob Miller. At a meeting held in August it was reported by a special committee that there were in the city eight hundred and seventy-seven children between the ages of five and sixteen years, of which number from one hundred to one hundred and twenty attended the public school, and even that number could not be properly accommodated. The committee asked the board to give its immediate attention to the matter. During its entire existence the board had great difficulty in maintaining adequate accommodations for the very rapidly increasing school population, which was eight hundred and seventy-seven in 1855 and five thousand in 1869. In 1856 the yearly expenses were about four thousand dollars, and they rapidly increased. As fast as the board could accomplish it, new buildings were erected and old buildings repaired. The city was deficient not only in its school accommodations, but also in the standard of scholarship among its teachers and in the organization of the classes. An immediate effort was made to raise the standard of scholarship of the teachers by requiring them to obtain certificates of their proficiency from the county examiners, and to improve the discipline in the schools by offering prizes to the teachers of those classes showing the best discipline with least punishment. Mr. W. H. Storrs and Miss E. Brown were the first to receive the promised reward, which was increased by raising their salaries. There was no Normal School in the city, and the teachers were encouraged to visit the other schools in the city and those of New York, for the purpose of studying the methods of others. To do this they were permitted to leave their classes, upon application to the superintendent. As a result of the efforts of the board, there were in 1859 only four years from its organization, six schools, which were maintained at an annual expense of $4837.14. The average attendance had increased from one hundred and twenty to five hundred and thirty, and the average cost per pupil was $9.12. The salaries of the ten teachers employed ranged from $8.33 to $50 per month.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.—The annual report for 1861-62 contains the following: "Three new and commodious school buildings, designated as Nos. 1, 2 and 4, have been erected at an aggregate cost of some thirty thousand dollars. During the previous year over one thousand dollars were expended in the enlargement and improvement of school-house No. 3. Of these buildings, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are occupied at the present time, and are of ample dimensions, pleasantly located and well adapted to the purpose of education. They contrast proudly with the humble tenements in which the public schools of our city were formerly accustomed to assemble—an old seven-by-nine county school-house, located at one extremity of a frog-pond, a metamorphosed church and two temporarily rented lager-beer saloons." During the year all teachers not having certificates were dismissed, and only those employed who had received licenses from the county board of examiners.

In 1865 there were twenty-five teachers and seven hundred and twenty-nine pupils. A Normal School was formed in that year, similar in plan to the one established in Bergen the previous year, the sessions being held Saturday mornings, the male principals alternating in giving instruction. It was maintained with varying success until the consolidation with Jersey City, in 1870.

HIGH SCHOOL ESTABLISHED.—In 1865 the question also of opening a High School was agitated, and such a school was opened in the latter part of the year, with Mr. J. N. Flint as teacher and an average daily attendance of thirty-seven. Mr. Flint resigned in the following May, when Miss Denton was appointed to the place, which she held until June, 1868, when she resigned. Mr. E. O. Chapman then became the teacher, and under his management the school was very flourishing, and some of its graduates obtained from the county examiners licenses to teach. The requirements of the Board of Education, however, were so great, owing to the extraordinary increase in the school population, that the Common Council did not feel able to meet all the demands, and in October, 1869, the High School was closed "on account of the insufficiency of the accommodation," and Mr. Chapman, its principal, in a short time became city superintendent of schools in Jersey City, which position he held until May 11, 1871. When the city was consolidated with Jersey City, and salaries were made uniform with those paid in that place, the sum required for school purposes was greatly increased, amounting in 1870-71 to seventy-eight thousand four hundred and fifty dollars. The territory included in Hudson City then became the Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Wards of Jersey City. The following table shows the value of the school property at the consolidation:

RECORD.	Valuation of Houses and Lots.	Valuation of Furniture and Fixtures.	Total.
No. 1, six lots	$40,000	$5,000	$45,000
No. 2, plot 100x500 feet	10,000	1,000	11,000
No. 3, four lots	15,000	1,500	16,500
No. 4, two lots	10,000	500	10,500
No. 5, four lots	26,000	1,000	27,000
	$121,000	$7,000	$128,000

The officers of the Board of Education were as follows, each holding until the election of his successor: Presidents—Jesse West, July 7, 1855; Jacob Miller, June 5, 1854; Charles Newham, May 10, 1858, resigned March 3, 1862; G. Van Houten, April 7, 1862; George W. De Mott, Sept. 8, 1862; P. F. Wertenlyke, June 3, 1863; — Seward, May 24, 1867; Job Lippincott, May 14, 1869. Clerks—Charles E. Newham, July 7, 1855; Francis C. Selring, May 10, 1858; Samuel N. Gaston, June 19, 1859, resigned Jan. 6, 1862; William Clarkson, March 3, 1862, resigned Feb. 3, 1863; John B. Ginnochis, Feb. 3, 1863; John J. Rente, June 3, 1863; E. M. Hoff, June 7, 1863. Superintendents of Schools—James R. Dey, 1856; — Camp, 1857, 1858, Isaac Emmons, 1859; J. E. Culver, 1860, 1861, 1864, 1865; William H. Dockstadter, 1862, 1863; F. E. Noble, 1866, 1869; and A. H. Laddlaw, 1867, 1868.

Greenville.—The township of Greenville was set off from the town of Bergen, March 18, 1863, and consolidated with Jersey City in 1873. It was a small village, and formerly constituted Washington School District of the town of Bergen, and at the time of its incorporation had but three hundred and forty children between the ages of five and sixteen years, and one school, with two teachers. The first board consisted of school trustees, M. D. M. Vreeland, John H. Midner and George Vreeland, Jr., and the school committee, B. L. Budd and John Armstrong. The officers were: Chairmen—M. D. M. Vreeland, elected April 20, 1863; Stephen B. Vreeland, April 25, 1866; Robert McDougal, April 24, 1867; Matthew Armstrong, April 30, 1868; Michael Schultz, April 22, 1869, J. Sisso, April 18, 1872. Secretaries—John Armstrong, 1863 and 1864; W. J. Barker, 1865; George Schmitz, 1866 and 1867; Robert McDougal, 1868; William Currie, 1869; Thomas Carey, 1870; John A. Van Nostrand, 1871 and 1872, resigned May 30, 1872; and Richard Rauth, part of 1872 and 1873. There was no town superintendent, the duties of that office being performed by the county superintendent. For several years the public schools were in most unsatisfactory condition, until a new school building, now known as No. 20 in Jersey City, was erected, in 1869-70, at a cost, including the lot on which it stands, of about eighteen thousand dollars. It was first opened for school use April 11, 1870, at which time the number of scholars on the school register was 228, the average attendance being 159, and 3 teachers being employed. In the next year the number on the register increased to 494, the average attendance to 284, and the number of teachers to 8.

The growth of the school was continuous until the consolidation, in 1873, when the average attendance was 303, the whole school population numbering 350. The members of the board of trustees, to whom the awakened interest in the school and the erection of the new building were largely due, were Michael Schultz (president), Thomas Carey (secretary), James R. Williams, Charles Herig and Norman L. Rowe.

Jersey City.—Though Jersey City is one of the chief cities in the State, that part of it which first bore the name, and which is frequently called "Old" Jersey City, was not settled by any but a few farmers and gardeners, until a comparatively recent date. In 1809 the only buildings at Paulus Hook, or Powles Hook, as it was called, were a tavern with its out-building and a store-house. In 1820, having then less than one thousand inhabitants, it received its first charter, but remained a part of the township of Bergen. It included only that part of the present city near the ferry at the foot of Montgomery Street, and extended west only to a line near Warren Street. The affairs of the city were administered by a board of five selectmen, whose attention was mainly devoted to the opening and grading of streets, the prevention of animals from running at large and regulating the prices of food products. No public school was established until 1855. In an address delivered at the dedication of public school building No. 4, on the evening of Feb. 26, 1868, the Hon. D. S. Gregory, who was the first mayor of the city, said that the first school was the Mechanics' School, erected by subscriptions. The house was built on two lots, given by the Jersey Associates, and this building was the nucleus of all the schools, churches and jail of Jersey City, all of which had served their time in it. This school had dwindled and come to nothing. It was then necessary for the people to organize schools, which they did, and employed a young man from the East, named A. T. Smith, as teacher. In 1835 it was first regularly organized under the selectmen. This school occupied the two lots first used for the Mechanics' School, and was dedicated to the public by the Jersey Associates, and being sold, the ground on which No. 1 school now stands was bought with the proceeds. This public school for several years was not entirely a free school, receiving only part of its support from the city. The selectmen, however, made appropriations "to the district school for the education of indigent children," in 1858, fifty dollars for that purpose. This plan was followed after the selectmen had given place to the Mayor and Common Council, and Jersey City had become separated from the township of Bergen.

FIRST SCHOOL ORDINANCE.—The first section of "A Law for the Support of Public Schools," passed by the Mayor and Common Council July 23, 1843, declares, that "All moneys which may hereafter be derived from taxers licenses, the city quota of the surplus revenue, the interest of the city proportion of the Bergen Corporation Fund, and the money annually received from the State-School Fund, be and the same are hereby appropriated to the support of Public School No. 1, kept in the Town Hall, and such other public schools as the Common Council may from time to time erect and establish."

The school was to be opened quarterly under the direction of the township school committee and the general supervision of the Mayor and Common Council; the pupils were to reside in Jersey City and were to pay fifty cents for spelling and reading, and, including writing, arithmetic and other branches, one dollar per quarter; but no child was to be kept away because of inability to pay, the matter of payment being left to the town board.

In 1847 the population had increased to six thousand, and the Common Council appointed a committee which opened the first public free school in the city. The committee had authority to engage six teachers, at a cost of two thousand three hundred dollars for salaries, and they expected an attendance of four hundred and fifty pupils. That school was opened Feb. 8, 1848, Mr. George H. Linsley being selected as the principal, which position he still holds (1884). Mrs. E. J. Eveland was an assistant in the same school, and is still connected with the public schools as principal of the primary department of No. 2.

The gentlemen composing the committee having charge of this undertaking spent six weeks in visiting the schools of New York and studying the public school system of that city. In 1851 Jersey City and Van Vorst township were united, and the new charter provided for the election of a school superintendent, who should perform the duties that had before that time devolved upon the town superintendents, and gave to the mayor and Common Council authority to establish a Board of Education and define its powers. It was also provided in the charter that the mayor and Common Council should erect and provide suitable public school-houses, fire-engines and engine-houses in the annexed district, to an amount equal to the excess of Jersey City's debt over that of Van Vorst. Under this charter the first Board of Education in Jersey City was organized, and held its first meeting Jan. 14, 1852, at the office of the city clerk. It consisted of the following twelve members, three from each ward, viz.: First Ward, Peter Bentley, E. B. Wakeman and P. D. Vroom; Second Ward, James Fleming, L. C. Lyman and John W. Parker; Third Ward, J. A. Cole, A. D. Hope and W. C. Morris; Fourth Ward, E. Randall, E. Olney and H. M. Soule. Mr. P. D. Vroom was elected president and J. W. Parker secretary. At the second meeting Mr. Olney resigned, and Mr. John A. Ryerson took his place, and immediately became secretary in place of John W. Parker, resigned. At that time there were only three public schools, and the salaries, paid quarterly, amounted to $1575.00 per quarter. The annual estimate of expenses was $8425, of which $6700 were for teachers' salaries. The difficulty in obtaining competent teachers for the new positions, and the necessity of providing an opportunity for the junior assistants to study these branches in which they were deficient, compelled the board to consider how these wants could best be supplied. The need of a Normal School was felt to be urgent, and in September, 1852, the committee on teachers and salaries reported in favor of establishing such a school; but no action was taken. The following March it was resolved

"That the teachers of the public schools be advised to associate themselves together in a class for mutual instruction, and aid in qualifying themselves most fully for their important work, to meet at such time as may be most convenient to them."

As might be expected, the teachers paid little attention to the resolution, and the need of such a school became more apparent. In March, 1854, the board directed the committee on teachers and salaries to organize a normal class for the benefit of the junior teachers, to meet on the Saturdays of each week, and to be under the joint management of both principals, Messrs. George H. Linsley and C. A. Yarrington. Even this action was not effectual, and in February, 1856, the board again returned to the charge by appointing a special committee "to consider the propriety of establishing Normal Schools." At that time the school population had increased so much that there were two thousand and seventy-five names on the school registers, and an average attendance of twelve hundred and twenty-six, and more than thirty teachers were employed. The school was organized in 1857, with Mr. Linsley as principal, and continued under his charge until 1878, when it was abolished on account of the formation of a normal class and training school in connection with the High School. During its existence the Saturday Normal School filled an important place in the school system of the city.

Thomas Potter

It numbered among its instructors the most skillful teachers in the schools, and was the best provision that could well be made at that time to supply the need then existing in all parts of the county for such a school. Afterwards Saturday normal classes were formed in Bergen and in Hudson City. All of them were devoted more to supplementing the education of the junior teachers in the different elementary branches of an English education than to imparting instruction in the methods of training and educating children.

Many of the younger teachers did not fully appreciate the work sought to be accomplished, and were irregular in their attendance. At first all teachers below the grade of first assistance were obliged to attend the school, until especially excused, but after a time periodical examinations were held, and all those passing to the satisfaction of the committee received a license to teach in any grade in the city, without further attendance. Tuition was free to assistant teachers and to any lady intending to teach in the city when qualified. The school population increased very rapidly, and in 1855 a new school building was opened and dedicated in what was then known as the Fourth Ward. The building is now known as No. 2, on Erie Street. In 1857 there were five thousand seven hundred and forty-three children in the city entitled to school privileges, of whom two thousand and nineteen were on the school register; and the annual estimate of the amount required for the ensuing year was fourteen thousand dollars.

GRADED SCHOOLS. — The idea of grading the schools was discussed during this year, and a special committee reported in its favor, but without special result. In 1859-60 a new building, now No. 3, was erected on the school lots owned by the city, on Bright Street, and Mr. William L. Dickinson, afterwards city and county superintendent of schools, and at that time an active member of the Board of Education, was appointed principal at a salary of twelve hundred dollars.

The next school building erected was the one now known as No. 4, built in 1866-68, at a cost, including the furniture, of sixty-three thousand dollars, not including the lots on which it stands. It was dedicated on the evening of Feb. 25, 1868, and was opened for pupils March 2d. It stands on Eighth Street, near Grove Street. At the time of the consolidation of Hudson City and Bergen with Jersey City, in 1870, the value of Jersey City's school property was estimated to be as follows, viz.:

SCHOOLS.	Value of Houses and Lots.	Value of Furniture and Fixtures.	Total.
No. 1, three lots	$6,000	$6,000	$12,000
No. 2, four lots	40,000	2,000	42,000
No. 3, three lots	27,000	2,000	29,000
No. 4, four lots	20,000	7,000	27,000
No. 5, three lots	10,000	1,000	11,000
Four lots in Mercer Street	14,000	1,000	15,000
Five lots in Fourth Street	15,000	1,000	16,000
	$170,000	$16,000	$186,000

At the consolidation there were sixteen wards, and the Board of Education consisted of two members from each ward, with the mayor, the chairman of the aldermanic committee on schools and the school superintendent as ex-officio members. The following were the members of the board: First Ward, A. H. Wallis, John M. Anony, Jr.; Second Ward, M. Mul-lone, Jr., James Warner; Third Ward, P. H. Nuzent, I. I. Vanderboek; Fourth Ward, John Van Vorst, George Warren; Fifth Ward, A. A. Gaddis, Herold Henwood; Sixth Ward, Myles Tierney, George Beck; Seventh Ward, Patrick Ryan, John O'Mara; Eighth Ward, James Davis, A. J. Ditmar; Ninth Ward, C. W. Perceil, C. J. Rooney; Tenth Ward, J. S. Miller, Thomas M. Norton; Eleventh Ward, J. B. Gimnochis, Emil Steger; Twelfth Ward, George B. Brown, J. R. Tate; Thirteenth Ward, C. D. Miller, E. P. Buffet; Fourteenth Ward, James Soper, B. F. Welsh; Fifteenth Ward, C. A. DeWitt, J. C. Westervelt; Sixteenth Ward, Garrett Vreeland, Abram Clark. The ex-officio members were E. O. Chapman, school superintendent; C. P. Dakin, chairman aldermanic committee; and C. H. O'Neill, mayor. Mr. W. L. Dickinson was assistant superintendent, which position he had held since 1867, and also county superintendent. The presidents of the board from its organization, in 1852, to the present have been: P. D. Vroom, 1852-54; A. S. Jewell, 1854-55; George Ford, 1855-57; David Gould, 1857-64; C. V. Trap-lugen, 1864-65; B. F. Randolph, 1865 to his resignation, in 1869; Leon Abbott, part of 1869-70; A. A. Gaddis, 1870-72; Thomas Potter, 1872-74; Edwin O. Chapman, 1874-75; William J. Lyon, 1875-76; John W. Pangborn, 1876-77; James R. Mercein, 1877-78; Thomas M. Norton, 1878-79; Jeremiah F. O'Sullivan, 1879-80; John D. McGill, 1880-82; Edwin Van Houten, 1882-83; William H. Simmons, 1883-84; William R. Laird, 1884.

THOMAS POTTER, who was President of the Board of Education from 1872-74, was the grandson of Thomas Potter, who emigrated from England to New Jersey. His son Joseph married a Miss Pettit, who was a Quaker of French extraction, and had children, — Thomas, William, John, Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary Anna, Deborah, and Emily. Thomas, of this number, was born in 1804, near Manasquan, Ocean Co., where he engaged in fishing and boating until the age of manhood was attained, when Rahway became his home. Here he remained until his death, in 1878. He married Miss Charlotte Clark, daughter of Isaac Marsh, of Scotch Plains, N. J., and had children,—Adolphus, Thomas, Joseph, Lydia, Elizabeth, Martha, and Adeline, all of whom, with the exception of Thomas and Joseph, are deceased. The birth of Thomas Potter occurred on the 13th of August, 1837, at Rahway, N. J. At the age of fourteen he sought employment in the city of his residence, and two years later engaged in teaching in Somerset County, remaining one year thus employed, when his services were secured in the capacity of clerk in Newark. In 1857 he removed to Jersey City, and entered the service of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad as shipping agent. Various other commercial operations occupied his attention until 1866, when he embarked in the ship chandlery business. Meeting, in 1873, with financial reverses, Mr. Potter was led to seek a field of labor where his mechanical skill and engineering capacity could be made available, and the same year began what has since become an extensive contracting and dredging enterprise. This business has assumed extended proportions, his contracts having embraced important improvements in the larger cities of the country, many of them under government auspices. In these various undertakings he has met with a large measure of success, the result of peculiar ability properly directed and great application. Mr. Potter was, in 1856, married to Miss Emily B., daughter of John W. Stout, of Newark. Their children are fifteen in number, of whom the survivors are Frank, Wilfred E., Horace S., Julia S., Robert C., Ruth C., Helen I. and Howard L. Mr. Potter is in his political affiliations a Republican, and while active and zealous as a worker, regards character and fitness in a candidate as paramount to all party claims. He has filled no office other than president for two years of the Board of Education, during which administration the educational interests of Jersey City reached a degree of prosperity never before attained. He secured, during this period, the passage of a bill by the State Legislature authorizing the Board of Education of the city to establish a free library for the use of schools, as also for the public, and carried out various measures which have resulted in public benefit. Mr. Potter's religious associations are in connection with the Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Potter is a member.

The names of the city superintendents are Rev. L. Colby, 1852-53; Joseph McCoy, 1853-54, and 1863 to his death, in 1869; A. S. Jewell, 1855-62; A. H. Wallis, part of 1862-63; S. B. Bevans, part of 1869-70; E. O. Chapman, 1870-71; William L. Dickinson, 1871 till his death, November, 1883; and George H. Barton, 1883, who now holds the office. Mr. Chapman was the first superintendent to receive a salary. Previous to 1870 the office was held by merchants and business men, who were not expected to devote much of their time to school-work. In 1867, Mr. William L. Dickinson was appointed assistant superintendent, and gave all his time to the work. He held that position until he was elected superintendent in 1871. From 1852 to 1871 the superintendent was elected by the people at the charter elections, since 1871 the office has been filled by appointment by the Board of Education, and the term of office is three years. Mr. Dickinson was also county superintendent from 1867 until his death, in which office also Mr. George H. Barton was his successor.

WILLIAM LEVERETT DICKINSON. — Nathaniel Dickinson, the progenitor of the Dickinson family, came to this country, probably from the northern part of the county of Essex, England, in the year 1637. He was a true Puritan, and left his home for liberty's sake. He settled in Wethersfield, Mass., and remained twenty years, when circumstances influenced his removal to Hadley, Mass. As the line of descent is traced, the successive names of Nathaniel, Nehemiah, William, Josiah, Colton and Cotton Gaylord, appear. The last-named, and the father of William L. moved from Hadley to Windsor, Vt., where the latter was born on the 9th of January, 1819. He early removed with his father to St. Johnsbury, in the same State, where his childhood was spent. Being the oldest of seven children,—two sons and five daughters,—he gladly assumed the responsibility which his position in the family placed upon him, and exercised a tacit guardianship over all, expressing constantly responsibility for and interest in the well-being of all. His father was the blacksmith of the village, and his eldest son early determined to pursue this honorable calling. An accident, however, changed his plans, and influenced him to acquire as thorough an education as his native State could afford. When sixteen years of age he left his home, and passing a creditable examination, entered the sophomore class of the University of Vermont. He taught during the vacation months, and thus assisted in defraying his expenses. During his college course he was known as a faithful and conscientious student, intellectual and industrious, high in respect among his fellow-students. On graduating he at once removed to Jersey City and engaged in teaching. He at the same time began the study of law, was admitted to the bar and undoubtedly would have entered upon the practice of his profession had not a very advantageous offer in connection with the public schools of the city been tendered him. He became so useful and indispensable in connection with the Department of Public Instruction that the people would not let him retire, and held him to that important work by promotion and constantly repeated expressions of their confidence and appreciation. After serving for several years as principal he received the appointment of assistant superintendent of the public schools of Jersey City. The wisdom of this selection soon became apparent. A master-mind was called to the system of public instruction, and the extensive and perfect organization left behind bears evidence of his ability and conscientiousness. In 1871, Mr. Dickinson received the appointment of superintendent of the schools of Hudson County, including Jersey City, and during the period of his incumbency worked with one purpose only—the perfection of the common-school system. In this effort he was patient, earnest and successful. The same conscientious devotion to duty was seen in his relation to his church. Almost immediately after his arrival in Jersey City he joined the First Reformed Church, and remained an earnest, consistent and helpful member until his death, on the 3d of November, 1883. During most of this time he served either as elder or deacon. Mr. Dickinson was, on the 20th of August, 1843, married to Miss Celia, daughter of Philip Goss, of Lyndon, Vt. Their children are William Henry, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, and Gordon K., a practicing physician in Jersey City.

Wm. L. Dickinson

The names of the clerks, with the times during which they held office, are J. W. Parker, 1852, resigned at the second meeting of the board; John A. Ryerson, 1852; David Gould, 1852-56; P. D. Vroom, 1856-65; C. W. Percival, 1865-69, also 1870-1873; M. S. Wickware, 1869-70; Wilson A. Dickson, 1872-73; Martin Finek, 1873-75, also 1877-80; John A. McGrath, 1876-77; Harry H. Shrope, 1880-81; E. P. Cringle, 1881-82; George Warren, 1882-83; J. F. O'Sullivan, 1883. The treasurers of the board were I. I. Vanderboek, 1867-71; George Miller, 1872-73; Leroy Schornerhorn, 1873-74; James R. Morcain, 1875-76; John A. McGrath, 1876-77; Umstead Wells, 1877-79; Dr. Theodore F. Morris, 1879-80; Jeremiah P. O'Sullivan, 1880-83; E. J. Van Winkle, 1883 until the office was abolished by the Legislature, 1883-84. Under the school law of 1873 and its amendments, the board now consists of twelve members, two from each abstronomic district, one-half of whom goes out of office each year, their successors being elected at the charter elections. To the Board of Education is given the entire charge of the schools, and it is their duty to provide for the free education of all children in the county between the ages of five and eighteen years. They have power to provide everything necessary for that purpose except to purchase land, erect school-houses, and make repairs the cost of which shall exceed five hundred dollars. There are twenty primary schools, fourteen grammar schools, and one High School, with which is connected a teachers' class and training-school for those preparing to become teachers. In most of the schools the principals do not teach classes, but exercise a general supervision. Male principals in the grammar schools receive sixteen hundred and eighty dollars per annum; female principals receive nine hundred and twelve dollars. In the grammar department the salaries received by the assistants in the various grades are: First grade, $708; second, $504; third, $420; fourth, $342; fifth, $306; sixth, $276. In the primary department: First, $568; second, $456; third, $420; fourth, $378; fifth, $342; sixth, $276. The number of grammar school teachers employed is one hundred and thirty-six; of primary school teachers, two-hundred. The average attendance during each year for four years past has been: In 1879, 12,429; in 1880, 12,605; in 1881, 12,733; in 1882, 12,962; in 1883, 13,831. The average number of pupils on the register of each class in the grammar departments is 36; in the primary departments 58. The reports of the superintendents for many years show that the accommodations provided are insufficient. During the year ending Nov. 30, 1883, two thousand four hundred applications for admissions to the schools were refused for want of room. Some of these applicants were probably counted more than once in the above estimate, as pupils are permitted to attend school in any part of the city, and having been refused at one, may apply to others for admission. The cost per pupil in 1883, based upon the average attendance, was $13.43. The estimated value of the school property is $628,830. The course of study in the primary departments is divided into six grades; that in the grammar departments into five grades.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.—Long before it was established those acquainted with the educational interests of the city felt the need of such a school. Mayor Gopsill urged it in his message in 1867. Superintendent McCoy, in his report for 1868, said that such a school "would have a healthy influence on the lower departments, elevate the standard of scholarship among the teachers and promote thoroughness generally in the schools." The University of the City of New York, in the exercise of a generous and catholic spirit, has given to our city and other cities in our county free scholarships in that institution. We have a similar privilege in Columbia College. Our county has the right to send four pupils annually to the Agricultural College or Scientific School at New Brunswick, free of all charge. Not one of the pupils of our public schools can avail himself of these privileges without recourse to additional instruction to fit him to enter those institutions."

It was also urged as a matter of economy, as in such a school could be concentrated the pupils in the various grammar schools who had finished the prescribed course, yet being within the school age, remained in school pursuing a supplementary course of study. A few in each school thus occupied the attention of teachers, preventing promotions and causing overcrowding in the lower grades. There was also a hope that from such a school, with which should be connected a normal class and training department, a supply of teachers for the public schools might be obtained. In 1872 the school was organized. There were three courses of study,—a commercial, a modern English, and a classical course, each extending over a period of three years. This time was afterwards extended to three years and a half and then to four years. In 1883 a commercial course of two years was added for the benefit of the large number of boys who are obliged to leave school before they can complete the regular English or classical course. At the first examination seventy-one pupils were admitted. The teachers were George H. Barton, principal; Misses Annie Moore and Susie Forest, teachers in English branches; Margaritta Harrison, teacher of drawing; and Alfred Clement, teacher of German. The attendance has increased from fifty-eight to four hundred and forty, and ten teachers are employed. In 1879 the course of study was so modified that, during the last year of their course, all who intended to become teachers might join the normal class in the theory and practice of teaching. For the purpose of giving them a practical idea of their future work, the primary department in the same building was used as a training school. Here they had an opportunity of observing teachers in charge of their classes and of themselves conducting recitations under the supervision of older teachers. Subjects are assigned, and they prepare object-lessons for the class to which they may be sent. Graduates of the High School who join the teachers' class receive a diploma from the Board of Education, which is regarded as equivalent to a license from the county examiners, and entitles the holder to teach in any grade in the city. This department has been very successful, and most of the young ladies join the training class, which has already furnished about one-third of the teachers in the city. Owing to the financial depression which has existed a large part of the time since the organization of this High School, there have been many severe attacks upon it by those who would limit the studies pursued in the public schools to "the three R's." Each time, however, these attempts to abolish the school have been frustrated by its friends. Its existence and success are mainly due to the exertions of Mr. George H. Barton, principal from its beginning until the fall of 1883, and to the late William L. Dickinson, city superintendent of schools. At the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, in 1876, every class in the city was represented by some specimen of its work. The Committee on Awards on Education and Science awarded to the High School a bronze medal, the only High School in the State receiving that honor.

JAMES FLEMMING, SR., who was a member of the Board of Education from its organization till his death in 1863—was born in Tamworth, England, May 5, 1804. On his mother's side he was connected with the Digges and West families, so well known during the colonial days in Virginia and Delaware, which latter State was named after Earl de la Warr, whose family name was West. In the year 1827, Mr. Flemming came to Jersey City, and in 1831 married Alice, the eldest daughter of Isaac Edge.

During the years that Mr. Flemming carried on the business of builder he erected many of the best houses in Jersey City. He gave much of his time to public duties in various city and county offices to which he was elected, but to none did he show a more untiring devotion than in his efforts to extend the temperance reformation. He united heart and soul in the Washingtonian movement to spread the doctrines of total abstinence from the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage. Always first in doing good, he organized the Washington Society in Jersey City, one of, if not the first in the State. A public-spirited citizen built a hall on Gregory Street, devoted exclusively to temperance meetings and work connected with the cause. That hall was dedicated in 1841, and for years was used for the good work, the society numbering at the close of Mr. Flemming's presidency one thousand members; but men and things change, and a fire within two years past finished the career of a building that had served a noble purpose, and now a bar-room occupies the spot once made sacred by the teachings of Greeley and the eloquence of Gough. Mr. Flemming organized the Second Division in the State of Sons of Temperance, and became its first officer, and subsequently the head officer in New Jersey and a member of the National Division. After a while the men who had worked so hard grew tired, and the temperance excitement subsided; but its fruits remain to this day. Several times elected as alderman of Jersey City and chosen freeholder, Mr. Flemming became identified with and one of the leaders of the "Water-right party," the object of which was to secure to the people of Jersey City certain privileges and control over the shore, and to prevent the Gothic invasion of the rights of the people of Hudson County by the rest of the State. Had proper spirit been shown by its inhabitants from 1840 to 1850 Jersey City would not now be lamenting the want of dock facilities as she does to-day. Mr. Flemming was a member of the Board of Education from its organization till his death, and was instrumental in building up the public-school system in Jersey City. In the latter years of his life Mr. Flemming had retired from business, but kept himself busy in the performance of public duties in offices filled by him.

Suddenly he was stricken with an illness which terminated his life March 14, 1863. The numerous public bodies with which he was and had been connected met and passed eulogistic resolutions. The Board of Education bore willing testimony to the earnestness and diligence with which all the duties pertaining to his office were ever faithfully discharged.

In the Common Council resolutions were offered by Alderman Hardenbergh, and, among other things, he said of Mr. Flemming: "In his private life he was quiet and unobtrusive; in his public course he was devoted to principle, and knew no compromise, nor would he admit of any. We have lost a citizen of no mean distinction, and it is eminently fitting the public authorities should thus make record of their appreciation of their loss and of his own public and private worth."

James M. [unclear]

Mr. Flemming had eight children. Two died very young, and one (Benjamin) within a few years. Five are now living, James and Dudley, and three daughters: Frances, wife of Dr. J. N. Quinby; Alice E., wife of W. Henry Lewis; and Louisa, wife of C. Gray Parker. Mrs. Alice Flemming, always a good helpmate to her husband, a quiet, prudent, unostentatious woman, died at Jersey City, Dec. 11, 1870.

FREE LIBRARY.—By an act of the Legislature, passed 1873, the Board of Education has power to expend one thousand dollars annually for a free library. This has been done each year since that time, and the library now contains over five thousand volumes. The books are kept in school building No. 5, and the clerk of the board is also librarian. The library is open every Saturday, except during vacations, and any resident of the city may draw out books. An effort was made during the winter of 1883-84 to found a public library, to be supported mainly by private donations and gifts, using the free library as a nucleus. An act of the Legislature was passed authorizing the board to allow the library to be so used, but no action was taken. Owing to the small space allotted to it, and the short time each week during which books can be obtained, it is not so useful as it otherwise would be. There is no city school fund, the amount needed in excess of the State appropriation being appropriated by the Board of Finance and Taxation. The following amounts, including the State money, have been appropriated to the support of the schools during the last ten years: 1874, $265,000; 1875, $211,000; 1876, $235,150; 1877, $223,150; 1878, $222,550; 1879, $225,550; 1880, $183,999.00; 1881, $186,349.68; 1882, $198,958.80; 1883, $211,220.08. Large additional amounts are required for the purpose of erecting new buildings, as there are school accommodations for only twenty-nine per cent. of the school population, the lowest of any of the cities in the State.

Hoboken is north of Jersey City, between the heights and Hudson River, and had a population in 1880 of thirty-one thousand. It was formerly a part of North Bergen, but was incorporated as an independent township March 1, 1849, and received a city charter March 28, 1855. From its incorporation as a city until 1865 the control of the public school was entrusted to a board of three trustees and a school superintendent. The charter provided that these officers should be elected annually and hold office for one year. The first charter election was held April 10, 1855, and the school trustees elected at that time were George W. Morton, Hoyt Sandford and Thomas W. Thomas, from the First, Second and Third Wards respectively. Messrs. Morton and Sandford declining to act, John Thompson and Charles Spielman were appointed by the Council to fill the vacancies. The school superintendents from 1855 until the office was abolished, in 1865, and the dates of their election, were Edmund Charles, April 10, 1855; Charles P. De Greeck, April 14, 1857; Selma Bogert, April, 1858;

Lucrezio W. Liller, April 9, 1861; Gilbert D. Saffron-stall, April 14, 1863; Ramon F. Chabert, April 12, 1864. The organization of the school board was changed in 1865 by amendments to the charter, and it was made to consist of nine members, three from each ward. They were elected for three years, one going out each year. In 1874 a portion of Weehawken that had once been a part of Hoboken was returned, and the city was divided into four wards, the Board of Education being increased to twelve members. There has been no city school superintendent since 1865, but in 1870 the male principal longest in the employment of the board was made the superintending principal. It is his duty to receive the reports and requisitions of the other principals, and transmit them to the board, and to prepare the reports annually made to the Common Council and to the State authorities, but he has no control over the other principals. The schools are all under the supervision of the county superintendent. The names of the officers of the Board of Education since 1865, each new board being organized in May, are: Presidents—Newman A. Wood, 1865; Warren A. Jacobson, 1866; Peter Ritter, 1867; Dr. R. F. Chabert, 1868; William T. Hoffman, 1869; Edward G. Brown, 1872; Edwin J. Kerr, 1877; William T. Hoffman, 1879; Stephen T. Munson, 1880; Frederick Beltz, 1882, resigned Sept. 11, 1882; Edward W. Gritten, Sept. 26, 1882; John Reid, 1884. Clerks—B. H. Baldwin, 1865; John W. Bryce, 1866 to Dec. 16, 1867; Samuel W. Carey, Dec. 16, 1867; George G. Cooper, 1870, resigned Sept. 25, 1871; F. Luthin, Sept. 25, 1871; Robert H. Alberts, 1873; Nestor Agmon, 1877; Lewis R. McCulloch, 1879. Treasurers—William H. Wilson, 1865; P. H. Edmonston, 1868; Bethuel N. Crane, 1869; William C. Harp, 1870; James Harkness, 1878; Isaac Ingleson, 1880; James Harkness, 1884. The powers of the board are prescribed by the Common Council by an ordinance passed April 29, 1865. This ordinance gives to the Board of Education entire control of the schools, but requires annual reports to be made to the Common Council.

Hoboken township had but one public school, which was held in a building rented for the purpose. In 1854 the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, the late Edwin A. Stevens being practically the company, erected at its own expense a building for common schools, and provided it with all requisite furniture making no charge for rent. This building is known as school building No. 1. The same company, in 1860-61, erected and furnished the building known as No. 2. In his will Mr. Stevens directed his executors to purchase the two school lots, with the buildings and furniture, and made his executors and their successors trustees to hold the property according to the provisions of the will. They were to "permit the city authorities of Hoboken . . . to use and occupy the said property for the uses and purposes to which they have been heretofore devoted,— that is to say, no other use or purpose than the furnishing there a free, plain and practical English education to such of the children resident within said boundaries, from time to time, as said authorities shall permit" to attend the schools. If the property shall be diverted from the uses intended it is to revert to Mr. Stevens' estate. Besides these, there are two school buildings which the city has erected and one which is hired, the seating capacity of all being four thousand and sixteen, affording accommodations for thirty-seven per cent. of the school population.

The money for the support of the schools is derived from three sources,—from the State tax, from the city poll-tax, and from a city tax whose amount is now fixed by the board of tax commissioners, but was formerly determined by ballot at the charter election. For the last thirty years the school population has increased at the rate of 320 per annum. In 1856 the people voted to raise $2500 for the schools. The amount increased each year, until in 1868 it was $25,000 and in 1883, $43,927.71. The total amount received for school purposes in 1883 was $83,474.38. The school system embraces one High School, four grammar schools, four primary schools in same buildings with grammar departments, one primary annex to School No. 1, one evening school and one Saturday Normal School. Excepting in the High School, the boys and girls are taught separately. The course of study in the primary and grammar schools is divided into ten grades, in the High School into three grades and in the Normal School three grades. The Normal School was established Nov. 5, 1870, under the charge of the two male principals. It is held Saturday mornings, and all teachers below the grade of principal are obliged to attend until graduation, or unless otherwise excused. The course of studies includes reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar and geography in all the classes; history, algebra, physiology, philosophy, rhetoric, school law, constitution, and theory and practice of teaching in the first grade; in the second grade, history, book-keeping, and theory and practice of teaching; in the third grade, orthography and those studies named above as belonging to all the grades. Diplomas are awarded to the graduates, who also receive first, second or third grade licenses to teach. The teachers for the primary and grammar schools are selected from the Normal School graduates, preference being given to those standing highest in scholarship. The teachers, who are also the school examiners, are David E. Rue, Jeremiah Kelly and William A. Campbell. The High School was also organized in 1870. It occupied a part of school building No. 4, and Mr. William A. Campbell was its principal, as well as of the grammar school in the same building. From this school, through the Normal School, most of the teachers are obtained. Out of the one hundred and eight teachers employed in 1883, fifty-five had attended the High School. The Board of Education decided to organize the school in 1884, and Mr. Campbell electing to remain in charge of the grammar school, Mr. Abraham Demarest was engaged as principal of the High School. Twelve free scholarships in the Stevens Institute have been offered to the male graduates of the High School, who pass the entrance examination.

So many of the inhabitants of Hoboken are Germans wishing their children to study that language that the Board of Education organized in the public schools a German department, and employed Dr. William Pier and Miss Laura Schroeder as teachers. The course extends through two years in the grammar schools and three years in the High School. There are fifteen classes and an average attendance of seven hundred and twenty. The requirements for admission to the High School in this department are that pupils shall know the names of objects found at home and in school, and the names of familiar plants and animals; the use of proper adjectives with these objects; the construction of simple sentences containing these objects; conjugation of "sein," "werden," "haben," "sehen," "lernen," "gehen," "brauchen," "können," and "kennen;" declension of the definite and indefinite article, with such pronouns as "dieser," "jener," etc.; declension of "Vater," "Knabe," "Sohn," "Blume," "Mutter," "Buch," "Geschenke;" comparison of adjectives; and each pupil must know at least the following selections: "Das Bächlein," Goethe, twelve lines; "Lorelei," Heine, twenty-four lines; "Der Schatzgräber," Bürger, twenty-two lines. All must be able to write from dictation Goethe's poem, "Gefunden," ten lines.

The public school library contains about one thousand volumes, and is increasing at about the rate of one hundred and fifty volumes a year. The number of books drawn out in 1883 was five thousand and twelve.

Teachers' meetings for the purpose of discussing matters relating to their profession are held monthly. The manual of the board makes attendance at these meetings a part of every teacher's duty. The salaries paid to the teachers range from $1675, paid to the superintending principal, to $432, paid to the ten assistants, each month receiving $300. Male principals receive $1500, vice-principals $1000, first assistant $648. The average salary per month paid to male teachers is $115.35, to female teachers $41.87. Six of the former are employed and ninety-four of the latter.

Bayonne.—The city of Bayonne extends from Jersey City to Bergen Point, and its population in 1880 numbered nine thousand three hundred and seventy-two. It was formerly a part of the town of Bergen, but was erected an independent township in 1861, and incorporated as a city in 1869. There were three school districts in the township, and only three teachers were employed, and the number of children between five and eighteen years in 1861 was only five hundred and ninety-six. In 1884 the number had increased to three thousand three hundred and twelve. Two of the school-houses were described as very poor, and the third only medium. So little interest was taken in the schools that people were unwilling to accept the office of school trustee. When the city charter was received the city was divided into four wards, and a Board of Education was organized consisting of twelve members, three from each ward. A new interest in the schools was created, and before the close of 1871 four excellent brick school-houses were erected and twelve teachers were employed. A fifth school-house was erected about 1876, making one in each of the five wards, the city having been so divided. Pupils are required to attend the school in the ward in which they reside, the average attendance being one thousand and fifty-two. Thirty-nine teachers are employed, four of them being male principals. The salaries range from $1200 to $900, the average for male teachers being $140 per month, and for female teachers $46.21.

The schools are divided into three departments, primary, grammar and academic; the primary and grammar having six grades each, while the academic has but two. A Saturday normal class was organized in 1872 or '73, but was not successful, and was discontinued after one year. A Teachers' Association was organized in the fall of 1880, all the teachers being members. It has been very successful, its meetings being held monthly and the discussions well sustained. The names of the officers of the Board of Education since its organization are: Presidents, D. C. Halstead, F. G. Payne, Rev. H. W. F. Jones and C. L. Lord; Secretaries, W. D. Myers for one year, George W. Yates.

The history of the schools since the organization of the Board of Education shows a course of uninterrupted prosperity, the dilapidated school-buildings of the township having been replaced by new structures. The value of the school property in 1883 was estimated at $203,000, and the total amount received for school purposes during that year was $30,291.67. For the twenty-three years following 1861 the average annual increase in the school population has been one hundred and eighteen.

Harrison.—The township of Harrison was created in 1840 by the act of the Legislature setting off Hudson County. In 1869 it received a town charter. The one school was maintained under the general law of the State until 1872, when a Board of Education was organized consisting of five members. The next year, by an act approved March 6th, the town was divided into four wards, and the Board of Education was made to consist of four members. The district did not own a school building until 1873, and the condition of its school in 1870, when there were thirteen hundred and sixteen children between five and eighteen, is indicated by the report of the county superintendent,—“Two rooms are hired in a deserted factory, where two really faithful teachers, with most miserable furniture and no conveniences, vainly strive to do the work for which six teachers should be employed.” A two-story brick school-house, with seats for four hundred and fifty pupils, was built in 1873, and dedicated September 1st of that year. The value of the school property in 1884 was estimated to be fifteen thousand dollars, the number of children nineteen hundred and twenty-six, the average attendance two hundred and eighty-eight, and the number of teachers employed was seven. No district tax for school purposes was raised. The average monthly salary paid to male teachers was $35.52, to female teachers $53.33.

The Town of Union, known commonly as Union Hill, was set off from the township of Union March 29, 1861. Its population, numbering five thousand eight hundred and forty-nine in 1880, is composed almost entirely of Germans, and there has been a natural preference for German ideas and principles of education in the management of the town school. As in the city of Hoboken, where Germans form a majority of the people, the sexes are taught in separate classes. All of the pupils study the German language, to which one-sixth of the time is devoted, and it is asserted by some that when the school was first established all the exercises were carried on in that language.

By amendments to the town charter, passed in 1874, a Board of Education was established consisting of nine members, holding office for the term of three years. The value of the school property is estimated at forty thousand dollars; the school-house was completed in 1884, at a cost of twenty-three thousand three hundred and seventy dollars, and was occupied for the first time in September of that year. Thirteen teachers are employed at salaries ranging from thirty dollars to $112.50 per month.

The Town of Guttenberg was incorporated March 9, 1859, but no special powers were given to the school trustees, who continued to be elected under the general school law. The first school in the district was opened in June, 1861, and the first school building was erected in 1862-63.

Townships.—There are five townships in Hudson County, which are divided into districts, and the schools supported pursuant to the general school law of the State. The names of these towns and the dates of their incorporation are: North Bergen, Feb. 10, 1843; Weehawken, March 15, 1859; Union, Feb. 28, 1861; West Hoboken, Feb. 28, 1861; and Kearny, March 14, 1867.

An examination of the records kept by the various Boards of Education in the county shows that there has been a constant and urgent need for increased school accommodations. For the thirty years ending 1884 the annual increase in the number of children entitled to school privileges has been two thousand and ninety-one. When it is considered that most of this increase has been in the cities, one can appreciate the difficulty which must necessarily be overcome in providing sufficient school accommodations, and is not surprised to find Hudson County furnishing only thirty-three per cent. of the children between five and eighteen years of age with opportunities to attend school, and Jersey City twenty-nine per cent.

Teachers.—Among the teachers in the county who have been longest in their present positions are George H. Lindsley, in Jersey City, thirty-five years; Mrs. E. J. Eveland, Jersey City, thirty-four years; Frederick Schaefer, Union Hill, twenty-seven years; Sarah L. Gardner, Jersey City, twenty-six years; Phebe A. Bingham, same, twenty-six years; Calista A. Townsend, same, twenty-six years; George W. Beale, same, twenty-five years; Agnes Adrian, same, twenty-five years; Frances Soper, same, twenty-three years. The Hon. William L. Dickinson was for twenty-three years closely connected with the educational interests of the county. As the principal of a flourishing private school and then of public school No. 3, he disclosed marked ability as a teacher. He was appointed county superintendent of schools April 25, 1867, and about the same time was elected assistant superintendent of schools in Jersey City, and every one who knew him felt that he was well qualified to fill those positions. His merit was recognized, and he became superintendent in Jersey City in 1871, and held that office, with that of county superintendent, until his death, Nov. 3, 1883. His successor, Mr. George H. Barton, went to Jersey City in 1872, having been appointed principal of the High School then to be organized. His long and successful experience as a teacher, and his intimate knowledge of the public-school system in the city and county, led the Board of Education of Jersey City, after the death of Mr. Dickinson, to select him as the city superintendent, and the State Board of Education to appoint him county superintendent. He entered upon the duties of the two offices November, 1883.

Hasbrouck Institute.—Among Jersey City's institutions that have risen and attained varied success is Hasbrouck Institute.

This institution owes its existence to the gentleman whose name it now bears, Dr. Washington Hasbrouck. When, in 1856, Dr. Hasbrouck originated his "Select School," we may well believe he did not forecast an institution of such influence as that which now honors his name.

On the south side of Mercer Street, between Barrow and Grove, are three brick houses built on two lots. On these lots there was, in 1856, a small frame building containing but one room. Some years before this was built by Mr. Cornelius Van Vorst for a boys' school, and was presided over by a professor of Columbia College. It was in May, 1856, that Dr. Hasbrouck came from Yonkers, N. Y., and opened the "Jersey City Grammar School" with twenty-five pupils. The school-room seated thirty, while room was made on the platform for five more boys. Thus the numbers were of necessity limited, and a few pupils attending recitations only swelled the average attendance to forty.

For ten years, until 1866, the school was continued in Mercer Street by Dr. Hasbrouck, with no assistance save that rendered for a time by Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, D.D., in the teaching of Latin. During this period of ten years it was necessary to make application for a place in school some time before the pupil could hope to enter. Dr. Hasbrouck's intense personality was felt there as it is to this day, and one has but to converse with his former pupils to gain an idea of his popularity and tact in the management of boys.

The school was from its inception, as it has been since, a school for fitting boys for college, business and the general duties of life.

The success of the school led Dr. Hasbrouck, in 1866, to secure the Lyceum building, in Grand Street, and thither he moved the school in May of that year, opening with sixty-seven pupils. At this time Mr. Peter Hasbrouck, a brother of the principal, became vice-principal, and it was largely owing to this gentleman's exertions that the school increased in efficiency and numbers.

The second period of the school's history, from 1866 to 1876, was one of growth and decline. An enrollment of two hundred was reached during the period, but the attendance fell off rapidly after the panic of 1873. Good work was done during these ten years, especially in preparing boys for college.

In the spring of 1876, Dr. Hasbrouck was offered the principalship of the State Normal School, at Trenton. This was a worthy recognition of his services in the cause of education in New Jersey, and the offer was therefore flattering to him as well as grateful in view of two facts,—first, that he had recently lost by death his main helper in the school, Mr. Peter Hasbrouck; and, secondly, because of the financial condition of the community following upon the panic of 1873. Having accepted the position offered, Dr. Hasbrouck sought to dispose of his Jersey City school, and finally arranged with Messrs. H. C. Miller and C. C. Stimets, at the time instructors in the Trenton Normal School, to take the school appliances and the good-will of its patrons.

These gentlemen had had a wide experience in both educational matters and in general business. Mr. Miller is a graduate of Williams College, and had been in business in Philadelphia, had traveled much and was acquainted with the many phases of American life. In addition, he had taught some years, and thus developed what was to him a natural gift, the power of conveying to others the information his trained mind had acquired.

Mr. Stimets is a man whom a rigid normal training, generous sympathies and unusual executive ability made the fit associate in educational work of such a man as Mr. Miller. The success the institution has attained is due in great measure to the business accuracy and methodic development of plans by Mr. Stimets.

These gentlemen came to the management of the Hasbrouck Institute with the enthusiasm of young men and a valuable experience. The promise of the school was not immediately realized. The recent financial depression was still felt. Change usually occasions loss. The school opened in September, 1876, after a personal visitation to the former patrons, with but fifty pupils.

The opening disclosed to the principals the prospect of reduced incomes, for in coming to Jersey City they had given up excellent positions in Trenton.

They called to their aid in the work Mr. James Holman, a graduate of the Trenton Normal School, and retained the services of Mr. E. H. Clark, previously with Dr. Hasbrouck. During the first year the school increased in numbers from fifty to eighty. The following year Mr. Horace C. Wait, a graduate of Yale, and a man of marked ability, was called to the school. In 1880, Mr. Miller withdrew from active participation in the institute, and, with Mr. Stimets, bought the New York School of Languages, in New York City, founded by Dr. Sauveur. The reputation of Hasbrouck Institute as a first-class boys' school was now well established. In 1880 the school had increased in efficiency and popularity. Parents seeing the need of an equally good school in Jersey City for their daughters, took measures to induce the principals to open a girls' department. A petition, signed by many prominent citizens, requesting such an opening, was sent to Messrs. Miller and Stimets. After much deliberation it was decided to grant the request, and during the summer of 1880 the first floor of the institute building was handsomely refitted with everything necessary for comfort and thorough work. Miss S. Carrie Stow, of New Haven, Conn., a lady of experience and great success in teaching, was engaged as superintendent of the work. Her assistant was Miss Jennie C. Drake, a graduate of Vassar College. In the autumn of that year thirty girls presented themselves for entrance to the school. From that time on the number steadily grew, until at the present time (November, 1884,) eighty girls, the largest number that can be accommodated, are studying in this department.

Miss Stow had brought rare tact and ability to the work, together with a keen interest in literary pursuits that was soon felt in kindling interest and in directing taste towards the best literature.

Miss Drake in her department of rhetoric has done accurate and conscientious work that has been very important in the progressive scholarship of the school, and upon the resignation of Miss Stow, in 1883, succeeded to the position of superintendent of the ladies' department. Two additional lady assistants have been added. It was with some hesitancy that co-education was begun in this school, fearing that the yet untried experiment might result disastrously to an already acknowledged success; but all doubts were soon at rest. At first the departments were almost separate, save in the most advanced classes, but as an advantage was soon noted in the competitive scholarship of the two departments,—a new mental vigor being the result,—additional classes were united. The benefit to the boys' department has been remarkable, much rough boyishness having disappeared, leaving a strong tendency to more earnest and accurate scholarship.

Mr. Miller still continues principal of the New York School, while Mr. Stimets, whose portrait has been obtained for this volume, holds the principalship of the Hasbrouck Institute; Mr. Wait, who has charge of the classical work of the school, acting as vice-principal.

Under the direction of Mr. Stimets the school has continued to improve. It has a wide influence in Jersey City and the surrounding towns. Its graduates are to be found among the honor men and students and alumni of all our Eastern colleges and scientific schools, as well as among those in successful business life. The last catalogue shows a total enrollment of two hundred and sixty-three pupils and a faculty of thirteen. There is a department of music, one of the best in the city, and an excellent art department, the studio being in an adjoining building. A fine gymnasium is in the basement of the building, and the institution stands ready to do for future generations even more than it has been able to do in the past.

CHARLES C. STIMETS, principal of the Hasbrouck Institute of Jersey City, is a young man who has been for eight years intimately connected with the educational work of Hudson County, and who for four years prior held a prominent position as an educator in another part of this State.

Mr. Stimets was born in Highgate, Franklin Co., Vt. Dec. 10, 1850. He was the youngest of five sons of Jacob Stimets, whose father and mother came to this country from near Frankfort, Germany, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. When Charles was but two years of age his father suddenly died, leaving nine children and a large estate greatly embarrassed by various obligations incident to an extensive business. The widowed mother of this large family was fortunately a woman of rare skill and judgment, and she guided her household and the affairs of the estate with unusual discretion and success. Charles, with other members of the family, was early sent to school, and he soon gave evidence of being a close and successful student. On finishing his elementary education in the Highgate village school, he was sent to complete his preparatory course in the St. Albans Academy. After teaching for one term, he went to Oswego, N. Y., where he pursued a four years' classical course in the Normal College, graduating with valedictory honors in 1872. His services from that time have been in New Jersey. For four years he filled, with great satisfaction to the trustees, the chair of mathematics in the State Normal School, at Trenton, and during this time lectured on methods of teaching at Teachers' Institutes in different parts of the State. In 1876 he resigned his position in the Normal School, and, in connection with Mr. H. C. Miller, purchased the Hasbrouck Institute of Jersey City. This school, under the direction of these two gentlemen, has grown to be the largest private school in New Jersey, and is one of the largest and most flourishing schools in the country. Mr. Stimets, while remaining the principal of the Hasbrouck Institute, is connected with Mr. Miller also in the direction of the School of Languages in New York City, an institution which has already taken high rank among preparatory schools.

Mr. Stimets is a man who has thus far worked his own way in life, and his success is undoubtedly due to his sterling Christian integrity, his sound common sense and his indefatigable perseverance.

Gaskell Business College.—Prof. Geo. A. Gaskell was born at Penn Yan, N. Y., in 1844, and in early life removed to Ashabula County, Ohio (which county has been made prominent as the home of those pioneers of anti-slavery, Joshua R. Giddings, Benjamin Wade and John Brown). His father was a small country store-keeper, and held the commission as postmaster of the hamlet under President Buchanan. His son received a fair academic education, and at the age of sixteen engaged in teaching in his native place. He continued for three years thus employed, and at the age of nineteen was engaged by Bryant & Stratton, in connection with their chain of commercial colleges, since which time his abilities have been employed in this department of instruction. He taught for six years in Newark under their auspices, was principal of their college in Trenton, and in 1870 removed to Manchester, N. H., in the same capacity, this college having been soon after purchased by him. Professor Gaskell is widely known as a publisher in connection with his profession, his "Compendium of Forms," an illustrated encyclopedia of one thousand pages, published by the Fairbanks & Palmer Publishing Company, of Chicago, having attained a sale of two hundred and twenty thousand copies. More than two hundred thousand copies of his "Writing Compendium" have been sold, and his other works are proportionably popular. These are standard works, and have greatly enhanced the reputation of their compiler. Professor Gaskell, though retaining an interest in his publications and conducting a publishing house in New York, gives his personal attention to his Jersey City College, established some years ago, which is now one of the leading institutions of this special character.

The Hoboken Academy was organized in 1860 under a special charter of the Legislature of New Jersey. The funds to erect and furnish the school building were raised by private subscription and by disposing of shares which entitled the holders to vote at the annual election for trustees, but were not intended to yield any profit, the whole income being expended for the benefit of the institution. The founders of the school were all German-Americans, and the school maintains a distinctly German character. There are ten distinct grades, forming four departments,—the kindergarten, the primary, the intermediate and the academic department. The course provides for two years to be spent in the kindergarten and three years in each of the other departments. The school is under the instruction of Mr. Joseph Schrenk and sixteen assistant teachers. The number of pupils in 1883 was four hundred and thirty-three.

The Stevens Institute of Technology, a school of mechanical engineering, at Hoboken, takes a high rank among the technical schools in the country. It is the only institution in Hudson County affording opportunity for a higher education than can be obtained in the ordinary High School and academy. It was founded by the late Edwin A. Stevens, who directed in his will that a lot of ground, four hundred and twenty-five feet by two hundred feet, particularly described, and one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in money, should be paid to his wife, Martha B. Stevens, and Messrs. William W. Shippen and Samuel Dod, as trustees under the will. They were to erect a suitable building and to establish an institution of learning, and if the trustees thought it necessary, an additional sum of five hundred thousand dollars was to be paid to them for the purpose. This was done, and the income derived from its investment is the institute's chief means of support. The trustees were incorporated in 1870 by a special act of the Legislature, the building was immediately commenced, and the school was opened the following year.

It is essentially a school of mechanical engineering, and confers the degree of mechanical engineer upon its regular graduates. The full course is four years, and especial care is taken to make the instruction practical. The various departments are richly provided with apparatus for experimental work, and work in the shop and laboratory forms an important part of the course. The workshop, fitted up by President Morton, and formally presented by him to the trustees May 14, 1881, is provided with machines and other tools to accommodate fifty students at one time. Tours of inspection are planned each year that the students may have opportunities to examine the industrial enterprises connected with the subjects which they may be studying. It was not Mr. Stevens' intention that the "Institution of Learning" should be entirely free, but that a portion of the cost of instruction should be borne by the students. One free scholarship, however, is given each year to the graduate of the Stevens High School who passes the best examinations at the spring term, and three such scholarships each year are given to such graduates from the public schools of Hoboken as are recommended by the officers, and who pass successfully the regular examinations for admission. The president is Henry Morton, Ph.D. There has been no change in the board of trustees, that board having always consisted of Mrs. E. A. Stevens, Rev. S. B. Dod and William W. Shippen, Esq.

Chas. Simons

J. M. Gustell

The Stevens High School is the preparatory department of the Stevens Institute, and is held in the same building. Its chief object is to prepare students for that institution, but its pupils are also fitted for college, its course of instruction including all branches usually taught in classical and commercial academies. Its instructors have the use of the apparatus and other facilities of the institute in illustrating the elementary instructions in natural philosophy and chemistry. Rev. Edward Wall, A.M., is principal. There are seven assistant teachers and one hundred and ten pupils.

Roman Catholic Schools.—The first Catholic school in Hudson County was established about 1844, and was connected with St. Peter's Church, in Jersey City. That was the first Catholic Church in Hudson County, and was incorporated in 1831. The school was held in the basement of the church, now St. Moysius Hall, on Grand Street, near Warren Street. The next school was a private select school, kept by one Morgan Nolan, who had previously taught the parish school—"Nolan's Academy," as it was called, was in a basement on the south side of Grand Street, between Hudson and Greene Streets, and was opened about 1847. The next one, opened a year later, was kept by a Mr. Smith, in Grove Street, near Fifth Street.

The school connected with St. Peter's parish was a free school, and in 1851 was attended by two hundred male and two hundred and twenty female pupils. In the male department James Braun was principal, Henry Braun assistant; in the female department Margaret Carey was principal and Mary Dickinson assistant.

The following statistics, compiled from "Sallier's Catholic Almanac," show the number of schools under Catholic control in 1884:

PARISHIAL SCHOOLS.

- St. Joseph's, Guttenberg, 100 pupils; taught by 2 Sisters of St. Francis.
- Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken, 920 pupils; taught by 14 Sisters of Charity and 5 lay teachers.
- St. Joseph's, Hoboken, 265 pupils; taught by 5 Sisters of St. Francis.
- St. Peter's, Jersey City, 850 pupils; taught by 8 Sisters of Charity and 4 lay teachers.
- St. Mary's, Jersey City, 1300 pupils; taught by 5 Christian Brothers and 15 Sisters of Charity.
- St. Joseph's, Jersey City, 331 pupils; taught by 8 Sisters of Charity and 2 lay teachers.
- St. Boniface's, Jersey City, 200 pupils; taught by 5 Sisters of St. Dominic.
- St. Michael's, Jersey City, 800 pupils; taught by 8 Sisters of Charity and 2 lay teachers.
- St. Bridget's, Jersey City, 334 pupils; taught by 8 Sisters of Charity and 2 lay teachers.
- St. Paul of the Cross, Jersey City, 600 pupils, taught by 3 Sisters of Charity and 1 lay teacher.
- St. Paul's, Greenville Avenue, Jersey City, 200 pupils; taught by 5 Sisters of St. Dominic.
- St. Mary's, Bergen Point, 475 pupils, taught by 7 Sisters of St. Joseph.

Holy Family, Bergen Point, 200 pupils; taught by 4 Sisters of St. Francis.

Our Lady, West Hoboken, 400 pupils; taught by a Sister of Charity and 4 Christian Brothers.

St. Peter's College, Grand Street, Jersey City, Rev. John M. Guadagni, S.J., president; Rev. J. M. Jergo, S.L., vice-president and prefect of schools; Rev. F. McAttee, chaplain; Rev. S. Fulkerton, S.J. and six scholastics. Students 26, including scholarship.

ACADEMIES AND SELECT SCHOOLS.

St. Moysius Academy, Jersey City, Sister M. Zita, sister-visitant, 147 pupils, 7 sisters and 3 lay teachers.

St. Mary's Academy, Jersey City, Sister Francis of Assumption, sister-visitant, and 6 teachers; 140 pupils.

St. Brigid's, Jersey City, Sister M. Rose, 11 pupils, 10 teachers.

Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, Jersey City, Sister M. Thad., 65 pupils; 2 teachers.

Sacred Heart, Hoboken, Sister of Charity, 100 pupils; Sister Theresa Vincent, sister-visitant, 6 sisters and 3 lay teachers.

St. Dominic's, Jersey City, Sisters of St. Dominic, Sister M. Pina, superior, 100 pupils, 10 teachers.

Immaculate Heart of Mary, Jersey City, Sisters of St. Dominic, 15 pupils.

The following table shows the number of children of school age in, and the money derived from the State school fund by, the various cities, towns and townships in Hudson County since it was set off from Bergen county, in 1840:

Year.	Jersey City.		Bergen.		Harrison.
	Pupils.	Received from State.	Pupils.	Received from State.	Pupils.	Received from State.
1840		5160 00		5345 00		$108 35
1841		160 00		286 92		103 30
1842		160 00		286 92		104 30
1843
1844
1845
1846		148 76		114 23		135 13
1847		143 45		117 16		129 76
1848		147 96		120 89		114 29
1849		147 92		134 21		101 99
1850		218 74		147 09		61 88
1861	3,436	927 72	287	228 95	296	92 83
1855	4,208	1,977 76	1,091	480 21	350	188 73
1856	4,338	1,869 05	1,114	486 10	277	117 72
1857	4,821	1,807 09	1,130	512 05	371	127 14
1858	5,477	1,855 76	1,427	692 31	350	119 85
1859	5,564	1,469 06	1,383	340 74	323	81 85
1860	5,716	1,787 00	1,416	480 80	414	128 43
1861	5,903	1,850 20	1,591	503 72	438	148 08
1862	5,959	1,710 23	1,717	504 26	400	122 02
1863	6,280	1,670 18	1,823	486 32	480	129 80
1864	6,862	1,532 17	1,489	384 09	419	147 25
1865	7,816	1,707 70	1,393	348 07	385	139 88
1866	8,192	3,004 80	1,460	622 70	755	321 00
1867	7,891	3,127 76	1,708	687 51	755	299 05
1868	8,042	3,095 85	2,029	76 03	711	284 79
1869	8,778	3,125 81	2,101	674 46	957	350 42
1870	11,627	5,090 03	1,711	803 78	759	324 64
1871	11,651	4,733 99	2,300	997 25	814	329 16
1872	11,822	4,918 25	2,841	1,177 77	977	465 20
1873	20,165	8,241 27	Consolidation.		1,150	70 00
1874	24,322	11,822 93			1,416	610 92
1875	24,615	115,266 73			1,406	6,287 89
1876	31,063	145,368 80			1,584	7,004 64
1877	30,758	142,440 80			1,496	6,784 29
1878	34,780	156,177 98			1,281	5,754 00
1879	36,008	161,394 42	Guttenberg		1,584	6,714 36
1880	38,051	176,357 23			1,860	6,199 21
1881	47,482	175,099 87			1,546	5,984 85
1882	49,201	174,968 11	46	$1,374 30	1,520	3,478 15
1883	39,203	134,669 84	372	1,268 44	1,297	1,465 10
1884	41,226	166,114 06	425	1,714 54	1,763	7,112 31
1885	41,110	167,274 85	464	1,863 93	1,743	7,092 20
1886	47,552	181,259 31	446	1,689 72	1,884	7,173 92
1887	49,880	185,876 00	551	2,053 29	1,726	7,117 18

Year	Van Vorst.		North Berk.		Hoboken.
	Pupils.	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.
1841		188 07
1842		38 07
1843
1844
1845		71 40
1846				81 09
1847		67 04		150 50
1848		67 18		164 69
1849		67 18		164 70
1850		168 37		121 66		838 70
1851		Consolidation.	1,119	392 14	1,046	163 92
1852			1,232	788 44	713	345 11
1853			1,190	697 75	1,072	455 60
1854			1,719	661 81	1,067	110 79
1855			1,833	639 28	1,281	441 94
1856			1,324	323 64	1,263	318 29
1857			1,386	429 18	1,477	427 93
1858			1,412	442 66	1,415	356 14
1859			1,442	443 85	1,000	459 20
1860		Union.	1,709	434 60	1,869	478 10
1861	653	$145 35	470	111 81	2,257	542 17
1862	800	194 46	527	115 15	2,221	485 20
1863	848	261 68	583	248 61	2,031	806 22
1864	402	159 10	572	218 67	2,227	955 42
1865	426	110 81	614	239 23	2,227	840 76
1866	348	165 44	626	209 05	2,808	835 82
1867	518	339 15	626	289 00	1,275	588 64
1868	560	246 84	699	303 32	2,866	1,243 29
1869	637	295 01	704	292 88	4,031	1,679 09
1870	728	297 24	745	304 48	4,161	1,823 18
1871	792	377 70	850	3,940 69	7,334	24,820 92
1872	852	4,064 62	905	4,317 47	6,037	28,800 61
1873	905	4,238 35	931	4,360 10	5,560	26,039 00
1874	916	4,239 03	1,101	4,622 39	7,035	32,536 24
1875	984	4,420 00	962	4,321 18	7,465	33,731 85
1876	1,017	4,510 91	954	4,043 87	7,511	32,201 87
1877	1,105	4,540 62	1,112	4,158 47	8,350	34,311 30
1878	898	3,476 32	1,045	3,998 94	8,771	33,954 19
1879	441	1,579 99	988	3,747 81	8,729	31,374 87
1880	422	1,438 93	984	3,355 22	9,387	32,097 53
1881	430	1,574 03	1,024	4,107 97	9,880	39,884 24
1882	443	1,802 55	1,025	4,170 47	9,096	40,673 33
1883	487	1,835 95	1,050	4,047 76	10,377	39,546 67
1884	497	1,732 07	1,116	4,270 29	10,669	39,724 18

Year	Greenville.		Town of Union.		Weonawken.		Keany.
	Pupils.	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.
1854	40	$145 02
1861	405	156 55	649	265 07
1862	417	156 41	722	272 55
1866	447	142 86	880	291 12	66	21 08
1867	450	307 76	889	410 44	72	33 24	171	$28 95
1868	733	251 22	1,116	489 89	69	29 93	173	73 92
1869	600	249 62	1,157	481 36	83	24 35	192	70 88
1870	633	238 70	1,280	523 12	71	20 02	184	75 20
1871	797	3,094 87	1,431	6,124 11	90	417 24	226	1,043 09
1872	950	4,592 15	1,449	6,822 08	110	524 78	263	1,264 23
1873	Consolidation.	1,464	6,906 83	146	681 76	335	1,568 90
1874		1,496	6,923 14	162	740 70	352	1,628 97
1875		1,379	7,092 67	156	610 91	347	1,598 68
1876		1,332	6,403 52	163	699 41	400	1,605 54
1877		1,965	6,841 73	177	727 32	448	1,840 90
1878		1,660	6,426 17	200	774 21	517	2,001 41
1879		1,834	5,286 72	167	599 67	592	2,125 81
1880		1,729	5,895 50	267	933 50	581	1,981 98
1881		1,725	6,950 01	275	1,109 42	643	2,594 00
1882		1,711	6,909 39	301	1,224 76	708	2,880 84
1883		2,042	7,629 61	273	1,048 01	631	2,480 37
1884		2,011	7,483 91	327	1,218 55	769	2,865 66

CHAPTER XXXII.

JERSEY CITY.

Paulus Hook—Early Deeds—History of Jersey City—Beginning of Prosperity—Incorporation of Jersey City—Presidents—Mayors—Clerks—Captains of the Watch—Chiefs of Police—Aldermen.

Paulus Hook—EARLY DEED HISTORY OF JERSEY CITY.—The original Jersey City as incorporated in 1820 was co-extensive with Paulus Hoock (or Hook) of the Dutch and Arensieck of the Indians, which became famous during the Revolutionary war as the scene of "Light-Horse Harry Lee's" gallant exploit.

Examination of the early records reveals the deed history of this piece of land which was destined to become famous and exhibits the origin of the name by which it was for many years known.

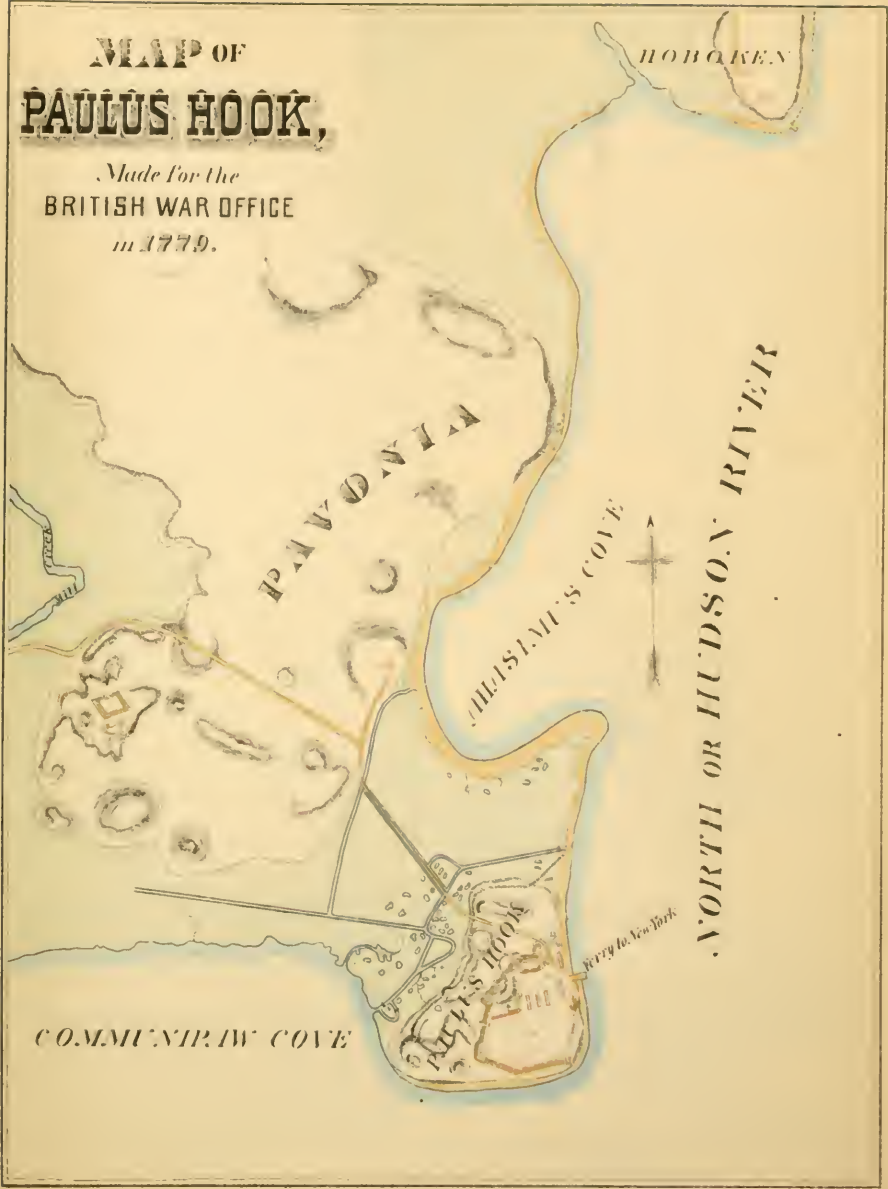

Becoming a part of the possessions of the Dutch West India Company soon after the beginning of their enterprise in the Western World, it was conveyed by deed to Michael Pauw, burgomaster of Amsterdam and Lord of Achtenhoven. The tract of land called Ahasimus, lying back of or westwardly from Paulus Hook, was conveyed by the same instrument, a patent, which was as follows:

"We, Director and Council of New Netherland, residing on the Island of Manhattan and at the Port Amsterdam, under the authority of their High Mightinesses the Lords States-Generall of the United Netherland and the incorporated West India Company, testify and declare herewith that on this day personally appeared before us Ackloosw and Almarow Virginians, inhabitants and co-owners of the land called Ahasimus and the little island Arensieck, who, for themselves and in proportion for the other proprietors, Winny, Matskath and Camois, declare, in their said capacity of owners, that for a certain lot of merchandise, which they acknowledge to have received and accepted to their satisfaction before the passing of this act, they have sold, transferred, ceded and conveyed by a certain deed and contract of sale, as they herewith transfer, cede

Year.	Hudson City		Bayonne.		West Hoboken.
	Pupils.	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.	Pupils	Received from State.
1856		766	$193 41
1857		972	302 29
1858		575	179 61
1859		1,204	445 51
1860		1,379	336 18
1861		1,239	366 12	96	344 78	586	$190 40
1862		1,253	365 27	396	130 22	698	100 33
1863		1,076	803 49	637	258 98	718	396 23
1864		2,722	1,094 34	630	277 91	800	316 80
1865		2,869	1,098 34	715	259 94	893	357 84
1866		3,476	1,110 62	838	272 43	886	257 40
1867		3,168	1,601 10	858	306 12	869	401 29
1868		1,966	1,357 82	787	311 40	1,117	484 56
1869		1,998	2,079 29	903	375 67	1,243	547 01
1870		Consolidation.	835	411 66	1,244	598 41
1871			1,000	4,035 96	1,174	6,365 99
1872			1,182	5,161 80	1,174	7,601 98
1873			1,162	5,441 96	1,603	7,511 98
1874			1,330	6,144 91	1,731	7,885 69
1875			1,179	6,194 29	1,754	8,281 85
1876			1,568	7,115 17	1,844	7,744 04
1877			1,991	6,918 57	1,710	7,626 65
1878			1,792	6,821 03	1,921	7,436 56
1879			1,349	6,930 42	1,999	7,158 19
1880			2,167	7,768 51	1,849	6,304 68
1881			2,400	10,093 52	1,868	7,495 35
1882			2,735	11,1 80	1,800	7,324 12
1883			2,750	10,401 67	1,916	7,391 87
1884			3,286	12,245 18	2,024	7,546 11

MAP OF PAULUS HOOK,

Made for the BRITISH WAR OFFICE in 1779.

NORTH OR HUDSON RIVER

and (and) to and for the benefit of the Heirs." Mr. Michael Pauw, in whose absence we ex-officio recite it under the usual stipulations of the aforesaid tract Almasimus and Amsick, called by us the Where Hook, stretching along the river Matanus, and the Island of Matabatas on the East Side, Hebelon-Hackling on the north, surrounded by Swamps, which serve as defence and refuges, and that with all rights (etc.), etc. Dated Nov. 22, 1634.

The name of the early proprietor seems to have been more commonly spelled Pauw than in the manner in which we have presented it in the above patent. Latinized, as the old Dutch names frequently were, it might, by the slightest possible license, be Paulus or Pauwus, and in that form applied to the tract of land of which he became the owner, in conjunction with the term Hoek (or Hook) signifying a bluff or spur of land stretching into the water. The origin of the name has been variously accounted for by several writers. Some have said that the locality was named after one Michael Paulusen (Pauluszoon or Poulaz), an officer in the service of the company in 1633, who, it is conjectured, occupied a hut on the island. Others intimate that the place received its name from one Paulus Schrick, who lived in Bergen, and that it was called after a minister, Paulusen, of the Reformed Church, who lived at Pavonia. But why should the "Hoek" be named after either of these men who lived in other localities? Why, indeed, should it not have been called after the proprietor, Pauw, instead of the agent Paulusen, Poulaz or Pauluzon? The spelling of the name has been as various as its origin is uncertain. The first part being produced in print in the following ways: Paulus, Paulus, Poulus, Poulus, Powles, Powless, Powless's, Powles, Powlis, Powless and Powyles.

For reasons not necessary to state in this connection, as they have been presented in the General History, the sale to Pauw proved unsatisfactory, and the land reverted to the West India Company, by whom, in 1638, it was conveyed to Abraham Isaacs Planck (Ver Planck) by an instrument which contains the earliest historical mention of Paulus Hook. Following is the original grant as translated from the Dutch records:

"This Day appeared before me, Cornelis Van Tienhoven, Secretary of New Netherland, the hon. wise and prudent William Kieft, Director-General of New Netherland from one side, and Abraham Isaacs Planck from the other side, who agreed together about the purchase of a certain lot of land called Paulus Hook, which is situated to the west of the Island Manhattan, to the east from Almasimus, on the North River, to the valley which borders on it, which tract the Director Kieft sold to Abraham Planck, who had acknowledged to have purchased said lot for the sum of four hundred and fifty gyl. of 20 stuivers each,¹ which sum said Abraham Isaacs Planck engages to pay to the Director Kieft, or to heirs whom he shall have appointed, in three installments, the first at the fair in 1638, the second in 1639, and the third and last installment on the fair 1640, and if he remained in default in these payments, then offers himself as his bail, and as principal in lieu of the purchaser, Jacob Albertson Planck, Sheriff of the colony of Rensselaerwyck, who promises to pay aforesaid 450 without any opposition, for which they submit their persons and property, real and personal, present and future, to the Court Provincial of Holland, or any other lawful tribunal.

¹ About one hundred and eighty dollars.

"In truth, whose of both parts be a copy. A. K. 1634. TW. 1634. 1139.

"Done in the Fort Amstel, etc."

"In N. S. N. H. etc."

"Kieft, Dir."

During the same year in which Planck became the owner of Paulus Hook he leased a portion of it to Gerrit Dirksen for a tobacco plantation, according to an instrument, which is translated from the Dutch as follows:

"This day the 14th of October in the year 1634 appeared before me, Cornelis Van Tienhoven, Secretary of New N. H. the hon. Abraham Isaacs Planck from one side, and Gerrit Dirksen from the other, the latter residing on Rensselaerwyck, to the west of the Island Manhattan, etc. etc. who mutually agreed about the rent of a certain piece of the aforesaid lot at Paulus Hook aforesaid on the following terms:

"Abraham Isaacs Planck did lease to Gerrit Dirksen, who heretofore acknowledged to have certain lot of land, large one Morgen, to make it up in three Tabacco Plantation for the time of 12 successive years, beginning with the first of Nov. and (at) the annual rate of twenty-five month gyl. with the express stipulation that Gerrit Dirksen may not keep more than nine carts and horses and, with a saw log with pigs for his own family, and that at the expiration of said lease all the Palanodes and Dwellings shall appertain to Gerrit Dirksen.

"Done and signed in the Island of Manhattan.

"GERRIT DIRKSEN, Mandr.

"ABRAHAM ISAACSEN PLANCK."

Prior to the time the latter deed and lease were made, in the fall of 1633, the first regular buildings within the present limits of Jersey City—or, for that matter, Hudson County—were erected by order of the West India Company; one was at Communipaw and the other at Almasimus. The former was subsequently owned by Jan Evertse Bont, and the latter afterward occupied by Cornelis Van Vorst. Bont was commissioned by Pauw as his superintendent in 1634, and was succeeded by Van Vorst in 1636.

Concerning the Van Vorst family, we present an interesting item of history in an old patent or "ground brief" for a house lot at Almasimus² (now in Jersey City), dated April 5, 1664, to Ide Cornelissen Van Vorst. The lot, we may add, is still in possession of the Van Vorst family, and the "ground brief" is the oldest on record in Hudson County. Following is a translation of the document:

"For the translation from the Dutch of the deeds here presented, and for the accompanying map, were indebted to George H. Farrier, of Jersey City. In this connection the following letter is of interest:

"WAR OFFICE,

"17th December, 1870.

"Sir—With reference to your letter dated 24th August, 1870, asking for a copy of the 'plan' of this office of Paulus Hook, in the State of New Jersey, showing the water-line, roads, etc. of that promontory on the Hudson River in 1779. I am directed by the Secretary of State for War to forward to you the enclosed tracing of a plan of Paulus Hook, giving the information required.

"I have the honor to be, Sir,

"Your Obedient Servant,

"JOHN A. SIMMONS,

"General.

"GEORGE H. FARRIER, Esq.,

"101 Grand Street,

"Jersey City, N. J.

"United States."

² See General History.

"Perris Stuyvesant, on behalf of the High, Mighty Lords States-General of the United Netherlands, and the Noble Lords Managers of the Chartered West India Company at the Chamber at Amsterdam, Directors-General of New Netherland, Curacao, Bonaire, Aruba and their dependencies, with the Noble Lords Councilors, witness and declare that we upon this day, the date and written, have given and granted to Ide Cornelissen Van Vorst, a house lot lying at the wagon path, at the northeast end of Chies Janon, at the southeast side of the Abassinus path, southeast and north-west side, sixteen rods, northeast two and twenty rods nine feet, southwest side one and twenty rods with express condition and covenant that he, Ide Cornelissen Van Vorst, or whoever afterwards his right may obtain, shall acknowledge the Noble Lords Managers aforesaid as his Lords and Patrons, under the sovereignty of the High Mighty Lords States-General and their Director-General and Council here in all to obey as good inhabitants are bound to do, with his further submitting to such taxes and enactments as over all inhabitants, according to the need and circumstances of the country shall be found to appertain, constituting over the same the before-named Ide Cornelissen Van Vorst, in our stead, real and actual possessor of the aforesaid house lot, giving him by these absolute power, authority and special commission, upon the before-mentioned house lot to be allowed to build, dwell and use as he, with other his patrimonia inheritance and effects should be allowed to do, without we grantors in quality, as aforesaid, holding any right or pretension, but to the behoof as above from all desisting from now forth to everlasting days, promising hereoforth this deed firm, sure and inviolable to hold according to agreement, and to execute all under bonds as by laws thereto established without fraud or craft, is this by us subscribed, and with our seal in red wax stamped hereon, confirmed. Done in Fort Amsterdam in N. Netherland on this 5th April, v. d. 1664.

{ SEAL }

" P. STUYVESANT,

" By order of the same,

" C. V. RUYVEN,

" Secretary."

In 1670 the region having come under the dominion of the English, Paulus Hook was confirmed to Planck by the following patent:

" ENGLISH PATENT FOR PAULUS HOOK.

" Wee, Philip Carteret, Esq., Governor of the Province of New Jersey, or New Cassarea, and his Council, have given, granted and confirmed, in the names of the right Honble John Lord Berkeley, Baron of Stratton, and St George Carteret, Knight and Baronet, the absolute Lords Proprietors of said Province, and by these Presents do give, grant and confirm unto Abraham Isaacson Plank, a neck of land heretofore granted unto him by the Dutch Governor Myndoor William Kiesel, lying and being on the West side of Hudson's River, called by the Dutch Paulus Hook and in the Indian language Apsseck Hauck; being to the Westward of Abassinus, and is separated from the said Abassinus by a small creek that runs through the meadow, which said upland and meadow therunto belonging contains, according to the survey made by the Surveyor-General, . . . acres, English measure, To Have and to Hold the said neck of land and meadow and appurtenances, with all the Gaiues, immunities and privileges, Royal mines excepted, therunto belonging and apperteyning to him, the said Abraham Isaacson Plank, his heirs, Executors, administrators or assigns of the Manor of East Greenwich in Free and Common Socage—Yielding and Paying to the said Lords Proprietors, their Heires or assigns, on every XXVth day of March, according to the English account, one halfe penny lawfull English money for every one of said acre therein contained, the first payment whereof to be made on the 25th day of March which shall be in the year of our Lord, 1670.

" Given under the Seal of the Province the 12th day of May, 1668, and in the 26th year of the Reigne of our Sov^{er} Lord Charles the Second of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

" JAMES BOLLEN, S^{er}g^t."

" PHILIP CARTERET.

The property remained in the possession of the Planck family up to Aug. 2, 1699, when it was sold to Cornelius Van Vorst for three hundred pounds "current money of New York." Some of the neighboring lands had long been in possession of the Van Vorst family.

¹ In the Dutch grant it is east from Abassinus.

The Hook was used solely as farming land until 1764, when its quiet was in some measure disturbed by the travel which was brought to the place by the establishment of the first ferry. Then Michael Cornelissen built just north of what is now Grand Street a house which became the first tavern in the limits of Jersey City. It was long and low, and had a huge Dutch roof, which covered a hospitable piazza; it was near the water, and served both as ferry-house and tavern.

Horse-racing was introduced at the Hook as early as 1769 by Cornelius Van Vorst, who laid out a mile track along the high ground and around the sand-hills, with which the island abounded. These races, which were kept up until the Revolution, were largely attended by lovers of sport from the city and the surrounding country, and fox hunts were occasionally introduced in Bergen woods to vary the entertainment of those who sought the pleasures of outdoor life.

The story of the British occupation of Paulus Hook, and of Light Horse Harry Lee's successful attack upon the garrison on Aug. 19, 1779, has been elaborately told by an able writer elsewhere in this volume.

After the close of the war Paulus Hook was a place of little consequence, save as the scene of Lee's exploit, and it was many years before it again became the theatre of human activity. One John Murphy had prior, to 1800, put up a small house, which became a rival of the ferry tavern, then kept by a notable character, Maj. David Hunt.

In 1802 the families of Hunt and Murphy and an individual named Joseph Bryant—thirteen persons in all—constituted the entire population of the place.

This spot of historic ground, upon which eighty years have made such vast changes, was in its natural state little more than a cluster of sand-hills, some of them of considerable height. It comprised about sixty acres, and may be described by modern boundaries as reaching from about midway between Hudson and Green Streets to Warren, and from Essex to a portion of Green. It is surrounded on the north and east by Harsimus or Abassinus Cove and the Hudson River, on the south by the river and Communipaw Cove, and formerly was bounded upon the west by tide creeks and swamps, which made it virtually an island.

THE BEGINNING OF PROSPERITY.—In 1804 the Hook, which had until then remained in the ownership of the Van Vorst family, passed into the possession of the men who were to begin the work of building a city. On the 26th of March it was conveyed, with the ferry privileges, to Anthony Dey, of New York, for an annuity of six thousand Spanish milled dollars. On the 15th of April following he conveyed it to Abraham Varick, who, upon the 20th of the same month, transferred it to Richard Varick, Jacob Radeliff and Anthony Dey. Of these three men, who may be regarded as the founders of Jersey City, it is proper that we should make more than incidental mention. All three were lawyers, successful and highly respected for their abilities.

Richard Varick, the senior of the enterprising trio, had a large experience of life prior to the time he became one of the proprietors of Paulus Hook. Born in 1752, he was licensed to practice law in 1774, appointed military secretary-general the following year, and in 1776 appointed by Congress, deputy commissary-general of musters for the Northern army, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He was, after Burgoyne's surrender, stationed at West Point, and subsequently became a member of Washington's military household and the general secretary. After the evacuation of New York by the British, in 1783, he was appointed recorder of the city, and in 1789 was appointed mayor of the city and chosen Attorney-General of the State. The esteem in which he was held by the Revolutionary officers is indicated by the fact that he was for thirty years retained by the order of the Cincinnati as its president. His death occurred in Jersey City, July 30, 1831.

Anthony Dey, born at Breakneck, Bergen Co., in 1776, was the son of Gen. Richard Dey, and the grandson of Col. Tunis Dey, both officers of the Revolutionary army, and he was the lineal descendant of Derrick Dey, a Holland settler in New Amsterdam in 1640. He was a cousin of Col. Richard Varick, and studied law with him in New York, and to him was largely indebted for his early success. He became very wealthy, and was foremost in nearly all of the movements of his time in New York City and in that part of Bergen County now Hudson. He owned large tracts of meadow land along the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers, and at one time possessed the entire tract now known as East Newark. He died in 1859, in what is now a part of Jersey City.

Jacob Radeliff, the third of the trio of city founders, like the others, was a lawyer. He was the eldest son of William Radeliff, a captain and brigadier-general in the Revolutionary army. Beginning practice in Poughkeepsie, he was soon elevated to the bench of the Supreme Court. Resigning after a comparatively short period of service, he removed to New York, resumed the practice of his profession, and became very popular. He was mayor of New York from 1810 to 1817.

Reverting, after this digression among personal matters, to those more closely historical, we find that the new proprietors at once divided their property into one thousand shares, and associated with themselves other persons. They employed Joseph F. Mangin to plot and map the town. The map, dated April 15th, was duly finished and labeled with the legend "A Map of that part of the Town of Jersey commonly called Powles Hook." On the 12th of April the owners advertised a sale of lots for the 16th, which was afterwards postponed to the 15th of May. "It is probable," says Winfield, "that this sale was precipitated by the advertisement of John Stevens for a sale of lots in Hoboken." The owners, now well embarked in the enterprise, agreed upon a name for their future corporation, and gave notice of an application to the Legislature for an act of incorporation. The Centinel of Freedom, published in Newark, in its issue of March 13, 1804, thus speaks of the speculation:

"We understand that Anthony Dey, Richard Varick and Jacob Radeliff, Esqs, of the city of New York have obtained from Mr. Van Vorst a perpetual lease of the land and premises known by the name of Powles Hook. Application has been made to our Legislature for an act of Incorporation for themselves and associates and leave given to present a bill at the next sitting. It is contemplated to level the plain and lay out a regularly planned city. It will be laid out in one thousand lots valued at one hundred dollars each, requiring of every original adventurer six per cent., which amounts to six thousand dollars, equal to the sum agreed to be paid Mr. Van Vorst annually. We further understand that some of the most wealthy and influential citizens both of New York and this State have embarked in the undertaking and who know but that a very few years will make it theemporium of trade and commerce of the State of New Jersey."

The act alluded to was passed upon the 10th of November, 1804, and incorporated the "Associates of the Jersey Company," and to that body Varick, Dey and Radeliff conveyed Paulus Hook, Feb. 1, 1805. The affairs of the company were administered by nine directors. The corporation ruled the little town for fifteen years.

INCORPORATION.—Jersey City was incorporated by act of Jan. 28, 1820. It was then bounded on the west by a creek and ditch which separated the lands of "the Associates of Jersey Company from those of Cornelius Van Vorst (about where Warren Street now is), east by the river, north by Harsimus Cove (First Street), and south by Communipaw Cove (South Street)." The act provided for the election of a board of five freeholders to conduct the affairs of the city, and appointed five to serve until such time as an election should be held, viz.: Dr. John Condit, Samuel Cassedy, Joseph Lyon, John K. Goodman and John Leaman.

Up to the 22d of February, 1838, Jersey City remained a part of Bergen, but upon that date it became a separate municipality under the corporate title of the "Mayor and Common Council of the city of Jersey." The boundaries were extended on the 8th of March, 1839, westerly along the northerly side of First Street to the centre of Grove Street, thence southerly into Communipaw Bay to the line of South Street extended.

The city received a new charter on March 18, 1851, under the provisions of which the township of Van Vorst was absorbed. The annexation was voted upon in Jersey City and Van Vorst township, the former casting 489 ballots in favor of the measure out of a total of 495, and the latter 377 for, out of a total of 426. By this charter the city was divided into four wards; two others were created on the 28th of February, 1861, the Seventh on the 21st of March, 1867, and the Eighth on March 17, 1870.

A far-reaching measure of consolidation was undertaken and carried out in 1869. On the 2d of April of that year an act passed the Legislature providing for a vote by the electors of the several cities and townships in the country east of the Hackensack River, to decide upon their union under one government. The following shows the result of this election, which occurred October 5th, in each of the districts:

CITY SEAL.

ment. The following shows the result of this election, which occurred October 5th, in each of the districts:

	Charter.	No Charter.
Jersey City	2220	911
Hudson City	1520	220
Bergen	815	108
Hoboken	177	893
Bayonne	100	250
Greenville	24	174
Weehawken	0	41
Town of Union	125	105
West Hoboken	35	236
North Bergen	80	225
Union Township	140	65

Thus Jersey City, Bergen¹ and Hudson City² were united. In the following year, on March 17th, the Legislature passed an enactment for the government of the consolidated city. The territory was divided into sixteen wards, the eight of the old Jersey City being retained and numbered from one to eight, those of Hudson City being numbered from nine to twelve, inclusive, and the wards of Bergen being numbered thirteen to sixteen, inclusive. In 1871 the local government was reorganized, the wards being abolished, and aldermanic districts, six in number, established in their stead. In 1873 the township of Greenville ¹The bounds of Bergen township were fixed by the grant of Governor Stuyvesant in 1691. By the erection of cities and other townships its territory was greatly reduced, and on the 24th of March, 1835, it was erected into the town of Bergen. Its charter was amended by act of March 11, 1862, and again by act of March 29, 1866. The city of Bergen was incorporated March 11, 1868. Its mayors, during the period of its existence as a separate city, were as follows: 1866, Henry Fitch; 1867, John L. Cornelson; 1868, John Hillon; 1869, Stephen Harrison.

²The territory of Hudson City was taken from the township of North Bergen in March 4, 1852, and incorporated as the "Town of Hudson in the County of Hudson." It was incorporated as the "City of Hudson" April 11, 1855. From that time up to its consolidation with Jersey City its mayors were as follows: 1855, Edmund R. V. Wright; 1856, Garret D. Van Ripen; 1857-61, Edmund D. Carpenter (Carpenter died in office in 1861, and was succeeded by Garret D. Van Ripen); 1859, Abraham Collier; 1860, Benjamin F. Sawyer.

was annexed to the city by legislative act, and became a part of the Sixth District.

Civil List.—Following is a list of the officers of Jersey City from the time of its original incorporation to the present:

PRESIDENTS.
1820-24, Joseph Lyon.	1833, William Glaze.
1824, William Lyon.	1834, John F. Ellis.
1825, Joseph Kissam.	1835, Robert Gilchrist.
1826-32, George Dummer.	1836-37, William Glaze.
1831-32, David C. Cadden.

MAYORS.
1828-30, Dudley S. Gregory.	1862-67, John B. Romar.
1840, Peter Martin.	1864-66, Orsted Cleveland.
1841, Dudley S. Gregory.	1867, James Gopill.
1842, Thomas A. Alexander.	1868, Charles H. O'Neil.
1843, Peter Bentley.	1869, William Clarke.
1844-47, Phineas C. Dummer.	1870-74, Charles J. O'Neil.
1848-49, Henry J. Taylor.	1875-76, Henry Traphagen.
1850-51, Robert Gilchrist.	1877-78, Charles Singler.
1852-56, David S. Matners.	1879-80, Henry J. Hopper.
1857, Samuel Wesscott.	1880-84, Isaac W. Tanag.
1858-59, Dudley S. Gregory.	May, 1884, Gilbert Collins (present incumbent).
1860-61, Cornelius Van Vorst.

CLERKS.
1820, Joseph Kissam.	1836-38, Henry D. Holt.
1821-24, Philip R. Earle.	1839, Thomas W. James.
1825, A. Ouden Dayton.	1840-44, Henry D. Holt.
1826-28, Robert Gilchrist.	1845-47, Edgar B. Wakeman.
1829-32, Peter McMartin.	1848-50, John H. Voorhis.
1833, Peter Bentley.	1850-64, George W. Cassidy.
1834, Edmund D. Barry, Jr.	1864, John E. Scott (present incumbent).
1835, William W. Munro.

CAPTAINS OF THE WATCH.
1851-52, Benjamin F. Champney.	1854, Charles J. Farley.
1852-53, John H. Benedict.	1854-55, Thomas B. Kissam.

CHIEFS OF POLICE.
1854, Hiram H. Fenn.	1855-68, Joseph McManus.
1855, Charles J. Farley.	1868-71, Nathan B. Fowler.
1856-57, Thomas B. Kissam.	1871-72, Edward McWilliams.
1857-58, Benjamin James, Jr.	1872-77, Benjamin F. Champney.
1859-61, Jacob Z. Mariani.	1877-79, Michael Nathan.
1861-64, Edward D. Ribey.	1879, Benjamin Murphy (present incumbent).
1864, Patrick Jordan.

ALDERMEN.
Ward.	Ward.
1. James F. Davenport, 1851-52.	3. Geo. Ford, 1862-64.
1. Geo. S. Gardner, 1851-53.	3. Cornelius Van Vorst, 1862-64.
1. George W. Hancock, 1851-52.	4. Jonathan D. Miller, 1862-54.
1. Alexander H. Wallis, 1851-53.	4. Richard R. Rappleyea, 1852-54.
2. Stephen D. Harrison, 1851-53.	1. James Narine, 1852-54.
2. David S. Matners, 1851-52.	2. Joseph G. Edge, 1852-64.
2. Justin Slatcr, 1851-52.	2. Stephen D. Harrison, 1852-53.
2. Alex. Wilson, 1851-52.	2. Alexander Wilson, 1852-53.
3. Cornelius P. Browkaw, 1851-53.	3. John H. Low, 1852-53.
3. Edmund W. Kingsland, 1851-53.	4. Henry Barrow, 1852-53.
3. George McLaughlin, 1851-52.	4. Jonathan D. Miller, 1852-54.
3. Cornelius Van Vorst, Jr., 1851-52.	4. Richard R. Rappleyea, 1852-55.
4. Louis B. Cobb, 1851-53.	4. Cornelius V. Traphagen, 1852-54.
4. William Gual, 1851-52.	4. John Van Vorst, 1852-54.
4. Jonathan D. Miller, 1851-52.	1. Geo. S. Gardner, 1850-55.
4. Samuel Wesscott, 1851-53.	1. Thomas W. James, 1853-55.
4. Henry Barrow, 1852-55.	2. Jeremiah B. Cleveland, 1853-55.
1. Cornelius V. Traphagen, 1852-53.	2. Justin Slatcr, 1853-55.
1. Frederick B. Betts, 1852-54.	3. John H. Low, 1855-55.
1. James Narine, 1852-51.	3. William White, 1853-55.
2. Joseph G. Edge, 1852-54.	3. John V. Brower, 1853-54.
2. John H. Lyon, 1852-54.	3. Svald Hill, 1853-54.
	4. Samuel R. Tyrell, 1853-55.

³This office was equivalent to that of mayor prior to 1858.

W.S. Manner

Ward

4. Geo. W. Whitlock, 1851-56
1. James S. Day, 1857-61, 1864-66
1. James B. Thompson, 1843-66
2. Joseph C. Edge, 1864-66
2. John H. Lyon, 1861-66
3. Henry A. Greene, 1861-66
3. Seth Hill, 1861-66
4. William Keane, 1861-66
1. Richard R. Hoffman, 1861-66
1. Timothy L. Smith, 1864-66
1. William Clarke, 1865-67
1. George H. Lyman, 1865-67
2. Matthew Erwin, 1865-67
3. Louis B. Edge, 1865-67
3. Henry E. Tashy, 1865-67
4. Samuel M. Hoffman, 1865-67
4. Samuel R. Tyrrell, 1865-67
1. John Griffith, 1865-67
1. Geo. L. Gardner, 1865-68
1. James R. Thompson, 1865-68
2. Joseph G. Edge, 1866-68
2. Hugh McFarland, 1866-68
3. Wm. R. Drayton, 1866-68
3. Jacob R. Wertenlycke, 1866-68
4. Thomas E. Tilden, 1866-68
1. Jonathan V. Thurston, 1866-68
1. James S. Davenport, 1866-67
1. Robert B. Kashow, 1867-69
1. Wm. Voorhies, 1867-69
1. Daniel S. Sinclair, 1867-69
2. Matthew Erwin, 1867-69
2. Augustus A. Hardenbergh, 1867-69
3. Joseph M. Brown, 1867-69
3. Charles M. Hawkins, 1867-69
3. Martin F. Baum, 1867-68
3. Richard Cornillon, 1867-68
1. Wm. Roosevelt, 1867-69
4. Melancthon S. Wickware, 1867-69
1. Wm. Clarke, 1868-69
1. Thomas Earle, 1868-69
1. Thomas B. Decker, 1868-69
2. Wm. R. Brown, 1868-69
2. John McBride, 1868-69
3. Cornelius Van Vorst, 1868-69
3. Robert McLaughlin, 1868-69
1. Jonathan V. Thurston, 1868-69
4. Thomas E. Tilden, 1868-69
4. Thomas D. Christie, 1868-69
1. Thomas B. Decker, 1869-61
1. James L. Ogden, 1869-61
2. Joseph G. Edge, 1869-61
2. Augustus A. Hardenbergh, 1869-61
3. Charles M. Hawkins, 1869-61
3. James Warner, 1869-61
4. Thomas D. Christie, 1869-61
4. Samuel M. Hoffman, 1869-61
1. William Clarke, 1869-62
1. Thomas Earle, 1869-62
2. Isaac Edge, 1869-62
2. John McBride, 1869-62
3. Hosea F. Clarke, 1869-62
3. Rufus K. Terry, 1869-62
4. Wm. H. Safew, 1869-62
4. John B.ומר, 1869-62
4. Henry F. Cox, 1869-61
1. Thomas B. Decker, 1861-64

Ward

2. Edward D. Bolly, 1861-64
2. Charles M. Hawkins, 1861-64
4. John W. Parsimon, 1861-64
2. Henry F. Cox, 1861-64
3. Charles H. Atter, 1861-64
3. Elizabeth Drake, 1861-64
6. Wm. L. Drake, 1861-64
6. Wm. H. Kline, 1861-64
1. Andrew Barrett, 1861-64
6. Orrestes Cleveland, 1864-69
1. Thomas Earle, 1862-69
1. Augustus A. Hardenbergh, 1862-69
2. Isaac Edge, 1862-69
2. John McBride, 1862-69
3. Horatio N. Ego, 1862-69
3. Rufus K. Terry, 1862-69
4. Washington J. Hough, 1862-69
4. Wm. H. Nat'w, 1862-69
5. Andrew A. Galdis, 1862-69
6. Cornelius Kane, 1862-69
2. Thomas Ganney, 1862-64
1. Wm. Clarke, 1863-66
2. Isaac Edge, 1863-66
3. Horatio N. Ego, 1863-66
1. Wm. H. Safew, 1863-66
5. Azariah Drake, 1863-66
6. Patrick Duff, 1863-66
1. Thomas B. Decker, 1864-67
3. Thomas G. Frey, 1864-67
5. Stephen Gault, 1864-67
1. John W. Parsimon, 1864-66
5. Henry Finch, 1864-66
1. John Lesmon, 1864-66
1. Thomas Earle, 1865-68
2. John McBride, 1865-67
3. Rufus K. Terry, 1865-68
1. James N. Davis, 1865-68
3. Chas. H. O'Neil, 1865-68
6. Patrick Sheeran, 1865-68
1. Wm. Clarke, 1866-69
2. John McLaughlin, 1866-69
3. Horatio N. Ego, 1866-69
4. Richard A. Wood, 1866-68
5. James Cassidy, 1866-68
6. Hosea F. Clarke, 1866-69
4. Anning Smith, 1866-67
5. Andrew A. Galdis, 1866-67
3. Thomas Gross, 1866-67
2. Wm. W. Knight, 1867-68
7. Michael Connolly, 1867-69
7. Francis Garrett, 1867-68
1. Leroy Schermershen, 1868-70
2. Isaac Edge, 1868-70
3. Thomas Gross, 1868-70
4. Adolph Kirshen, 1868-70
5. Thomas D. Christie, 1868-70
6. Patrick Sheeran, 1868
7. Francis Garrett, 1868
4. James T. Hough, 1868-69
5. Jeremiah Sweeney, 1863-69
1. Francis S. Fitzgerald, 1869-70
2. John Whalen, 1869-70
3. Horatio N. Ego, 1869-70
4. Neil Campbell, 1869-70
5. Jeremiah Sweeney, 1869-70
6. Hosea F. Clarke, 1869-70
7. John Egan, 1869-70

Bullong, Fourth Ward, Neil Campbell, Charles Bechtel, Fifth Ward, Jeremiah Sweeney, Christopher H. Tinsman, Sixth Ward, Hosea F. Clarke, Patrick Sheeran, Seventh Ward, John Maloney, Eugene Burdon, Eighth Ward, John Egan, James Moeten, Ninth Ward, John Hogan, Anton Schell, Tenth Ward, John M. Padden, Patrick Mc-Nulty (president), Eleventh Ward, Neil H. Houghton, John E. Wood, Twelfth Ward, Oscar P. Duden, Thirteenth Ward, Thirtieth Ward, Wm. H. Thomas, District Twenty-Eighth Ward, Edmund D. B. Wakeman, Benjamin Van Kesteren, Fourteenth Ward, Isaac Fanning, Jr., Fifteenth Ward, Kieran, Sixteenth Ward, William H. Brunst, all twenty-eighth, Jr.

1871-72.

First District, Robert Brunst, George H. Farnes, Second District, David C. Jans, Dennis Beardon, Third District, James M. Swaney, Charles Siler, Fourth District, John S. Edwards, Arnold Stoucken, Fifth District, David L. Haden, Jasper Ward, Sixth District, Henry V. Mansfield, Simon H. Smith.

1872-73.

First District, Robert Brunst, Benjamin F. Chinnsey; Second District, John M. Leary, James McNeill, Terry Dwyer, Charles Stier, Marmaduke Tilden, Fourth District, James P. Conroy, Arnold Stoucken; Fifth District, James Waulds, Edward F. C. Young, Sixth District, Henry V. Mansfield, Simon H. Smith.

1873-74.

First District, Robert Brunst, Daniel B. Smith; Second District, Dennis McLaughlin, George G. Brown, Third District, Samuel Clark, Marmaduke Tilden, Fourth District, John B. Conolan, Christian Helms, Fifth District, Henry Combs, John J. Taffey, Sixth District, John H. Calkie, Simon H. Smith.

1874-75.

First District, Robert Brunst, Edward S. Smith; Second District, Dennis McLaughlin, George G. Brown; Third District, Samuel Clark, Marmaduke Tilden; Fourth District, Christian Helms, Henry J. Powell; Fifth District, Thomas D. Harrison, John J. Taffey; Sixth District, John H. Calkie, John Meyer.

1875-76.

First District, Edward S. Smith, Lewis E. Wood; Second District, Dennis McLaughlin, George G. Brown; Third District, Daniel E. Soule, Azariah White; Fourth District, Christian Helms, Henry J. Powell; Fifth District, Thomas D. Harrison, John Kase, Jr.; Sixth District, John H. Meyer, John T. Van Cleef.

1876-77.

First District, Edward S. Smith, Lewis E. Wood; Second District, Garrett Halsey, Dennis McLaughlin; Third District, Daniel E. Soule, Marmaduke Tilden; Fourth District, Christian Helms (vacancy); Fifth District, Henry A. Thomas, John Kase, Jr. (president); Sixth District, George D. Mackey, John T. Van Cleef.

1877-78.

First District, Edward S. Smith, (president), Lewis E. Wood; Second District, Garrett Halsey, Michael Beardon; Third District, Edward M. Butler, Marmaduke Tilden; Fourth District, William F. Kern, Henry J. Powell; Fifth District, David W. Lawrence, Henry A. Thomas; Sixth District, George D. Mackey, Stephen S. Vreeland.

1878-79.

First District, Matthew W. Kelly, Lewis E. Wood; Second District, Thomas Beilly, Michael Beardon; Third District, Edward M. Butler, Daniel E. Soule; Fourth District, William F. Kern, Henry J. Powell; Fifth District, David W. Lawrence, Abram P. Newkirk; Sixth District, John E. Smith, Stephen S. Vreeland (president).

1879-80.

First District, Matthew W. Kelly, Lewis E. Wood (president); Second District, Michael Beardon, Thomas Beilly; Third District, Frederick Payne, Daniel E. Soule; Fourth District, Thomas Derran, William F. Kern; Fifth District, John G. Fisher, Abram P. Newkirk; Sixth District, James Rest, John E. Smith.

1880-81.

First District, John V. Berrian, Lewis E. Wood; Second District, James Ambrose, Michael Beardon; Third District, Emil E. Satz, Frederick Payne; Fourth District, Thomas Derran, John Mannion; Fifth District, John G. Fisher, Jacob Hingle; Sixth District, George D. Mackey, James Todd (president).

1881-82.

First District, John G. Berrian, James F. Gannon; Second District, (After Consolidation.)

1870-71

First Ward, Francis S. Fitzpatrick, Thomas A. Gross; Second Ward, John Whalen, David W. Carvin; Third Ward, Horatio N. Ego, Wm. H.

James Ambrose, John F. Kelly; Third District, Emil E. Datz, Henry H. Old; Fourth District, William H. Furman, John Mannion, Fifth District, Jacob Ringle, Garret D. Van Reipen (president); Sixth District, George D. Mackey, Henry Puster.

1882-83.

First District, James F. Gannon, Robert S. Jordan; Second District, James Ambrose, John F. Kelly; Third District, Frederick Hauser, Henry H. Old; Fourth District, Ferdinand Dziuba, William H. Furman (president); Fifth District, Joseph J. Reynolds, Garret D. Van Reipen; Sixth District, Pearl C. Hilliard, Henry Puster.

1883-84

First District, Robert S. Jordan, A. Harvey Marsh; Second District, James Ambrose, John F. Kelly; Third District, Hugh H. Abernethy, Jr., Frederick Hauser; Fourth District, Ferdinand Dziuba, William H. Furman (president); Fifth District, Joseph J. Reynolds, William D. Reynolds; Sixth District, Pearl C. Hilliard, Robert A. McKnight.

HON. DUDLEY S. GREGORY, first mayor of Jersey City, was born in Reading, Fairfield Co., Conn., Feb. 5, 1800. His ancestors, who took an active part in the Revolutionary war, removed to Albany, N. Y., in 1808, and five years subsequently he was appointed clerk in the comptroller's office, filling the position nearly fourteen years, and declining the deputy comptrollership. Mr. Gregory held several important commands during that period in the New York militia, and was one of the guard of honor that received the Marquis de Latayette on his second visit to this country.

Mr. Gregory removed to Jersey City in 1834, and soon became conspicuous in public life. He represented Bergen township, as Hudson County was then called, three successive terms in the Board of Freeholders, was twice elected to the Board of Selectmen of Jersey City, and became the first mayor under the charter, being elected three times and feeling compelled to decline positively when nominated for a fourth term. In 1846 he was elected to Congress from the Fifth District—comprising Bergen, Essex, Passaic and Hudson Counties—by a majority of two thousand five hundred and sixty, receiving eleven hundred and forty-two votes out of the sixteen hundred and seventy-one polled in his own county. He peremptorily declined a re-nomination.

Mr. Gregory was largely identified with many of our manufactories and public institutions. He organized the Provident Institution for Savings (the first savings-bank in our State), as also the first bank of discount established in Jersey City, namely, the Hudson County Bank; and he was likewise one of the commissioners to introduce water into our city.

There was, in fine, scarcely any enterprise or industry calculated to increase the wealth and prosperity of this community in which he was not prominent; and he was equally well noted for his acts of public and private benevolence. After an active and successful life, his demise took place in this city on Dec. 8, 1874.

DAVID S. MANNERS.—The character and actions of its public men constitute the history of every community, and Jersey City is no exception to this unwritten law. David Stout Manners, the subject of this sketch, was for so many years connected with its progress and actively identified with its public interests that any history of Jersey City, no matter how brief, would be incomplete without reference to "Mayor Manners," as he was so long and familiarly known by name.

Mr. Manners was born at East Amwell, in Hunterdon County, N. J., Jan. 12, 1808, and was descended from an ancestry honorably mentioned in the military annals of the Revolution. His grandfather, Capt. John Schenck, bore a conspicuous part in the struggles preceding the battles of Monmouth and Princeton, and in those contests was recognized as a gallant and intrepid officer. His father, Capt. David Manners, was an officer in the war of 1812, and won honorable mention in several important engagements. The early years of David S. Manners were spent on the farm as aid to his father, who, besides the cultivation of the farm, was also employed in surveying large tracts of land in various parts of the State. It was during the winter months that young Manners attended the village school, where from the start he evinced the utmost interest in his studies, carrying his books in his pocket when at times engaged on the farm. His favorite study was that of mathematics, and it was by close application he was enabled to lay that basis of character which, in the occupation of surveying, rendered his services so valuable to his father and gave direction to the labors of his manhood.

In 1840, Mr. Manners, then in his thirty-second year, left the county of Hunterdon, with the small proceeds derived from the sale of the old homestead, to make his first venture in the mercantile world. His success was assured. Close and earnest attention to business as a wholesale grocer in New York City, with a steadfast and unyielding integrity which frowned on the trickeries of trade, found an early and merited reward, and enabled him in the short space of fourteen years to retire from the business. He came to Jersey City in 1844, which then had a population of about seven thousand, and invested largely in real estate. Always interested in the public welfare, his counsels were eagerly sought and civic honors awaited him at every step.

He was chosen in 1848 a member of the first Aldermanic Council elected by general ticket, and became chairman of its committee on finance, then, as now, a most important position, as giving direction to the progress and improvement of the city and shaping its great destiny. In the discharge of these duties the public confidence to an unusual degree was awarded him. A new charter having been obtained to meet the requirements of the fast-growing city, he was elected an alderman from the Second Ward, and immediately president of the Common Council, by virtue of which office he became a member of the Board of Water Commissioners, whose duty it was to obtain the introduction of pure and wholesome water into Jersey City. In 1854 the work was completed, and in the summer of that year the great event was celebrated in a becoming manner, the whole population by imposing processions and the thunders of artillery giving announcement to their joy at the manner in which the great work had been accomplished. Previous, however, to the completion of the works Mr. Manners, in 1852, by a nomination of the Citizens' party, had been elected as mayor by a very handsome majority, and he had thus the proud satisfaction of the public acclamations yielded to him as the chief executive for his untiring fidelity and unceasing labor, in conjunction with Hon. Dudley S. Gregory, Hon. John D. Ward and others, in summoning from their course the waters of the Passaic for the healthful purposes of the city he had loved and served so well. For five terms in succession he was re-elected to the mayoralty, and was only allowed to withdraw when, weary with the burdens of official station, he gave assurance of his readiness to join with his successors at all times in perfecting by every aid in his power the plans of municipal government he had so successfully inaugurated and now so confidently bequeathed to them.

As mayor he never hesitated to interpose the executive veto against any measure which his far-seeing wisdom deemed hasty or imprudent, and it was this that attached to him through life the familiar title of "Old Veto."

Mr. Manners early manifested an interest in the question of insurance, and after repeated services as a director, he was elected, in 1854, president of the New Amsterdam Fire Insurance Company, at No. 20 Wall Street, then one of the leading companies of New York City. During his presidency the company leased and rebuilt the northwest corner of Broadway and Cortlandt Streets, and there conducted its business until its career was arrested by the great Chicago fire of 1871, an event unprecedented in insurance annals.

Perhaps there was no trait of the character of Mr. Manners more pronounced than that of steadfast adherence to principle and an unflinching courage in the maintenance of his convictions. In the long contest through the courts of the State he struggled manfully for the interests of the city to save the magnificent water-front from the encroachments of monopolies, and to permit the extension of its thoroughfares to tide-water, and thus give development to its commercial interests, beyond all others the most important to a city located as Jersey City is, at the very gates of commerce. It was for efforts such as this that Mr. Manners was repeatedly tendered a seat in the State Senate and in Congress; but he resolutely declined further promotion and retired from the field of politics.

Whatever gave promise of benefit to the best interests of the city in its moral or social enterprises found always in Mayor Manners a warm and earnest advocate. He connected himself with Grace Episcopal Church, and was a regular attendant, with his family, upon its services. His charities were numerous and most gratuitously bestowed.

He was married, in 1843, to Miss D. P. Jones, of New York City, who died in 1876. Mr. Manners was fond of agricultural pursuits. He owned a valuable farm at Hartigen, in Somerset County, to the improvement of which he devoted such time as he could spare from the varied trusts under his control and the care and management of his city property. In the early summer of 1884 he was stricken with the disease which proved fatal, and on the 19th of August he passed quietly and peacefully away. He left surviving him four daughters and three sons,—Virginia (wife of John W. Bookman, of Perth-Amboy, a prominent member of the Middlesex bar), Marie Louise, Helen, Blanche, Sheridan (a civil engineer), Edwin (a young lawyer of prominence in Jersey City), and Clarence.

As a citizen and neighbor, Mr. Manners was greatly respected. In private life he was a conspicuous figure; he was genial, possessed of humor and a fund of witty anecdote. His home was the abode of a generous hospitality. From his extensive acquaintance with municipal affairs his counsel was often sought, especially by the young, to whom he was always ready to extend a helping hand, and by whom he will be greatly missed, as prominent among those who, by a long and honorable life of public and of private usefulness, have written their names in no doubtful characters upon the pages of Jersey City history.

JAMES GOPSILL, Mayor of Jersey City in 1867, was born in the city of New York, July 22, 1823. He was of English parentage, his father having come to this country in 1810, and established himself in business in New York. He was a member of the Society of Friends, or Quakers. James Gopsill, after having the usual schooling then to be obtained in private schools, became a student of the school maintained by the Mechanics' and Traders' Society of New York, of which his father was a member, and graduated therefrom. He was then engaged as a clerk in a dry-goods house in New York, and was bred to a mercantile life. In 1840 he removed to Jersey City, and engaged in the dry-goods merchandise business in his own account, continuing in it for several years. The Hudson County Mutual Insurance Company elected Mr. Gopsill to be its secretary in 1856, and in that line of business the remainder of his life was spent. He displayed great energy and skill in managing the business, and a few years since, when the company was changed to a stock insurance company, under the name of the Hudson Insurance Company, Mr. Gopsill was made its president, and held that position until his death, making it, in connection with his brothers, a very prosperous and successful institution. Mr. Gopsill was best known to the public by his activity and influence in public enterprises where public spirit and benevolence were requisite, and by his energetic and zealous work as a patriotic citizen, and a prominent and honorable member of the Republican party. During the last forty years there has been no work undertaken in Jersey City for the public good in which James Gopsill has not been conspicuous. In this category of activities his life was full of good works. He was always among the first to be consulted, the first to give his time, labor and means in forwarding any enterprise of a charitable, reformatory or publicly beneficent character. He was one of the founders and the originator of the Children's Home, for orphans, and its success is largely due to the efforts of Mr. Gopsill in its behalf. He, with Mr. David Taylor, did more than any other man to help the poor colored people of Jersey City in organizing and maintaining their church; in all practicable ways his counsel, his encouragement, his means were always at the service of the poor, the needy and the afflicted. In his charities he was generous even to lavishness; he had a womanly tenderness of heart that responded to any appeal to his sympathies; by his death the poor lost one of their best and kindest friends.

In his action as a citizen and a politician Mr. Gopsill's hearty and energetic nature found full scope, and where his feelings were interested his zeal was unbounded and his activity intense and effective. He was especially adapted to be an organizer, and never lacked either the courage of his own convictions or that which is required in a leader of an enterprise. Hence those who sympathized and acted with him were always ready to follow where he led. The outbreak of the war of the Rebellion aroused in him all the fire of patriotic feeling, and during all that long and terrible contest James Gopsill was conspicuous among the friends of the Union cause, and especially zealous in aiding in all things needed to support the government. He rendered excellent service in many ways to the Union cause, and was widely known for his uncompromising hatred of treason and his earnest love for the cause of the Union. As a member of the Republican party, Mr. Gopsill was among the foremost men in New Jersey. No man did more than he in this locality to advance the fortunes of his party, and he was the recipient of its trust and honors. Four times he represented his district in the National Republican Conventions, and had long terms of service on its State and local committees. He was never himself a seeker after office, but labored often and effectively to advance his political friends to positions of honor and trust. In 1867 he was elected mayor of Jersey City, the first Republican mayor the city ever had, his election being a great surprise at the time both to his political friends and opponents. In the office of mayor Mr. Gopsill displayed the same characteristics which marked his conduct as a business man and politician. He held advanced views as to what the best interests of the city demanded, and expressed them with fearlessness and energy. But he was in his views far in advance of the public, and but few of his wise and progressive suggestions were acted on.

On the subject of temperance and the liquor traffic Mr. Gopsill held very positive views, and he had the moral courage, as the city's chief magistrate, to act upon them. He refused to give his sanction to the indiscriminate licensing of grogeries, and his vetoes of the licenses granted by the aldermen were counted by the score and hundred; nothing like it had ever been known before; he was remonstrated with by some of his friends, who told him that such a course must be fatal to any political ambition; but James Gopsill was not the man to yield any conviction of duty or impulse of his own conscience to any consideration of personal advantage. He persevered in his consistent, courageous course, saying that he, at least, would never make himself responsible for the making of drunkards by the wholesale. He continued his official protest and opposition throughout his term of the mayoralty. Jersey City never had a more sagacious, public-spirited, conscientious mayor than James Gopsill. He was a Freemason of the highest attainable, or thirty-third degree, and, besides, was a member of a special order of Supreme Counselors or Princes in the Masonic order, which made him the highest ranking Mason in the State. He was the president of the Abraham Lincoln Association of Jersey City, and one of its most zealous and efficient promoters. He had also been at various times a trustee and officer of several financial and other institutions of the city. The death of Mr. Gopsill, at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, in his sixty-second year, was lamented as that of a manly, high-minded, honorable gentleman, a most highly valued citizen, and a faithful, generous, helpful friend.

James Gopsill was married, on the 23d of May, 1849, to Rachael A. Garretson. Their children are Mary S., John G., Thomas Millburn, Josephine D., William, James, Alfred A. L. (deceased), Caroline and Emma L.

Jersey City as a Port of Entry.—By act of Congress, March 2, 1799, the territory now embraced in Hudson County was placed within the district of Perth Amboy. The district then included all of East Jersey, except such parts as were within the district of Little Egg Harbor.

March 8, 1806, "the town or landing-place of Jersey, in the State of New Jersey," was made a port of delivery, within the district of Perth Amboy.

March 2, 1811, the whole county (then Bergen) was annexed to the district of New York.

June 30, 1831, the westerly part of the county was annexed to the district of Newark.

From 1811 to the time the office was abolished (1845) Col. Aaron Ogden was assistant collector, residing in Jersey City.

¹ From Winfield's History of Hudson County, page 291.

James G. Paul

John P. ...

Feb. 21, 1863, the whole county of Hudson was annexed to the district of New York. This act provided for an assistant collector, to reside in Jersey City, with power to enter and clear vessels, but subject to such rules and regulations as the collector of New York might establish.

Feb. 25, 1865, the assistant collector was empowered to enroll and license vessels engaged in the coasting trade and fisheries owned in whole or in part by residents of the counties of Hudson and Bergen.

Postmasters.—The Jersey City post-office was not established until 1831. William Lyon was the first postmaster, and served until 1835. Since his time the succession has been as follows: William R. Taylor, 1835-37; Samuel Bridgert, 1837-41; David Smith, 1841-45; John Ozden, 1845-46; Samuel Bridgert, 1846-49; David Smith, 1849-52; Samuel M. Chambers, 1853-61; Henry A. Green, 1861-79; John G. Gopstill, 1879 to the present time.

Water-Works.—After several ineffectual attempts to provide a proper water supply for the city, the present works were constructed in the years 1851-54. A Board of Water Commissioners, consisting of Edwin A. Stevens, Edward Coles, Dudley S. Gregory, Abraham J. Van Boskerck and John D. Ward, was appointed March 18, 1851, and empowered to take measures to provide the townships of Hoboken and Van Vorst and Jersey City with pure and wholesome water. They selected as engineer William S. Whitwell, of the Boston Water-Works, and he began operations near Belleville on Aug. 26, 1851. His perfected plan, however, was not submitted until December. An act of the Legislature, passed March 25, 1852, granted authority to construct the works, and operations were from that time pushed with such rapidity that on the 30th of June, 1854, water was let into the pipes at Belleville, and on the 15th of the following August distributed through the city. The cost of the works up to that time was $652,993.73. The cost eventually reached $1,918,493. The works are owned by the city and managed by the six commissioners of the Board of Public Works.

The Passaic River, at Belleville, furnishes the supply, where the water is pumped into a settling reservoir on the ridge east of Belleville, and one hundred and fifty-seven feet above tide-level. It flows thence by gravity, through one twenty-inch and two thirty-six-inch conduits, to the distributing reservoir in Jersey City. The low-service district is supplied direct by gravity, while the high-service district receives its supply by pumping. There was in 1882 eight hundred and fifteen thousand nine hundred and forty lineal feet of distributing pipe, varying from three inches to thirty-six inches in diameter, some of which are cast iron, wrought iron and others of cement lined. The pumps used at the pumping-station are two Worthington pumps, with a capacity of eight million gallons each, one Cornish pump of eight million gallons, two Cornish pumps of seven million gallons each, one Worthington of three million gallons and one Knowles pump of one million gallons.

JOHN DOD WARD was born at Mendham in Morris County, N. J., Jan. 6, 1795. His youth was passed in this State, but on reaching manhood he left home, and at the age of twenty-four established himself in business at Montreal, Canada. Thence he removed, in 1829, to Vergennes, Vt., and in 1837 came to New York City. In 1844 he fixed his final residence in Jersey City, where he died May 19, 1873.

His grandfather, Samuel Ward, born in 1724, emigrated from Virginia about the middle of the last century, and settled at Morris Plains, in the vicinity of Morristown, N. J. Here he died in 1799. Left an orphan in his boyhood, he had been reared by an older brother in one of the frontier settlements on the south branch of the Potomac River. The offer by Governor Gooch of free farms in the rich meadows of this valley, coupled with a guarantee of religious toleration, had, about the year 1755, attracted to it a large number of immigrants from the colonies of New Jersey and Pennsylvania and from Europe. These colonists, not having taken the precaution to secure titles in due form to their farms, found themselves subsequently obliged to choose between vacating them or remaining on most onerous terms as the tenants of Lord Fairfax.

This nobleman, the early patron of Washington, emigrating to Virginia after these settlements had been made in good faith, was able, by a construction of the terms of the Culpepper grant, which he inherited, to include them within the bounds of one of his great manors. The surveys for this purpose were made by Washington in 1748, and were followed by a general exodus of the original settlers, who deeply resented the injustice of their treatment.

Through his mother, Mr. Ward was descended from Daniel Dod, a settler at Branford, Conn., about the year 1646, two of whose sons were among the early colonists of Newark, N. J., whence a branch of the family removed to Mendham about 1745. This branch of the Dod family has been long noted for the possession of rare mathematical and mechanical ability. This talent is to a large extent inherited, descending from father to son and developing from generation to generation.

Daniel Dod, whose son was the distinguished Professor Dod, of Princeton, removed, in the year 1812, from Mendham, where, up to that time, he had been engaged with his two brothers in the business handed down to them by the father, Lebeus Dod, of manufacturing mathematical instruments, clocks and light machinery. He established himself at Elizabethtown, N. J., where, with the aid of capital which was furnished him, he erected work-shops for the construction of machinery for steamboats, and in 1818 fitted out the "Savannah," the first vessel which crossed the Atlantic by the aid of steam.

New Jersey was closely identified with the early progress of steam navigation. Her Legislature had been the first to encourage Fitch, a former resident of the State, who, in 1787, had constructed the first practicable steamboat on the Delaware. Stevens, of Hoboken, contested with Fulton the honor of introducing the steam vessel of the present day in 1807, and Fulton's work-shops were located at Jersey City. It should also be noted that Gibbons, of Elizabethtown, in 1824, obtained the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States terminating the celebrated steamboat controversy. This decision threw open the waters of every State to all steam vessels licensed according to the laws of the United States, and broke up the monopoly granted to Fulton by the State of New York.

The great value of the new means of transportation had in 1812 begun to be generally recognized, and Dod, whose scientific knowledge, combined with rare mechanical genius, soon won for him a wide reputation, was called upon to supply machinery for steamboats upon many of the chief rivers and inland waters of the country. The erection of such machinery, at a distance from the works, could be intrusted only to trained and capable assistants, in whose fidelity and efficiency full confidence was felt. It was in this capacity that Mr. Ward, who was a nephew of Dod, entered active life at twenty-one, having had the advantage of a thorough previous apprenticeship in mechanics.

The experience gained in two years of this employment, during which he put steamboats in operation at New Orleans, at Norfolk, Va., on Lake Ontario and on Lake Champlain, decided Mr. Ward to set up for himself as a manufacturer of steamboat machinery in Canada, where it was evident to him that steam navigation must assume great importance.

As early as 1809 a steamboat had been placed upon the St. Lawrence by John Molson, a wealthy and enterprising citizen of Montreal, whose name is inseparably connected with its commercial and business history. Others followed, and, in 1817, Molson had a regular line of passenger steamers plying between Montreal and Quebec. No steam-engine had ever been constructed in the province, and these vessels had been equipped with English machinery.

The current of the river opposite Montreal is swift, and the attempt, if ever made, to stem the rapids immediately above the city by the steamboats in use had failed, and the idea was considered impracticable. Mr. Ward, in 1818, after visiting Montreal and studying the problem, concluded that the river channel could be readily cleared of obstructions, and offered to guarantee that a steamboat built after his plans, and for which he would himself furnish the machinery, should ascend against the current. Proceeding with his task, he rented shop-room, employed a few workmen, and in the following year, according to contract, the steamer was completed and triad of it made.

The following graphic account of this event, by an eye witness, was published in the Montreal Star in 1881:

"In 1818, John D. Ward, an American, a quiet, sober-faced young man, arrived in this city and went to work in Allison, Turner & Co.'s foundry, and being very enterprising, established the next year the Eagle Foundry for himself. He spent a week in sounding the channel above the city, and declared a boat could be built which would go to Laprairie. He got a few capitalists interested in the matter, and a steamboat was built under his directions, he himself constructing the engine. One fine afternoon in the summer of 1819 it was announced that the steamboat "Montreal" would make a trip to Laprairie and back, and a great crowd assembled on the river-bank, every one, even old John Molson, saying she would never make the passage. She started, however, and after two or three hours' watching by the incredulous crowd, it was seen that she had passed the "Trois Roches" and reached her destination. It was then said that she would strand on her downward passage, but she arrived safely, and steamboats have run regularly to Laprairie during the summer season ever since."

It is not difficult to see what an influence such a success would exert on the future of Mr. Ward, and how it gave shape to his after-years of usefulness in the profession which he had adopted, and to which he was thenceforth to devote the energies of his life. The reputation gained by this first achievement was confirmed by others of more actual importance, and Mr. Ward became, by universal consent, the highest authority in Canada upon all mechanical subjects. He remained at the head of the Eagle Foundry until 1829, when, relinquishing it to his brothers, whom he had some years before associated with him in the business, he returned to the United States, and settled in Vermont, where he proceeded at once to build up large works at Vergennes for the production of crude iron and castings. These works he sold advantageously a few years later, and sought a larger stage of action in the city of New York, where for some years he was the senior partner in the Novelty Iron Works, then the leading engineering establishment of America. He was, almost simultaneously with his removal to New York, appointed by Governor Seward one of the commissioners for the introduction of the Croton water into that city, an enterprise in which he took an active and important part. Subsequently he removed to Jersey City, where he established the Atlas Foundry, and was the founder of the Jersey City Water-Works, to which his name and memory will forever be attached.

In many respects Mr. Ward was a remarkable man. It has been truly said of him that his "scientific, mechanical and business traits were calculated to give him prominence in any community. He was influenced by the highest motives of integrity and honor. Punctual and exact in all his dealings, he expected and demanded the same of others. He was a great disciplinarian. Everything went by rule." He took a deep interest in public affairs; but, though always ready to lend his time and talents for the benefit of the community in which he lived, he declined, as a rule, to be a candidate for public honors, and during a residence in Jersey City of nearly thirty years, only yielded once to the persuasions of his friends so far as to serve a term in the State Legislature. He was a clear, forcible and accurate writer, and his professional reports and occasional papers were models of composition. His ambition lay in the pursuit of science, and few sons of New Jersey have won a more enviable fame.

Fire Department.—The paid Fire Department of Jersey City was organized June 6, 1871, quickly succeeding the consolidation of the cities. John Coyle was the first chief. From the time of its organization to the present the department has undergone numerous improvements and increased in efficiency and discipline. The following persons have served as commissioners: John Boyd, Alonzo B. Dean, Dudley S. Gregory, Jr., Thomas W. Tilden, John H. Carnes, John B. Drayton, Samuel W. Stibing, Thomas Speers, John S. Edwards, William A. Fisher, Frederick P. Budden, Jacob J. Van Riper, Charles Parsons, James Meehan, Charles L. Krugler, Edward O'Donnell, Henry Windecker, Andrew J. Martin, John McDonough, Bernard McCarty, Thomas Leather, Charles A. Roe, Simeon M. Ayres, John Brennan, John Egan, Michael Kuntz, Caspar J. Speck, Gideon Isley, James H. Henderson. The chief engineers have been John Coyle, Jacob J. Van Riper and Henry E. Farrier, and the assistants in succession Thomas Leather, Thomas Mahoney and John T. Denmead. The following-named have served as clerks of the Board of Fire Commissioners: John T. Denmead, James Doremus and John I. Van Alst, Jr., the present incumbent.

The present force of the department consists of six commissioners, one clerk, one chief engineer, one assistant engineer, one superintendent of telegraph, one inspector of horses, one telegraph lineman, eleven engineers, ten stokers, twenty-one drivers, five tillermen, eleven permanent hosemen, ten permanent truckmen, sixteen foremen and one hundred and twelve men at call.

The apparatus of the department consists of ten steam fire-engines, one double-tank chemical engine, eleven hose-tenders, five hook-and-ladder trucks and one steamer, one tender and one truck in reserve.

The fire-alarm telegraph is run upon the Gamewell system. Sixty-four signal boxes are distributed throughout the city, and there are four large bells in towers located at proper places for the purpose of ringing general alarms.

The officers and men attached to the department are as follows: Henry E. Farrier, chief engineer; John T. Denmead, assistant engineer; Peter F. Fallon, superintendent of telegraph; William E. J. Saunders, V. S., inspector of horses; Peter Danhart, telegraph lineman; Henry T. Lee, driver of supply wagon; Charles H. Mullikin, headquarters stableman.

The several companies are constituted as follows:

ENGINE COMPANY No. 1.—Warren Street, near Morgan. Michael Hughes, foreman; Edward Snook, engineer; John Hayes, stoker; Michael Boyd, driver; Owen Fagan, permanent hoseman; James J. O'Leary, James M. Keefe, John P. Ferris, William F. Hunt, John Barry, Thomas Kelly, Patrick H. Carroll, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 2.—Market Street, near Walling. Joseph Burke, foreman; William J. Innes, engineer; John M. Jacobi, stoker; Michael Linnin, driver; James A. Gilman, permanent hoseman; Charles Bergman, John Booth, William Cullen, H. Kretschmer, M. Kellmann, Patrick H. Moore, Charles Gierow, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 3.—Moore Street, near Grove. William W. Sanderson, foreman; George F. Egler, engineer; Robert Brennan, stoker; Thomas Dillon, driver; John Culbert, permanent hoseman; George Sanderson, Henry Ross, Benjamin Rabbin, Samuel Wright, Benjamin F. Wilford, E. E. Johnson, Charles P. Naimfy, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 4.—First Street, near Canal. Jacob Van Winkle, foreman; Daniel Donahue, engineer; George Murdock, driver of engine; James B. Reddell, driver of tender; E. F. Dalton, permanent hoseman; Louis Meyers, Henry Joel, James Smathers, Andrew Dingler, Peter Hulshart, James R. Solomon, George B. Becker, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 5.—Sixth Street, near Coles. Benjamin M. King, foreman; Daniel Akley, engineer; Thomas Andrews, stoker; William Lutner, driver; Samuel P. Smith, Jr., permanent hoseman; George W. Thorn, Henry Z. Neibert, Lewis H. Morison, George G. Stevens, Charles Harrington, George H. Williams, Thomas Z. Leather, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 6.—Henderson Street, near Twelfth. James H. Cook, foreman; Thomas Knecht, engineer; Matthew Bligh, stoker; John Coughlin, driver; David Buxton, permanent hoseman; James Moulds, John Gaulton, John Swinesey, Joseph F. Marky, George Adams, Henry McNally, Thomas K. Harwood, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 7.—Summit Avenue, near St. Paul's. Jacob Harrison, foreman; Alfred Gilbert, engineer; Samuel Wilkins, stoker; Michael E. Connolly, driver; Lyman J. Quackebush, driver of tender; H. Greenleaf, C. Figg, Benjamin Locke, G. Rothberger, F. Book, Thomas Allen, Richard Dynes, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 8.—Ege Avenue, near Ocean Avenue. Frank Cleveland, foreman; John Hagan, engineer; John C. Smith, stoker; William H. Kuyper, driver; John Dimerson, driver of tender; Charles Erbe, permanent hoseman; Frederick Elwert, John R. Yail, J. Gooey, George Birk, August Ulrich, John Bauer, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 9.—Clymer Berghol and Duncau Avenues. John C. Archibald, foreman; E. B. Couenhoven, engineer; Evan T. Rogers, stoker; John W. Hudson, driver; Christian Bruene, permanent hoseman; William H. Tice, James Bulger, John T. Green, Ralph Jones, Robert Wright, John E. Jones, John H. Masker, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 10.—Holliday Street, near Conimpaw Avenue. W. Hudson Lovell, foreman; Charles W. Jace, engineer; Jefferson Lovell, stoker; Charles Fish, driver; George Cowper, permanent hoseman; Theodore Zumbusch, Henry C. Dula, Henry P. Wittmann, James English, Thomas E. Shields, Julius E. Steffens, Frank P. Schroder, hosemen at call.

ENGINE COMPANY No. 11.—South Street, near Central Avenue. Frederick Hartman, foreman; Charles H. Hall, engineer; William Smith, stoker; John W. Fontan, driver; William M. Murray, permanent hoseman; E. A. Leichter, G. J. Elwood, P. Blenn, Edgar Perkus, Peter Benhart, Andrew Garhart, John Brewer, hosemen at call.

HOOK-AND-LADDER COMPANY, No. 1.—Corner of Grand and Van Vorst Streets. Charles H. Scott, foreman; Henry O. Chase, tillerman; George H. Quinn, driver; P. J. Isoney, James 1896, permanent truckmen; S. Piercy, J. Gibson, G. W. McCarthy, George Kallman, S. Blakey, Thomas J. Hubbell, Andrew Farley, truckmen at call.

HOOK-AND-LADDER COMPANY No. 2.—Ninth Street, near Grove. John Bill, foreman; Charles Clark, tillerman; Hermann Forstner, driver; Charles C. Bunnell, James Hagan, permanent truckmen; Jerome Rappaport, Frederick Schott, Anton Reutter, Jr., F. E. Newman, Daniel Lockrides, James Kwogon, Charles R. Cresvey, truckmen at call.

HOOK-AND-LADDER COMPANY No. 3.—Webster Avenue, near Franklin Street. James Young, foreman; John C. Martin, tillerman; Rudolph Braun, driver; John W. Oetigan, John C. Bruhn, permanent truckmen; Henry Meuche, Charles Radiger, J. Wiltmer, A. Shippert, H. Bruchel, William R. Morgan, Louis Shresh, truckmen at call.

HOOK-AND-LADDER COMPANY No. 4.—Danforth Avenue, near Bergen Avenue. James Henderson, foreman; Philip Seaman, tillerman; Joseph Saffron, driver; William E. Brown, Charles H. Young, permanent truckmen; E. Bish of J. Arnold, G. Seigner, J. Wharton, C. Behring, F. Bellman, W. Birmell, truckmen at call.

HOOK-AND-LADDER COMPANY No. 5.—Communipaw Avenue, near Monticello Avenue. William Twiss, foreman; Thomas Stratton, tillerman; Cornelius Westervelt, driver; Henry Kaiser, John Tyson, permanent truckmen; J. Hotherings-a. F. Meyers, Robert H. Tripp, C. Duffield-ker, Benjamin H. Vail, Frederick Ebon, Charles Hamilton, truckmen at call.

Central Stock-Yards and Transit Company.—The immense aggregation of cattle-yards, pens, sheds slaughter-houses, refrigerating buildings and numerous other annexes forms one of the most important business establishments in the state. The place is commonly known as the "Alatoir," and was originally located at Communipaw, it being established there in October, 1866. In consequence of the increase of business, more convenient quarters were required. The present location, on the shore of Harsimus Cove, at the foot of Sixth Street, Jersey City, was selected, and the works removed to that place in January, 1874, where they cover a vast area of land and water, the entire construction being on the most improved scientific principles.

No more healthy locality for the production of wholesome human food could possibly be found in or near the city. The works are far removed and completely isolated from other buildings, and thoroughly ventilated.

Some idea may be formed of the extent of business transacted here when it is known that more than one thousand beef cattle, thirteen hundred sheep and two thousand hogs reach the yard daily.

Homes and Asylums—HOME FOR AGED WOMEN.—This institution was incorporated Feb. 13, 1868, by Anne E. Miller, Irene Wilbur, Katharine J. Sauzade, Mary S. Williamson, Harriet W. Ames, Aurinthia Doremus, Mary F. Hongland, Maria B. Mason, Cordelia McElroy, Sarah J. Morrow, Anna L. Olendorf, Sophia A. Van Vorst, Eliza A. Van De Venter, Abby A. Weaver, Ednah C. Woolsey and Emily H. Van Vorst. The society owns property at 46 Wayne Street, but is soon to occupy a new home upon the Heights. Dr. Van Vorst is the attending physician. The control of the institution is vested in the following officers, viz.:

First Directress, Mrs. Anne E. Miller; Second Directress, Miss M. E. Craig; Secretary, Mrs. Mary L. Williamson; Treasurer, Miss F. D. Booraem; Managers, Mrs. C. McM. Bailey, Mrs. Letitia A. Cronham, Mrs. A. P. St. John, Mrs. C. A. DeWitt, Mrs. J. S. Richardson, Mrs. S. A. Dickinson, Mrs. C. W. Pendexter, Mrs. F. C. Barlow, Mrs. Robert G. Lyle, Mrs. Charles T. Shone, Miss Gertrude Van Winkle, Miss J. E. Bunce; Collectors, Miss C. M. Earle, Mrs. Harriet E. Metcalf; Advisory Committee, Mr. James A. Williamson, Mr. Thomas Earle, Mr. Joseph F. Randolph, Mr. H. A. Booraem; Matron, Miss M. C. Dealey.

THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND SOCIETY was incorporated

by act of Nov. 22, 1864, the incorporators being John Armstrong, Edward F. C. Young, Charles E. Gregory, Alexander H. Wallis, Michael Lienau, Elias B. Bishop, Jr., Benjamin G. Clark, James Gopsill, John Olendorf, John A. Kingsbury, John W. Schanck, Theodore F. Randolph, Jacob R. Seluyler, Abraham Hooley, Jr., John H. Carnes, James A. Williamson, Alfredrick S. Hatch, John Owen Rouse, Joseph Colgate, Edgar B. Wakeman and Hampton A. Courser. The society has been devoted to the care and future welfare of such children committed to their protection as were friendless or whose surroundings were such as to make them objects of charity. The society originally had possession of the building now occupied by the Orphan Asylum of the Sacred Heart, at Pavonia Avenue and Erie Street, but in 1875 removed to the present handsome building erected especially for its asylum, on Glenwood Avenue, on the Heights. The institution will accommodate about eighty children. Drs. Forman and Buffet are the attending physicians. Following are the names of the persons most prominently identified with the support and management of the asylum: Board of Trustees, E. F. C. Young (president), Charles Siedler, Francis Jenkins (vice-presidents), John H. Carnes (secretary), George W. Conklin (treasurer), James A. Williamson, James L. Ogden, Thomas Earle, Peter Henderson, H. J. Hopper, W. T. Evans, George F. Perkins, George W. Clerihew, Thomas J. Pope, Daniel Toffey, George Miller, J. O. Rouse, James Gopsill, Simcon H. Smith, F. S. Emmons, J. D. Gillette. Board of Domestic Control, Mrs. George Miller (president), Mrs. James A. Williamson, Mrs. Amadee Spadone (vice-presidents), Mrs. N. W. Condit (secretary), Mrs. C. K. Dusenbury, Mrs. James Flemming, Mrs. Herman Siegler, Mrs. Francis Jenkins, Mrs. Samuel Barber, Mrs. G. W. Clerihew, Mrs. Thomas J. Pope, Mrs. B. Hingsworth, Mrs. Samuel Forman, Mrs. Daniel Toffey, Mrs. Joseph D. Belle, Mrs. Charles Ward, Mrs. De Vinne, Mrs. S. P. Martin, Mrs. J. K. Pangborn, Miss Julia Pearsall, Miss Allison, Miss Caroline Earle.

THE ORPHAN ASYLUM OF THE SACRED HEART is in St. Michael's (Catholic) parish, and is located at Pavonia Avenue and Erie Streets. It was founded in 1875, and occupies the building which prior to that time was known as the Children's Home. The society carrying on the last-named institution having erected a large building on the Heights, Mr. H. Henwood purchased the vacated property for about thirty thousand dollars, and presented it to St. Michael's Church. It is now held in the name of the Sisters of Charity of St. Elizabeth. The asylum is in charge of Sister Thais, and at present about one hundred and twenty-five children enjoy the benefits of a home within its walls.

ST. MARY'S ASYLUM is a large Catholic institution, on Jersey Avenue, the object of which is to afford a home to orphan children. A select school is also held at this building.

THE HOME OF THE HOMELESS, on Ninth Street, opposite Hamilton Park, is an admirable and useful institution, founded by Mrs. H. M. Dunning, its present superintendent, in March, 1883. Its object is to help respectable men and women who are left with small children. Children can be left at the Home during the day, week or month, and the parent is charged only what he or she may be able to pay. The deficiency is made up by voluntary subscriptions. About two hundred children have been cared for since the Home was opened, and at least fifty mothers have been helped. There are now about twenty-five children who receive the benefit of the Home, and their parents are thus enabled to perform work which would be impossible were they not relieved of the care of their children.

Celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of the Battle of Paulus Hook.—The greatest gala-day which the people of Jersey City ever enjoyed was the 19th of August, 1879, when, in commemoration of "Light-Horse" Harry Lee's audacious attack upon the British at Paulus Hook, a hundred years before, an unusually enthusiastic demonstration was made and a universal holiday indulged in. The chief exercises were instructive as well as enjoyable, and led many who were ignorant in regard to the local event of the Revolution to obtain a knowledge of it, and eventually to learn more of the great struggle which resulted in planting liberty upon the western continent. At sunrise ringing bells, sounding whistles and booming cannon awakened the people of the city and of the western side of New York, and reminded them that the long-looked-for day had come. Every flagstaff in the city threw its banner to the breeze, and the masts and rigging of the ships and steamers on the Jersey side were liberally decked with bunting. Even the ferry-boats were gaily decorated. Business was generally suspended, and at an early hour the streets were alive with men, women and children in their holiday attire. Every incoming train brought reinforcements from the neighboring towns, and early in the forenoon the principal streets were thronged.

The civic exercises of the day opened at the Tabernacle promptly at noon. The church was tastefully festooned with flags and bunting and made bright with flowers. Among the great audience were the following:

Ex-Governor Joseph D. Belle, Hon. John R. McPherson, Hon. L. A. Brigham, Hon. A. A. Hardenbergh, Hon. I. W. Seudder, Hon. Robert Gilchrist, Hon. Rudolph F. Rabe, Hon. Leon Abbott, Hon. John J. Toffey, Hon. Asa W. Fry, Hon. Jonathan Dixon, Hon. B. F. Randolph, Hon. J. N. Davis, Hon. John Garrick, Hon. W. T. Hoffman, Hon. J. Owen Rouse, Hon. T. J. McDonald, Hon. S. W. Stilsing, John G. Fisher, Abraham P. Newkirk, James Reid, John E. Smith, Dr. T. R. Varick, Dr. D. L. Reeve, Dr. William A. Durrie, Dr. William C. Lutkins, Dr. J. H. Vondy, Dr. John D. McGill, Dr. I. S. Quimby, F. O. Matthiessen, H. A. Greene, Amadeo Spadolone, A. Zabriskie, Jacob Ringle, George W. Holme, B. G. Clarke, Hon. Henry Densberry, Hon. G. A. Lilliendahl, Hon. James Stevens, Major D. A. Peloubet, ex-Mayor Charles Seidler, ex-Mayor Henry Traphagen, ex-Mayor Charles H. O'Neill, ex-Mayor Orestes Cleveland, ex-Mayor James Gipsill, ex-Mayor William Clarke, ex-Mayor David S. Manners, ex-Mayor B. F. Sawyer, ex-Mayor G. D. Van Reipen, Hon. Henry Meigs, Hon. William B. Ranken, James H. Love, Rev. C. H. Benson, E. W. Kingsland, Marcus Beach, John Mullins, M. M. Drchan, Isaac Tausig, Simon H. Smith, Jeremiah Sweeney, Henry Puttoerg, Edward O'Donnell, John McDonough, Bernard McCarty, Thomas Leather, Simon M. Ayres, Charles A. Roe, F. W. Wright, John Q. Bird, John S. Smith, David C. Joyce, Charles Stier, Otto W. Meyer, Edward P. Eastwick, J. H. Gautier, Benjamin Gregory, Charles Somers, E. M. Pritchard, W. Harvey Waite, Peter Henderson, Patrick Sheeran, J. F. Cradall, E. O. Chapman, James R. Thompson, Matthew Armstrong, David Taylor, George W. Clerihew, Charles H. Murray, Walter Neilson, John A. Blair, B. W. Throckmorton, H. A. Booram, I. S. Long, I. I. Vanderbeek, Smith W. Haines, William D. Garretson, Samuel M. Chambers, Charles L. Krugler, John Coyle, H. H. Farrier, James M. Brann, John Hart, J. W. Knause, William Buck, James McCrae, William Hogenemp, Robert Bumsted, William King, William Hughes, P. F. Mesebutt, Garret Haley, Jr., John McLaughlin, Stephen Yoc, Benjamin Van Keuren, H. R. Vredland, Lewis E. Wood, M. W. Kelly, Michael Reardon, Thomas Reilly, Frederick Payne, Thomas Doran, William F. Kern, C. A. Woolsey, E. N. Wilson, John G. Berrian, Hiram Wallis, Hayward Turner, J. B. Cleveland, Lyman Fisk, M. Mullone, Alexander Bennell, Louis A. Leinau, Henr. Lembeck, James Flemming, F. G. Wolbert, John E. Scott, Alexander T. McGill, Henry S. White, William A. Lewis, Benjamin Edge, William Muirheid, H. R. Clarke, James B. Vredenburgh, Peter Bentley, E. W. Kingsland, Jr., George H. Farrier, E. C. Wolbert, John W. Harrison, Robert C. Baoot, F. K. Pangborn, E. F. Emmons, Hudson Clarke, F. P. Budden, Gilbert Collins, A. D. Joslin, Frank Stevens, Thomas S. Negus, Charles H. Hartshorne, George W. Edge, E. F. C. Young, William Pearsall, John H. Cable, Flavel Mc-Gee, H. E. Hamilton, William Taylor, William R. Laird, D. E. Culver, D. C. McNaughton.

Mayor Henry J. Hopper presided, and after prayer by Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef, D.D., he made the opening address. He was followed by James B. Vredenburgh, Esq., and then the platform was occupied by the Hon. Charles H. Winfield, who delivered the principal oration of the day, the historical account of the battle of Paulus Hook (which is reproduced in this work). B. W. Throckmorton, Esq., delivered a brief address, and the exercises were concluded with the benediction, pronounced by Rev. R. M. Abercrombie, dean of the diocese of New Jersey.

The parade of civic and military organizations, the Police and Fire Departments, at 3.30 o'clock P.M., was probably the most popular feature of the day's programme. At an early hour the various organizations that intended to participate in it assembled at their respective rendezvous and mustered. Maj. Gen. John Ramsey, the marshal of the occasion, established his headquarters at Taylor's Hotel, where he received reports and issued orders to the detachments under his control. He was assisted by a staff consisting of Maj. D. A. Peloubet and Capt. William B. Mason, Frederick T. Farrier, Robert Clark, Henry E. Farrier, Thomas J. Armstrong, Roderick B. Seymour, Frederick Payne, L. E. Brown and Michael Nathan. Caspar Speck acted as staff bugler. At half-past two o'clock the different organizations marched to the ground assigned to them and effected their formations. The first division, Col. Dudley S. Steele commanding, with staff, formed with its infantry on Grand Street, right resting on Washington Street, the artillery on Mercer Street, right resting on Henderson Street, and the carriages on Washington Street, right resting on the south side of Grand Street. The second division, Marshal William A. Fisher commanding, formed in Sussex Street, right resting on Washington Street. The third division, Col. John G. Fisher commanding, formed on York Street, right resting on the west side of Washington Street. The fourth division, Chief of Police Murphy commanding, formed on Washington Street, the right resting on Grand Street. The fifth division, Capt. John Hart commanding, formed on Newark Avenue. The sixth division, Chief Coyle commanding, formed in Bright Street, right resting on Grove.

Maj. Gen. Hancock, though prevented by his other engagements from being present, sent three companies of the Third and one company of the First United States Infantry from Governor's Island, under Maj. Gibson. They presented a magnificent appearance, and their execution of the manual excited general admiration among the throng of spectators that assembled to witness the exhibition. One battery of Bragg's artillery from Fort Hamilton was also in attendance, and contributed largely to the military effect of the parade.

At three o'clock Marshal Ramsey and his aids rode to the head of the first division, and the march commenced. The procession passed through Washington Street to Sussex, to Greene, up Montgomery to Newark Avenue, thence through Grove Street to Ninth, around Hamilton Square into Jersey Avenue, to Mercer Street, to Barrow, to Grand, thence to Washington Street, where the commands were dismissed.

The reviewing stand had been erected across Fourth

Street at the junction of Jersey Avenue, and was handsomely draped with flags, streamers and bunting of every description. The windows of the houses along the line of march, and especially opposite the stand, were occupied by ladies in brilliant costumes. On the grand stand were Mayor Hopper, Maj. Gen. Mott, Maj. Gen. Ward, Hon. A. A. Hardenbergh, ex-Governor Price, Aldermen Wood and Reardon, Freeholders Gannon, Dean, McArdle and O'Grady, Mayor Besson, of Hoboken, the committee of arrangements (F. G. Wolbert, George H. Farrier and B. W. Throckmorton) and a large number of the members of the municipal government of this city and Hoboken.

The parade, preceded by Sergt. Wilson and a platoon of police, marched past in the following order:

Marshal John Ramsey and Staff.

First Division.

Col. Dudley S. Steele commanding, with Staff.
Band.

Fourth Regiment National Guard, commanding Lieut.-Col. W. B. Shaffer.

Ninth Regiment Band.

Ninth Regiment National Guard, Col. B. F. Hart, commanding.

Jersey City Schutz Corps, Capt. B. Lippmann.

Regular Infantry, Maj. Gibson commanding.

Battery, Second Regiment, U. S. A., Capt. Sinclair.

Capt. Ehler's Battery.

Carriages containing Guests and Committee of Arrangements.

Second Division.

Marshal William A. Fisher and Aids.

Fink's Band.

Washington Battalion, No. 1, Uniformed Patriarchs.

Lodges of I. O. of O. F. of the Third, Fourth and Fifth Districts.

Washington Band, Chapter No. 4, Patriotic Sons of America.

Third Division.

Marshal John G. Fisher and Staff.

Muller's Band.

Van Houten, Wilson, Thomas, Zabriskie and Ellsworth Posts, G. A. R., forming One Battalion.

Veteran Battalion, commanded by F. T. Farrier.

Van Houten Cadets.

Wilson Guard.

Fourth Division.

Benjamin Murphy commanding.

Muller's Band.

Carriages containing the Police Commissioners, Clerk McAglion and ex-Sheriff Lavery.

Police Department.

Jersey City Grocers' Association, Capt. H. F. Newman.

Jersey City Turners.

Fifth Division.

Fink's Band.

Hibernia Rifles, Capt. John Hart.

Emerald Zouaves, Capt. Richard Gill.

Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Sixth Division.

Blanchard's Band.

Carriages containing the Fire Commissioners, Clerk Doreans and Superintendent Ashhurst.

Superintendent Ashhurst.

Fire Department, commanded by its Chief, John Coyle.

The crush of people at the reviewing stand was very great, and at one time it seemed as if a serious accident was inevitable. Several women were nearly crushed to death, and many of them who were carrying babies handed up the little ones to gentlemen on the platform for protection. Sergt. Wilson, however, succeeded finally in forcing back the crowd, and opened a passage for the procession. Most of the detachments marched sixteen file front, and it is computed that nearly five thousand must have been engaged in the parade.

After the parade a collation was served at Taylor's Hotel to a large number of guests invited by the committee. Toasts were there responded to by Col. D. S. Gregory, ex-Governor Price, A. A. Hardenbergh, Esq., Rev. Dr. Abercrombie, Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, Mayor Hopper, Maj. D. A. Peloubet, Maj. Gen. Ramsey, Hon. John A. Blair and others, and Capt. George H. Farrier read an original poem of much merit.

In the evening a grand display of fireworks was made, and thus the festivities were concluded.

The Heroes of Paulus Hook.—Following are sketches of the heroes of the affair at Paulus Hook, taken from the memorial pamphlet published soon after the centennial celebration of the event.

Henry Lee

"LIGHT-HORSE HARRY LEE."—Henry Lee was born in Westmoreland County, Va., Jan. 29, 1756. He received his early education from a private tutor, and was afterwards sent to Princeton College, New Jersey, where he graduated in 1774.

Though young, at the breaking out of the Revolution, he at once espoused the cause of the colonists, and soon became noted, under the soubriquet of "Light-Horse Harry," as one of the most vigilant, daring and successful cavalry officers. His troop of horse,

"Lee's Legion," were famed throughout the land for their fearless bravery, as well as for their sterling patriotism, and it was undoubtedly the most courageous and effective body of troops raised by the struggling patriots. In the famous retreat of Gen. Greene before Lord Cornwallis, it formed the rear-guard, the post of honor, and covered itself and its intrepid leader with glory; at the battles of Guilford Court-House and Eutaw Springs the corps were particularly distinguished; Lee's signal bravery at the sieges of Forts Watson, Grierson, Motte, Granby and Augusta made his name conspicuous where all were brave, and through Georgia and the Carolinas is, to this day, a synonym for fearless courage and intrepid leadership.

At the age of twenty-three he led the attack on Paulus Hook, one of the most daring and brilliant events of the war; so hazardous was the attempt considered that Washington's prudence and caution gave but a half-willing consent to it. Lee's energy and skill carried it through successfully; with less than two hundred men, he surprised the British works and brought off one hundred and sixty prisoners, although the forts were covered by the guns of the enemy's fleet lying in the bay, and was within a short distance of their headquarters in New York. Congress quickly appreciated the value of the achievement, and one month subsequently voted a gold medal and resolutions of thanks to Lee, and also thanked those engaged with him in the enterprise.

After the war he was sent to Congress as a delegate from his native State; he soon became eminent as a debater, and was instrumental in the adoption of the Federal Constitution. In 1792 he was elected Governor of Virginia, and his administration was marked by wisdom and prudence. He was an eloquent speaker, and was chosen to deliver the public oration at the obsequies of Washington, extracts from which might, with impartial justice, be applied to himself:

"How, my fellow-citizens," said he, "shall I signal to your faithful hearts his pre-eminent worth? Where shall I begin, in opening to your view a character throughout sublime? Shall I speak of his warlike achievements, all springing from obedience to his country's good? . . . He commiserated folly, dismayed treason, and invigorated despondency. . . . He was second to none in the humble and endearing scenes of private life. Pious, just, humane, temperate and sincere; uniform, dignified and commanding; his example edifying to all around him, as were the effects of that example lasting. To his equals he was condescending, to his inferiors kind, and to the dear objects of his affection exemplarily tender. Correct throughout, vice shuddered in his presence, and virtue always felt his fostering hand; the purity of his private character gave effulgence to his public virtues."

He was also the author of the resolutions passed by Congress on the demise of Washington, in which originated the glowing eulogium which has since become so familiar, "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

To few men are given talents so varied, and fewer still use them so worthily. His whole life was devoted to his country. He was a deep thinker and trenchant writer, and in 1809 published a valuable work entitled "Memoirs of the War in the Southern Department of the United States," which had a wide circulation, and is now highly prized by all students of Revolutionary history. In 1812 he was lauded for the remainder of his life while striving, during a riot in Baltimore, to protect the life, and property of a friend; Gen. Lingan, who was with him at the time, being killed.

Lee's eventful life peaceably closed at Cumberland Island, Ga., March 25, 1818. He was a devout Christian, a firm patriot, a brave soldier, a learned scholar, a wise statesman and a kind parent; not a meteor, whose sudden brilliancy dazzles for a moment and leaves the succeeding darkness more profound, but a star whose radiance scintillates across the page of history.

Stirling

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING.—There are few of our Revolutionary generals about whom so little is known as Lord Stirling. To attribute a reason for this fact is difficult, unless it be explainable by his dying in the last year of the war; for his services to his native country and adopted State were so many and devoted as to entitle him to a far higher position than is accorded him.

His father, James Alexander, a native of Scotland, in consequence of being involved in the political disturbances of his time, came to this country in 1716, and shortly after received an appointment under the crown in the office of the secretary of the province of New York. He soon became prominent, and, with Benjamin Franklin, Francis Hopkinson and others, founded the American Philosophical Society.

William Alexander, his only son, the subject of this memoir, was born in New York City in 1726. He received an ordinary school education, with private tuition from his father, commencing life as clerk to his mother, and subsequently entering into partnership with her. The firm supplied the king's troops with clothing and provisions, and he thus became acquainted with many army officers, acquiring by this association a knowledge and love of the military art. Being offered the position of aid-de-camp and private secretary to Gen. Shirley, then commander-in-chief, he accepted it, and served in that capacity during the French and Indian campaigns.

In 1756 he accompanied Gen. Shirley to England, where he won the friendship of many of the statesmen and nobles of the kingdom, particularly the Duke of Argyll and the Earl of Bute, and was advised by them to assert his hereditary right to the vacant earldom of Stirling, in Scotland. We cannot in this brief sketch give the reasons why he failed to establish his claims; but probably his sympathy with the colonists, who had begun to remonstrate against the arbitrary acts of the crown, finally prevented his being awarded the title and estates which belonged to him.

Lord Stirling returned to America in 1761, and settled in New Jersey, making Basking Ridge, Somerset Co., his home. Being elected to the Provincial Council of the State shortly afterwards, he was one of the first to oppose the odious Stamp Act, and warmly defended the rights of the colonists. Upon the organization of the independent State government, two battalions of infantry were ordered to be raised, and Stirling was appointed to the command of the first, with the rank of colonel. The language of his first "General Order," dated Oct. 18, 1775, is unique; we extract the following from it:

"Every man to bring with him the best arms he can; and those who have no firelocks are, notwithstanding, desired to attend, as other arms will be furnished for them."

The arms were furnished at his own expense. He was soon after commissioned by Congress and received orders to watch the British forces around New York City, during the performance of which duty he was in constant correspondence with President John Hancock. Congress, on Jan. 29, 1776, passed resolutions of thanks to him for capturing a British armed transport off Staten Island. The same year, while in command of two thousand men, he was made prisoner in the disastrous battle of Long Island, but was exchanged for Gen. Montford Brown.

On Feb. 19, 1777, by recommendation of Washington, he was appointed major-general, and commanded divisions at the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, acting also under the commander-in-chief during the terrible winter of 1776-77, at Valley Forge. He it was who made public the famous conspiracy against Washington—called in the language of the day the “cabal”—initiated by Gen. Conway, Gates and Mifflin, who secretly endeavored to influence leading members of Congress to remove the commander-in-chief on the ground of what they were pleased to term his “Fabian policy.” At the battle of Monmouth, fought June 28, 1778, Gen. Nathaniel Greene commanded the right wing of the American forces, Gen. Lafayette the centre, and Lord Stirling the left. The first attack was made by the British against the latter’s command, who repulsed and drove them on Greene, he repulsing them in return, and they retreated in hot haste during the night to Sandy Hook. After the battle Stirling was detained to preside over the court-martial which tried and condemned Maj. Gen. Charles Lee for disobedience of orders.

In August of the same year he arranged the attack on Paulus Hook, in conjunction with Maj. Henry Lee, for which he received the thanks of Congress. In 1781 he was appointed to command the Northern Department, with headquarters at Albany, N. Y., Washington fearing a British attack from Canada. The second battle of Saratoga was fought by the forces immediately under his command, the enemy soon after retiring from that part of the country.

Lord Stirling died at Albany on Jan. 15, 1783, while in the performance of the active duties of his department. The whole country deplored the loss of so brave and energetic an officer, and the State of New Jersey, most especially, one of its firmest patriots. No man had rendered more efficient service in that grand struggle for liberty. He had commanded every brigade in the Revolutionary army except those of South Carolina and Georgia. He placed his fortune and his life on the altar of his country, and sacrificed both. There are few who have done so much; no man can do more.

Congress, upon being notified of his death, passed the following resolution:

“Resolved, That the President signify to the Commander-in-Chief, in a manner most respectful to the memory of the late Major-General the Earl of Stirling, the sense Congress entertains of the early and meritorious exertions of that General in the common cause, and of the bravery, perseverance and military talents he possessed; who, by having fixed their esteem for him while living, induce a proportionate regret for the loss of an officer who has rendered such constant and important services to his country.”

We cannot close our short memoir of this famous Revolutionary general without showing the estimation in which he was held by Washington. In his letter of condolence to his widow, the Countess of Stirling, the “Father of his Country” writes as follows:

“It only remains, then, as a small but just tribute to the memory of Lord Stirling, to express how deeply I share the common affliction, on being deprived of the public and professional assistance, as well as the private friendship, of an officer of so high rank, with whom I had lived in the strictest habits of amity, and how much those military merits of his Lordship, which rendered him respected in his lifetime, are now regretted by the whole army.

As an eminent author has remarked: “The man thus spoken of by Washington needs no other epitaph or monument.”

“The Lay of Paulus Hook.”—In this connection the following poem by Capt. George H. Farrier, produced on the occasion of the celebration, may properly be inserted:

“THE LAY OF PAULUS HOOK

“In unique placuerit duo”

“Around this spot, where now we hear the busy hum of toil,
Was a battle fought for freedom,—our city’s hallowed soil;
Here patriots the foe repelled, and made a tyrant
That in it will ne’er appear again—late who fight for liberty.

“Where the noble Hudson you can see grandly to the bay,
A strong fleet of British warships at anchor proudly lay;
From the steeples of Manhattan St. George’s banner flew—
It had stood the storm for ages; its might the whole world knew.

“Within that park, whose fountains gush beneath the summer’s sun,
Where rests the weary artisan, his daily labor done,
And the little children prattle as merry as the birds,
Was heard the British revelle, his sentry’s warning words.

“Where points that tapering church spire, the Christian’s way to God,
The red cross proudly fluttered and inspiring legends told,
There on the battlements beneath, their loud-mouthed morning guns
The echoes of the hills awake, and frowned at freedom’s noise.

“Many patriot hearts had yearned to hurl that ensign down,
And oaths were sworn of vengeance ’gainst the emblem of the Crown,
All knew death was failure’s forfeit, time brought at length the day,
And the hero too, to lead them, and well he led the way.

“Famous of the quiet Hackensack the daring band had come,
Few were their numbers, and they marshaled cheered not by life or drum,
The Bergen wood they quickly passed, and throning down the hill,
Woary, footsore, but undismayed, they halted by the mill.

“Stand you ready, men, for orders, our scouts will soon report
If the road is clear before us and all’s still with in the fort,
He may now turn back who wishes, their leader to them said
But to follow all were ready, when fight horse Harry led.

“He thanked them, and with swelling heart knelt on the dewy sod,
And prayed, ‘Lord be our shield to-night, and help Thou us, oh God!’
Thine the power is, only Thine, through Thine comes victory,
And Thy will be done, our Father, Thine all the glory be.”

“Ame!” was softly said by all that fervent voice who heard,
As they calmly stood there waiting their brave commander’s word;
And each pressed his musket firmly against his throbbing heart,
To hold his comrade well in light, all ready for the start.

“They all felt that in the darkness for them was stubborn strife,
Where they thought would meet them many a precious life;
But love of liberty inspired—it moves the mind of man,
And never the heart to sacrifice, as no other purpose can.

“Far on their left Harsimus lay all silent in the night,
The shores of old Communipaw stood forth no quivering light;
The hills of Bergen were behind where many a Tory slept—
Before, the sentry of the foe his lone night-watch kept.

“The quiet came in times subdued like to a muffled drum—
‘Now forward, men, we’ll win to-night or our last battle’s done;
And quickly must the work be done—let no man speak a word,
Nor musket fire, for all depends on bayonet and sword.’

"They hastened o'er the marshy road and reached the strong barred gate,
Which would not open readily, and 'twas dangerous to wait;
So, clearing ditch and abattis, they rushed upon the foe,
'The fort is ours, hurrah! hurrah!' almost without a blow.

"Hurrah for Lee and victory, the Hook is ours to-night!
Take all the prisoners you can, spare those who do not fight;
The morning sun begins to gild the steeples of New York,
The foe swarms o'er the river, and his guns begin to talk.

"We've scourged the lion in his den, and he may snarl and roar,
He'll ne'er feel safe on Jersey soil, as did he heretofore;
Now, as Washington has ordered, we'll secure a safe retreat,
Back to the Hackensack we'll march, and reinforcements meet.'

"'Twas but a little spark, and yet a great blaze from it spread,
Far from hearts that had desponded all doubt and fear soon fled;
Too long they'd feared the tyrant's power, but then blessed Harry Lee,
Who on that August morning taught them how they might be free.

"A hundred years have flown since then, but fingers round this spot,
The spirit which inspired our sires ne'er by their sons forgot;
And often when in dewly strife our starry banner shook
The first to rally round it were the sons of Paulus Hook!"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

JERSEY CITY.

(Continued.)

INDUSTRIES.

In all probability the pioneer mill or manufactory of any kind in or around what is now Jersey City was the old wind-mill built by Isaac Edge. Winfield, in his History of Hudson County, says, "This old landmark was built in 1815 by Isaac Edge, who for a long time was miller and baker for, and distributor of bread to, the people of Jersey City (then Paulus Hook). Burmley & Oakes were the contractors and millwrights who built it. It was conducted in all particulars like the mill of Mr. Edge's father, in Derbyshire, in England. Its location was about seventy-five feet north of Montgomery Street and fifty feet east of Green Street. It was a prominent feature on the Jersey shore. At first the fans on the wings were of canvass, but the severe storm of Sept. 3, 1821, tore them to pieces and broke one of the fans. Then Mr. Edge put in iron fans. When the track of the New Jersey Railroad (now Pennsylvania) was changed from the south side of Montgomery street to its present location in 1839, the mill was taken down, its material put on vessels and conveyed to Town Harbor, Long Island, whence it was taken to Mill Hill, in the town of Southold. Here its walls were reared again, and it started anew upon its old career of usefulness. It was there known as "The Great Western Flouring-Mill." At one time a steam-engine was put in, but it was soon removed and the old machinery restored. It was in use until between one and two o'clock on Saturday morning, June 25, 1870, when it, with two hundred and thirty dollars' worth of grain, was consumed by fire. R. Villeferr was then the owner.

OLD WINDMILL, JERSEY CITY.

ISAAC EDGE.—The influence of the French revolution was strongly felt in England, and many had imbibed the most radical notions of liberty and equality. Isaac Edge, a resident of Derbyshire, where he was born, Feb. 26, 1777, was one of the most pronounced of liberty-loving Englishmen. Finding that his ideas were not congenial to his neighbors or the Tory government, then engaged in a desperate struggle with France, Mr. Edge, with his wife, formerly Miss Frances Ogden, and infant son, came to the United States in 1801. His business was that of miller, in which he engaged shortly after his arrival in South Brooklyn. In the year 1806 he came to reside permanently in Jersey City, then known as Paulus Hook. At that time there were but three houses in what is now old Jersey City,—the tavern kept by Maj. Hunt, near the ferry at the foot of Grand Street, or terminus of the Newark turnpike; the house of Richard Lyon, near the corner of York and Greene Streets, and the barracks. Mr. Edge started a bakery, and soon did a large business. In those days life in Paulus Hook was simple and quiet. The river washed the sand-hill on the top of which the old fort had been built in the Revolution, and the meadow which lay between it and Ahasimus was crossed by but one road (known as the Causeway) now Newark Avenue. Mr. Edge was naturalized Jan. 26, 1810. He built, near the corner of York and Greene Streets, a residence for himself, and lived in it till it was destroyed by fire, in 1811; he rebuilt it, and the building is now standing. He served as a private soldier during the last war with England, and although not continuously away with the army, at various times he performed active duty in the neighborhood of New York.

Isaac Edge

Always busy and energetic, he received from the Associates a grant of the block of ground where the Pennsylvania Railroad depot is now built, and commenced the erection of a large wind-mill about one hundred feet east of the present line of Greene Street, which he completed about the year 1815. Mr. Edge imported the mill-stones and machinery, and for years the mill maintained its reputation for the superior quality of its flour and meal. The great September gale in 1821 almost destroyed the mill and seriously damaged the bulkheads, so that Mr. Edge was almost ruined financially, but he restored and improved the mill with iron fans, and it worked till 1839. To make place for the railroad track, it was removed to Southhold, L. I., where it remained until within a few years. A fire finished the work of the mill, and left its reputation to tradition. For years Edge's mill served as a landmark for those approaching New York by the river or from the sea, and it is yet remembered as a distinguishing feature of the landscape at that time by many now living, who would hardly feel complimented if classed among the oldest inhabitants. Mr. Edge lost his wife, formerly Frances Ogden, to whom he was married in Chesterfield, England, and by whom he had eight children, six living at her death. She died in 1859 at the age of sixty-two years. After the death of his wife Mr. Edge was not engaged in active business. He was a great reader and independent thinker, and having an extraordinary memory as a controversialist, he was held in high respect among his neighbors and friends.

Jersey City had grown from a hamlet with a few scattered houses to a large, flourishing city. The rail-car had supplanted the stage-coach, and the steamer the easy-going sailing-vessel. It took Mr. Edge thirteen weeks to cross the ocean, a journey he lived to see a Cunarder perform to Jersey City in eleven days.

For years Mr. Edge passed a quiet, retired life surrounded by his family. His sons Isaac and Joseph were married, and each had brought up a large family; and his daughter Alice had married James Flemming; so, surrounded by his children and grandchildren, Mr. Edge passed the closing years of his life, and on the 7th day of July, 1851, he died at Jersey City, after a continuous residence there of nearly fifty years. He left surviving him his sons Isaac, Benjamin, Washington and Joseph, and his daughters Alice Flemming and Elizabeth Edge, all of whom are now dead except Miss Elizabeth Edge, who is still living in Jersey City a quiet life illumined by unobtrusive charities.

Previous to 1839 the manufacturing industries seem to have been limited to two or three individuals, of whom Isaac Edge, proprietor of the wind-mill, was one, and Peter Sandford another. At that time Jersey City had next to no transportation facilities, and nothing to induce capitalists to invest in the manufacture of anything more than for home consumption. All the products of Edge's mill were consumed by the few denizens of the "Hoeck," and Sandford's bridge, and dock business, that had been established ten years earlier (1829), was not known outside of old Bergen County. But upon the advent of the New Jersey Railroad and the Morris and Essex Canal new life was given to the "sand-hills" of the Hoeck yet it was not until 1849 to 1848 that manufacturing enterprises, beyond the old pinners, seem to have taken root in the sandy and marshy grounds of what is now the second city of the State, both as to population and industries.

One after another the railroads, the great populating agencies of the country, began to make the "Hoeck" their terminus; and in 1848 we find that both population and manufacturing industries had increased more than five hundred per cent. since 1829, the date at which Sandford established his works. At present there are a large number of manufacturing establishments of all grades of the various branches of industries, of which we herewith give a few of the leading ones.

Manufacturing Establishments.—LORILLARD'S SNUFF AND TOBACCO MANUFACTORY.—One of the oldest business houses in the country, and the largest manufacturing establishment on the Western Hemisphere, is that of the well-known firm of P. Lorillard & Co. It was founded in 1760 as a snuff-factory, and through the long period of over one hundred and twenty-four years it has been gradually growing in importance, increasing its business and facilities for manufacture, until it stands to-day almost unrivaled as a business concern in the whole world. The factories cover ten acres of ground, extending from Washington to Warren Streets, and from Bay to Second Streets, the buildings being large, high, well-ventilated and lighted, and giving employment to men, women, girls and boys to the number of four thousand, who are kept busily at work, during at least ten months of the year, in the various processes of manufacturing tobacco into the forms in which the smoker, the chewer or the snuff-taker delights to use it. The manufacture of snuff, which is the oldest branch of the business, amounts to about one million two hundred thousand dollars annually. It takes from six to eight months to cure the leaf and bring the product into a condition fit for the market, but none is sold until a full year has elapsed from the first steps towards its manufacture.

Another extensive branch of the works is that devoted to making plug tobacco, in which several hundred women and girls are constantly engaged in "stemming," or stripping the leaf from the stem. Automatic machines press the tobacco into shape and cut the plugs into required sizes and weights, after which hydraulic pressure is used to make them hard and compact, as they reach the hands of the consumer. Some idea of the volume of business in this department may be had when it is remembered that two hundred pounds of plug tobacco alone are manufactured every minute, or one hundred and twenty thousand pounds daily. Nearly two millions of dollars revenue tax is annually paid to the United States government, and before the revision of the revenue laws, two years ago, Uncle Samuel's yearly income from this establishment was three millions five hundred thousand dollars. Twenty-nine millions in taxes have been paid to the government within the past fifteen years by P. Lorillard & Co. Out of one hundred and twenty-five million pounds of tobacco consumed in this country annually, about twenty-two million pounds are manufactured by this firm, and it is further calculated that, as the average consumption of tobacco for each person is about two pounds and a half, nine million people may be said to use the product of the Lorillards. The capacity of the works is forty million pounds per annum. Of course, in such a large establishment extraordinary precautions are necessary to protect the lives of the inmates in case of fire. A well-drilled fire brigade is maintained, and at night a corps of thirteen watchmen is on duty, under command of Capt. Robert P. Dixon. There are one hundred and sixty signal-stations, to which each watchman has to make the rounds during the night. Every room is provided with water-pipes running along the ceiling, with plugs, at short distances apart, of metal fusible at a low temperature, so that in case of fire breaking out that portion of the room where the temperature was above the fusing-point would instantly be deluged with water.

In the absence of any provision by the Jersey City Board of Education for the maintenance of free evening-schools, the Messrs. Lorillard have organized a night-school for the two hundred and fifty children in their employ, in order that they may still continue at work without losing the advantages of an education. The school was formally opened in the main library-room in Booraem Hall, on the 29th of September, 1884, under the charge of Dr. L. S. Gordon. A principal has been engaged, and all the children employed in the factory are enrolled in the school. This is done to meet the requirements of the State law, which provides that no child between the ages of twelve and fifteen years shall be employed in any factory, workshop, mine or establishment, where the manufacture of any kind of goods whatever is carried on, unless such child shall have attended within twelve months immediately preceding such employment some public day or night-school, or some well-recognized private-school; such attendance to be for five days or evenings every week during a period of at least twelve consecutive weeks.

The firm is composed of Pierre Lorillard, P. Lorillard, Jr., and ex-Mayor Charles Sidler, who holds the position of general manager. Dr. Leonard S. Gordon is the chemist, and acts as physician to the ailing employés. Mr. M. Mason is superintendent of the fine-cut and smoking tobacco department, and Mr. White of the snuff department. The New York office is at No. 114 Water Street.

THE MATTHIESSEN & WIECHERS' SUGAR REFINING COMPANY, formerly the New Jersey Sugar Refining Company, is an immense establishment at the foot of Washington Street, adjoining the canal basin. It was incorporated by a special charter of the New Jersey Legislature, on March 20, 1867, with the following gentlemen as incorporators: Conrad Poppenhusen, Frederick König, Michael Lienan, Henry R. Kunhardt, Herman Stursberg and Johannes Lienan. An organization was effected on April 8th, with the following directors and officers: Henry R. Kunhardt, Hermann Stursberg, Conrad Poppenhusen, Frederick König, Johannes Lienan, Franz O. Matthiessen, William A. Wiechers as directors, F. O. Matthiessen as president, and W. A. Wiechers as secretary and treasurer. The buildings were erected during the years 1867 and 1868, at a cost of five hundred and fourteen thousand dollars. On Feb. 8, 1870, the original name of the New Jersey Sugar Refining Company was changed to that by which the company is now known, and the property of Messrs. Matthiessen & Wiechers was purchased and amalgamated with that of the company.

The works have a capacity for refining one million two hundred thousand pounds of sugar per day, and give employment to about one thousand persons. Mr. Matthiessen is president of the company, Mr. Wiechers vice-president, Mr. J. Jurgensen secretary and treasurer, who, together with E. A. Matthiessen, H. R. Kunhardt, W. R. Elmenhorst and H. E. Niese, constitute a board of directors. The offices of the company are at No. 106 Wall Street, New York City.

THE HAVEMEYER SUGAR REFINING COMPANY has a large establishment in Essex Street. It was organized in August, 1880, with Hector C. Havemeyer, William F. Havemeyer, John E. Searles, Jr., Henry Havemeyer, Charles W. Havemeyer, D. H. Bultmann, E. P. Eastwick and James Havemeyer as trustees. The first officers were Hector C. Havemeyer, president; William F. Havemeyer, vice-president; John E. Searles, Jr., secretary and treasurer. The works were built by Havemeyer, Eastwick & Co. in 1873, at a cost of about three hundred thousand dollars, and were gradually enlarged until 1880, when the amount expended on the buildings reached four hundred and twenty-eight thousand dollars. A fire in November, 1883, damaged the works about sixty thousand dollars. The damaged part was restored, and work resumed in February, 1884.

This house can produce three hundred and fifty thousand pounds of refined sugar daily, and employs about one hundred and fifty hands.

The present officers of the company are H. C. Havemeyer, president; W. F. Havemeyer, vice-president; John E. Searles, Jr., treasurer; C. R. Heike, secretary; D. H. Bultmann, James Havemeyer, Henry Havemeyer and Charles Havemeyer constituting, with the president, vice-president and treasurer, a board of trustees. The New York offices are at No. 112 Wall Street.

NATHANIEL TOOKER'S MOLASSES HOUSE, 56 Hudson Street, has been established about fifteen years. The buildings were added to in 1878, and employment is given to about fifty persons.

COLGATE & COMPANY.—The old established firm of Colgate & Co. is known the world over by its laundry and toilet soaps. It was established in 1806, in John Street, New York, by William Colgate, father of the senior member of the present firm. In the days of its origin soap and candles were commonly manufactured at the same establishment, the fats used being applicable for either purpose. The making of candles is still kept up by the firm, but they are not of the ancient type of tallow. A superior quality of stearin or oriental candles are now made by the Colgates, and are almost exclusively exported to South America. For toilet soaps this house stands pre-eminent, their products being largely exported to Europe, China and South America. The machinery in their factory is claimed to be the most perfect in the world, in support of which it may be stated that they have taken prizes for machine-made soaps over French products made by hand.

About thirty years ago the works were removed to Jersey City, and now cover the whole block bounded by York, Hudson, Greene and Grand Streets, with docks at the foot of Hudson Street, and large storage-yards. The buildings are of brick and five-stories high, and are furnished with three immense iron structures called pans, each with a capacity of from five hundred thousand to six hundred thousand pounds. The annual product amounts to many millions of pounds. In the various departments of the works employment is given to about three hundred persons. In addition to the soap and candle business, this house manufactures a variety of perfumery at their New York house, No. 55 John Street.

The firm is composed of Samuel Bowles Colgate and Richard M. Colgate. They make their own chemicals and do all their own printing, keeping five presses in operation for their labels, wrappers and other necessary printed matter. There is also a special department for making boxes, of which several thousand are turned out daily.

The Steel Manufactures of Jersey City.—The manufacture of steel in this country is of comparatively recent date, and it was not until 1848 that the industry made any mark whatever. Its progress was slow, our citizens being blindly prejudiced in favor of English and other European steel, until the enormous duties on all foreign imports during and subsequent to our civil war compelled them to purchase the home manufacture. They then began to recognize the fact that in this department of industry, as in so many others, America was at all events the peer of her rivals, but so ingrained was the prejudice that our manufacturers of all descriptions of steel goods found it necessary, during a long period, to represent them as of English production.

The present remarkable development of the steel manufacture of the United States is due to a small number of far-seeing, energetic men, and notably to three of our own citizens,—Mr. James L. Thompson and the late David Henderson and Dudley S. Gregory. The two establishments founded by these gentlemen are among the most important of our city's industries.

THE JERSEY CITY STEEL COMPANY.—This extensive establishment giving employment to two hundred men, is situated at the foot of Warren Street, the buildings covering a block and a half. It was established in 1861, and has long been known by the firm-name of James R. Thompson & Co. Under Mr. Thompson's management the business has steadily grown to its present large dimensions, and enlargements have been made from time to time to facilitate the increase of business until the capacity of the works now reaches eight thousand tons of steel, in rods and bars, annually. On the 1st of July, 1884, the firm was merged into a stock company, of which James R. Thompson is president, B. Hingworth vice-president, R. G. Bushnell secretary and D. G. Gantier treasurer.

THE ADIRONDACK STEEL-WORKS, foot of Warren Street, is devoted to the manufacture of crucible steel for a large variety of purposes, such as railroads, cutlery, agricultural implements, etc. It was organized in 1848, and is now run by Andrew Williams, under a lease. The general manager is ex-Mayor H. J. Hopper. The buildings were erected in 1848, and cost in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. One hundred persons are employed in the works, the capacity of which is twelve tons of steel per day.

THE WEST BERGEN STEEL-WORKS.—These works, in West Bergen, Jersey City, were established in the winter of 1880 by the present proprietors, Thomas H. Spaulding and Robert E. Jennings. The location is upon the Newark and New York Branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, a side track of which runs into the yards, facilitating the delivery of supplies and the shipping of the company's manufactures. The location is one of the best in the country. Among the classes of steel made here are those known as tool, tap, die, cutlery, file, spring, roller and spindle. The specialties are cutlery, tool, roller and spindle steel. For the manufacture of the two last-mentioned Messrs. Spaulding and Jennings have appliances controlled by patents, and such has been the excellence of the manufacture that they have secured the greater part of the trade in these lines of goods throughout the country.

Some idea of the extent of the West Bergen Steel Works can be obtained from a few figures. The buildings, four in number, cover the greater portion of five acres of ground. They contain twenty-four melting furnaces, four steel hammers, one train of 18-inch rolls, one train of 10-inch rolls, one train of 9-inch rolls, also one train of 12-inch rolls for cold rolling and a patent disc rolling machine for finishing round steel. The engine power consists of a large horizontal engine of three hundred horse-power, a Westinghouse engine of one hundred and fifty horse-power and a small horizontal engine of seventy-five horse-power. Seven boilers are in use. Electric light is used for night work. From one hundred and thirty-five to one hundred and fifty men find employment here, and with the aggregate power of more than five hundred horses and the superior machinery, turn out about thirty-five hundred tons of crucible steel per year, which is principally sold to New England manufacturers.

Mr. Spaulding, senior partner in the firm owning these works, who was formerly in the woolen commission business in New York, is a son of Henry F. Spaulding, who until recently was the president of the Central Trust Company of New York. Mr. Jennings, who is a native of Rochester, N. Y., from 1871 to the organization of the present partnership had charge of the outside affairs of Benjamin Atha & Co., of Newark.

Miscellaneous Mechanical Industries.—THE WALLIS IRON-WORKS are located at from Nos. 7 to 15 Morris Street. The company was incorporated in 1878 under the general laws of New Jersey with Hamilton Wallis, (president;) William T. Wallis (secretary and treasurer,) and George M. Clapp, as incorporators. The present works were erected in 1881, at a cost of ten thousand dollars. About one hundred men are employed on the average in the various departments of the establishment. The Wallis Works manufacture every variety of architectural iron-work, wrought-iron roofs, bridges, buildings, fire-proof shutters, and all the various parts necessary for large constructions of iron. The New York office is at No. 95 Liberty Street.

THE VULCAN IRON-WORKS.—The speciality of this house is the manufacture of steamboat boilers and machine-work generally. The proprietors are Messrs. McWilliams & Brown, who started the business at 10 and 12 Morris Street in 1883, and in June, 1884, purchased the large machine-shops at Nos. 42 and 41 Hudson Street. The total value of the buildings in Morris Street and of the machinery in the two places will aggregate nearly eighty thousand dollars, and the capacity for production is from half a million dollars upwards annually. The average number of persons employed is one hundred and twenty-five.

THE JERSEY CITY COPPER-WORKS, 66 to 76 Hudson Street, have been under the proprietorship of Thomas Gannon for nearly twenty-five years. He succeeded, in 1860, John Benson, who was the oldest established coppersmith in the country. This establishment manufactures all the apparatus necessary for the refining of sugar or the distillation of rum or alcohol. The stills made here are largely exported to Cuba, Porto Rico, San Domingo, Brazil and other parts of South and Central America. Some of them are monstrous affairs, of a charging capacity of ten thousand gallons. The works employ eighty-five men, and are capable of turning out a million dollars' worth of copper annually.

THE JERSEY CITY SPIKE AND BOLT WORKS, Washington, Morgan and Steuben Streets, manufacture twenty thousand tons of iron spikes for boat, ship and railroad use, bolts, splice-bars, nuts, bar-iron, etc., annually, and employ one hundred and fifty men. The firm is composed of W. & J. H. Ames, who founded the business in 1860.

R. HILLIER'S SON & Co., importers and drug millers, 75 to 79 Hudson Street, have been in the business twenty-three years. They have a large five-story brick building in which the grinding and pulverizing of all kinds of drugs, roots and barks for medicinal purposes is carried on, giving employment to twenty-five persons. The firm is composed of George R. Hillier, Francis A. Moore and Isaac V. S. Hillier. They have an office at 46 Cedar Street, New York.

THE JERSEY CITY MACHINE-WORKS, foot of Morris Street, were established in 1869 by N. B. Cushing for the manufacture of passenger and freight elevators, and machinery of every description for mills, factories, mines, dry-docks, dredging and marine work. The works were rebuilt in 1876. Mr. Cushing employs about eighty men in his shops. The business extends over a large part of the United States, and the value of the annual product is estimated at two hundred thousand dollars.

THE NIAGARA LABORATORY, 82 and 84 Pearl Street, is a large establishment conducted by Messrs. Battelle & Renwick, in the manufacture of saltpetre, in which from fifteen to twenty employes are engaged.

JERSEY CITY PLANING AND MOULDING-MILLS, 306-310 Washington Street, corner of Steuben Street. These mills have been running about twenty years and give employment to thirty-five men. All kinds of wood mouldings, architraves and hand-rails are manufactured, besides which every variety of scroll and straight sawing and turning is done in fine and hard woods. R. A. Knight is the proprietor and F. B. Childester superintendent.

THEODORE SMITH & BROTHER, machinists and boiler makers, foot of Essex Street. This firm has been established about twenty years, and does an extensive business in the construction of boilers and the manufacture and repair of machinery. The building in which the works are carried on was erected in 1879 at a cost of eleven thousand dollars. The capacity of the works is about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars per annum. Employment is given to one hundred and seventy hands.

KEARY BROTHERS, builders, corner of Morgan and Washington Streets, Ely and Seventh Streets, have large shops for the preparation of their work as contractors and house-builders. The firm was started twenty-eight years ago, and in busy times employ from thirty to forty experienced men in all the departments of carpenter-work.

THE STANDARD WOOD-TURNING COMPANY was incorporated in 1880, with Charles Siedler, William J. Tait, L. H. Broome, James Davies, and F. R. Chidester as incorporators. The factory is at 315 and 317 Washington Street, in a building leased by the company. A specialty is made of balusters, which are turned by improved machinery almost automatic in its workings. The company employs forty hands, and can turn out five thousand balusters daily, besides which a large business is done in turning, scroll-sawing and wood-working generally. Charles Siedler is the president, and William J. Tait secretary and treasurer.

L. J. TURNERY, sash and blind manufacturer, 304 Washington Street, has been in the business twenty-five years. He removed from Green Street in 1871, the old shop being torn down to make room for railroad improvements. The present factory has a capacity to turn out one hundred thousand dollars' worth of work in a year, giving employment to twelve persons. In addition to their manufacture, this house deals largely in stock work, such as sashes, doors, etc., from mills in New York State.

L. W. MEGILL, 84 Steuben Street, makes a specialty of stair-building, and employs some fifteen to twenty hands, according to the pressure of business. He has been four years in his present location, and for ten years previous to his removal carried on the same business in Morgan Street. The buildings are rented from the owners.

THE JOSEPH DIXON CRUCIBLE COMPANY.—This widely-known firm was established by the late Mr. Joseph Dixon in 1827. Its immense premises in Jersey City occupy no less than fifty thousand square feet, and are covered with four-story brick buildings, the principal items of manufacture being crucibles for all purposes, stove polish, graphite, axle lubricant, lead-pencils, etc.

The mines of the Dixon Company, at Ticonderoga, N. Y., cover fifteen hundred square acres, their mill there for preparing the ore being sixty feet square and four stories high. Another portion of their property is at Tampa, Fla., whence they obtain cedar-wood for their celebrated pencils. Their steam-mill at Tampa is one hundred feet square. The hands employed by the various branches of the company number over five hundred; but so extensive and improved is their patented machinery that the above figures afford only a small idea of their operations. Their products amount annually to over four million lead-pencils, six million of quarter-pound cakes of stove polish, six hundred tons of axle lubricant, one thousand tons of graphite for other purposes, and nine-tenths of all the crucibles for brass-melting made in the United States.

A. M. DODGE & Co., lumber merchants, Green Street. An important industry of Jersey City is the lumber trade, involving a large capital and employing a great number of work-people in its various departments. One of the leading firms engaged in this business is that of Messrs. A. M. Dodge & Co., whose lumber-yards and docks are the largest in the vicinity, covering nearly three acres, bounded by Green, Bay and Morgan Streets and the Hudson River. The yards are heavily stocked with a large and varied assortment of timber, the growth of the Western and Canadian forests. In the prosecution of their business and for the handling of lumber at their yards and docks the firm requires the services of fifty employes. To guard against the dangers of fire they have adopted every precaution, the employes being regularly organized into a fire brigade, and being familiar with the premises, can readily check a fire as soon as discovered. Throughout the yards and on the docks are six fire hydrants, and there is also a hose-cart carrying five hundred feet of hose. The individual members of the firm are Arthur M. Dodge, Edward K. Meigs and Cleveland H. Dodge, all largely identified with the commercial prosperity of Jersey City.

THE DODGE & BLISS BOX COMPANY.—This company was incorporated and commenced business in 1877, and from modest beginnings has grown to mammoth proportions. The manufactory is extensive, comprising several large, substantial buildings, box-factory and planing-mill, occupying a very large space on the grounds of A. M. Dodge & Co., lumber merchants. The buildings were erected expressly for the purposes of the business, and are furnished with a large quantity of machinery operated by a powerful steam-engine. One hundred and fifty hands are employed in the different departments in the manufacture of packing-boxes of all kinds and sizes for all purposes. The president of the company, Mr. A. M. Dodge, is a senior member of the firm of A. M. Dodge & Co., and the general manager is Mr. D. Bliss. As a precaution against fire, the box-factories and planing mill are well guarded with ten Babcock fire extinguishers, many hundreds of feet of rubber hose, and the Worthington pump, which feeds the steam-boilers, is specially fitted for throwing a powerful stream of water in any direction several hundred feet.

DELOS BLISS.—Mr. Bliss is descended from New England stock, the family having resided for more than three centuries in Massachusetts. Peter Bliss, his grandfather, was born in Rehoboth, in that State, where he was an industrious farmer during his lifetime. He married Miss Mary Perry, and had seventeen children,—nine sons and eight daughters,—of whom George, born also in Rehoboth, in 1799, settled in the place of his birth. He married Charlotte Ames, of Massachusetts, and had nine children,—George W., Francis, Arabella (Mrs. Henry Baldwin), Sarah E. (Mrs. E. Rice), Eliza J. (Mrs. W. S. Edick), Delos, Egerton A. and three who died in infancy. Mr. Bliss on his marriage removed to Truxton, Courtland Co., N. Y., where he purchased a farm and was also extensively engaged in lumbering. Here his son Delos was born on the 26th of January, 1841, though his boyhood was spent in Alleghany and Steuben Counties, N. Y., whence his father had removed. His studies were pursued at intervals, his education being principally of a practical and business character. His earliest business venture was made at the age of sixteen, under the auspices of John McGraw, Esq., of Ithaca, N. Y., who controlled an extensive lumber and milling interest in Jersey City, and employed Mr. Bliss as assistant in his office. At the expiration of the third year an extensive establishment for the manufacture of wooden boxes was started, the business capacity and practical knowledge of Mr. Bliss having caused him to be chosen as the manager of this interest. Mr. McGraw disposed of the business to the firm of Dodge & Co., with whom Mr. Bliss remained two years, when their valuable property was destroyed by fire and a field was opened to him for the continuance of box manufacturing. He first introduced the method, now in general use, of manufacturing the material at the mills (then located in New Hampshire) and joining the boxes at the establishment in Jersey City. Mr. Bliss had removed to New York, and while there also suffered from a disastrous conflagration. Nothing daunted, he returned to Jersey City, and formed a copartnership with Arthur M. Dodge, under the firm-name of Dodge & Bliss. While pursuing their very extensive business he originated the idea of printing on wood, which is now in general use, and the firm first utilized the method of nailing by machine. Mr. Bliss was married, on the 5th of September, 1864, to Miss Emily Fielder, daughter of James F. Fielder, of Jersey City. Their children are Emily F., Susan, Laura, Bertha, Grace B. (deceased), and Ethel A. The extensive business interest controlled by Mr. Bliss leaves no leisure for participation in matters of political and public consequence, though he adheres to the principles of the Republican party, and manifests a laudable interest in its success. His religious creed is that of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and his membership with St. John's Church, Jersey City, in which he is a warden.

VANDERBEEK & SONS' lumber-yard, planing-mill and box-factory, corner Greene and Steuben Streets. This firm was founded in 1846, and was the pioneer of the lumber trade in Jersey City. The senior member, Isaac I. Vanderbeek, was one of the original proprietors who formed the firm of Morrell & Vanderbeek, in 1846. At the death of Mr. Morrell, some twenty-six years ago, Francis I. Vanderbeek was admitted to the firm, and since that time William E.

Pearson, a son-in-law, and Isaac P. Vanderbeek have been admitted. They are large box manufacturers, and own and operate an extensive planing-mill, and carry a stock of eight million feet of lumber, the sales amounting to about twelve millions of feet per year. The planing-mill is of brick, seventy-five by one hundred feet in extent, and fitted with all the best machinery for the business, and operated by a hundred horse-power steam-engine. The lumber-yard and stores cover two blocks, and are kept in perfect order, and the most complete organization and system pervades the entire working operations of this firm. Their planing-mill has facilities which are unsurpassed in this part of the country. One hundred and twenty-five men are regularly employed in the several departments. The box-factory has a capacity for turning out ten thousand boxes per week, the general average per day being fifteen hundred of all sizes. The mill was erected in 1870, at a cost of twenty thousand dollars. The firm is composed of Isaac I. Vanderbeek, Francis I. Vanderbeek, Isaac P. Vanderbeek and William E. Pearson.

HOLLINSHEAD BROTHERS, manufacturers of sash, blinds, doors, mouldings, etc., No. 316 and 318 Central Avenue, corner of Griffith Street. This firm is composed of Messrs. D. R. and William P. Hollinshead, who have been in the business for sixteen years. They have a large, substantial factory, the only one of the kind on the Heights, two stories high, and fitted up with every description of wood-working machinery and all the necessary appliances for the business, also a large steam-engine. A large force of workmen are employed, the number varying with the demand for buildings.

JERSEY CITY LEATHER CORD AND BELTING WORKS, No. 332 Henderson Street, Charles F. Tensfield, proprietor. These works were established in New York, and in 1881 were removed to Jersey City. Machinery is supplied for the diversified work of manufacturing belting from one to forty inches in width, round leather belting twist from one-sixteenth of an inch to one inch in size, and round solid belting from one-eighth to five-eighths of an inch.

ROSS & SANDFORD, builders of docks and bridges, contractors for dredging and harbor improvements, No. 104 Hudson Street, are the oldest and largest concern in this line of business, having been established in 1839 by Peter Sandford, who has been engaged continuously in business for the past fifty-five years. They have a complete equipment of tugs, dredges, pile-drivers, scows, cars, etc., and all the modern appliances for use in harbor improvements, docking, bridging, dredging, etc., and have done most of the dock-work for all of the large railroads connecting with New York, besides large government contracts for improving channels, reclaiming land, etc. They also have an office at No. 58 South Gay Street, Baltimore, Md., where they keep a large equipment for prosecuting Southern work.

D. Bliss

BILLINGTON BROTHERS' steam soap-works, No. 291 to 295 First Street. The works occupy a large brick building at the corner of First and Cole Streets, three stories in height and fifty by one hundred feet dimensions. A large number of workmen are employed in the manufacture of family and laundry hard soaps and hand-pressed soaps, also brown potash and white soda soft soaps for family and hotel use, and laundry blue. They also manufacture American and lustering polishing powder and standard axle-grease. This business was established in 1849 by Mr. Seth Billington, and continued by him until 1872, when it came into the possession of his sons, S. H. and H. W., and recently the business has been carried on by Mr. H. W. Billington, the present proprietor.

G. C. GORDON, manufacturer of iron railings, gratings, doors, shutters, etc., Nos. 183-185 First Street. One of the most important among the various manufacturing industries carried on in Jersey City is the manufacture of iron railings, gratings, shutters, doors, window guards, bank railings, bank doors, siles, cemetery railings, erections for French roofs, etc. Mr. Gordon has been engaged in this business in Jersey City since 1863. The factory building is fifty by eighty feet in dimensions. A large force of workmen is employed.

EXCELSIOR SILK REEL COMPANY, E. T. Jennings, manager, No. 65 Bay Street. The silk trade is one of the leading features of the manufactures of New Jersey, and every improvement introduced in machinery or frames for winding silk is a matter of much importance to the manufacturer. The Excelsior Silk Reel Company was established in 1882 and is now manufacturing under a patent purchased from Mr. Samuel Brooks, of Paterson. These reels are now extensively used by a large number of silk-throwers throughout the United States and Canada, and nearly all those engaged in the trade at Paterson. The factory is located on the first floor of the brick building on Bay Street, and gives employment to about ten experienced hands.

STEELE & CONDUCT, founders and machinists, Pearl Street, between Greene and Washington Streets. In 1842 this business was founded by Slater & Steele, who were succeeded by Henry Steele & Son, and they by the present firm in 1869. They now occupy a leading position as founders and machinists, and make to order all kinds of machinery, castings, forgings, steam-pumps, mine machinery, etc., and do all classes of repairs. Their works and premises occupy a large area of land, and are equipped with machinery operated by a steam-engine of eighty horse-power, employment being given to one hundred and twenty-five hands. The foundry has a capacity for casting fifteen hundred tons of iron per annum. The premises consist of machine-shop, blacksmith-shop, forge and pattern-shop. The trade covers a wide area of this country and of South America. Sales are estimated at three hundred thousand dollars per annum. The firm members are D. S. Steele and N. W. Condit, who have spent nearly all their lives in the development of the trade.

JERSEY CITY CHAIN-WORKS, Louis B. Dubois & Son, 112 and 114 Steuben Street. This is one of the most extensive chain-works in the State of New Jersey, and has been established eight years. Mr. Louis B. Dubois, the successor to Harris & Dubois, manufactures crane, cable, dredging and crown-proof coil chain, log and raft chains, safety chains, railway car, ship, bridge and every other known description of chains. The works cover four lots, and are fitted with furnaces and all the necessary machinery for the business, and gives steady employment to from sixteen to twenty mechanics.

MASLIN MACHINE-WORKS, J. Maslin & Son, engineers and machinists, No. 198 Green Street, between Bay and First Streets. Among the prominent firms who have added their names to the list of the houses engaged in the building of machinery in Jersey City is that of Messrs. J. Maslin & Son, the proprietors of Maslin Machine-Works, who founded these works nearly seven years ago. The machine-shop is a frame building of two stories, with forge and blacksmith-shop in the rear, fitted with machinery for the requirements of the trade. Steady employment is given to from twelve to twenty mechanics. A leading specialty is made of the manufacture of steam pumps, and all machinery is built and every class of repairs done. The firm is composed of John Maslin, a native of England, who came to America forty-four years ago, and his son, William D. Maslin.

THE DAVENPORT & TREACY COMPANY, founders in iron and brass and phosphor-bronze, corner of Eleventh and Grove streets. The foundry of this company stands on the line of the Erie Railroad, and covers one-half a block, there being several buildings, each representing a department, supplied with every device and appliance required in the business. Constant employment is given to a large force of workmen. Light and heavy castings of great variety in iron and brass are turned out, and pulley castings are made by a new process, the machine for this purpose being invented by Mr. Davenport. The firm also give special attention to the manufacture of fly-wheels without patterns, and make a specialty of phosphor-bronze castings, including everything used in general machine-work, the great toughness, strength, and elasticity of phosphor-bronze metal being such that it is admirably adapted for use where those properties are required. The president is John Davenport; Superintendent, Daniel F. Treacy; and Secretary, William P. Jones.

E. A. WILLIAMS & SON, brass and bell founders and dealers in metals and manufacturers of anti-friction metals, Nos. 107-111 Plymouth Street. This concern has been in existence since 1857, and is one of the most successful and enterprising in the city.

The business is conducted by Thomas H. Williams, son of the founder of the house. In addition to the castings of bells for churches, fire-alarm signals, ships and all the various purposes for which bells are used, they are largely engaged in the manufacture of Babbit and anti-frictional metals, bronze and brass castings, foundry supplies and crucibles. They employ fifty men. Their works have a capacity of 100,000 pounds of brass castings, 10,000 pounds of bell metal and 25,000 pounds of Babbit metal per month.

C. HEIDT & SON, Jersey City, coopers, dealers in sugar and flour barrels, office Nos. 28 and 30 Hudson Street. There are but few firms engaged in the cooperage industry of Jersey City, for the whole trade is chiefly controlled by the extensive houses already established in it, one of the leading and most prominent being the firm above mentioned. After an experience in the trade for thirty years, the proprietors of this establishment founded their present enterprise eight years ago, and now give steady employment to seventy-five experienced hands and six horses. The works comprise a large two-story frame building, fifty by one hundred feet, completely equipped for the trade, producing one hundred thousand barrels per month, nearly all of which are taken by the sugar refinery houses of the city. The individual members of the firm are C. Heidt and W. J. Heidt, father and son. Mr. Heidt, Sr., has for thirty-five years been a resident of the United States.

JERSEY CITY FLINT-GLASS WORKS, H. O'Neil, factory Nos. 102 to 112 Fairmount Avenue. This is the only establishment in Jersey City, or, in fact, in this part of the State of New Jersey, engaged in the manufacture of flint glass-ware. The employes are practical workmen, who are always kept constantly engaged in supplying the demands for the specialties for which the works are noted. Among the specialties manufactured are every description of druggists' glass-ware, show bottles, funnels, mortars, pestles, percolaters, retorts, receivers, rings, urn jars, French counter jars, etc., also table and bar glass-ware, table sets, lamps, vases, fish-globes, globes and chimneys for lamps, and a general assortment of all kinds of plain, pressed, molded, and cut flint and colored glass-ware of every conceivable kind. Mr. H. O'Neil established these works in 1861.

DOMESTIC SPRING-BED COMPANY.—A comparatively new, but rapidly growing industry, in Jersey City is the manufacture of spring-beds, or, as they are commonly known, "spring mattresses." The combinations of springs and chains which of late have been so deftly formed are rapidly driving out the old-time, unhealthful feather-bed, and a spring-bed is almost an absolute necessity in most households. The Domestic Spring-Bed Company was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey with a capital stock of fifty thousand dollars. The officers are as follows: George E. Watson, president and treasurer; Frank M. Jeffery, secretary; E. A. Jeffery, general superintendent. As soon as the organization was effected the company began work. A large factory was opened at the corner of Jersey Avenue and Tenth Street, machinery was set up, a full complement of operatives was engaged and the busy factory was put in motion manufacturing the "Domestic" or "roll-up" spring-bed, which is the most popular of the several patents controlled by the company. The company's main office in Jersey City is at No. 51 Montgomery Street, where the president, Mr. Watson, gives the business his personal supervision.

BARNES & EVANS, manufacturers and dealers in doors, sash and blinds, etc., No. 44 Morgan Street. This firm founded their present business about nine years ago, and since then have established a successful and extensive trade in the manufacture of sash, doors, blinds, store sash, hot-bed sash, etc. They make a specialty of boat-work, in pine or hard wood. They occupy a large two-story frame building, completely fitted and equipped. The factory is located at the corner of Steuben and Washington Streets, and is a large structure containing all machinery for the manufacture of the goods handled. They give steady employment to twenty-five hands in the several departments. Sales are estimated at about $50,000 per annum, the trade done extending over a wide range of country. The firm is composed of J. T. Barnes and Lewis Evans.

M. S. ALLISON'S SONS, dry-dock and ship-yard, foot of Morgan Street. This is another old established firm doing an extensive business in ship repairs. The business has been carried on for the last twenty-four years by Edward and Samuel C. Allison, and is conducted under the general superintendence of Mr. R. Morgan. The dry-dock is capable of lifting vessels of from five hundred to two thousand tons, and the yard is the largest of the kind in Jersey City. Vessels of every description are built and repaired, the trade being very extensive with steamboats, ferry-boats, etc. Steady employment is given to about fifty hands, and often the number is increased to one hundred and fifty, as the work demands.

TARTAR CHEMICAL COMPANY, Warren, corner of Morgan Streets. This company is chartered by the State of New Jersey, and has at the head of its board of directors A. R. Loeb as president, and A. Goldman secretary and treasurer. The company manufactures tartaric acid, cream of tartar, etc. The factory covers three-fourths of a block, and is a large brick building, wherein are employed thirty hands. The machinery is operated by a steam-engine of four hundred horse-power.

JERSEY CITY PAPER BOX COMPANY, corner Greene and York Streets. The manufacture of paper boxes is fast becoming an important item among the industries of Jersey City, and one of the most prominent representative firms engaged in this branch of trade is that of Messrs. Leo & Neff, proprietors of the concern named, who manufacture all kinds of plain and fancy paper boxes. It is four years since these gentlemen began their trade, and in this time they have built up a large and successful business in Jersey City and New York. The factory occupies three lofts of the large brick building, and gives steady employment for sixty hands in the several departments of the house. The stock and machinery carried is valued at from four thousand to five thousand dollars, and the sales are estimated at fifty thousand dollars per annum, and are steadily increasing. The firm is composed of Joseph Leo and F. Neff.

W. G. Clarke

DAVIES & RUSSELL, engineers and machinists, 40 Morris Street. The proprietors founded this business in 1880, and erected a machine-shop twenty-five by one hundred feet, where they commenced the trade of machinists and engineers, doing all kind of job-work, and building marine and stationary engines, tow-boat machinery, etc. About thirty hands are employed, and the products of the works will exceed twenty-five thousand dollars per annum. The proprietors are Martin Davies and Michael J. Russell.

M. FARLEY, carriage manufacturer, 163 Provost Street. The carriage-building establishment of Mr. Farley gives employment to a large number of workmen in the different departments of the business, which include the making of every description of wagons and carriages. Every facility is at hand for a large trade, and the repository contains many stylish and fashionable vehicles, comparing favorably with the productions of New York makers. The business has been carried on here since 1871.

PATENT STEAM CARPET-CLEANING WORKS.—The necessity of having carpets thoroughly cleaned at least once a year, and at the same time having it done properly, without injury to the fabric, has led to the invention of special machinery for the purpose, and Mr. Thomas J. Stewart, the proprietor of these works, has secured several patents upon machines designed expressly for this kind of work. These machines are so constructed that when the carpet passes through them they are beaten on the under side only; at the same time a number of revolving bristle brushes thoroughly cleanse the face or nap, and a revolving fan of immense power is constantly sending a strong current of air through the carpet, carrying off the dust, larvae, or impure gases, which pass out at the top of the building. The works are located at 222 and 224 Fifth Street, corner of Eric Street. They are equipped with machinery for a large business, and have been running since 1879.

Mrs. H. S. HALL, lace nets, No. 118 Steuben Street. As a variation to the numerous establishments mentioned in this chapter where the labor is generally heavy and the work performed by the muscle of the strong man's arm, we here notice a light and lucrative manufacturing industry in which women alone are employed. Mrs. Hall manufactures a large quantity of lace and silk nets weekly, and fifty or more girls are kept busy finishing the nets as they come from the machines, which arrange the fibres into the finest kind of nets, tying the knots so firmly that no ordinary pressure can disturb them. The looms are kept busy throughout the season turning out large quantities of manufactured goods. The factory has a capacity of one hundred gross per week, and the greater portion of the time the machines are run to their full extent. Mrs. Hall has been about seven years building up this business.

GRAPHITE LUBRICATING COMPANY.—This company was organized Sept. 1, 1883, with Jacob Weart as president, John Smalley treasurer, and Spencer Weart as secretary, and the board of directors was composed of Jacob Weart, John Smalley and James B. Throckmorton. On the 22d day of February, 1884, John Smalley died, and his son, William W. Smalley, was elected treasurer and a director, in his father, deceased. The company has its office in Jersey City, and its factory is at Bound Brook, N. J.

The object of the formation of the company was for the purpose of the manufacture and sale of graphite journal boxes, carriage-wheel boxes, bushings for loose pulley, sheaves, etc., requiring no grease or oil to successfully run machinery, carriages, etc.

The manufacturing is done under letters patent issued to John Smalley and William W. Small, and assigned to the Graphite Lubricating Company.

The inventions consist of casting a journal bearing or bushing, with grooves cast in the same, which grooves are filled with a composition, the chief ingredient being graphite, which is placed in the grooves under heavy pressure and then vulcanized, the same making a good lubricating surface, which polishes up the shaft or axle and overcomes the friction and successfully does the work.

This new and novel mode of lubrication by the use of graphite and dispensing with oil is one of the most novel and useful inventions of modern times, and its progress will be watched with much interest. When the president of the company was asked for the facts for this article, he replied by saying that the graphite box was too young to go into history, and its success not yet fully assured, and the public prejudice against it very strong; but the facts could be made known, and future historians could write its success or final failure.

For more than fifty years graphite (or the article more generally designated as black lead or plumbago) has been known to be the best lubricant extant. The difficulty in the way of its use consisted in the fact that it could not be confined and held in position so as to do its work. These difficulties were overcome by the invention of the grooved box by William W. Smalley, and the composition and vulcanizing process by John Smalley. Soon after the discovery of the graphite bushing it was successfully introduced into the block trade by William H. McMillan, of New York City, who became the general agent for that trade and for the last five years the graphite bushing has been in use on sheaves and pulley-wheels used in the block trade, and is gradually displacing all other bushings in that trade, and while it was a great success in this business, Mr. Smalley failed to introduce it into any other class of business, or to find any person or persons with capital willing to purchase the patent, notwithstanding Dr. C. M. Field, of Bound Brook, had successfully run a carriage without grease or oil for twenty-two months, and a loose pulley with graphite-bearing had been run in the navy-yard for nearly fourteen months, running seven hundred and fifty revolutions a minute and ten hours a day.

In the summer of 1853, Jacob Weart, of Jersey City, joined with Mr. Smalley for the purpose of the general introduction of the graphite box, which resulted in the formation of the Graphite Lubricating Company. Mr. Weart did not expect much trouble in the introduction of the same, but in this he was greatly disappointed; no carriage-maker could be found who was willing to try a set of axles; and there was no other mode of introduction left except for Mr. Weart to put a set in use on his own carriage, which have now been running for over fourteen months without grease or oil, and with but very little wear on the boxes, and at this time sets are running in ten States and without hot boxes, and time alone will settle the fact whether the boxes are of sufficient durability to come into general use. Mr. Weart encountered the same difficulty to get it started on machinery, but by giving away a few journal bearings he obtained a foothold for the graphite box, and its use is now rapidly extending upon all classes of machinery, and wherever placed, has proved successful.

BENJAMIN G. CLARKE¹ was born at Easton, Pa., March 5, 1820. He received an academic education, and was prepared to enter college in 1838. At that time his father was engaged in milling and keeping a store, and became financially embarrassed owing to the great financial disturbance of 1836, which eventually carried down most of the active business men of the country. This event changed the purposes of Mr. Clarke, who entered the dry-goods business and continued in it for six years, when he removed to New York City, and joined his father-in-law, William Muirhead, as a partner in keeping the Merchants' Hotel, in Cortlandt Street, New York City, and Mr. Clarke continued in this business until 1861, when he retired to engage exclusively in the coal and iron business.

Mr. Clarke's business at the Merchants' Hotel was very successful, so much so that he became a capitalist, and when the Messrs. Thomas were seeking financial assistance to develop their own interests, Mr. Clarke joined them in 1855, and became the agent of the Thomas Iron Company, having his office first at the Merchants' Hotel and afterwards in Wall Street.

He still continues to be the agent of the company. He has been either vice-president or president for the whole period. The company has been one of marked success. It started with a cash capital of three hundred thousand dollars, and now has a cash capital of two million dollars.

Mr. Clarke is vice-president of the Lackawanna Iron and Coal Company and chairman of its executive committee. This is one of the largest concerns in the country. He is president of the New Jersey Zinc Company and president of the Columbia Chestnut Hill Iron Company. These four corporations combined have a capital of sixteen million dollars.

Mr. Clarke has been for the last ten years a director in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company. He is also a director in various banks and other corporations. At one time he was a director in fourteen corporations, but finding it impossible to attend the meetings of the directors of so many companies, he has gradually retired from most of them.

Mr. Clarke is devoting his life to the coal and iron interests, and especially to the latter; he endeavors to keep pace with all modern improvements and inventions in that direction, and he does not allow anything to pass without notice that is likely to promote these interests; so watchful is he in this direction that he has visited Europe several times to study and examine all the iron industries of England, France and Germany, and he watches all new discoveries and processes with the greatest diligence.

In 1856, Mr. Clarke took up his residence in Jersey City, and resided there until 1880, when, owing to the encroachments of business upon the residence portion of the city where he resided, he reluctantly gave up his residence there and removed to New York City. While a resident of Jersey City Mr. Clarke took the deepest interest in everything which pertained to the interests of the city, State and nation, and upon the breaking out of the late civil war he became one of the leading patriots. When President Lincoln, on the 15th of April, 1861, issued his proclamation for seventy-five thousand volunteers, Mr. Clarke joined in the effort to raise the men. The Second Regiment of Hudson County volunteered to go; but there was no clothing, overcoats or blankets, and no means or organized measures to procure them. The citizens of Jersey City held a meeting and appointed a committee, consisting of Messrs. Clarke, David Smith and Henry M. Traphagen, to equip and send this regiment to the front, and provide for the families of the volunteers during their absence in the field. To equip the regiment with clothing would cost thirty thousand dollars. Several clothing houses of the city of New York were willing to equip the regiment and wait the action of the authorities, if proper security could be given for the ultimate payment of the bills. There was no lack of patriotism on the part of the citizens, but the financial panic of 1857 had impoverished most people as to financial means, and at this juncture Mr. Clarke came forward and became security for the whole amount, which put the regiment in the field, and it was one of the four regiments which entered Washington in a body, and the first considerable force which reached that city and gave to the government and citizens an assurance of safety. This committee discharged their duty to the families of the volunteers with great fidelity, and the public authorities raised and paid the thirty thousand dollars in question.

¹ Sketch by Hon. Jacob Weart.

Again, in 1867, Mr. Clarke showed his patriotism to his country. President Johnson had removed nearly all the Republican collectors of internal revenue and put Democrats in their places, to the great detriment of the public service. Mr. Clarke was fearful that after the Rebellion had been suppressed in the field, the nation might still be destroyed by the weakness of the public treasury and inability to pay the war debt. In his district he took the lead to turn an inefficient collector out and put a suitable gentleman in, and took the public position in advance of any appointment that he would help to secure a proper appointment, and be one of five gentlemen to go on a bond for one hundred thousand dollars for the collector when appointed, and this Mr. Clarke carried out to the letter. These acts of patriotism endeared him to the people of New Jersey, and he has been frequently solicited to run for the highest political offices, but to these appeals he always gave one answer: "I have devoted my life to commercial pursuits, and I am developing the coal, iron and railroad interests of the country, and can be more useful in these fields than I could hope to be in the political field;" and adhering to this policy, he has never held any public office, but has been an ardent supporter of the Republican party and an advocate of the protective tariff.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

JERSEY CITY.

(Continued.)

BANKS AND SAVINGS INSTITUTIONS.

Hudson County National Bank.—This is the successor of the Hudson County Bank, which was established in August, 1851, with a capital stock of one hundred and eighty thousand four hundred dollars, and was the first bank in Jersey City under the free banking law. The directors were W. S. Gregory, John Cassedy, James Keene, John Griffith, Samuel Westcott, Richard Morrow, Matthew Armstrong, Minot C. Morgan, John Van Vorst, Abram Becker and James R. Thompson. John Cassedy was elected president and Albert T. Smith cashier. The former resigned in 1856, and John Griffith was elected to the office. He served until 1868, and was succeeded by Matthew Armstrong who held the place until the bank was reorganized. In December, 1877, Mr. Smith gave place as cashier to Lewis N. Condit. He resigned in 1858, and was succeeded by A. A. Hardenbergh who had entered the bank as assistant cashier in 1854. He has been identified with the bank ever since, and his ability has done much towards insuring its prosperity. In May, 1865, the Hudson County Bank was merged into the Hudson County National Bank. The organization was effected with a capital stock of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the following officers were elected: Directors, Matthew Armstrong, Abram Becker, W. S. Gregory, John Griffith, Job Male, J. Dickinson Miller, Minot C. Morgan, Garrett Sip, Charles G. Sirson, James R. Thompson, and John Van Vorst. Matthew Armstrong was elected president, John Van Vorst vice-president and A. A. Hardenbergh cashier. Mr. Armstrong died during the year, and his son John was elected to the vacancy. John Armstrong died in 1873, when Job Male was elected president. Mr. Male resigned in 1878, and A. A. Hardenbergh was chosen to the position, which he has since held. Mr. Van Vorst resigned the vice-presidency in December, 1872, and was succeeded by the present incumbent, Thomas Earle. Edward A. Graham the present cashier, was elected in May, 1882. David W. Taylor had filled the position from the time of Mr. Hardenbergh's resignation to 1882. The present directors are Robert C. Bacot, Peter Bentley, Gilbert Collins, Hampton A. Courson, Thomas Earle, Augustus A. Hardenbergh, John Lamb, Job Male, James R. Thompson, Garrett D. Van Reipen, Richard C. Washburne, Augustus Zabriskie, Cornelius Zabriskie.

The assets of this bank amount to about one and three-quarters millions of dollars.

JOHN GRIFFITH.—The family of Mr. Griffith emigrated to America from Wales during the latter part of April in the year 1800. On the 5th of the succeeding month the subject of this biography was born. When but twelve years of age he entered the employ of the great Robert Fulton, and five years later was sent as that gentleman's agent to fit out an engine to be used in the first steamer that sailed on the Mississippi River. He arrived in New Orleans in June, 1817, set the engine, and in the fall of that year accompanied the steamer on her trial trip. He next, in connection with a partner, engaged in the patent-leather business in Newark, and continued to make that place his residence until 1833, when he removed to Jersey City, and with his brother, established, under the firm-name of E. & J. Griffith, a commission flour business. On the dissolution of the firm, in 1840, he sailed for Europe to contract for the supply of iron for one of the New York railroads, and on his return was for some years actively engaged in business. In politics Judge Griffith was formerly a pronounced Democrat, but during the war embraced the principles of the Republican party, though never a strong partisan. In 1843 he was appointed a lay judge of Hudson County, and held the position for a period of fourteen years. He served also as a member of the Board of Aldermen of Jersey City, and was during the late war an earnest supporter of the government. He was appointed one of a war committee to equip soldiers, and, together with an associate member of the committee, made himself personally responsible for the purchase of clothing and other equipments. In all his official relations Judge Griffith was an honest, efficient and trustworthy man. He was one of the founders of the Hudson County National Bank, one of its presidents, and for twenty-one years on its board of directors. He was also for twenty-five years director of the Provident Institution for Savings, and much of the time chairman of its committee on loans. Judge Griffith was twice married,—first to Martha A. Mulford, and a second time to Plebe M., daughter of Jeremiah Mulford, of Newark. He was in religion a supporter of the First Reformed Dutch Church of Jersey City. The death of Judge Griffith occurred July 21, 1872, in his seventy-third year.

AUGUSTUS A. HARDENBERGH, of Jersey City, who represented the Seventh Congressional District of New Jersey in the Congress of the United States, was born on the 18th day of May, 1830, at New Brunswick, N. J. His father, Cornelius L. Hardenbergh, LL.D., was one of the most eminent members of the bar of the State, and for many years prominently connected with Rutgers College (originally called Queen's College), of which the Rev. Jacob R. Hardenbergh, D.D., his grandfather, was the founder, in 1770, and the first president. Mr. Hardenbergh entered Rutgers College as a student in 1844, but before the end of his course was called home to act as amanuensis for his father, who, in middle life and in the full tide of practice, had become suddenly blind. Though failing for this reason to graduate, so favorable had been the impression made by the young student upon the faculty that the college, in 1851, conferred on him the honorary degree of Bachelor of Arts.

In 1846 he entered a counting-house in the city of New York, and became a resident of Jersey City, which continues to be his home. In 1852 he associated himself with the Hudson County National Bank, in Jersey City, and has continued with it in almost every capacity until the present, having been elected its president in 1878, which position he still occupies. But he never abandoned his first inclination to study, and at the early age of twenty-one had established an enviable reputation as an eloquent speaker, which was considerably enhanced by a speech made by him that year on the engaging theme of "Cuban Freedom." In 1853 he was elected to the State Legislature from a strong Whig district, and, although the youngest member of that body, he soon became one of the most prominent by his services in securing the passage of the General Banking Act, fixing the rate of interest at seven instead of six per cent., and by his strong and manly opposition to granting further powers to the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, a monopoly then almost as powerful as its gigantic successor is, that now dominates the policy and fortunes of the State. From 1857 to 1863 he was a member of the Common Council of Jersey City, part of the time its president, and during a portion of the war period chairman of the war committee, and the records of the city during that trying time contain many evidences of his untiring energy, patriotic action, and judicious counsels. In 1868, Mr. Hardenbergh became state director of railroads, and in 1874, being then a resident of Bergen County, he was sent as a delegate from the Fourth Congressional District to the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore. The same year he was chosen president of the Northern Railroad of New Jersey, and in the fall, having moved back to Jersey City, he was nominated for the Forty-fourth Congress by the Democracy of the Seventh District, without solicitation on his part and even much to his surprise, and was elected by a large majority. He was re-elected in 1876. In 1878, having been elected president of the bank with which he had so long been connected, he declined being a candidate for renomination for Congress. But in 1880, at the imperative demand of the leaders of his party throughout the State, he again became a candidate, and was elected by five thousand majority, notwithstanding the popularity of his opponent and the sharply-drawn party lines of a Presidential contest. His nomination saved the State to the Democracy in that contest. During his first term in Congress he was a member of the Military, Centennial, and District of Columbia Committees; and during his second and third terms he was on the Banking and Currency Committee. He was a war Democrat of the most outspoken and determined character, and is a protective tariff and hard money man. In one of his public speeches against the wild schemes of the inflationists, he says: "I turn, sir, with an abiding faith, from the new-fangled doctrines of our modern financiers to the cherished opinions of the great lights of our history as enunciated by Jefferson, by Jackson and by Benton, and give value to the coin that can only be extracted by the giant arms of labor from the bosom of the earth, and not that which is the representative of indebtedness and issued by millions within the brief limit of a day or of a week."

During 1876, when the public depression was great, and bitter feeling prevailed against national banks as great monopolies, Mr. Hardenbergh made a speech on the subject of "The National Banks and their Relation to the Union," in which, referring to the necessities which called the national banking system into being, he said,—

"It was called into existence by the necessities of a disordered finance, rendered thus disordered by the stern arbitrament of war. The metallic currency was not sufficient by which armies could be raised, and a patriot soldiery mustered for the tented field. The nation had the right to use whatever of its resources the preservation of its life demanded. Thus were swept away the banks of State organization, that lost one currency

John Griffiths

A. A. S. L. S. S. S.

founded upon public faith might give rise to a demand for the threatened fortunes of the republic. A new spot was a focus for the soldier's breast that his country was not unmindful of his services; he gave the awful pledge of his life to her service, and then he fell and the work of battle his family would find protection. It did not occur that he, and still performed its mission as the sweetest wages of peace were spread over a restored Union; it should cause calamity to cease and his due the source of gratitude from all. Since his end those angry passions years have passed. No disaster or disaster has befallen in its wake. Its provisions are now more liberal than ever; it belongs to no party, is given to all by a section, offers its advantages to all who seek them, and is pressed from the manipulations imposed upon national State issues. This is its crowning feature; that during the long years of war and of peace not a dollar has been lost to the bill-holders, who are the poor themselves. What is monopoly can offer a system which has opened a way for a perfect freedom, requiring every effort in its management, and so far as the interests of toil are concerned, should be beyond the reach of peril? . . . It has stood through every test, giving confidence alike to depositor and to bill-holder; and if any money exists it is that of the public confidence, which refuses to be shaken. It belongs to no party; it is allied to no party while the only reason ventured for its repeal is the strongest which can be urged for its continuance; it is founded upon the nation's faith, and has sustained the nation's credit. While depositing its hands as the security for the redemption of the circulating notes, it gives to the people from Maine to Texas, and from seaboard to inland, its notes of credit, current in every section, with the Union as their endorser and the security for their redemption."

In the same speech he advocated the issue of four per cent. bonds, which has since become a happy realization. In 1877 a bill was presented to repeal the resumption act, which had been solemnly passed in 1875, and the faith of the government pledged to its fulfillment. Mr. Hardenbergh, in opposition to the great majority of his party, took strong grounds against its repeal, saying, in a speech delivered in the House November 14th,—

"My appeal is for a nation's honor and a nation's faith. I yield respect to those who differ from the views I represent. I know it is easier to touch the popular chord by quoting the despatch of capital, but the debt which has been created was fairly to sustain the nation's life and preserve to the ages of the future the bright and beautiful example of an empire conservative to freedom. By all the memories of the past, its expended treasure, its million heroes who have fallen in the shock of battle, I invoke you to the utmost care that by one rule act you spread not the spirit of repudiation throughout the land and invite disaster worse than we have yet seen.

"The splendor of our arms will be dimmed by the failure to discharge our national obligations, and the poor spectacle given to the world of a government founded upon the liberties of man unable to redress its promises and respected faith."

During his service in Congress Mr. Hardenbergh has been the uncompromising opponent of war claims, and a courageous and consistent advocate of all measures for judicious reduction of expenditure in all departments of the government. He was a member of the Centennial Committee in the Forty-fourth Congress, and largely by his action, as expressing the sentiments of the New Jersey delegation, the bill appropriating one million five hundred thousand dollars from the United States Treasury in aid of the Centennial celebration was passed.

One of the last important services rendered by Mr. Hardenbergh in the Forty-fifth Congress was to secure the passage of a bill creating Jersey City a port of entry, and having it, together with that part of his district fronting on New York Harbor, attached to or included in the collection district of New York instead of Newark, a matter of the first importance to its vast and rapidly growing commercial and shipping interests. By this act vessels are allowed to be entered and cleared from New York City within sight of their moorings instead of having to go, as formerly, to Newark, a distance of some fifteen miles, and back.

On the 18th of January, A.D. 1878, having been selected by the Indiana delegation in the House of Representatives for that purpose, he delivered an address on the life and character of the late Senator Morton, of Indiana. Mr. Hardenbergh's speech on that occasion was one of the most graceful, eloquent, and justly appreciated tributes by a member of one political party to the memory and services of a leader of the opposition that has ever been heard in the House of Representatives. Mr. Hardenbergh regards his office as a public trust, and has discharged its duties with all the thoroughness and fidelity which characterizes his action in his private business, and it is a great satisfaction to him to recall the fact that he has not missed a single vote in the House of Representatives during all his four years of service there.

The disposition on his part to deal squarely with every question upon its own merits, irrespective of ulterior party ends, was manifested by Mr. Hardenbergh in the stand he took on what was known as the Robeson impeachment matter in the House of Representatives in 1876. It was advised to impeach the Secretary, and that the resolution should be passed at once, but not pressed to trial till the next session, so that the impeachment might hang over the Secretary, as a member of the administration, during the coming Presidential contest. Mr. Hardenbergh made a strong speech against the injustice of such a course, taking the unassailable ground that if the findings of the committee justified the impeachment of the Secretary he should be impeached and his trial proceed at once, and if found guilty he should forthwith be punished; if not found guilty he was entitled to the benefit of an acquittal at the earliest day; that it was equally unjust to the country for the Secretary to hold the office a single day longer than necessary for his trial and removal if he was guilty, and that no party necessity could justify the course proposed by the committee simply for the purposes of political capital. Probably no single act of Mr. Hardenbergh's life more clearly illustrates his character; certainly none more strongly commands him to the good opinion of the chivalrous and high-minded of every party than his outspoken opinions and courageous action in this matter. Mr. Hardenbergh has been strenuous in his efforts to secure exemption to the several lines of steamers which have their public docks and landings upon the New Jersey side of the port of New York from the operations of the law which proposed their removal to the barge-office, and for such efforts was awarded a public dinner by the citizens of Hoboken, and upon his retirement from Congress a similar honor was conferred upon him by his constituents, without regard to party. In 1883, Mr. Hardenbergh was appointed by the mayor of Jersey City a member of the Board of Finance and Taxation, and in 1884 by Governor Abbott a trustee of the New Jersey State Industrial and Reform School, situated at Jamesburg, and subsequently was selected by the Democracy as Presidential lecturer in the canvass of 1884.

First National Bank.—This institution succeeded the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, and was organized Feb. 19, 1864. The first directors were John S. Fox, M. B. Bramhall, A. O. Zabriskie, James S. Davenport, Ephraim Marsh, S. Alofsen, P. Rafferty, H. G. Eilshemius and A. H. Wallis. John S. Fox was elected president and M. Sandford cashier. On Jan. 1, 1865, two additional officers were elected,—James S. Ogden, vice-president, and Edward F. C. Young, assistant treasurer. In 1871, Mr. Fox died, and A. H. Wallis became president. In 1874, Mr. Sandford resigned his position as cashier, and E. F. C. Young was chosen to fill the vacancy, George W. Conkling being appointed assistant cashier. In 1879, Mr. Wallis died, and E. F. C. Young succeeded to the presidency, Mr. Conkling to the cashiership and John W. Omberson was elected assistant cashier. These are the present officers. The present directors are Joseph L. Ogden, Andrew Clerk, Bennington F. Reynolds, Benjamin G. Clarke, W. A. Weichers, Alfred M. Fuller, James D. Bedle, E. F. C. Young, Hamilton Wallis, Charles Leichler, Thomas M. Gopsill. The bank has a paid up capital stock of four hundred thousand dollars, and a surplus of about equal amount, while its average deposits are two million three hundred thousand dollars.

The Second National Bank, which has its house at the corner of Montgomery and Washington Streets, was organized December 23, 1864, the first directors being Blakeley Wilson, Joseph M. Brown, H. M. Traphagen, Daniel T. Hoag, Robt. McLaughlin, Joseph McCoy, I. I. Vanderbeek, H. N. Ege, John Neilson, William Pearsall and Joseph M. Fuller. The first president, Blakeley Wilson, served eleven years and was succeeded by William Hogenkamp, who was the original cashier. His place as cashier was taken by James G. Hasking, the present incumbent. I. I. Vanderbeek was chosen vice-president, and still holds that position. The present directors are William Hogenkamp, I. I. Vanderbeek, H. N. Ege, William Force, A. A. Lutkins, Thomas E. Bray, M. H. Gillett, Marcus Beach and James G. Hasking. The bank was established with and now has a capital of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Provident Institution for Savings.—This house was incorporated Feb. 27, 1839, and its first officers, elected Dec. 6, 1841, were as follows: President, D. S. Gregory; Vice-Presidents, John F. Ellis, Jonathan Jenkins, John R. Goodwin, Cornelius Van Vorst, Peter Bentley; Trustees, David Henderson, Henry Traphagen, John Gilbert, Cornelius Kanouse, J. Dickinson Miller, Phineas C. Dummer, Thomas A. Alexander, Job Male, John Dows, D. F. Rockwell, Stephen Garretson, David Jones, John Frazer, H. Van Waggonen, A. Van Santwood, Peter McMartin, John Griffith, James W. Palmer, Luke Henningway, William B. Jenkins, Thomas Kingsford, Thomas Weldon, William Glaze, Timothy L. Smith.

Thomas W. James was elected treasurer Sept. 29, 1843, and held the position until May 12, 1856, when he resigned. E. W. Kingsland was upon the latter date chosen secretary and treasurer, and still retains that position. President Gregory died Dec. 8, 1874, and Andrew Clerk was subsequently chosen to the office, which he yet holds. The institution now has assets amounting to almost five and three-quarters millions of dollars, and a surplus of nearly half a million. The present officers are: President, Andrew Clerk; Vice-Presidents, David Smith, David Taylor, Benjamin G. Clarke, R. C. Bacot, Isaac I. Vanderbeek; Trustees, James A. Alexander, Thomas C. Brown, Peter Bentley, George W. Clerihew, John D. Carscallen, N. W. Condict, Jr., John E. Cronham, Henry S. Drayton, Horatio N. Ege, Benjamin Edge, Smith W. Haines, John W. Harrison, Francis Jenkins, William Keeney, John Lamb, John McBride, Minot C. Morgan, William E. Pearson, Freeman A. Smith, William F. Taylor, James B. Vreedenburgh, Jacob Weart, W. B. Williams, Richard C. Washburn.

ROBERT COCHRAN BACOT is a descendant of the Huguenot families of Bacot-De Saussure, who settled in South Carolina about the year 1670, together with a large number of other French families.

His grandfather, Thomas Wright Bacot, was the first postmaster of Charleston, having received his appointment and commission from President Washington, and was continued in that position under the ten succeeding administrations of the government,—a period of over forty years.

Mr. Bacot was also president of the Bank of South Carolina; his son, Peter Bacot, (father of Robert C.), was cashier of the Branch Bank of the United States at Charleston from its establishment in that city to its termination, during the administration of Gen. Jackson, after which, upon receiving an appointment as head of a financial institution in the city of New Orleans, he left his native city, and while on his way thither died while temporarily sojourning in the city of New York. His family then took up their residence in Jersey City, N. J., where they have since resided.

On the maternal side, the great-grandfather of Mr. Bacot was Capt. Robert Cochran, a native of Massachusetts, who settled in Charleston previous to the Revolutionary war, and held an important military position under the provincial government of the colony. On the breaking out of the war he immediately threw up the King's commission, and was appointed by the State government to the command of one of its armed cruisers, the "Notre Dame," and sent to France to procure supplies and equipments for the State troops, which duty, aided by the diplomacy of Dr. Franklin, then the representative of the interests of the colonies at Paris, he successfully accomplished, returning full-freighted with all articles essential for the impending struggle.

A. G. Bacon.

Upon a mission to Gen. Washington, who was encamped with his army at Valley Forge, he then heard of the intended descent by Sir Peter Parker with his squadron upon Charleston, then in a defenseless condition. He procured relays of horses and after a ride of twenty-one days reached Charleston, and gave information of the intended attack, which resulted, from the timely preparations made to receive the enemy, in the memorable victory of Fort Mifflin.

Capt. Cochran received from the State of his adoption full recognition of the distinguished services he had rendered to his country on the termination of the war.

Robert C. Bacot, was born in Charleston, S. C., Sept. 18, 1818. After receiving his education at the College of Charleston he commenced the practice of his profession, that of a civil engineer, and was engaged in railroad explorations in New Hampshire, and subsequently in the Carolinas, Tennessee and Kentucky, surveying and laying out the contemplated extension of the South Carolina Railroad to the Ohio River.

He settled in Jersey City in the year 1838. The city then comprised but few inhabitants, who resided east of Warren and south of York Streets.

In 1841 he married Mary, a daughter of the late Robert Gilchrist. He was elected city surveyor of Jersey City in 1840, and in 1861 published, by request of the corporation, the map of Jersey City, embracing the territory lying east of Mill Creek, then the westerly limit of the city. In 1857 he was elected registrar and soon afterward chief engineer and superintendent of the Jersey City Water-Works, which position he held until 1854, when he resigned to take charge of the examinations ordered to be made by the Legislature to determine the extent and value of its riparian lands. His report on this investigation was made to the Legislature in 1865.

He was a member of the State Assembly from Hudson County, representing the district composed of parts of Jersey City and Hoboken, during the sessions of 1857 and 1858. His report as chairman of the committee on the geological and topographical survey of the State led to the reconstruction of that department, and placed the work on its subsequent efficient basis. Upon the re-organization of the Riparian Commission of the State, in 1863, and the adoption of the recommendation contained in his report of 1865, he was appointed chief engineer of the commission, which position he now holds.

In 1874-75 he was elected by the aldermen of Jersey City a member of the Board of Finance.

He is a director of the Hudson County National Bank, one of the vice-presidents of the Provident Institution for Savings in Jersey City and president of the Hackensack Water Company, which furnishes water from Hackensack River to the city of Hoboken and North Hudson County. This company and its works he was chiefly instrumental in promoting and constructing.

Through all his varied public services Mr. Bacot has retained the public confidence and respect; his career has been eminently a useful one, and yet without other ambition than such as attaches to the faithful performance of those duties which have been from time to time assigned to him in the community in which his lot has been cast, and in which it is hoped many years of active usefulness will remain for him as the wise counselor and public spirited citizen.

His family consist of three daughters—Eugenia, wife of John Roundey, since deceased; Anne, wife of Benjamin B. Roundey; and Elizabeth; and five sons,—H. De Saussure, Robert C., Jr., John Vacher, William S. and Richard Wainright.

Hudson City Savings-Bank.—This institution was incorporated March 27, 1868, and commenced business on the 15th of the following August. Benjamin F. Sawyer was the first president, George A. Tolley vice-president, G. D. Van Reipen secretary and treasurer and John J. Tolley assistant secretary. The trustees were G. D. Van Reipen, Benjamin F. Sawyer, George V. De Mott, Joseph E. Culver, Charles Gobisch, Andrew McLane, Charles J. Roe, Jno. R. McPherson, Pat'k. McNulty, Jno. Roemmelt, George A. Tolley, Andrew Leight, Joseph Montgomery, Cornelius J. Rooney, Frederick A. Goetz, Jno. Leitz, Clinton W. Conger, Willson M. Hosier, Thomas E. Bray, Alex. H. Laidlaw, Charles Kamlah, Jno. Hogan, Jno. Bott, Jno. B. Stanton, George Glaubrecht, Arend Steenken, George Och, Asa W. Fry, G. D. Van Reipen was elected president Jan. 9, 1873, and still holds the position. John Hedden, Jr., became secretary Jan. 8, 1874. The present officers and trustees are: President, G. D. Van Reipen; Vice-President, E. H. Davey; Secretary, John Hedden, Jr.; Trustees, G. D. Van Reipen, Joseph E. Culver, Jno. R. McPherson, Patrick McNulty, Andrew McLane, Jno. Leitz, Alex. H. Laidlaw, Jno. Bott, Arend Steenken, George Och, Asa W. Fry, Jno. J. Tolley, Jno. Hedden, Jr., Daniel Tolley, William Beach, R. H. H. Steel, Edmund H. Davey, William Gemmel.

German Savings-Bank.—This institution was chartered March 29, 1871, and opened for business on May 21st following. The first officers were: President, Michael Lineau; First Vice-President, F. O. Matthiessen; Second Vice-President, Louis A. Lineau; Secretary and Treasurer, C. M. E. Schraeder. The present officers are the same as the above, with the exceptions of Louis A. Lucien as first vice-president and Dr. A.

Kirsten as second vice-president. The assets of the bank amount to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

CHAPTER XXXV.

JERSEY CITY.

(Continued.)

RELIGIOUS INTERESTS.

Bergen Reformed Church.¹—Probably about the year 1660 the pious emigrants from the New Netherlands received permission from the Classis of Amsterdam to organize a church under the Reformed faith and loyal to the established church of their Fatherland.

The earliest record of any such movement is an item in a document on file in the office of the Secretary of State, Albany, showing that in the township of Bergen, N. J., four hundred and seventeen guilders had been raised by tax for the erection of a church. This is dated 1662. The earliest church record is a list of church members, nine male and eighteen female, dated 1664. The list is in Dutch character and impossible to copy. It is headed by Nicolas Verlett, Governor Carteret's private secretary.

From this date baptismal, marriage and communion records have been preserved, with the exception of a few years, from 1769 to 1793.

The church received a charter from George III. of England in 1771, under Governor William Franklin.

For more than ninety years the church was under the care of a voorleser, or lay reader, who was usually clerk, sexton, chorister and schoolmaster. Official services were rendered by the pastors of the church in New York City.

The first pastor was Rev. William Jackson. He was called in 1753, sent to Holland to complete his studies and receive ordination, and, returning, was installed Sept. 10, 1757. He was also pastor of the church on Staten Island. In 1789, his mind having become enfeebled, he consented to surrender his call, and the use of the parsonage, with four acres of ground attached, was guaranteed him during his life. He continued to reside in this house until July 25, 1813, when he died, in the eighty-first year of his age.

The second pastor was Rev. John Cornelison. He was installed May 26, 1793, and died May 20, 1828, in the fifty-ninth year of his age. It was his first and only charge.

The third pastor was Rev. Benjamin C. Taylor, D.D. He was installed July 4, 1828. In the autumn of 1870 he was forced by increasing infirmity to relinquish the active duties of his pastorate, but continued to reside in the community, and, as pastor emeritus, took such part in the church service as his health permitted. He died February, 1881. The mortal remains of these first three pastors repose in the cemeteries contiguous to the church.

The fourth pastor, Rev. James L. Amerman, was installed May 7, 1871, and continued until June 1, 1876, when he was released to go to Japan as a missionary under the care of the Reformed Church Board of Foreign Missions.

The fifth pastor and present incumbent is Rev. Cornelius Brett, installed Aug. 1, 1876.

The first church edifice was built of logs, probably on Vroom Street, east of Bergen Avenue. It served the purposes of the congregation until 1680, when a stone building was erected, octagonal in shape. It was replaced in 1773 by a more elaborate structure on the same site, corner Bergen Avenue and Vroom Street.

The present building was dedicated July 14, 1842. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Taylor, the pastor, who was assisted in the service by the Rev. Edward H. May, of New York, Rev. Nicholas I. Marsellus, of New York, Rev. John Garretson, of Belleville, Rev. Thomas E. Vernilyce, D.D., of New York, and Rev. Ira C. Boice, of Bergen Neck. The portal stones and many of the other stones of the two earlier churches are incorporated in the present structure.

A substantial annex was dedicated Jan. 29, 1882, for social meetings and Sunday-school services.

A beautiful parsonage stands a few feet south of the church. It is the fourth which has been built by the congregation to accommodate its pastors.

The present membership is about three hundred. It is hard to estimate the value of the church property.

¹Church Officers, June, 1881.—Pastor, Rev. Cornelius Brett (parsonage, 509 Bergen Avenue. Members of Consistory: Elders, John Brinkerhoff, H. N. Van Wageningen, Albert Romaine, terms expire Easter, 1885; Joel W. Brown, C. C. Van Reypen, G. D. Van Riepen, terms expire Easter, 1886; Deacons, Henry Fitch, Jr., T. P. King, J. P. Landrine, terms expire Easter, 1885; Horace Deau, Walter Brinkerhoff, Benjamin F. Brittan, terms expire Easter, 1886. Clerk, T. P. King. Treasurer, C. C. Van Reypen. Sexton, J. J. Phillips residence, Corner Bergen Avenue and Montgomery Street).

First Reformed Church.²—As early as 1807 an attempt was made to constitute a Reformed Dutch Church in Jersey City, under the jurisdiction of the Classis of Bergen, but the committee reported that there was an insufficient number of male communicants to form a consistory. Another attempt was subsequently made, with no better success. In 1828 the Associates of the Jersey Company deeded the land on the south side of Grand Street (previously offered to the Classis) to the First Presbyterian Church of Jersey City for the purpose of erecting a place of worship thereon, to be occupied by the congregation then worshipping in the old town hall. In 1830 this society, having parted with their pastor, Rev. Mr. Olcott, decided to unite with the Classis, and measures were immediately taken to accomplish that purpose. On the 16th of February the petition was favorably acted upon, a consistory was elected and ordained, and the Rev. Stephen H. Meeker, of Bushwick, Long Island, N. Y., was called and duly installed as pastor on the 9th of May. On the 20th of October the connection was dissolved, and he returned to Bushwick.

¹ By Rev. Cornelius Brett.

² By Henry Farmer.

During the pastorate of Rev. Matthias Lusk, which extended over a period of near fifteen years, the church had been neatly refitted, and a convenient lecture-room constructed under it. The indebtedness of the church was entirely liquidated.

On the 22d of September, 1853, the corner-stone of a new brown stone edifice was laid, but owing to financial embarrassments and the fact that the church could not be built for the sum stipulated, the work was delayed for two years. In 1854 the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church of New York rendered valuable aid, and a new subscription of fifteen thousand dollars was raised, with which the sanctuary was completed. The dedication service was performed on Sunday, April 5, 1857, the Rev. Matthias Lusk, A. W. McClure, D.D., John Garretson, D.D., and David Riddle, D.D., officiating.

The first building was removed to the opposite side of the street in 1858, and converted into Park Hall. It was destroyed by fire on the 12th of December, 1864.

The pastoral record of this church is as follows.

Revs. Stephen H. Meeker, from May 9, 1830, to Oct. 20, 1830; James R. Talmadge, from Feb. 8, 1831, to Jan. 30, 1833; Matthias Lusk, from Nov. 19, 1833, to Oct. 26, 1848; John Austin Yates was called July 31, 1849, but died August 26th before the date fixed for his installation; Daniel Lork, from June 16, 1850, to May 5, 1851; Alexander W. McClure, from May 19, 1852, to April 18, 1854; David H. Riddle, from April 19, 1857, to Dec. 22, 1862; Henry M. Scudder, from Dec. 5, 1864, to May 23, 1865; George H. Pecke, from Aug. 1, 1865, to Dec. 6, 1869; William W. Hal- loway, Jr., June 11, 1871.

First Reformed Dutch Church of the Township of Van Vorst.¹ (now known as Second Reformed Church of Jersey City) was organized March 15, 1846, with the following-named persons as constituent members: Antoinette Van Vorst, Mary Brower, Maria Brower, Ann Craig, B. W. Ryder, Earl B. Sippell, Lavinia Sippell, Lydia Baxter, Stephen Garretson, Hester Garretson, John Garretson, Catharine Ann Garretson, Sarah Traphagen, Henry Traphagen, Anna Traphagen, Charrissa B. Anderson, Eliza Gough, Clara R. Cobb, Benjamin Bell, John Berry and Sarah Berry. These, with others, making twenty-two families in all, having privately petitioned the Classis of Bergen to authorize the formation of a church in the then township of Van Vorst, Hudson

Co., the Classis granted the request, whereupon the petitioners proceeded to elect a consistory, as follows: Elders, Barzillai W. Ryder, Earl B. Sippell, Stephen Garretson and John Garretson; Deacons, John Berry and Benjamin Bell. On the 18th of March of the same year they became incorporated as "The First Reformed Dutch Church in the Township of Van Vorst." The first services were held in the Congregational Church, a small frame building on the southeast corner of Grove Street and Railroad Avenue. The new church on organizing called Rev. William J. R. Taylor to the pastorate. This clergyman was installed on the 27th of September, 1846. As the congregation had as yet no edifice of their own the installation services were held in the First Church, in Grand Street, Rev. A. H. Warner, Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D., and Rev. James Scott, D.D., officiating. Having secured a pastor, the next pressing requisite of the congregation was a church. A subscription was opened for the raising of the necessary funds, but these for a time came in slowly. At length the much-needed stimulus was afforded the enterprise by a donation of three valuable lots of land on Wayne Street, between Grove and Barrow, together with the handsome sum of one thousand dollars in cash. The gift was thankfully accepted, and on the 24th of August, 1847, the corner-stone of the present church was laid by the pastor, assisted by Rev. James Romeyn, Rev. J. C. Gulden, and Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D. On the 16th of January, 1848, the lower story was so far completed that services were held in the lecture-room, and on the 28th of May following the entire building was completed and dedicated.

The present church edifice is a substantial one of brick, with brown stone trimmings. The main audience room will seat about five hundred and fifty persons. The pews are grained in oak, trimmed with mahogany, and the freeseing of the walls and ceiling, while of simple design and "quiet" color, is characterized by general symmetry and good taste.

Under Mr. Taylor's energetic ministrations the church grew rapidly in numbers and resources. The failing health of the pastor's wife, however, compelled the former's resignation on the 4th of October, 1849. The congregation had at this time increased to ninety families. About one month after Mr. Taylor's resignation an unanimous call was extended to Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef, then pastor of the Second Reformed Dutch Church of Coxsackie, N. Y. The call was accepted, and on the 30th of December, 1849, Mr. Van Cleef was formally installed. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. V. V. Mabon, the charge to the pastor was given by Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D., and to the congregation by Rev. John Garretson. On the first Sabbath in January, 1850, the pastor preached his inaugural sermon, from 1 Corinthians i. 1: "Let a man so account of us as the ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of ¹From data furnished by Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, D.D.

God." Thus began a pastorate which is now the oldest in the city. At that time the corporate limits of Jersey City extended only as far west as Grove Street. The region north and west was known by the names of Harsimus and Pavonia, but was actually the township of Van Vorst, whence the name of the church. The population of Jersey City was then about eleven thousand. The first serious check to the growing congregation now took place. On the night of Dec. 13, 1851, the church building took fire, and the interior, with the organ, was almost wholly destroyed. The building having already proved inadequate in size for the rapidly increasing congregation, it was deemed advisable, in connection with the repairs, to enlarge it to the full depth of the lot. This was accordingly done, and on the 13th of June, 1852, the building, enlarged and greatly improved, was reopened for divine service. About this time a number of families were dismissed to organize a separate church in the upper part of the city. The parish so formed—now known as the Park Reformed Church—is under the pastoral care of Rev. J. Howard Suydam, and is one of the most flourishing in the city.

In March, 1861, the church joined with the other Reformed Dutch Churches in Jersey City in establishing the Morgan Street Mission Sunday-school. This mission has proved very successful. Its property consists of a lot and a commodious chapel on First Street. A new church has grown out of the mission. It is known as the Free Reformed Church, and Rev. H. Mattice is its pastor.

In March, 1871, Mr. D. Van Winkle, Jr., who was afterward joined by a number of the young people of the church, organized a mission Sunday-school in the western part of the city. This enterprise has also proved highly successful, and a German Church has grown out of this mission.

The Sunday-school of the church was organized Jan. 16 and 23, 1848, under the direction of the consistory, with eleven teachers and about forty scholars. Of the original scholars, two are now serving in the school as teachers. One of the former scholars, now Rev. E. T. Corwin, D.D., is pastor of a large congregation at Millstone, N. J., and is already known as a scholar and an author. Hon. A. A. Hardenbergh, was one of the original teachers, and is still actively connected with the church. The first superintendent was B. W. Ryder, followed by A. D. Hope, J. D. Lawrence, James Lauder, M. Bailey, A. S. Whiton, Thomas M. Gopsill (who held the office for sixteen years), and the present incumbent, Charles J. Dodgshun.

The society now numbers one hundred and twenty families and two hundred and twenty communicants. Since the beginning of Dr. Van Cleef's pastorate he has received more than seven hundred persons into the communion of the church. The value of the church property in 1884 was thirty thousand dollars.

The officers of the church for 1884 were as follows.

Pastor, Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef; Elders, A. A. Lutkins, M.D., Theodore F. Morris, M.D., M. L. Sendorling, Isaac I. Vanderboek; Deacons, N. D. Wortendyke, Peter Van Deripe, William S. Sewell, William J. Hough.

Third Reformed Church.¹—A meeting of persons friendly to the organization of a Third Reformed Dutch Church in the Fourth Ward of Jersey City was held in April, 1852, and on frequent subsequent dates, the prominent persons in the movement being Stephen Garretson, Thomas Taber, John Smyth, Henry M. Traphagen, Lewis D. Hardenbergh, Philip Fraeigh, Jr., William Gaul, Samuel Knapp and others. On the 20th of April the Classis granted the petition for the organization of the church, appointing as a committee the Rev. Drs. Taylor and Abel and Rev. Paul D. Van Cleef. On the 7th of May the committee received on certificate fifteen communicants, and immediately afterwards the first elders and deacons were elected. The persons chosen were Stephen Garretson, Thomas Taber, John H. Smyth, L. D. Hardenbergh as elders; Peter Hart, John Lullum and Robert Moore as deacons.

They were duly ordained on the 23d of May, the Revs. B. C. Taylor and P. D. Van Cleef officiating. These services took place in a hall owned by Mr. Smyth, in Grove Street. The certificate of incorporation was signed and filed the next day. A call was proffered to Rev. William J. R. Taylor, whose term of service commenced on July 25th. A deed for three valuable lots of ground on Grove Street, between Pavonia Avenue and North Second Street, on which to erect a church, was presented by Miss Anna V. H. Traphagen. A neat and commodious tabernacle, accommodating four hundred and fifty persons, was erected on the southeast corner of Erie and South Third Streets, and occupied until the permanent edifice was built. The whole cost of the building and lot was borne by Judge Stephen Garretson, on the condition of the payment of interest at six per cent. by the church. The permanent building was erected on the corner of Eighth Street, fronting on Hamilton Square. On Sept. 20, 1859, the cornerstone was laid, and dedication services were held in the Church on May 6, 1860.

The several pastors of this church have been as follows:

Revs. William J. R. Taylor, from Aug. 19, 1852, to Nov. 14, 1854; J. Paschal Strong, from Jan. 21, 1855, to Nov. 25, 1856; Calvin Selden, from May 10, 1857, to Oct. 5, 1857; Cornelius L. Wells, from June 13, 1858, to March 5, 1863; J. Romeyn Berry, from Nov. 25, 1863, to Nov. 1, 1868; J. Howard Suydam, from Jan. 21, 1869.

Second Reformed Church,¹ of Hudson City, corner of Central Avenue, near Franklin Street. This congregation was organized on Nov. 6, 1859, and received the ministrations of Rev. C. Doepenschmidt, of Jersey City, as a missionary. In 1863 it was united, with a mission at Washington village, under the pastorate of Rev. Leopold Niohn. Rev. C. Doepenschmidt was installed pastor of the united church on Dec. 11, 1864. Mr. Hammond was installed July 23, 1871. Rev. C. Grittner was the pastor in Sept. 1884.

¹By Henry Farmer.

Lafayette Reformed Church of Jersey City—This church is located on Communipaw Avenue, corner of Pine Street, and was organized in 1863, with seventeen persons dismissed for that purpose from Rev. Dr. B. C. Taylor's church, nine from the Second Reformed Church of Jersey City, two received on confession of faith and another a short time afterwards. The following-named persons were the original twenty-eight members: Abraham Brittin, John I. Van Horne, Michael Simmons, Justus Slater, Epaphrus Warren, Stephen St. John, John Van Horne, Jr., Jacob Van Horne, John A. Bouker, James Stevens, James P. Zabriskie, Henry I. Vanderbeck, Justus Slater, Jr., Mrs. Abraham Brittin, Mrs. Rebecca Van Horne, Mrs. Valentine Havens, Mrs. Jane Brinkerhoff, Mrs. Peter Vreeland, Mrs. Henry Vanderbeck, Mrs. James P. Zabriskie, Mrs. John Van Horne, Jr., Mrs. Jacob Van Horne, Mrs. John A. Bouker, Mrs. James Stevens, Mrs. John Post, Mrs. Justus Slater, Mrs. Stephen St. John, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Slater.

A Sunday-school with about one hundred scholars and teachers was connected with this new church organization, and services were held in the upper rooms of the public school building. Public services were, for some length of time, conducted by Rev. Dr. Taylor, Rev. Dr. Van Cleef and other ministers of neighboring congregations. Among those who preached for this people in 1863 was the Rev. James B. Hardenbergh, D.D., who for forty years had been ministering to various Reformed Churches, and was then living in New York without a charge. Mr. Hardenbergh, however, declined a call to the then youthful congregation.

Plans for building a plain chapel and church edifice were drawn four ordinary city building lots secured, and the plans carried out, so far as the lecture-room was concerned which was completed prior to July, 1864. The subscriptions were then exhausted, yet the foundation walls of a church edifice had been laid and some building material purchased. A contract had been made to put up the side walls of the church, when, for want of funds, work upon the temple ceased for a while. In 1865 money enough was raised to put up the spire and roof the building, when another forced cessation of operations was met with. However, in November, 1866, the edifice was completed and dedicated, but not till 1873 was this working, struggling society free from debt.

In 1877, by a generous donation by one of the elders of the church, of two building lots on Pacific Avenue, a fresh impulse was given to the parsonage committee; the energy and devotion of the congregation carried to a successful completion the building of a comfortable and delightful home for their minister, which was completed in 1879.

In May, 1864, William Rankin Duryce, a young man of twenty-six summers, was laboring in the vineyard of his Master, near Williamsburgh, Long Island, having preached there about fifteen months, and manifesting during this time unmistakable evidences of his solid worth and devotion to the cause of Christ, to which he had consecrated his best energies, was called upon by Justus Slater, and asked to "Come over and preach for this people." Young Duryce had left the theological seminary in 1861, and for a few months in 1862 was chaplain of a Kentucky regiment of Union soldiers; then entered the mission field, near Williamsburgh, N. Y. Here his peculiar tact and talent was discovered by a Presbyterian Church which had been long established, and which extended to him a call to become its pastor. He very courteously declined the offer to be pastor of a rich congregation, and accepted the invitation to "Come over and preach to this people," which resulted in his being installed as pastor of this church, on the last day of July, 1864, by the South Classis of Bergen, which sacred office he still fills to the honor of the cause and the satisfaction of a large and flourishing membership and congregation, he being the first and only pastor of this church.

During his pastorate of twenty years over this church, he has baptized 206 children, 11 adults; officiated at 109 marriages and 225 funerals. There was in June, 1884, a membership of 140, with a church property valued at $35,000.

The following is a list of those who have served as elders and deacons, in the order of their election. Where re-elected the names are not repeated.

Elders, Abraham Brittin, Justus Slater, Jacob Van Horne, James P. Zabriskie, John Van Horne, Jr., John C. Westcott, John McIlroy, John A. Bouker, Paul M. Drake, John W. Atwood, Thorne P. Sherwood, Deacons, John Van Horne, Jr., John A. Bouker, James P. Zabriskie, John McIlroy, James Stevens, Morris S. Roe, Valentine Havens, Russell W. Woodward, Thorne P. Sherwood, Henry Watrous, James Ward, Cornelius V. H. Post, Coradine Thompson, William W. Edwards, Richard Van Dusen, Jr., Robert A. McKnight, David Hensley, C. A. Bettman, William Booth, Alexander F. Denniston, Isaac L. R. Lefferts, Charles V. Drake. The officers of the church for 1884 were Elders, John A. Bouker, Jacob Van Horne, Paul M. Drake, Thorne P. Sherwood; Deacons, William Booth, Isaac L. R. Lefferts, Alexander F. Denniston, Charles V. Drake; Sunday-school Superintendent, Richard Van Dusen, Jr.

Reformed Church of Greenville, corner of Danforth and Ocean Avenues. The first services of this congregation were held in the former township schoolhouse on the 1st of January, 1871, by the Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D., of Bergen. Addresses were also made at this meeting by F. Jones, of Bergen Point, and W. R. Durryce, of Lafayette. The society was put upon a permanent basis on the 19th of February of the same year, and soon after called the Rev. Alexander Young, who accepted the call, and remained with the congregation nine years, and was followed by the present pastor, Rev. P. T. Pockman. A brick building was erected at a cost of eleven thousand dollars, and on Jan. 16, 1876, was dedicated for divine worship by Rev. Dr. Taylor. The following persons constituted the original membership of the church: Stephen B. Vreeland and wife, Mrs. Thomas Taylor, Mrs. George W. Howe, Mrs. Jesse D. Abrams, Mrs. Cornelius R. Van Riper, Miss Georgina Dillaway, Mrs. Catharine B. McAveny, William Currie, Peter V. Voorhees and wife, Isaac N. Kershaw, Edwin Battley and wife, Miss Fanny Stockdale, Mrs. Michael Schultz, Mrs. Lisette Jacobs, John Morrell and wife, Mrs. Charles H. Winfield, Mrs. Stephen Gorham, Michael Terhune and wife.

¹From historical sermon, preached by Rev. W. Rankin Duryce, D.D., June 22, 1864.

²By Henry Farmer.

The first officers of the church were Stephen B. Vreeland, Edwin Battley, Michael Terhune, elders; William Currie, Peter V. Kershaw and John Morrell, deacons.

The present officers are Michael Schultz, Albert Chestro, Stephen B. Vreeland, Samuel H. Conklin, elders; G. B. Boice, S. L. Harvey, M. H. Smith and H. Brooke, deacons.

The church is prospering under the ministrations of Rev. Mr. Pockman, and has a membership of one hundred and twenty-eight. A large and energetic Sabbath-school has always been the pride of the church.

Central Avenue Reformed Church of Jersey City.

—This church was organized July 10, 1872, with the following-named persons as constituent members; Willard T. Eddy, Susan Eddy, Peter D. Vreeland, Lavina Frederick Vreeland, Peter Conover, Catharine Conover, James Christie, Charity I. Christie, Henry B. Robinson, Margaret G. Robinson, William D. Smith and John Fletcher.

The first elders of the church were Willard T. Eddy and Peter D. Vreeland. The deacons were James Christie and W. D. Smith.

The church edifice, located on the corner of Central Avenue and Bowers Street, is a frame structure, purchased by the congregation in 1884, at a cost of eight thousand two hundred dollars.

The pastors of this church have been Rev. George H. Pool, installed Nov. 30, 1872, and dismissed April 15, 1873; Rev. George L. Wolfe, installed May 19, 1874, and dismissed April 20, 1875; Rev. Algernon Matthews, Aug. 2, 1875, to June 17, 1876; Rev. W. T. Griffin, June 20, 1878, to April 4, 1881; Rev. W. C. Handy, Oct. 17, 1881, to Dec. 4, 1882; Rev. C. S. Wright, the present pastor, was installed April 1, 1883.

The elders of the church in 1884 were Jacob Newkirk, William Willy, T. Fireloch and W. T. Chestow.

The deacons were A. Shepherd, Samuel Miller and Duncan Campbell. Membership, one hundred and twenty-five.

The Sunday-school connected with this church numbers two hundred pupils and teachers, and is in charge of W. T. Chestow.

Free Reformed Church,¹—177 and 179 First Street. In March, 1861, the Bethel, or Morgan Street Mission-school, was instituted with thirty scholars and eighteen teachers. In 1863 the chapel was dedicated, and subsequently a regular service was held, first on Thursday evening and then on Sunday evening, the Rev. Mr. Shaw officiating as missionary. The members of the church gathered by Mr. Shaw met on April 29, 1872, and chose as elders Thompson Harris and James Murphy, and as deacons James C. Lindsay and John Sheridan. On May 6th the church was fully organized, with the Rev. Mr. Shaw as pastor, the following being the original members: Mrs. Margaret Craig, Mr. James Lindsay and wife, Mary Ann Brown, Thomas S. Harris, David Smyth, John Sheridan and Mary M., his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Ward, George Randal and Elizabeth, his wife, Mrs. Sarah Whitford, Robert Greig and wife, Mrs. Jessie Todd, Robert Thompson and wife, Mrs. Mary O'Hare, James Murphy and wife.

On December 4th in the same year the Rev. A. J. Park was called, and on Jan. 12, 1873, he was installed. He remained in pastoral charge until succeeded by Rev. Henry Mattice, the present pastor, in January, 1879. The Morgan Street Chapel passed out of existence long ago.

The present edifice on First Street cost about eight thousand dollars. Two years ago the church paid off a mortgage and floating debt of four thousand six hundred and sixty dollars and repaired the building at an additional expense of two thousand five hundred dollars, all of which has been paid. It has a membership of one hundred and thirty-four. The officers of the church are Robert Thompson, James C. Lindsay and Alexander Hunter, elders; John Davidson, George Bryan, Robert Hare and John V. Eastland, deacons.

First Presbyterian Church, Jersey City Heights.

—It became evident in the summer of 1855 to recent residents in what was then known as South Bergen, Hudson Co., N. J., that the community required enlarged facilities for hearing and diffusing the Gospel of Christ.

Report was accordingly made to the Third Presbytery of New York. Its committee surveyed the ground, and held occasional services for divine worship during that autumn in a building known as Miss Carpenter's Seminary, on Hudson (now Storm)

¹ By Henry Farmer.

² From historical discourse by the pastor, Rev. Edward W. French.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
JERSEY CITY HEIGHTS.

Avenue. With this beginning the war rested until the next summer :

On one of his last visits to the manse, Mr. John G. Parker left for safe-keeping, a package containing among other things, five and a half leaves from his "church journal," from which the following extracts are made :

"In the month of July, 1856, my wife and I called on the Rev. James G. Craighead and wife, at their residence in Bergen. They had resided here since June 1st. The subject of the importance and necessity of the formation of a Presbyterian Church was freely discussed during the evening, and we were united in opinion that efforts should be made to gather a nucleus, with a hope and view of its subsequent formation. We had knowledge of but few Presbyterian families in the town, and we anticipated toil and expense to full heavily on the few, should the Christian enterprise be attempted. In August the subject had been mentioned to persons in the neighborhood, and the current opinion expressed was that there was need of another church here.

"In September I invited friends favorable to this enterprise to meet at my house, and the Rev. J. G. Craighead, Alexander Bonnell, Henry Dueschery, Orrin H. Crosby and John S. Suthphen were present, and all were united in the opinion that a Presbyterian Church was necessary for the welfare of our families, and also for the welfare of the community. We offered prayer for God to guide us in this important matter. No resolutions were passed. Mr. Craighead, Mr. Crosby and myself thought it best to engage Miss Carpenter's seminary for a year, and Mr. Crosby was advised to make the arrangement, and he engaged her school-house at fifty dollars a year. Rev. Mr. Craighead was delegated to procure supply for the pulpit, and he engaged Rev. James B. Beaur to preach in the school-house on Sabbath, Sept. 21, 1856, and I had a handbill printed and posted up, as follows :

"PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN BERGEN, N. J.

"Arrangements have been made for Divine Service in Miss Carpenter's Seminary, on Hudson Avenue, every Sabbath morning at half-past 10 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 o'clock. Sabbath-school will be held in the same place on Sabbath afternoons at 2 o'clock. A meeting for conference and prayer on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

"The public are most cordially invited to attend and unite in this Christian enterprise.

"BERGEN, Sept. 16, 1856."

"Rev. James B. Beaur preached, according to appointment, to an attentive congregation of about eighty persons, morning and evening.

"On Wednesday evening, September 24, 1856, we held our first prayer-meeting, which was attended by about twelve persons."

The next day Mr. Parker visited the theological seminary, and engaged Mr. J. Clement French to preach to the little flock, but on account of illness he was unable to fill his engagement, and therefore sent his brother, Edward W. He preached morning and evening of Sabbath, Sept. 28, 1856.

The Sabbath-school had on that day an addition of five teachers and twenty-three scholars. The congregation also increased on every succeeding Sabbath, and with such sanctions the following notice was posted on the seminary, popularly known as the school-house :

"This Religious Society and Congregation, usually meeting for public worship in this place, will meet hereon the evening of October 21, 1856, at 7 o'clock, to elect Trustees, in order that the Society may be incorporated according to law.

"JOHN PARKER.

"JAMES G. CRAIGHEAD.

"ORRIN H. CROSBY.

"Dated at Bergen, N. J., this 11th Oct., 1856."

On Monday, Oct. 13, 1856, Messrs. Parker and Crosby, on behalf of the congregation, applied to the Third Presbytery of New York for the organization of a Presbyterian Church. Their request was granted, and a committee, consisting of the Rev. Samuel D. Burckhard, D. D., of New York City, the Rev. Charles Hoover, of Jersey City, the Rev. James C. Egbert, of West Hoboken, N. J., and Elder Stevens, of New York City, was appointed, who met the congregation in the "school-house" on the evening of Oct. 24, 1856, when twenty-four persons (one by profession of faith and twenty-three by certificate of dismission) were duly constituted as "The First Presbyterian Church of Bergen, N. J."

At the same time a board of seven trustees was elected, namely, the Rev. James G. Craighead, John G. Parker, Jacob M. Marseles (the latter never met with the board, and his successor was chosen at the next election), John Raymond, Alexander Bonnell, James C. McBirney and Elisha Boss, Jr.

The above-named soon afterwards signed and placed on record, in the office of the clerk of the Court of Common Pleas in the county of Hudson, N. J., the following document :

"Whereas, the Religious Society and Congregation usually meeting for public worship at Miss Carpenter's Female Seminary, on Hudson Avenue, in the town of Bergen County of Hudson, N. J., did assemble at their said place of meeting on the 24th day of October, 1856, to discuss previous notice of the time and purpose of assembling having been given by an advertisement set up in open view at such place of meeting, and when assembled, did, by plurality of voices, of such said Society and Congregation as was present, elect seven of the said Congregation and Society to be Trustees of the same. Now therefore, we, the said Trustees, selected as aforesaid, do hereby certify that we have taken upon ourselves the name of "The Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Bergen," and do request this our Certificate to be by you recorded according to law.

"Witness our hands and seals this 24th day of Oct., 1856."

Messrs. Parker and Crosby were elected then as ruling elders for the term of two years, and Messrs. Richard H. Westervelt and Robert D. Wynkoop as deacons for the same time.

Edward W. French served the church as stated supply from Sept. 28, 1856, to Nov. 19, 1856, when he received a call to its pastoral office. The Rev. James C. Craighead, moderator of the meeting, Messrs. John Raymond, Joseph H. Merwin and Alexander Bonnell were chosen by the congregation to sign and present to the Presbytery this call.

Mr. French signified to the church, Nov. 26, 1856, his acceptance of it, and continued to preach as pastor-elect until Jan. 15, 1857, when he was ordained and installed as pastor by the Third Presbytery of New York, with services in the "school-house," as follows :

The Rev. Oliver B. Bidwell presided and put the constitutional questions. The Rev. Asa D. Smith, D. D., preached the sermon, from John xii. 21. The Rev. James G. Craighead offered the ordaining prayer, the Presbytery laying on hands. The Rev. Samuel D. Burckhard, D. D., gave the charge to the pastor, and Rev. Alfred E. Campbell, D. D., gave the charge to the people.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered for the first time to this church on Sabbath morning, Feb. 1, 1857. The roll was then enriched by the following names: Mrs. E. V. S. Bonnell, Orrin H. Crosby, Mrs. J. F. Crosby, W. J. Demarest, Henry Dusenberry, Mrs. E. A. Dusenberry, J. A. Emmons, Mrs. A. M. Emmons, Mrs. M. L. Foy, G. L. Hall, Mrs. M. M. Hall, M. Honeyman, Mrs. J. F. Honeyman, J. G. Parker, Mrs. J. C. Parker, John Raymond, Mrs. J. Raymond, Mrs. L. E. Rollins, Alexander Smith, Mrs. I. R. Smith, R. H. Westervelt, Mrs. L. F. Westervelt, R. D. Wynkoop and Mrs. A. A. Wynkoop, all but one received by certificate. These individuals are entitled to honorable recognition as among the founders of this church. The same may be truly affirmed of a few others who embarked in it at a later period of its first year. Thus this church came into being. This was the first Presbyterian Church in Bergen, and its growth depended upon the influx of a new element in the population. It had not the wealth which swiftly obliterates material obstacles and attracts popular attention. Those who favored it realized that they pledged themselves to suspense discord, toil and liberality. Trial soon came. The autumn and winter of 1857-58 are notable for commercial panic: yet this young and vigorous church, without the wealth of her elder sisters, struggled through the crash of those years of suspense, and finally came off victorious.

A plot of ground one hundred feet in front and one hundred and seventy-five feet in depth, upon which the church edifice now stands, had been purchased, and on Sept. 16, 1857, the corner-stone was laid in presence of a large congregation. Rev. J. G. Craighead read selections from the Scriptures: Rev. B. C. Taylor, D.D., offered prayer; Rev. J. Clement French read the hymns; the pastor made an address and laid the corner-stone; and the Rev. George L. Prentiss, D.D., also delivered an address.

As time went on, and the panic of 1857 passed away, the walls of the church edifice went up, and on Thursday, Oct. 28, 1858, the edifice in which this church has since worshiped was dedicated to the glory of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, with the following order of exercises: Prayer of invocation by the pastor; reading of Scriptures and hymns by Rev. J. G. Craighead; prayer of dedication by S. D. Burchard, D.D.; reading of hymn by Rev. J. Clement French; sermon by the pastor,—text, Ps. xevi. 6, last clause; address, Rev. Charles Parker; reading of hymn Rev. James C. Egbert; prayer by Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, D.D.

The Sabbath-school followed the church to the new sanctuary on Sunday, Oct. 31, 1858, but the prayer-meeting was maintained in the school-house till May 29, 1859, when that building was abandoned for church purposes, and it has since been removed and converted into a double dwelling.

In 1859 the trustees erected, at a cost of five thousand five hundred dollars, the session-house, with appropriate accommodation for the Sabbath-school, lecture, concert, prayer-meeting, social reunions and festivals. The first service held in it was on Wednesday evening, Jan. 4, 1860.

Four more lots, south of and next to the church property, were bought, making the church plot two hundred feet in front by one hundred and seventy-eight feet on the north, and one hundred and fifty-nine feet on the south. A row of sheds for the carriages of worshippers was built at the rear of the added ground. Paving of every street gradually made it unnecessary, and in the spring of 1874 it was removed.

The notable fact of pecuniary independence did not beguile the congregation into self-complacency or the trustees into inactivity. The former authorized the latter, June 22, 1865, to levy an additional assessment of seven per cent. upon the valuation of the pews, commencing from July 1st following, and to begin to build a manse on the ground owned by the church as soon as four thousand dollars had been secured. The ladies concerted and set in operation, July 20, 1865, successful schemes for aiding the church treasurer. As the result, the manse was begun in the spring of 1866, and fully completed in the next November, at a total cost of $8398.20.

The pioneer officers of this church were:

Elders, J. G. Parker and O. H. Crosby; Deacons, R. H. Westervelt and R. D. Wynkoop; Trustees, Rev. James G. Craighead, J. G. Parker, John Raymond, Alexander Bonnell, J. C. McBirney and Elisha Bliss, Jr.

The following were the officers in 1884:

Elders, A. Bonnell, H. Dusenberry, C. A. De Witt, S. R. Form, n. M. D., James Wilkinson, M. D., David W. Hull, M. F. Stives and C. D. Ridgway; Deacons, A. H. Porlee, C. P. Benedict; Trustees, G. F. Perkins, J. W. Dusenberry, J. R. Whyte, C. D. Ridgway, M. B. McMahan and Nelson Provost.

The membership in 1884, was three hundred and sixty. Value of church property, forty-five thousand dollars.

The church has been most fortunate in the retention of Rev. Edward W. French as its pastor from his first trial sermon, in September, 1856, to the present time.

The following recapitulation of the statistical history of the church was furnished by Mr. Charles A. De Witt, and is given only for the first twenty-five years of the church's existence:

To the Treasurer of the Board of Trustees	$214,005 58
To the Sabbath-School Missionary Association	6,711 41
To the Ladies' Missionary Association	3,912 14
To the Deacons' Collection	4,349 20
To the Ministerial Relief	1,214 48
To the Publication Board	1,796 71
To the Sustentation Board	562 39
To the Freedmen's Board	506 11
To the Ministerial Education	1,120 63
To the Foreign Mission Board	3,861 88
To the Home Mission Board	4,733 96
To the Church Erection Board	1,439 31
Miscellaneous	11,069 65
Grand Total	$255,142 55
Average per annum	$10,205 70
Average per month	$850 47

Edmond A. French

NUMBERS OF MEMBERS ADMITTED TO THE CHURCH DURING TWENTY-FIVE YEARS ENDING OCT. 24, 1881

By Certificate	73
By Profession	330
Total	403

Of this number, three hundred and eighty have been dismissed to other churches, eighty-seven have died, which leaves the present membership four hundred and forty-six.

REV. EDWARD WARNER FRENCH, D.D., is the son of Rev. Justus Warner French, an eminently successful and beloved minister of the Congregational Church in Vermont, and afterwards the educator in Western New York of young men, mainly for the ministry.

His younger son is now the pastor of Park Presbyterian Church, Newark, N. J.

The subject of this sketch was born at Barre, Vt. in 1829. He was graduated with high honor at Williams College in 1852. He studied theology at Union Seminary, New York and at Newport, R. I.

He was licensed by the Third Presbytery of New York in 1856. During that year he aided in the organization of a Presbyterian Church in Bergen, Hudson Co. (now Jersey City), to whose pulpit he was unanimously called. He has had no other charge, and is just now completing the twenty-eighth year of his pastorate in the First Presbyterian Church of Jersey City, in which he is greatly beloved.

Dr. French is esteemed one of the eminent clergymen, not only of the Presbyterian denomination, but of the Protestant Church of the United States.

This reputation is not undeserved, but has its foundation in justice and in true merit. He is profound, analytical, logical and psychological. Being deeply reflective and studious naturally and by practice, he is introspective, and his sermons deal with the thoughts that influence human conduct, with the operations of the mind, with the sentiments of the heart, with the motive impulses and relations of the inner man to God, to the springs and sources of character rather than to the superficial appearances, that often mislead and are frequently misunderstood.

Dr. French conducts worship in the sanctuary. This is impressed from the beginning of the services upon every attendant. There is solemnity without self-sufficiency on the part of the preacher, humility without abasement, dignity of office without pride of person and elevated thought without rhapsody.

The doctor speaks with measured slowness, in clear-cut, distinct utterance, using extreme care in the selection of words that they may express the thought with utmost precision and vigor. It would be difficult to find another preacher more terse and comprehensive in language. He avoids hackneyed phrases as one would shun a pestilence. This habit does not, as one would suppose, rob his sentences of polish, but it demands close attention, since one cannot know what is coming, and mental abstractions cause one to lose the thread of the discourse. "Multum in parvo" might most aptly be applied to all that he utters.

By consequence Dr. French is most impressive and educational. His hearers carry his thoughts with them from the house of worship.

This power of concise expression and the habit of concentrated thought become expansive instead of narrow, comprehensive instead of focal. They suggest whole regions of thought of which the speaker has only deftly indicated the outline, as the true artist, with only a few touches of the brush here and there, will reveal the human face divine, or by a single stroke change the whole expression of the countenance.

Dr. French is not unimaginative. On the contrary, his illustrations and metaphors are most apt and pictorial. They instruct, while elucidating the promulgated ideas. He uses them, however, sparingly, yet to good purpose, for they are always new and telling.

His personal appearance does not strongly suggest the clergyman, though his broad and high forehead stamps him as a man of large capabilities. While there is no elocutionary effort displayed in his sermonizing, he attracts by the very peculiarities of intonation and manner, which may almost be called eccentricities. By the universal rule of associations and affinities, Dr. French has a church membership including many intellectual, learned, professional and wealthy people, who nobly aid the work of spreading the gospel here and elsewhere, and who are attached by the strongest ties of admiration and love to their able, earnest and spiritual pastor.

It may not be amiss to close this sketch with the thought that in the exercise of his mental endowments and acquisitions, and in all the keen and learned discourses which Dr. French preaches, the gospel of salvation through Jesus Christ is always the principal theme, as in all the varied styles of gold and silver chronometers of value the mainspring is always operative, thus giving them worth and effectiveness.

Westminster Presbyterian Church, 1 Pavonia Avenue, near Summit Avenue, Jersey City Heights. This society was organized June 13, 1871, at the house of John Gordon, No. 534 Summit Avenue, with James Dunn and George P. Howell, elders; James Martin and James Munroe, deacons; Henry Dusenbury, George P. Howell, Charles C. Jewell, John Gordon and Robert T. Rogers, trustees. The church was a branch from the First Presbyterian Church of Bergen (Dr. French), and passed through many trials and difficulties incident to and during its infancy, but has happily emerged from them all, and for the past five years has steadily prospered. The building is of wood, and cost originally eleven thousand dollars; it is now valued at seven thousand dollars. Before another year has elapsed the congregation confidently expect to be worshipping in a new and commodious building, corner of Summit and Magnolia Avenues.

The pastoral record of this church is as follows:

¹ By Henry Farmer.

Rev. John S. Glendenning, installed Oct. 26, 1871; he served about five years. Rev. O. B. Bidwell, installed April 26, 1877, remaining about two years. He was succeeded, May 10, 1880, by Rev. Israel W. Hathaway.

The officers of the church for 1884 are:

Elders, George P. Howell, John Gordon, Charles C. Jewell, William H. Banks; Deacons, John Keenan, James Banks; Trustees, Robert Kerr, L. S. Willard, Sebastian Brodt, Orion Banks, Charles Frazier.

Second Presbyterian Church,¹ Third Street, near Jersey Avenue. This church had its origin in Mission School No. 7, of Harsimus. Its organization dates back to December, 1851, when about twenty members took their first communion in Smith's Hall, corner of Grove and Fourth Streets, under the pastoral charge of Rev. Charles Hoover, who remained with the congregation about seven and a half years. He was succeeded by Rev. James M. Stevenson, who ministered to the flock nearly seven years. Subsequently Rev. Hiram Eddy, D.D., officiated three years; Rev. John R. Fisher, nine and a half years, who was succeeded by Rev. Alexander McKelvey, the present pastor, his installation taking place March 13, 1884. The first elders who served under Rev. Mr. Hoover as moderators of the session were Thomas S. Doremus, Darius S. Crosby and William Rhodes. The church edifice, which is of brick, was dedicated Jan. 17, 1858, the dedicatory sermon being preached by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hoover.

The property is valued at fifty thousand dollars, and the membership of the church is one hundred and seventy. The officers of the church for 1884 are

Rev. Alexander McKelvey, moderator; J. H. Frye, William German, William Manee, J. F. Schmidt and William C. White, elders.

Second United Presbyterian Church,¹ located on Hancock Avenue, south of Bower Street, was organized on the 4th of April, 1871, and was opened for worship in December, 1873. The original constituent members were William Magill, Margaret Magill, Jane McDonald, Robert S. Stewart, Ann Stewart, Samuel Martin, Christina Martin, William McCune, Rachel McCune, Thomas Martin, James Henry and Martha Henry. Samuel Martin and James Henry were the first elders, and Rev. Robert Armstrong, D.D., the present pastor, was the first and only minister the church has had since its organization, while Samuel Martin and James Henry still remain in the office of elders, together with William Magill, Robert S. Stewart and Daniel Black. The trustees are Lyle Reed, Samuel V. Reed, David Banks, Peter Randal, Arthur Fry, David Shurie and Thomas Martin. When instituted, the congregation had neither church building nor ground on which to build, nor a dollar toward procuring either. Now they have a handsome church edifice, of wood, valued at twenty-five thousand dollars, and the church is free from all incumbrance.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

Summit Avenue United Presbyterian Church.—This is one of the young churches of Jersey City, it having been organized June 13, 1882, with the following named persons as constituent members: Kenneth Dingwall, Maria Dingwall, James Heggans, Sr., Sarah Heggans, Alfred Scott, Mrs. Ellen Scott, Thomas Gallagher, Mrs. Ada Gallagher, R. G. Booth, James A. Booth, Mary J. Booth, Joseph McConet, Jr., Mrs. Anna McConet, Mrs. Eliza J. McCaw, Hamilton McCaw, Miss Alicia J. T. McCaw, H. F. Burlew, Mrs. Samantha Burlew, Thomas Stewart and Mrs. Amanda Stewart.

The first elders of the church were Hamilton McCaw, James Heggans, Sr., and Thomas Stewart.

Trustees, Kenneth Dingwall, president; H. F. Burlew, secretary; Hamilton McCaw, treasurer; Thomas Gallagher, Thomas Stewart, James Heggans, Sr., and R. G. Booth.

The church edifice is a comfortable two-story frame building, the lower story divided into lecture and Sunday-school and janitor's rooms, while the main audience-room is in the second story. The church is conducted on the free-seat plan. There is connected with this church a flourishing Sunday-school of one hundred and twenty-eight pupils, a Young People's Literary Society and a Ladies' Missionary Society.

First Congregational Church of Jersey City,² located on the corner of York and Hudson Streets.

At Iroquois Hall, April 14, 1858, an organization of this church was effected, mutual pledges being entered into by nineteen persons, male and female, on profession of faith, and by letters from sister churches.

On April 25, 1858, public religious services were held, attended with great interest when under direction of Council. The new church was welcomed to the brotherhood of Congregational Churches in Lyceum Hall.

The original members were Mrs. E. E. Allen, Charles H. Dummer, J. V. W. De Hart, N. P. Dennison, A. S. Hatch, Miss Theodocia Hatch, A. H. Furlan, F. W. B. Fleming, Mrs. Mary M. Fleming, Mrs. Jane E. Hatch, S. F. Lund, Mrs. Catharine Lund, Harriet T. Storrs, Stephen W. St. John, Mrs. Laura E. St. John, Wm. S. Taylor,³ Mrs. Julia J. Taylor,³ Illinois Winter, Mrs. Elmira Winter. The above-named persons constituted the membership of the Tabernacle Church, or First Congregational Church.

On April 17, 1861, John Milton Holmes, of Andover Theological Seminary, received an unanimous call, which he immediately accepted, and thus before completing his course of study at the seminary entered upon his work as pastor and teacher, and on May 23, 1861, was ordained and installed to the work of the gospel ministry as pastor of the First Congregational Church, which position he occupied with increased usefulness, unremitting in efforts to enlarge and strengthen the growing interests of "his beloved church."

² By Henry Farmer

³ The only remaining members of the original nineteen.

But hard work among his people and the deep interest which he took in all matters growing out of the intense excitement of the times brought on failing health and he was obliged to give up, and with deepest feelings of grief and sorrow, after a pastorate of something over eight years, was, on May 5, 1869, regularly dismissed, and on Sept. 29, 1871, died in Jersey City, in the midst of a beloved and sorrowing people. The church and society extended an unanimous call to Rev. G. B. Wilcox, of New London, which he accepted on Dec. 8, 1869 (the same year that Mr. Holmes was dismissed), was installed, and after a pastorate of about six years was dismissed to take charge of a church in New London, April 27, 1875.

The third and present pastor, Rev. Addison P. Lorter, of Chelsea, Mass., received a call to the Tabernacle Church in April, 1877, and was installed May 23, 1877.

During the two years the church was without a pastor services were maintained both Sunday mornings and evenings, as well as its weekly meetings, with great regularity.

The church met for religious services in Lyceum Hall, Franklin Hall and in other halls, migrating from place to place as seemed necessary to accommodate the growing needs of the church, until June 16, 1862, when the corner-stone of the Tabernacle was laid with appropriate ceremonies at the corner of York and Henderson Streets, and on May 3, 1863, was formally dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. The building is brick, standing on five full lots, fronting on Henderson Street seventy-five feet, and on York one hundred and twenty-two and a half feet, and worth not far from thirty thousand dollars.

The interior of the main building is divided into an audience-room, seventy-five by ninety feet, with lecture and Sunday-school room and library-rooms in the rear, with ladies' parlor, pastor's study and ante-rooms on second floor.

The first officers of the church were:

Pastor, Rev. John Milton Holmes; Deacons, A. H. Farlan, Illinois Winter, Stephen N. St. John, A. S. Hatch; Clerk, S. F. Lund; Treasurer, A. S. Hatch.

Present membership: males, ninety-two; females, two hundred and twenty-nine; total membership, three hundred and twenty-one.

It is proper to add that the First Congregational Church has attained a membership of about seven hundred since its organization, in 1838; yet its loss by dismissal to sister-churches has been great largely growing out of the fact that the church occupies intermediate territory, lying between New York City on one side and a great number of thriving villages and out-towns within easy access by numerous railway trains, fifteen to twenty miles away in New Jersey.

The officers at present are:

Pastor, Rev. Addison P. Foster; Deacons, William Jay Hunt, William H. Hines, Samuel Vance, Samuel G. Noyes, Prudential Committee, Thomas L. Lantry, Stephen L. Tuky, Charles C. Smith, Treasurer, W. J. Hunt; Clerk, W. W. Ingersoll.

First German Evangelical Lutheran Church.—

This society was organized Oct. 31, 1874, as an offshoot of St. John's Lutheran Church, and comprised only six families. When Rev. Robert A. Hofer, the present pastor, assumed his position Sept. 15, 1879, twenty-five families were numbered in the membership, and the church was in a weak state, owing a debt of three thousand dollars. Now the debt has been lowered to a few hundred dollars, and the names of two hundred persons are upon the roll of communicant members. The church has raised during the eleven years of its existence over eleven thousand dollars for benevolent purposes. The present trustees are Philip Lindemeyer, Louis Lindemeyer, H. Gruenthal, L. Frank, Jacob Sander, Jr., A. Semlike; the elders are Jacob Sander, Jr., Philip Lindemeyer, and Ernst Cattenhorn; the deacons, Herman Brueckner, Alexander Sauter, Louis Frank. A Sunday-school, of which the pastor is superintendent, has two hundred and fifty members.

St. Matthew's Church (German Evangelical Lutheran).—

The church edifice of this organization is located on Fifth Street, between Erie and Jersey Avenues, in Jersey City, and was purchased from the Baptists in 1861, the society or church having been organized January 11th of that year, with the following-named persons as constituent members: William L. Brooking, William F. Schuman, John Koster, Gerhard Schuackenberg, Kenry Knop. Of the above all are still living except Mr. Brooking, and are members of the church.

The first officers were as follows:

Elders, John Koster, Job F. Flako, Heinrich Shumaker; Deacons, Bernhard Happ, Christian Greb, Gerhard Schuackenberg; Trustees, William L. Brooking (president), Henry Knop (treasurer), Ferdinand Sauer, William Boise, John Doll and William F. Schuman (secretary).

At the organization of the church the little flock was in charge of Rev. — Worsidlow. Although not regularly installed, he remained until the early part of 1862, when Rev. Julius A. Bergeroth was installed, and remained till 1866. The next pastor was Rev. George Ersh, installed 1866 and remained until 1881, when he was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. John C. J. Peterson.

The church officers for 1884 were:

John Evers, Phil. Maschel and John Slepner, elders; H. Duderstadt, Burmeister Kasemeyer and Wilking Behrens, deacons. The board of trustees were John Heister, president, Julius Hoppel, secretary; W. Bauer, treasurer; and Ad. Voelker, M. Tomford, H. Adeling, G. Schuackenberg.

The membership in 1884 comprised two hundred and twenty-eight families, and the value of church property was ten thousand dollars.

Salem Church of the Evangelical Association of North America.¹—This church was organized June 22, 1869, by Rev. G. Scharf, H. Koch, C. Frundt, H. Hermann, J. Birnle, F. Eggert and H. Findeklee.

The church edifice is a frame structure, located on Bergen Avenue, in that portion of Jersey City known as Greenville, the corner-stone having been laid Aug. 18, 1870, and the edifice dedicated October 9th of the same year by Rev. N. Goebel. A second edifice was built in 1874, and dedicated by Bishop R. Jackl.

The first official board of the church was composed of Messrs. H. Koch and J. Birnle.

The pastors of this church have been Rev. G. Scharf, who remained one year; Rev. N. Goebel, two years; Rev. E. Glasser, three years; Rev. M. Guhl, one year; Rev. A. Straub, three years; Rev. C. B. Flicher, one year; Rev. C. Philiplar, one year; Rev. J. G. Marguardt, one year; Rev. H. P. Ball, the present pastor, who is serving his third year.

The official board for 1884 consisted of F. Eggert, J. Yackle and C. Perlenfen. Membership in 1884 was fifty-one; value of church property, nine thousand dollars.

The Sunday-school connected with this church comprises one hundred and sixty pupils, with twenty-two teachers and officers, and F. Eggert superintendent.

First Baptist Church,² located on Grove Street, Jersey City. The pioneer meetings of this church were held at private residences, and in Franklin Hall, on Montgomery Street, and March 1, 1848, the First Baptist Church of Jersey City was duly organized, with the following-named persons as constituent members:

William Bunsted,
Mrs. Mary Ann Bunsted,
Elizabeth Bunsted,
Maria Louisa Arnold,
William Boorman,
Mrs. Jennina Boorman,
Mrs. Jennina Bradnor,
Mrs. Maria Brand,
Mrs. Mary Crow,
Miss Conover,
Rev. Lewis Colby,
Mrs. Sarah F. G. Colby,
Mrs. Elizabeth Cleaver,
Mrs. Nancy A. Dodd,
Elizabeth Deaneast,
Evan Davis,
Mrs. Jane Davis,
Mrs. Harriet Dunham,
David Davis,
Mrs. Theresa Davis,
Mary Davis,
Mrs. Sophia Elzer,
Isaiah Fey,
Miss Tryphosa Fey,
Anthony Green,
Jane Green,
Mary Griffiths,
Mrs. Griffin,

Mrs. Ruth Howe,
John P. Hill,
Mrs. Mary Holmes,
Elizabeth Harrison,
Catharine Hammond,
David Jones,
Mrs. Sarah Jones,
Evan Jones,
Mrs. Eleanor Jones,
Mrs. Hannah J. Joline,
William Johnson,
Mrs. Ann Johnson,
Susan Kent,
Elizabeth Kingsford,
Richard Lyeth,
Mary Ann Lyeth,
James MacBride,
Mrs. Ann MacBride,
William H. Minnugh,
Mrs. Rebecca Page,
Mrs. Ann Quafie, Sr.,
Mrs. Ann Quafie, Jr.,
Stephen Quafie,
Elliot Smith,
Mrs. Sarah Ann Smith,
Hannah Shipley,
John Turnbull,
Mrs. Sarah Turnbull,

James Howe,
Mrs. Isabella Howe,
Thomas Howe,
Mrs. Rachel Howe,
Martha Howe,
William Howe,

Isaac Tysoe,
Rodrick Thomson,
Margaret Thomson,
Issiah Waldron,
Christina Waldron,
William Young.

March 2, 1873, Mr. Parmlly preached a historical sermon, and at that time thirty-eight of the above sixty-eight had died, while others had removed, leaving only seventeen of the constituent members in March, 1873. The following named persons constituted the first board of deacons: William Bunsted, William Boorman, William Young. The church clerk was John Turnbull.

The first church edifice, fifty by eighty feet, was of brick, built in 1872-73, and dedicated July 17, 1873. The preachers upon this occasion were Rev. Thomas Armitage, D.D., who preached in the morning; Rev. George C. Baldwin, D.D., preached in the afternoon; and Rev. William Hague, D.D., in the evening. The cost of the building, including the lot, was seventeen thousand dollars.

In 1875-76 an addition to the original building, twenty by sixty feet, was erected, which with repairs to the old building cost thirty-four thousand dollars. The rededication took place Feb. 13, 1876. The preachers on that occasion were Rev. Wheelock H. Parmlly, D.D., who preached in the morning; Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D.D., preaching in the afternoon, and Rev. John Dowling, D.D., in the evening.

The pastors of this church have been Rev. O. C. Wheeler, from April 6, 1848, to Nov. 21, 1848; Rev. William Verrinder, from Dec. 1, 1849, to April 1, 1854; Rev. Wheelock H. Parmlly, D.D., from Sept. 1, 1854, to the present time.

The church officials for 1884 were as follows:

Deacons, John T. Richards, Walter S. Conant, Albert D. Mills, Cornelius Van Dyke and William Ramsey; Trustees, Albert D. Mills, Charles Carpenter, Abram H. Brown, George Miller, Duncan D. Parmlly, William Kerr, Jr., and Cornelius B. Van Dyke; Clerk, William M. Laws.

The membership of the church in 1884 was five hundred and eighty-six, and value of church property fifty-one thousand dollars.

Out of this church, chiefly, have been formed three other Baptist Churches in Jersey City, and all in a flourishing condition.

Summit Avenue Baptist Church.—This church was organized June 22, 1857, as the First Baptist Church of Hudson City, with the following-named persons as original members: John Shapp, Willet G. Tripp, Richard Slec, Jr., George Shapp, John Adams, James Glass, Edward Everre, Relief G. Tripp, Elizabeth Shapp, Ellen T. Slec, Mary Ann Shapp, Mrs. O. Sherwin, Mary Glass, Hannah Adams, Louisa Everre and Sarah Nolan. James Glass and Willet G. Tripp were the first deacons.

The first regular pastor was Rev. Marvin Eastwood, installed in June, 1858. Services at that time were held in Grove's Seminary on the Bergen road, and at Rapp's Hall, on the Newark plank-road, where they were continued until 1858, when the lot upon which the present church edifice now stands was purchased. At the time of the purchase there was upon the lot a frame building, in which services were held until the completion of the present church edifice, in 1864. April 2, 1878, the name of the church was changed to Summit Avenue Baptist Church of Jersey City.

¹ From data furnished by Rev. H. P. Ball.

² From data furnished by Rev. W. H. Parmlly.

The pastors of the church have been as follows: Rev. Samuel J. Knapp, to Oct. 25, 1859; Rev. Halsey W. Knapp, from Jan. 27, 1860, to April 4, 1865; Rev. J. W. Curtis, from Oct. 24, 1865, to January, 1867; Rev. Charles E. Cordo, from Sept. 25, 1867, to March 28, 1869; Rev. T. R. Howlett, from July 15, 1869, to March 27, 1871; Rev. William H. Harris from Nov. 13, 1871, to Feb. 1, 1874; Rev. James L. Lodge, from Oct. 27, 1874, to October, 1879; Rev. A. S. Gumbart, the present pastor, began his labors with this people Feb. 15, 1880. Present membership, three hundred and twenty. Value of church property, thirty-five thousand dollars.

North Baptist Church.¹—This congregation was organized on Oct. 14, 1865, in the mission-school, corner of Grove and South Fifth Streets. The original members were John Olenendorf, Anna N. Olenendorf, J. W. Pangborn, Charles O. Potter, Diana Potter, Ann Potter, Ruth Howe, Albert J. Dewey, Julietta Dewey, Charles F. Shone, May E. Shone, Henry Watson, Ann Watson, Alfred Watson, Catharine Wood, Elizabeth W. Terry, Sarah R. Collins, Maria S. Collins, Gilbert Collins, Jane Monnell, Frederick W. Tuxbury, Lewis Neil, Ambrose P. Moore, Susan M. White, Erastus Jones, Charles M. R. Smith, Emma Smith, Joseph L. Scott, Sarah M. Scott, George Williams, John Eltingham, Mary Eltingham, May A. Cairns, Stephen D. Demorest, William Penott, Isabella Penott, John Davies, Sarah J. Davies, Elizabeth Rosell, Ira H. Post, Minerva Post, Henry Russell, Mary C. Russell. The Rev. Henry A. Cordo was the first pastor, and was succeeded by Rev. George K. Allen. About thirteen years ago the congregation extended a call to Rev. George W. Nicholson, who was then pastor of a Baptist Church in Connecticut, and since that time Mr. Nicholson has had ministerial charge of this church.

The present edifice was dedicated on the 28th of April, 1867. It is a frame structure, and is valued at twenty thousand dollars. The first officers of the church were: John Olenendorf, Albert J. Dewey, Henry Watson, deacons, who, together with Charles T. Shone, F. W. Tuxbury, Neil Lewis, William Howe (clerk), Henry Russell and Lewis Neil (treasurer), constituted the board of trustees. The present officers of the church are:

¹ Pastor, Rev. George W. Nicholson; S. D. Martin, D. O. Hallbrook, G. H. Soucier and K. H. Henry, deacons; B. W. Bush, treasurer; S. F. Carswell, clerk; T. J. Meller, W. J. Cole, William Hanks, William Morgan, Irving Cairnes, B. W. Bush and R. A. Randall, trustees.

The present membership is three hundred and ninety-four.

St. Paul's (Protestant Episcopal) Church.² Duncan Avenue. This parish was organized in June, 1860, by John L. Sutphen, E. Ward, John Ruderow, L. P. Harrison, B. Throckmorton, E. Baldwin, Thomas W. James, W. P. Bleeker and Christopher H. Fash. A frame building was erected, and opened for public worship by Bishop Odenheimer, May 20, 1861. The Rev. F. C. Putman, D.D., was called at the organization of the church, and has been the only rector. The building has been twice enlarged and improved, and now has five hundred sittings. The value is estimated at twenty thousand dollars. The first wardens were John S. Sutphen and E. Ward; Thomas W. James was secretary and Christopher H. Fash treasurer. The present wardens are Edward Butler and William J. Hardy; Charles H. Hartshorn, secretary. The congregation embraces about one hundred and thirty families, or eight hundred individuals, of which two hundred and twenty-five are communicants. The rector, Dr. Putman, is also chaplain of Christ Hospital, of which he has had the spiritual oversight since it was opened, in 1873, as the successor of the Hudson County Hospital. St. Paul's is the fifth Episcopal Church, in the date of its organization, in Jersey City, having been preceded by St. Matthew's, Grace, Trinity (now St. Mark's) and Christ Church.

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church² is situated on the north side of Sussex Street, between Washington and Warren Streets. The parish was organized on Aug. 21, 1808, and the first services were held in the Jersey Academy. In 1831 the corner-stone of a church building was laid. The consecration took place Nov. 26, 1835. This edifice was destroyed by fire in December, 1869. The church was promptly rebuilt, and services were first held in the new building on Oct. 15, 1870.

The first rector was Rev. Timothy Clowes, who was succeeded in May, 1809, by Rev. Edmund D. Barry. Mr. Barry officiated until 1816; Rev. Cane Jones, from 1816 to 1824; Edmund D. Barry served again from 1824, and was instituted rector in May, 1831. He died April 20, 1852. A. C. Patterson was assistant rector from 1841 to 1847; Charles Aldis, from 1847 to 1849; James J. Bowden, from June, 1849, to May, 1852, and was rector from then to June, 1859; J. Brindon Smith, from November, 1859, to December, 1865; William A. Matson, 1866. Rev. Richard M. Abercrombie, D.D., took pastoral charge of the parish Jan. 7, 1872, which he retained until his death, on Dec. 7, 1884, which leaves the church at present without a rector.

Dr. Abercrombie was the son of a clergyman of the united parishes of Christ, St. Peter's and St. James' Churches, in Philadelphia. His father it was who, from the pulpit of Christ Church, turned to President Washington and exhorted him to prepare for and receive Holy Communion.

¹ By Henry Farmer

² By Henry Farmer.

Dr. R. M. Abercrombie was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and an alumnus of the General Theological Seminary. He was the rector of parishes at Washington Heights, Staten Island, and Hartford, Conn. In 1864 he became the rector of St. Paul's Church, Rahway, N. J., which under his ministrations became a vigorous parish.

For many years, and until his resignation, he was the dean of the Convocation of Jersey City, and faithfully performed the labors of that office. He was one of the most popular ministers of the Episcopal denomination, and when New Jersey was divided into two dioceses he was prominently mentioned for bishop of the diocese of Northern New Jersey. His illness was very short. A week prior to his death he officiated at all the services in St. Matthew's Church. The following day he caught a severe cold, which terminated fatally. The deceased was in the sixty-fourth year of his age.

Christ Church (Episcopal)¹ is located on the northeast corner of Claremont Avenue and Clerk Street, Jersey City Heights. The parish was organized in 1858, and incorporated May 21, 1859. The church was consecrated in August, 1867. Its several rectors have been Rev. Messrs. Orlando Harriman, Charles Ritter, Stephen H. Battin, Chetwood, Mumbert, Mortimer, and J. T. J. Danner, the present rector. The church has had a struggling existence, the rector having to bear nearly the whole responsibility of the parish affairs, but with the hope of a better prospect in the near future.

Holy Trinity (Episcopal) Church,¹ Hoboken Avenue, Jersey City. The first meeting was on Aug. 1, 1851, in the old school-house on Summit Avenue, where the congregation continued to worship until the church was consecrated.

The following is the record of the rectors: Rev. W. R. Grees, one year and nine months; Rev. N. W. Camp, two years and seven months; Rev. L. L. Noble, thirteen years and five months; Rev. James Chrystal, eighteen months; Rev. G. E. Packard, eighteen months; Rev. R. B. Hoyt, six years; Rev. E. F. Baker, two years; Rev. S. M. Rice, from September, 1882, to present date.

The church was consecrated May 19, 1853, by Right Rev. G. W. Doane, bishop of New Jersey. It is built of wood and has a seating capacity for five hundred.

The present membership is three hundred. The church property is valued at six hundred dollars.

Present officers of church: Wardens, S. D. Mackey, S. P. Van Loan; Vestrymen, John Hadden, Jr., Andrew J. Wight, Andrew Post, David W. Laurence, James Smith, P. Van Ness Williams, John B. Homar, Charles P. Nicoll, Robert Packer, Marcus Beach.

This was the first Episcopal Church built on the hill portion of Jersey City (formerly Hudson City and Bergen City). St. Paul's was an offshoot of Holy Trinity, and St. John's an offshoot of St. Paul's. Holy Trinity has had a checkered career, but under the present rector is more prosperous than ever. It has now a large and flourishing Sunday-school. The church is out of debt. It was built on St. Paul's Avenue, and stood there until about three years ago, when the building was removed to Hoboken Avenue, between Oakland and Central Avenues, a much more desirable location.

The present rector is very popular, and since he has had charge has infused new life in the members, and the prospects for the future are very encouraging.

Grace (Episcopal) Church,² Van Vorst, is a handsome stone structure on the northeast corner of Eric and Second Streets. It was organized April 26, 1847, and was placed under the pastoral care of Rev. A. L. Patterson, a missionary for the county. The first church was built on Grove Street, north of Newark Avenue. On Dec. 6, 1850, the corner-stone of the present edifice was laid, and the services of consecration were held on the 18th of May, 1853. The rectors of Grace Church have been as follows: A. L. Patterson, from May, 1847, to September, 1848; Milo Mahan; David H. McCurdy; Charles Avery; Spencer M. Rice, who was succeeded, in the fall of 1882, by W. H. Spaulding, D.D., the present rector.

The church has a large constituency, numbering about fifteen hundred persons, embracing three hundred and forty families, of whom there are three hundred and twenty communicants. The Sunday-school has over three hundred scholars.

Senior warden Paul Babcock; Junior Warden, B. Hingworth; Vestrymen, John Van Vorst, H. R. Clarke, F. E. Palmer, J. Fleming, Charles F. Case, James D. Simons, H. A. Booraem, Wright Babcock, Case, George D. White, James G. Husking; Secretary of Vestry, Charles F. Treusurer, James D. Simons; Sexton, A. Bassiere.

At Easter-time, 1884, a new window was placed in the church, to the memory of Mrs. Spaulding, the wife of the rector. It is a beautiful work, the design of Mr. Charles Booth, of London. It represents Charity shielding a poor child and giving the cup of cold water to another. The work is finely executed in subdued colors, that give a most pleasing effect. It is a fitting and touching tribute to one whose unselfish life and devotion to the Lord preached the powerful sermon of example to all within her influence.

A flourishing Sunday-school of three hundred scholars is connected with the church. The superintendents are E. F. Palmer and James D. Simons. There is also a Parish Aid Society, a Young Ladies' Aid Society, a Relief Society and a Woman's Missionary Association, doing effective work, besides committees on Christ Hospital, on the Children's Home and the Home for Aged Women, in all of which the ladies of the parish take an active part.

St. Mark's (Protestant Episcopal) Church was incorporated Dec. 8, 1868, and secured the possession of the church building at the corner of Grove and Montgomery Streets, which had been built by the Unitarians in 1856, but had been occupied for seven years by Trinity Free Church, an organization which ceased to exist on the formation of St. Mark's parish. David H. McCurdy was the rector from March 1, 1869, to April, 1871; John F. Butterworth from June, 1871.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

² By Henry Farmer.

Church of the Ascension (Episcopal), located on the corner of South Street and New York Avenue, Jersey City Heights, was organized on St. Matthias' day, Feb. 24, 1868, in Luxton's Hall, Warren Street (now Congress Street), near Palisade Avenue, then in Hudson City. The pastors have been as follows: Rev. T. M. Thorpe, Messrs. J. B. Tucker, C. Merrill W. S. Leigh, C. Luxton, Mr. Camp, Jr., J. B. Sarson, W. A. Weeks, C. T. Holsey, H. G. Godden, H. J. Brown, E. A. Beeton and Mr. Hann.

The church edifice is of wood, and the corner-stone was laid about Easter day, 1869, by Rev. W. W. Wardlaw.

Soon after the consolidation of Hudson City with Jersey City a meeting of those interested was held at the residence of R. G. Graham, 456 Central Avenue, May 13, 1875, when there were present Rev. Dr. Abercrombie, Rev. R. B. Hoyt, Messrs. Hobers, Graham, Chambers, Brown and others. The question of changing the name of the church was discussed, and finally decided to change from that of St. Paul's to the present name, by which the church has since been known.

The wardens in 1884 were R. P. Graham, J. H. Tooker and R. E. Cressey.

The rectors of this parish have been Rev. Messrs. Thorpe, Wardlaw, Adamson, Benet, Johnson, Pcllitreson and others. The present rector (1884) is John A. Denniston, A.M. The church has two hundred members. Value of church property, nine thousand dollars. The Ladies' Guild, composed of Mrs. Wordell, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Traker, Mrs. Greer, Mrs. Stales, Mrs. Weeks, Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Whalen and others, is an active body of Christian workers in this parish deserving of great credit.

The Church of the Good Shepherd (First Universalist), corner Grand Street and Summit Avenue, Jersey City, was organized Dec. 10, 1871. The ecclesiastical organization was effected June 2, 1872. The society met at Library Hall from Dec. 10, 1871, until Oct. 20, 1872, when it occupied the present edifice, corner Summit Avenue and Grand Street. The following are the names of the original members: David L. Holden, Samuel Ward, Amos F. Farrar, Mrs. Cornelia A. Post, Miss Lucy H. Sortwell, Mrs. Georgianna Farrar, Mrs. Harriet Hendrickson, Mrs. Irene F. Woodward, Mrs. Hannah E. Doggett, Mrs. Malvina Massey, Rev. Mrs. Aaron A. Thayer, Mrs. Agnes Washburne, Miss Harriet H. Long.

¹ By Henry Farmer.

The congregation was ministered to by supplies to April 1, 1872; Rev. A. A. Thayer, April 1, 1872, to April 1, 1873; supply from April 1, 1873, to April 1, 1874, with no regular pastor, Rev. Phoebe A. Hannaford, April 1, 1874, to April 1, 1877; Rev. J. Hazzard Hartzell, from Nov. 18, 1877, to April 1, 1878; Rev. O. L. Ashenfelter, Sept. 1, 1880, to May 1, 1882; Rev. I. P. Coddington, May 1, 1882, to present date.

The building is of brick; it was purchased from the Emery Methodist Society, Aug. 5, 1872. The church was consecrated Oct. 20, 1872, and occupied since as a house of worship.

A division of the church under the leadership of Rev. Phoebe A. Hannaford withdrew at the expiration of her term of service (three years), and established the second society in Library Hall. This movement to establish a second society has, after a struggle of six years, proved a failure, and has been discontinued, and while she has sought other fields of labor, the people have largely returned to the old society to worship.

The first officers of the church of the Good Shepherd were as follows: D. L. Holden, Albert Munson, Amos T. Farrar. The officers of the church in 1884 were:

D. L. Holden, moderator; A. K. Littlefield, clerk of parish; A. E. Edwards, clerk of church; R. O. Washburne, Thomas H. Williams, George H. T. Doggett, trustees.

The church property is valued at fifteen hundred dollars, the membership is forty-eight.

Second Universalist Church—This church or parish was organized in March, 1877, by the withdrawal of Albert Munson, Giles R. Crary, Garret Hendrickson, Robert T. Shafer, Ellen E. Miles, M. Ellen Lockwood, Mary R. Eager, Sarah L. Williams, Warren Newcomb, Jane Newcomb, Helen M. Richardson, Hannah Hinkle and others from the First Universalist Church, some of whom had no opportunity to vote for the continuance of Rev. Phoebe A. Hannaford as pastor of the First Church. Thus, on the question of woman suffrage in church affairs, the First Church was divided, the seceders forming the Second Universalist Church of Jersey City. The first trustees of the parish were John L. Dodge, chairman; John Westervelt, clerk; Samuel Bostwick, treasurer; and George W. Paine, Joseph Eager, John W. Bailey, John M. Richardson. The parish when organized numbered forty-two members, who believed in a ministry of both sexes. It never built a church edifice, and now numbers about sixty members. The pastor, Phoebe A. Hannaford resigned in June, 1884, and the parish was left without a pastor. The officers for 1884 were

J. W. Richardson, chairman, Joseph Eltringham, treasurer, James Wilner, clerk; Deacons, Warren Newcomb, Randolph Reed, Deaconesses, Charlan Goodale and Jane Newcomb, with Ellen E. Miles, clerk.

² Data furnished by Phoebe A. Hannaford, late past.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCHES.¹

The first attempt to establish a Methodist Church in Hudson County was in the year 1811, when the appointment of Rev. John Robertson was made to Bergen, the name doubtless implying both the town and county. This appointment was followed by that of Daniel Fidler, for 1812-13; Joseph Totten, 1813-14; Stephen Martindale, 1814-15; David Best, 1815-16; John Finley, 1816-17; Peter Van Ness, 1817-18; Joseph L. Lybrand, 1818-19; John Potts, 1819-20; George Banghart, 1820-22; Manning Force, 1822-23; Benjamin Collins, 1823-24; Bartholomew Weed, 1824-26; David Bartine, 1826-27.

In 1826 the First Methodist Society of the Town and County of Bergen was formed, the trustees of which were Arthur Catlin, Archer G. Welsh, Hiram L. Meeker, James J. Seaman and Josiah Hornblower. This was probably what was known as the Bergen Mission, from which subsequently sprang into life the Simpson Church.

A mission was also started at Bergen Point, to which the following appointments were made: Revs. Thomas G. Stewart, 1831-32; John H. McFarland, 1832-33; John N. Crane, 1833-34; John Nicholson, 1834-35.

Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, the oldest of the existing Methodist Churches in the county, was organized in 1825, and the congregation then worshiped in a frame building which did service until the new church on the south side of York Street, between Washington and Warren Streets, was ready for occupation. The corner-stone of this church was laid May 5, 1843, and the dedication took place December 25th of the same year. The lecture-room was renovated in 1869, and in 1881-82 improvements of various kinds were made to the amount of four thousand dollars, and the audience-room is now one of the most beautiful in the city. The list of pastors is a long one, embracing the names of many prominent divines of the Methodist Church, several of whom have been called away to their eternal rest. Revs. John McClintock, 1835-36; Wesley C. Hudson, 1836-37; Benjamin Day, 1838-39; Charles H. Whitecar, 1839-41; James M. Tuttle, 1841-42; Vincent Shepherd, 1842-44; William Roberts, 1844-46; Francis A. Morrell, 1846-48; Joseph B. Wakely, 1848-50; James M. Tuttle, 1850-51; Israel S. Corbit, 1851-53; James Ayars, 1853-55; Charles H. Whitecar, 1855-57; Isaac W. Wiley, 1857-59; Jonathan T. Crane, 1859-60; James Ayars, 1860-61; William P. Corbit, 1861-62; Robert L. Dashiell, 1862-64; Isaac W. Wiley, 1864-65; Samuel Y. Monroe, 1865-66; Hiram Mattison, 1866-68; George H. Whitney, 1868-70; David W. Bartine, 1870-73; John Atkinson, 1873-75; supplied by W. P. Corbit, 1877; Richard Harcourt, 1878-80; H. Spellmeyer, 1881-83; Jonathan H. Dally, 1884.

Trinity Church has a membership of three hundred and eleven, with twenty-one probationers. The value of the church property is twenty-five thousand dollars, exclusive of the parsonage, which is of the probable value of five thousand five hundred dollars; the incbeidness is two thousand dollars.

The Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church, Central Avenue, near St. Paul's Avenue. This church was organized in 1841, and retained for a few years the old name of the Bergen Mission, which it succeeded. At the time of its organization services were held in a school-house near Five Corners. A building was subsequently erected on Oakland, between Newark and Hoboken Avenues, which has in recent years been used as a police-station. The present house was built in 1857-58.

Its pastors have been as follows: Revs. Benjamin W. Reed, 1839-40; Lewis T. Maps, 1840-41; William M. Burroughs, 1841-42; Abraham T. Palmer, 1842-43; William E. Perry, 1843-44; Aaron E. Ballard, 1844-45; David Graves, 1845-46; John W. Barrett, 1846-47; Garner R. Snyder, 1847-48; William M. Burroughs, 1848-49; F. Robbins, 1849-50; F. S. Hoyt, 1850-51; John Dean, 1851-52; Edwin A. Day, 1852-54; Edward A. Adams, 1854-56; Alexander H. Mead, 1856-58; A. L. Brice, 1858-60; John O. Winder, 1860-62; Thomas H. Smith, 1862-64; Michael E. Ellison, 1864-67; Ralph S. Arnt, 1867-70; Robert B. Lockwood, 1870-73; William Tunison, 1873-75; William Day, 1876; Robert B. Collins, 1877; Lewis R. Dunn, 1878-79; William Tunison, 1880-82; H. A. M. Henderson, 1883; H. A. M. Henderson and W. A. Akerson, 1884.

A valuation of twenty-five thousand dollars is placed upon the church and five thousand dollars upon the parsonage, while the encumbrance amounts to eight thousand dollars. The full membership is three hundred and thirty-six.

St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in July, 1848, under the title of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Pavonia. The church building is located on the north side of Third, between Grove and Erie Streets. The corner-stone was laid Dec. 25, 1849, and the basement was opened for service June 30, 1850. Dedication services were held Nov. 27, 1850, and extensive improvements were made in 1868. In 1880 two thousand seven hundred dollars were spent in improving and beautifying the church, both inside and out.

The pastors have been Revs. Dayton F. Reed, 1849-50; John Parker, 1850-51; Robert Given, 1851-52; George Hughes, 1852-54; Michael E. Ellison, 1854-56; Richard Van Horn, 1856-58; William Tunison, 1858-60; Lewis R. Dunn, 1860-62; Richard Van Horn, 1862-64; William Tunison, 1864-67; Lewis R. Dunn, 1867-70; Charles Larew, 1870-73; Daniel R. Lowrie, 1873-75; G. F. Dickinson, 1876-78; W. B. Wigg, 1879-81; S. L. Bowman, 1882; Samuel P. Hammond, 1883-84.

St. Paul's is a large and flourishing church, second on the list in point of membership, having four hundred and twenty five in full communion and one hundred and ten on probation. The valuation of the property is placed at seventeen thousand dollars, including five thousand dollars for the parsonage, and the indebtedness is four thousand four hundred dollars.

¹By Henry Farmer

The Hedding Methodist Episcopal Church was organized March 29, 1855, and incorporated May 19, 1855. The building is on the north side of Montgomery, between Grove and Barrow Streets. The corner-stone was laid Aug. 15, 1855. The lecture-room was dedicated Jan. 29, 1856, and the dedication of the building took place April 11, 1858. In 1878 the lecture-room was greatly improved, and an infant school room added. In 1879-80 the church was remodeled and beautified at a cost of nine thousand dollars, and it is now one of the most convenient and attractive edifices in the Conference.

Pastors.—Revs. Waters Burrows, to April, 1855; Robert B. Yard, 1855-57; William Day, 1857-59; Charles Lawre, 1859-61; James R. Bryan, 1861-63; William Day, 1863-66; John Hanlon, 1866-69; James M. Freeman, 1869-72; Robert B. Yard, 1872-74; J. L. G. McKown, 1875-77; James Montgomery, 1878-80; J. R. Thompson, 1881-82; J. H. Hargis, 1883; J. Boyd Brady, 1884.

The church has a larger membership than any of the Methodist Churches in Jersey City, viz.: four hundred and forty-nine, and a Sunday-school of four hundred and thirty-five scholars and forty five teachers. The property, including the parsonage, is valued at forty thousand dollars, and has an indebtedness of nine thousand four hundred dollars.

The Emory Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated July 8, 1862. The first building used by this congregation was on the corner of Mill road and Golden Place. It is now occupied by the First Universalist Church. The present building is on the north side of Belmont, between Bergen and West Side Avenues. The corner-stone was laid June 18, 1871, and the church was dedicated in 1872. The building originally cost twenty-five thousand dollars. In 1881 great improvements were made to the property. In addition to this, three thousand five hundred dollars of the church debt was paid off. By resolution of the Conference of 1882, the church was permitted to sell the plot of ground adjoining the church building, the proceeds being devoted towards the payment of the existing indebtedness.

Pastors.—Revs. Charles E. Winans, 1863-64; John J. Morrow, 1864-67; Daniel R. Lowrie, 1867-70; John Atkinson, 1870-73; S. Van Benschoten, 1873-75; J. B. Faulks, 1876-78; D. W. Bartine, 1879; P. G. Blight, 1880-82; Richard Van Horn, 1883-84.

The property is valued at twenty-five thousand dollars, but is heavily burdened with a debt of twenty-one thousand dollars. There are three hundred and ten full members and sixty-five probationers.

The Palisade Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated May 26, 1858. The building is on New York Avenue, corner of North Street.

Pastors.—Revs. Thomas E. Gordon, 1861-62; Henry M. Simpson, 1862-63; James I. Boswell, 1863-64; James M. Fitzgerald, 1864-67; Benjamin O. Parvix, 1867-70; John S. Porter, 1870-73; George Winsor, 1873-75; S. N. Bebout, 1876-78; J. W. Seran, 1879-80; T. C. Mayhew, 1881-83; Elbert Clement, 1884.

This church has a membership of about one hundred and forty. The property is valued at eight thousand dollars, and has a debt of one thousand dollars.

The Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church was organized April 17, 1867, with a membership of over a hundred. The society was incorporated Sept. 27, 1867. The building is on the north side of Pavonia Avenue, between Cole and Monmouth Streets. The corner-stone was laid Sept. 26, 1870, and the basement dedicated April 30, 1871. Prior to this latter date services were held in Union Hall, on the southwest corner of Grove and Fourth Streets.

For ten years the church put up with a one-story building, designing to add a second story in the near future, but being burdened with a debt of eight thousand dollars on the property they had already accumulated, they felt unable to undertake the work of completion till the spring of 1882, when, with a heroism and generosity seldom equaled, they pledged themselves to furnish between eight thousand dollars and nine thousand dollars. They have finished the walls and put on the roof of the audience-room and made other improvements of less magnitude, all of which were paid for. In 1883 eighteen hundred dollars more were raised and expended. The main auditorium is nearly finished, and will be ready for use this fall (1884). The total value of the property is about thirty thousand dollars; indebtedness, eight thousand dollars. The number of full members of the church is two hundred and fifteen, with thirty-one on probation.

Pastors.—Revs. David Graves, 1867-68; Hamilton C. McBride, 1868-69; James B. Faulks, 1869-72; Edson W. Burr, 1872-74; J. W. Fitzgerald, 1875-77; Josiah R. Daniels, 1878-80; C. R. Barnes, 1881-83; Edson W. Burr, 1884.

The West End Methodist Episcopal Church was organized Sept. 1, 1868. A chapel was built and a Sabbath-school of a hundred scholars established in 1869. The building is on the east side of Tonouce Avenue, near Newark Avenue.

Pastors.—Revs. Henry M. Simpson, 1869-71; Charles R. Barnes, 1871-73; Thomas H. Jacobus, 1873-75; J. Cowins, 1876-78; J. W. Young, 1879-81; J. A. Gutteridge, 1882-84.

In 1881 the church property was sold on account of financial embarrassment. The following year Rev. Mr. Gutteridge was sent there, and instead of giving up its long and heroic struggle and disbanding, the church took a new lease of life, and by the energy of the pastor fifteen hundred dollars was raised. Four lots on Tomtele Avenue, east of Marion Station, were purchased, and a neat and very pretty frame church and parsonage have been erected at a cost of sixteen thousand dollars. The edifice was finished and dedicated in January, 1884. The church building is free of debt, but the parsonage is encumbered to the amount of two thousand dollars. It is now known as Grace Church, and has one hundred and fifty-five full members.

The Lafayette Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated April 21, 1873. The building is located on the west side of Pine Street, between Communipaw Avenue and Lafayette Street.

Pastors.—Revs. W. L. Hoagland, 1869-72; A. H. Tuttle, 1872-74; C. S. Coit, 1875-77; Edson W. Barr, 1878-80; J. A. Munroe, 1881-83; Warren L. Hoagland, 1884.

This church expended six hundred and fifty dollars in painting and refurnishing in 1882, but they are now building a new house of worship on Pacific Street, in the rear of the present edifice. It is of brick, with stone trimmings, and will cost, including the land, in the neighborhood of thirty thousand dollars, all of which will be paid up when completed. The congregation expect to have it finished and ready for occupation by the 1st of January, 1885. The old building, valued at five thousand dollars, will be retained for Sunday-school purposes. The membership of this church is two hundred and one.

The Waverly Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated Dec. 20, 1870. The society worshiped in a church building on the corner of Palisade and New York Avenues. They never had much strength, and were only tenants at will, with no probability that they would ever be able to purchase the building or erect one of their own. The leading Methodists who were instrumental in its organization moved away, and the society had become unable to support a minister, so they determined to disband, which they did in 1882.

Pastors.—Revs. Henry Baker, 1870-73; Abraham J. Palmer, 1873-75; C. S. Ryman, 1876; William J. Gill, 1877; Thomas H. Stockton, 1878-79; J. B. Taylor, 1880-82.

Linden Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church.—This was formerly known as the Greenville Methodist Episcopal Church, and was incorporated by that title July 20, 1845. The building is on the south side of Linden Avenue, between Ocean Avenue and Bergen road. It was dedicated Jan. 6, 1846. This society was connected until 1851 with the Bergen Mission. In 1875 its name was changed to the Linden Avenue Church, by which it is now known.

The parsonage has been sold, and arrangements are being made to sell the remainder of the church property and erect a new edifice in the same vicinity.

The pastoral record is as follows: Revs. Waters Burrows, 1851-53; David Waters, 1853-54; Benjamin

F. Woolston, 1854-55; Edwin A. Day, 1855-56; William C. Nelson, 1856-57; Waters Burrows, 1857-58; Isaac W. Huff, 1858-60; Thomas E. Gordon, 1860-61; S. L. Baldwin, 1861-62; Richard Johns, 1862-63; William G. Hughes, 1863-64; Bront Slight, 1864-65; Ambrose S. Compton, 1865-67; Fletcher Lummis, 1867-70; Egbert Clement, 1870-73; Charles R. Barnes, 1873-74; J. W. Seran, 1875; E. B. Lockwood, 1876-77; Linden Avenue and West View Avenue, Abraham M. Palmer, 1878-79; J. H. Runyon, 1880-82; C. C. Winans, 1883; C. Larew, 1884.

The value of the church property, as reported to the Conference in 1884, was five thousand dollars; parsonage, one thousand dollars; indebtedness, seventeen hundred dollars. The total membership is ninety-eight.

The Janes Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated March 10, 1870. It is situated on Charles, near Summit avenue. Pastors.—Revs. Thomas Hall, 1870-73; J. F. Dodd, 1873; D. B. F. Randolph, 1874; W. F. Warner, 1875-76, supplied by C. H. Tisdale, 1877; Fletcher Lummis, 1878; supplied by R. M. Aylsworth, of Madison, N. J., 1879-80; supplied by H. M. Smith, 1881; supplied by J. A. Dodge, 1882; G. L. Tufts, 1883; P. C. Baseom, 1884.

The property is leased, but land has been purchased on Summit Avenue, one block east of the present site, upon which a church will shortly be built. Heretofore the pulpit has been supplied by students of the Drew Seminary, but a pastor was located last spring. The church has seventy-eight full members and forty-one on probation.

The Communipaw Methodist Episcopal Church was incorporated April 14, 1853. The building is on the south side of Communipaw Avenue, near New York Bay. The corner-stone was laid June 8, 1854, and the church was dedicated Oct. 15, 1854. At that time Rev. T. C. Carman was pastor, and he was the only pastor the society ever had exclusively. From that time until 1882 it was connected with the Greenville, Trinity or Emory Churches. It is now under the pastoral supervision of Rev. Mr. Hoagland, of the Lafayette Church. The building is valued at three thousand dollars.

The West Side Avenue Church was completed in 1872, and cost thirty thousand dollars. It is a large and handsome brick building, with stone trimmings, and is noticeable on entering Jersey City by the Central Railroad by its tall and graceful spire. There is a debt of six thousand dollars on the property. The church is prospering and numbers one hundred and twenty-nine members.

Pastors.—Revs. H. M. Simpson, 1872-73; S. P. Hammond, 1874-76; Hiram D. Opydke, 1877; James B. Brady, 1878-80; E. M. Garton, 1881-83; J. I. Boswell, 1884.

The Jersey City District of the Newark Conference extends from Bergen Point up the Hudson to Stony Point, and westward to Barryville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., a distance of one hundred and sixteen miles. In the spring of 1880 Paterson and some other places were set off to the Newton District, and some stations from the latter district were added to Jersey City.

In this district there are now seventy-five churches and twenty-three parsonages. The property is valued in round numbers at six hundred thousand dollars, and this valuation is considered by no means high. There is an indebtedness of about one hundred thousand dollars, or less than seventeen per cent. on the total valuation, which would be small if evenly distributed over the whole. Many of the churches and parsonages are free from debt, many others have only a small incumbrance, while several of the societies are heavily burdened. The debt, however, is twenty-six thousand dollars less than it was in 1882. In the last Conference year the district reported not far from one thousand conversions and between eight and nine hundred probationers.

The presiding elder of the district is Rev. Alexander Craig, who was appointed in 1882, coming from the pastorate of Trinity Church, Newark. The large extent of the district involves many weary hours of toil, exposure and care, to which this earnest minister has devoted himself with commendable zeal and efficiency.

The Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ.¹—This congregation was organized in June, 1884, and worships in the building on the corner of Erie and Sixth Streets, formerly Dr. Harkness' Scotch Presbyterian Church. They are an independent body, and entertain peculiar views as to the higher plane of Christianity to which they believe man may attain through the efficacy of prayer and faith, looking to the Lord as the Great Physician and healer of the body as well as Saviour of the soul. They practice healing of the sick by anointing and the laying on of hands, and hold regular services for this purpose. The body has no ordained pastor, but is ministered to by Mr. Hancock, of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jackson.

Mount Zion Sanctuary, at Greenville, is a branch of this same congregation. The meetings are held in a part of the large house formerly occupied by Capt. Hancock, which has been fitted up neatly as a place of worship.

The same body has also a mission in Henderson Street, between Railroad Avenue and Bay Street. This place is open day and night, and affords shelter to many poor, distressed wanderers, a lodging-room being fitted up in the upper story for their accommodation. Hot coffee is supplied gratuitously if the applicants are destitute; otherwise they are expected to pay a small sum for their accommodations. A sewing-school for girls is conducted every Saturday afternoon by Mrs. C. T. Brown.

The church building on Erie Street is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It has seen many vicissitudes. After Dr. Harkness' congregation vacated the premises it was occupied by the Union Church, a body which united in one common faith members of different denominations, ignoring the differences of creed among the sects, and taking the Bible and its promises as the foundation and structure of their faith, without disputing on doctrinal points. This congregation grew out of the Pavonia Union Mission, an organization which was started in Pavonia Avenue about the year 1874. For several years prior to that date a Sunday-school had been maintained under the superintendence of Mr. Van Arsdale. On removing to the Erie Street building, Rev. Dr. Eddy, formerly of the Second Presbyterian Church, became their pastor, and continued until 1880, when, on his proposition, the name of the society was changed to the Third Congregational Church, after considerable opposition by a majority of the members, who finally consented to the change, believing it to be a means by which they would retain the ministrations of Dr. Eddy. He, however, resigned in December of that year, and the Rev. Dr. Noyes was ordained pastor in April, 1881. He remained but one year. The church ran down for want of financial support. They could not support the minister, and after a hard struggle to maintain existence the enterprise was given up for want of means.

The congregation was scattered, a majority of them joining the Tabernacle, while many, including Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Woodward, who had been prominent in all the movements of the independent church they had inaugurated, have united with the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN HUDSON COUNTY.²

The growth of the Catholic Church in Hudson County has been very rapid, if not, indeed, very extraordinary. Within the past fifty years the Catholics have surpassed in numbers any other denomination, and their churches, free schools, academies, colleges and orphan asylums exceed in value the combined churches and religious institutions of all other Christian denominations.

The parable of the mustard-seed may, with all truth, be applied to the feeble beginning and the astonishing development of this powerful organization. In 1834 there were hardly a few hundred Catholics within the now limits of this county, and they were of the laboring class, Irish exiles—hewers of wood and carriers of water. So small was their number and so scant their finances that, with all the aid they could obtain from the Catholics of Sing-Sing, New York and Boston, they were unable, after a struggle of ten years, to finish the church which they had commenced on ground donated to them by the Associates of the

¹ By Henry Tarnes.

² By Rev. P. Corrigan.

Jersey Company. In 1884 the Catholics number seventy thousand, and they own property worth between two and three millions of dollars. Their free schools, free hospitals and orphan asylums are a saving to the tax-payers of hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. Their free schools are open to all creeds and all colors. There are eight thousand Catholic children attending Catholic schools that cost the tax-payers not one cent.

The first corporate body of Catholics in this county consisted of "the trustees of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Peter's, Jersey City, N. J." It was organized Jan. 29, 1831. To this body were deeded, March 10, 1831, the four lots of ground on the north side of Grand Street, between Washington and Warren Street on which old St. Peter's Church and rectory now stand. This ground, with its buildings, belongs now to the Sisters of Charity, who occupy the old church as a young ladies' academy, under the name of St. Aloysius Academy.

The early Catholics held services in private houses before they occupied the basement of the unfinished church. It is not known by whom, where or when the first mass was said in the county, but it was about the year 1830, or somewhat before that time, and by some priest from New York, and in old Jersey City. The first stationary pastor of Jersey City was Rev. William Byrnes, who came about the year 1834, and continued the work of the church, the foundations of which had been already laid by the trustees. Father Byrnes seems to have had the building well advanced in 1836, and he seems to have left Jersey City soon afterwards, as he died in Plattsburg in 1837. Rev. Father Mohan succeeded him, and he was succeeded by Rev. Walter J. Quarter, who, from 1842 till the spring of 1844, labored hard to finish the church. He was followed by Rev. Patrick Kenny, who remained but a few months, and died in Charleston, S. C., in 1845. Rev. John Kelly, who had just returned from the colony of Liberia, in Africa, was appointed pastor in the fall of 1844. He remained such till his death, in 1866, when he was succeeded, May 5, 1866, by Rev. Patrick Corrigan.

Father Kelly had just erected and placed under roof the new St. Peter's Church, which stands on the northeast corner of Grand and Van Vorst Streets. Father Corrigan completed the building and had it opened for service in December, 1866. Wishing to have a Catholic college in the county, Father Corrigan invited the Jesuits to build one, and as an inducement he agreed to give them all the property of the parish, valued at about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The entire debt on all this property, including both churches, the old and the new one, and four cottages and parish schools, was fifty-two thousand dollars. The Jesuits have since then built a magnificent college, under the name of St. Peter's College. When Father Corrigan resigned his parish in favor of the Jesuits, in April, 1871, he became pastor of St.

Bridget's Church in Mercer Street, which he had himself built in 1869, and which up to that time had been attached to St. Peter's parish.

To Bishop Bayley, the first bishop of New Jersey, and to the able priests under him, may be attributed the magnificent churches, schools, orphan asylums and hospitals that are the ornaments of this county. Among the priests who labored most in this development are Rev. John Kelly, Rev. Patrick Corrigan, Rev. D. L. Senez, Rev. J. da Concilio and Rev. Patrick Hennessy.

St. Mary's Church.—The church stands on the northeast corner of Erie and Second Streets. It was begun by its present pastor in 1861 and finished in 1863. It is a plain brick building, and cost about forty thousand dollars. The congregation is one of the finest in the diocese of Newark. It numbers about seven thousand souls. Rev. D. L. Senez is pastor.

St. Peter's Church¹ is located on the northeast corner of Grand and Van Vorst Streets. This succeeded as parish church to the old St. Peter's, which was begun about 1833 and finished about 1845. The new St. Peter's was begun in 1864, and roofed in 1866 by Rev. John Kelly; it was finished in 1866 by Rev. P. Corrigan, who gave it to the Jesuits in 1871. The building alone cost about one hundred thousand dollars. The congregation numbers about seven thousand five hundred souls.

St. Bridget's Church.—This parish was organized in 1869, and the corner-stone of the church edifice laid November 14th of that year by the Right Rev. M. A. Corrigan. The sermon on the occasion was preached by the Rev. P. Byrne, of Camden, N. J. The first mass was read on Dec. 25, 1869, to about one hundred persons, constituting the membership of the parish at that time.

The church was consecrated June 5, 1870, by the Right Rev. M. A. Corrigan, assisted by the Rev. P. Cody, who preached the sermon on the occasion.

The pastors of this congregation have been Rev. P. Corrigan, from November, 1869, to January, 1876; Rev. P. E. Smyth, from January, 1876, to Jan. 11, 1882; the present pastor, Rev. James Hanley, since Feb. 1, 1882.

The membership in 1884 was six thousand, with a church property valued at fifty thousand dollars.

St. Paul's Catholic Church, Greenville, N. J.—The pioneer movement towards the organization of this parish was by the Rev. Father Vincent, Passionist, from West Hoboken, in the month of February, 1862. At once large numbers of Catholics who had been in the habit of attending church in Jersey City and Hudson City flocked around Father Vincent, and in the course of the same year an edifice thirty by forty feet was erected. In 1869 the building was enlarged by the addition of twelve feet on each side and thirteen feet in rear, giving the building the form of a cross, fifty-two by forty-two feet. The first rector was Rev. W. Fehlings.

¹ By Rev. P. Corrigan.

Previous to 1869 the Passionist Fathers Vincent, Milus, Timothy, Thomas and others, with Father P. P. Niederhauser, of Bergen Point, and their successors attended this mission.

Rev. W. Fehlings was succeeded, in January, 1871, by Rev. A. Kempen, who, in turn, was succeeded by Rev. S. B. Smith, D.D., who built the two-story school-house. Dr. Smith was succeeded by Rev. J. Mendl, Nov. 4, 1872. Father Mendl built an extension of forty feet to the front of the church, making now a building ninety-two by thirty feet, and forty feet in transepts. He also built the beautiful four-story brick academy and convent for school sisters, whom he introduced from New York City in 1877.

In 1878 Mr. Mendl, was succeeded by Rev. A. Heckinger, who remained till April, 1882, when he was succeeded by Rev. J. J. Schandel, the present pastor.

The first lay trustees of this parish were Julius Lignot and Dennis McCarron. Present value of church property, thirty thousand dollars. Communicants, fourteen hundred.

St. Patrick's Church.—This church is located at the corner of Ocean Avenue and Grand Street, Jersey City Heights. The district was formerly a mission attached to Jersey City and next to Hudson City, and its present pastor, the Rev. Patrick Hennessy, then attended it as a curate. In 1870, Bishop Bayley erected the place into a parish and sent Father Hennessy there to form a church. The society was organized in February, 1870, with the Right Rev. James R. Bayley, Rev. Patrick Hennessy, Rev. Michael Abooringan, Hugh McKay and Patrick Sillis as its first officers.

On September 5th, Father Hennessy blessed the trenches dug for the foundations and laid the first stone for the present beautiful edifice. The cornerstone was laid by Archbishop Bayley, Nov. 13, 1870. The church was not finished until seven years later, and was dedicated Aug. 19, 1877, with imposing ceremonies.

There was a large assemblage of priests of the diocese of Newark, and neighboring dioceses. A numerous congregation attended. Solemn Pontifical High Mass was celebrated, being sung by Bishop Conroy, of Albany, with Rev. W. McNulty, deacon; Rev. P. Corrigan, Hoboken, sub-deacon; Rev. P. McCarthy, Dover, master of ceremonies. The sermon was preached by Bishop Ryan, of Buffalo. The societies of Hudson County and many from outside were present, arriving in procession with flags, banners and regalia, in strong force. Among the clergymen present, besides Bishops Corrigan (Newark), Ryan (Buffalo), and Conroy (Albany), were Very Rev. Father Gockeln, S.J., president St. John's College, Fordham; Very Rev. Father Hudson, S.J., rector of St. Francis Xavier's College, Sixteenth Street; Rev. Father McQuade, S.J., Rev. Father Marechal, S.J.

(Jersey City), Revs. Fathers Brady and Ryan, of the Paulist Fathers, Fifty-ninth Street; Rev. John Larkin, Holy Innocents; Rev. Michael Curran, St. Andrew's; Rev. J. M. Kelly, Rev. M. Riordan and Rev. P. F. O'Hare, Brooklyn; Rev. Father Moynihan, Peoria, Ill.; Rev. Fathers James and Thomas, of the Passionists; Rev. Father Noonan, superior of the Order of St. Joseph, Baltimore; Rev. J. P. Duffy and Rev. B. F. McLaughlin, of the Albany diocese; Very Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, St. Peter's, New York; Rev. John J. Ehrenstrass, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Rev. H. McDowell, St. Agnes', New York; Rev. Father Bryne, of Boston; Rev. T. Dufau, V. G., Jacksonville, Fla.; and the following priests from the diocese of Newark: Fathers Hennessy, Smyth, Corrigan, Ceci, Burke, McCarthy, Smith, Hogan, Downes, M. Nulty, Brennan, Cody, Leonard, De Concilio, Fitzsimmons, Tuomey, Walsh, O'Reilly, Mendel, and Salaun. There was also a large representation of prominent laymen from every part of Hudson County, among whom were Congressmen Hardenberg, Matthew Armstrong, (Greenville); Patrick O'Brien (New York Herald), James T. Hough, president of the Police Commissioners; E. F. C. Young, of the First National Bank; ex-Fire Commissioner Carnes, County Clerk Brann, Dr. Gordon and Chief Engineer Coyle, of the Fire Department, Thomas Crimmins, of Sixtieth Street, New York, and others.

The church occupies one of the finest sites in the city, and commands a beautiful view of the surrounding points of urban interest and the beauties of suburban landscape. An idea of the spaciousness of the edifice is conveyed by the statement that the extreme length is two hundred and seventy-two feet, and the width across the chancel, chapel and rectory is one hundred and thirty-eight feet. The width of the nave and aisles is eighty-six feet; the square of the tower at the base is thirty-three feet, and the height of the tower and spire two hundred and twenty-five feet. The interior is in admirable taste and produces an impression of solidity, grandeur and dignity that is seldom equaled in church architecture. The value of the church property is about three hundred thousand dollars.

St. Michael's Church.¹—The present St. Michael's parish was originally St. Mary's. In 1854-55, Rev. J. Kelly, pastor of St. Peter's Church, built St. Mary's Church, on the southeast corner of Erie and Tenth Streets. Rev. Father Senez became its pastor in 1859, and he built the new church on the corner of Erie and Second Streets. An assistant priest of his, Rev. J. da Concilio, was appointed to take care of the old church, and he called it St. Michael's Church.

The new St. Michael's, which fronts on the northern end of Hamilton Square, succeeded to the old church, which is now St. Michael's Hall. The old church cost about twenty-five thousand dollars, and the new one about one hundred and thirty thousand. It is a beautiful church and was erected by Rev. January da Concilio. The corner-stone was laid in 1872. The congregation is the largest in the county, and numbers at least eight thousand persons.

¹ By Rev. P. Corrigan.

St. Peter's Church is located on the corner of Erie and Second Streets, and was built in 1859, under the supervision of Rev. Father Senez, who also superintended the building of the academy and orphan asylum connected with this church. The church was dedicated in 1861 by Most Rev. James R. Bayley, D.D. The Catholic Institute Lecture Hall connected with St. Peter's has a seating capacity of one thousand persons, and at present there is in attendance at this institute and school fourteen hundred pupils. Attached to St. Peter's is also St. Mary's Girls' Orphan Asylum; parochial school, with five Christian Brothers and eight Sisters of Charity in charge; St. Mary's Academy, with five teachers and one hundred and thirty-two pupils. St. Francis Hospital is also under the care of St. Peter's. This hospital is located in East Hamilton Place, contains accommodations for one hundred and fifty patients, and under the immediate control of Sister Superior Gonsalva. There is also an Orphans' Industrial Institute or school connected with this parish, with Brother Justinian at the head. The hospital Sisters were brought from Cincinnati to Jersey City by Father Senez in 1864. Taken altogether, this is the largest and most prosperous parish in the state, and possesses property valued at two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Father L. D. Senez has had charge of the parish since its organization, and is now assisted by Fathers P. M. Carr and L. C. Carroll. Communicants, seven thousand five hundred.

St. Joseph's Church¹ is located on the corner of Baldwin and Pavonia Avenues, and was organized Oct. 20, 1856. During the building or excavating the Bergen tunnel for the Erie Railway a large number of Irish Catholics were employed on that work, hence the church. The first meetings were held in a boarding-house on what is now Summit Avenue, not far from what is now St. Paul's Avenue. The first church building was of brick, trimmed with brown stone, and stood on Baldwin Avenue, between Pavonia and Magnolia Avenues, the corner-stone having been laid in August, 1857, opened for service Dec. 25, 1857, and consecrated Oct. 17, 1858. That church edifice was taken down to make room for the present magnificent structure, built of blue trap-rock and trimmed with Belleville brown stone, and dedicated, Sept. 14, 1873, by the Right Rev. Bishop Corrigan.

The original trustees were Patrick McKiernan and Patrick McNulty.

The following extract is furnished by Father Seton, taken from a M.S. entitled "The Catholic Church in Hudson City:"

"Previous to May of 1856 the Catholic population of Bergen Hill had not at any time been numerous, not amounting at any period to more than two hundred souls. Of these, not too dozen were property holders, the rest being serving men and girls. But when the Bergen tunnel was begun some two or three hundred laborers were engaged, and by the following October six hundred hands were employed. These were all Irish Catholics, and the late Bishop Bayley appointed Father James Coyle to attend to the spiritual wants of the Catholics of Bergen Hill. This reverend gentleman said Mass for the first time on Sunday, Oct. 23, 1856. Only about two hundred worshippers assisted on that occasion, but each succeeding Sunday the congregation was largely increased."

The priests in charge of this parish have been Rev. Father Coyle, Oct. 20, 1856, to Feb. 26, 1857; Rev. Father Aloysius Vanuta, Feb. 26, 1857, to Jan. 22, 1876; Monsignor Seton, D.D., Jan. 22, 1876, to present time. Father Coyle was Irish, Father Vanuta Italian and Dr. Seton is American.

The church property consists of a church, school-house and rectory, all valued at one hundred thousand dollars. Trustees, Patrick McNulty and Dennis Byrnes. Total membership, three thousand five hundred.

The Isaac Ephraim Congregation (Hebrew) was organized as the Beth Israel congregation, with about twenty-five members, as early as 1864. Among the original members were the following: Joseph Mayer, Charles Marks, Morris Cirkor, H. Heilbrun, Alexander Rice, Charles Stine, H. Strahl, Julius Stahl, F. U. Bamberger, August Mayer, L. J. Liebermann and L. Bauman. The first pastor was Rev. Mr. Friedman, who officiated for three years. On July 11, 1874, the church was reorganized as the Isaac Ephraim Congregation, with Joseph Mayer president and Charles Marks vice-president. The congregation now has thirty-three members. Rev. Mr. Goldberg is pastor; Charles Marks, president; A. Koenigsberg, vice-president; B. Drachman, secretary; Philip Morris, treasurer. The trustees are the four officers just mentioned and A. Rice, L. Bauman, J. C. Lowry and Morris Pragor. The congregation has always worshiped at No. 96 Montgomery Street, but has recently purchased a lot on Grove Street, and is about to erect a synagogue.

Trinity Orthodox Church.—About Second Month 10, 1882, Rev. James Crystal came to Jersey City, and organized a society or church with the above title. The building occupied is a small frame structure standing on leased ground, and valued at nine hundred dollars. This is the only organization of the kind in this State. The rector, Mr. Crystal, is the leader of those that believe in the final restoration of all the primitive doctrines, discipline and rites as enunciated by the six Ecumenical Councils, held respectively at Nicaea, in A.D. 325; I. Constantinople, in A.D. 381; Ephesus, A.D. 431; Chalcedon, A.D. 451; II. Constantinople, A.D. 553; III. Constantinople, A.D. 680.

Services are held at the Chapel on Lord's day at 10.30 A.M., and 7.30 P.M., and on 5th day evening at eight o'clock. Lord's-day school and catechising at 2.15 P.M. There was in June, 1884, forty-three members connected with the church.

¹ From data furnished by Rev. Dr. Seton.

Other Churches in Jersey City.—Besides the churches already mentioned, there are several others in the city, from whose pastors or officials no data could be obtained for sketches in this work. After repeated efforts, through circulars sent and personal interviews by the compilers of this work, no data upon which to build history could be obtained, although promises were profusely proffered by men who intended, no doubt, to be truthful. Therefore, whatever church organization is omitted in this work has only to lay the omission at the door of its pastor or officials.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

JERSEY CITY.

(Continued.)

BOYCETTES.¹

Freemasonry—HIRAM LODGE, No. 17, F. AND A. M.—Hiram is the parent lodge of Masonry in Hudson County. It was instituted in 1847, with William H. Tallman as the first Worshipful Master, Joseph Clowes as Senior Warden, James A. Alexander as Junior Warden.

Mr. Alexander was the first Mason made in this county. William Coulter, the veteran conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, is one of the oldest members. John J. Warner and Mr. Gopsill are also among the oldest members of the fraternity in Jersey City. When first organized its membership was twenty-one, and it steadily grew till at one time it had a membership of three hundred. The lodge first met on the corner of York and Green Streets, over Grinnell's jewelry-store, then removed to the President Savings Institution building, and now meets at No. 23 Newark Avenue. Its present membership is one hundred and ninety-one.

The officers for 1884 were Charles A. Tausley, W. M.; James Magee, S. W.; John Spence, J. W.; George E. Cutter, Treas.; George W. Laforge, P. M., Sec.; John McKnight, S. D.; John Schuhardt, J. D.; William W. Wilson, John Frier, M. of C.; Linnens Ensor, Tiler.

The Past Masters of Hiram Lodge are Henry F. Crawford, Leroy Schermerhorn, Charles S. Parsons, John Metler, John Hilton, James A. Alexander, Thomas Leather, John J. Conklin, Archibald White, Edgar L. Bradley, Ephraim S. Johnson, James Dickson, George W. White.

The lodge meets every Monday evening, excepting in the months of July and August or on holidays.

VARIK LODGE, No. 31, F. AND A. M.—When

Hiram Lodge grew disproportionately large some of the members dimitted and organized Varick Lodge. Dr. W. W. Varick, after whom the lodge is named, and others started the lodge, which was instituted in 1854. Ex-Postmaster Green was the first initiate. The present membership is seventy-six, according to the last annual report. The place of meeting is at 23 Newark Avenue. The officers consist of Albert Dearlon, W. M.; J. F. Gidding, S. W.; H. E. McClure, J. W.; Thomas A. Chamberlain, Treas.; William Grier, Sec.; Thomas Ryan, S. D.; Edward J. Livesey, J. D.; J. W. Tripp, Richard K. Thornhill, M. of C.; John J. Taylor, Tiler.

The Past Masters are W. C. Brown, George Curtis, S. G. Leuk, Robert B. Sears, Charles H. Walrath.

Regular communications are held on the first and third Wednesday evening of each month.

BERGEN LODGE, No. 47, F. AND A. M.—Bergen Lodge was organized on Jan. 14, 1857, with scarcely more members than officers, of whom James W. Low was Worshipful Master, James E. Halsey, Senior Warden, Joseph Kerr, Junior Warden. They met in a little hall in what was then known as the "village of Bergen." The present membership is one hundred and fifty-three, and although there are lodge-rooms in the county which have more elegant apartments there are none more substantial and convenient than the rooms of which this lodge has the exclusive use, known as Masonic Hall, over the car buildings, corner Tuers Avenue and Montgomery Street. This lodge is also conspicuous for the large number of prominent citizens on its register, among whom are William Brinkerhoff, Charles F. Case, John H. Carnes, Abram H. Clark, George W. Conklin, P. F. Cumberston, John R. Demar, Asa W. Dickinson, George B. Edwards, Frank S. Emmons, William Frost, Frank C. Fry, William H. Furman, Thomas D. Harrison, George F. Hawkes, Alfred Henderson, John A. Hilton, John M. Jones, David H. Lawrence, Frederick D. Linn, Frederick W. Lyons, A. W. Malhalieu, Michael F. Newbold, Charles P. Nicoll, Robert M. Packer, Edwin W. Pyle, Isaac Romaine, Anadee Spadone, Henry E. Spadone, George C. Toffey, John J. Toffey, William V. Toffey, Charles H. Tompkins, John A. Van Gelder, Henry E. Wills.

The officers for 1884 were Daniel M. Manton, W. M.; William P. Westcott, S. W.; David W. Lawrence, J. W.; John R. Demar, Treas.; Alfred Sidman, Sec.; Halsey W. Allen, S. D.; B. B. McDowell, J. D.; Horatio B. Chafin, Samuel R. Collins, M. of C.; William G. Howser, Tiler.

Past Masters, William H. Daggett, George B. Edwards, Henry A. Thomas, Charles B. Thurston, John J. Toffey, Jacob J. Van Riper, Abraham Northrop, Edward Dorsey, Theodor T. Hay, Henry E. Spadone, Thomas E. Bailey, Peter C. Hopper, Frank C. Fry, Charles T. Smith. Meetings are held every Friday evening.

ENTERPRISE, LODGE, No. 48, F. AND A. M., was organized in 1857, with nineteen members. It now has (in December, 1884) a membership of one hundred and eleven. The lodge meets at 43 Montgomery Street every Friday evening, except during June, July and August, during which months the meeting night is the second Friday of each month.

¹ By Henry Furner.

The officers are Robert A. Simpson, W. M.; Charles H. Lindholm, S. W.; William H. Morey, J. W.; Hugh Croshaw, Treas.; William H. Cornell, P. M., Sec.; Benjamin F. Davis, S. D.; Theodor F. Rikeman, J. D.; John S. McKenzie, Narcissa Ceillia, M. of C.; Charles W. Fiske, Chaplain; Louis B. Baker, Marshal; Jacob Soney, Tiler.

Past Masters, Ambrose L. Boyes, Richard Brown, Roderick B. Seymour, William H. Page, Alfred J. Chapman.

EAGLE LODGE, No. 53, F. AND A. M., has a membership of eighty-nine. It meets on the second and fourth Tuesdays in each month at 291 Central Avenue.

The officers for 1884 were William B. Morgan, W. M.; Thomas Gorry, S. W.; John Kimpel, J. W.; Edgar M. Eof, Treas.; John Walters, Sec.; George T. Corvan, S. D.; Henry C. Radcliff, J. D.; Jacob June, Thomas Ellaby, M. of C.; Samuel Randall, Tiler.

Past Masters Alfred G. Southward, Joseph Jewks, Benjamin M. Rogers, Joseph E. Taylor, Charles F. Bucken, Thomas Seward, George J. Staats, William F. Green.

TRUTONIA LODGE, No. 72, F. AND A. M., was organized in 1865. The membership has grown from eleven, at its organization, to (according to the last annual report) seventy-seven. Except during July and August, the lodge holds a meeting in the hall, corner Grove and Fourth Street every Monday evening. The officers of the lodge are Edward Hoos, Worshipful Master; Jacob Kohllen, Senior Warden; August Succow, Junior Warden; John Hohmeyer, Treasurer, Frederick W. Pirsch, Secretary; Charles Kretschmer, S. D.; Henry Bey, J. D.; Paul Hendel, William Kretschmer, M. of C.; Jacob Soney, Tiler.

Past Masters, Henry E. Klein, Henry Windecker, William Schrennan, Christian Kaiser, Frederick Schmw.

JERSEY CITY LODGE, No. 74, F. AND A. M., was organized under dispensation, July 10, 1865. The charter members were Charles P. McCabe, J. D. Hopping, Elias Dubois, W. H. Merritt, A. J. L. Voorhees, John M. Tichenor, H. Y. Lazier, J. A. Kingsbury, A. C. Williams, John Reardon, John A. Thomas, R. A. Wood, Thomas Davis, Jr., John Stone, Frederick Partz, John H. McCabe, Thomas H. Betts, N. B. Cushing, J. P. Mackey. The first communication was held on July 13, 1865. The first officers were: H. Y. Lazier, W. M.; J. A. Thomas, S. W.; Charles P. McCabe, J. W.; J. D. Hopping, S. D.; John Stone, J. D.; R. A. Wood, Treas.; A. J. L. Voorhees, Sec.; T. H. Betts, Tiler.

The following have served as Masters: H. Y.

Lazier, John A. Thomas, J. D. Hopping, Henry E. Farrier, E. B. Leonard, Warren Dobbs, J. H. McCabe, John G. Watkins, A. J. Jardine, W. Boone, J. J. Youlin, Stephen Smith, Edward Bootes, J. Irving Benedict.

The officers for 1884 were Henry Barns, W. M.; John H. Weastell, S. W.; John M. Cherry, J. W.; James P. Mackey, Treas.; Stephen Smith, P. M. Sec.; William T. Madigan, S. D.; Charles A. Roe, J. D.; H. C. Wole, George W. Helfrick, M. of C.; Walter Vanderzee, Tiler.

The lodge has at present one hundred and thirty-seven members in good standing and over two thousand six hundred dollars in the treasury. Brother J. P. Mackey held the office of secretary for two years, was elected treasurer Dec. 10, 1877, and has held the office since that time. Stephen Smith, P. M., is Commander-in-Chief of the New Jersey Consistory, and a Past D. D. G. M. The lodge owns a plot in New York Bay Cemetery, where several of its members have been buried by the lodge with appropriate ceremonies.

HIGHLAND LODGE, No. 80, F. AND A. M.—One of the most popular Masonic bodies on the Hill is Highland Lodge, which meets at McPherson's Hall, on Newark Avenue, every Thursday evening. The lodge is an offshoot of Eagle Lodge, and was organized on the 21st day of February, 1867, with thirteen charter members and Dr. John B. Burdette as the first Master. At present there are eighty-two members.

Following are the officers: James Clark, P. M., W. M.; Andrew Craig, S. W.; John H. Schoffling, J. W.; Charles L. Meirau, Treas.; William G. Nelson, Sec.; E. C. Sherwood, S. D.; Frank W. White, J. D.; John Manning, Thomas Stiff, M. of C.; R. G. Booth, Tiler.

The Past Masters are as follows: John B. Burdett, P. Wharton Levering, Edward P. Cogger, William D. Reynolds, John Wright, Thomas L. Browning, Benjamin B. Davis.

AMITY LODGE, No. 103, F. AND A. M., has a membership of one hundred and three. Meets every Thursday evening at corner of Pacific and Maple Avenues.

The officers are James Lindsay, W. M.; Harry H. Shrope, S. W.; George F. Bulen, J. W.; Henry Stefens, Treas.; James W. Leonard, P. M., Sec.; Albert W. Tubbs, S. D.; Thomas J. Kennedy, J. D.; Andrew J. Sterling, Charles S. Powell, M. of C.; Robert Hill, Tiler.

Past Masters, John E. Halliday, Cornelius Vreeland, Mortimer Sampson, Charles D. P. Gibson, Edward M. Watson, James W. Leonard.

RISEING STAR LODGE, No. 109, F. AND A. M., was organized in 1868, the charter members numbering fifteen, and from the fact that the present membership is ninety-six, its growth has been much more rapid than that of some others. The lodge meets on the second and fourth Thursdays in each month, except during July and August, at the hall, corner of Pavonia Avenue and Erie Street.

The following are its officers: Alfred F. Hall, P. M., W. M.; John J. McCabe, S. W.; William A. Fern, J. W.; Marmaduke Tilden, Treas.; James N. Davis, Sec.; Nicholas W. Pease, S. D.; John Lounsbury, J. D.; E. C. Coover, William Coleman, M. of C.; Elbert Clapp, Chaplain; Clifford Seckelmore, Organist; Frederick Smith, Tiler.

Past Masters, John H. James, John W. Denver, William H. Gardner, Henry R. Hilton.

Thomas W. Tilden, of this lodge, is the present R. W. Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey.

LODGE OF THE TEMPLE, No. 110, F. AND A. M., was organized in 1870, and has a membership of sixty-two. The lodge meets the first and third Thursdays in each month at 43 Montgomery Street. Among its early members were ex-Senator Theodor F. Randolph, ex-Governor Joseph D. Bedle, Dr. Varrick, Dr. William Watson and Leon Abbett, now Governor of the State.

The officers for 1884 were William P. Douglass, W. M.; Charles W. Woolsey, S. W.; William H. Vermilye, J. W.; William H. Turner, Treas.; David P. Daly, Sec.; Edward W. Woolsey, S. D.; John W. Kanouse, J. D.; George E. Savers, Stephen G. Lanck, M. of C.; Jacob Soney, Tiler.

Hamilton Wallis, of this lodge, has passed the highest Masonic honors in the State, having been M. W. Grand Master in 1879 and 1880, and occupying other places of distinction in the Grand Lodge.

Past Masters, James R. Mercen, John D. McGill, Leon Abbett, Alexander T. McGill, William R. Laird, Cornelius S. See, John A. Kunkle, H. Ellis Hart, Nathan B. Shafer, William P. Douglass.

ZEREDATHA LODGE, No. 131, F. AND A. M., meets in Excelsior Hall, in Communipaw. Zeredatha is a specimen of quiet but steady growth. Organized thirteen years ago, with Mr. Henry Smith as first Master, the lodge has increased in numbers until at present there are one hundred and five active members.

The officers for 1884 were Edward P. Snowden, W. M.; George Darsley, S. W.; Victor E. Meyer, J. W.; John Pearson, Treas.; William J. Smith, Sec.; Frederick W. Hering, S. D.; Matthias W. Neven, J. D.; John R. Vail, Charles T. Meyer, M. of C.; E. Henry Smith, P. M., Marshal; George W. Powe, P. M., Chaplain; Samuel J. Hastet, Tiler. Past Masters, Ohed H. Sanderson, Henry V. Cole, James W. Denton, Frederick Stranghn, John J. Cole, Charles Saxton, Richard H. Walker.

ALLEMANIA LODGE, No. 132, F. AND A. M., is of recent date, and has a membership of forty-eight. It meets on the second and fourth Friday evenings, of each month, at Pohlman's Hotel.

The officers are Henry A. Stehn, P. M., W. M.; Seigfried Hammerschlag, S. W.; William J. Klee, J. W.; Louis Broommann, Treas.; Gustav Rothe, Sec.; Frederick Tauber, S. D.; John C. Brane, J. D.; Christopher Kennerbecke, John Rummelt, M. of C.; Thomas Heine, Tiler. Past Masters, Adolph Schaub, Emil Steger.

RAY VIEW LODGE, No. 146, F. AND A. M., meets every Wednesday evening on the corner of Linden and Ocean Avenues.

The officers for 1884 were Gus. A. Lilliesdahl, W. M.; Robert Peyton, S. W.; Charles Schmolze, J. W.; William R. Simonson, Treas.; Joseph G. Hoffman, Sec.; Desire J. Cambrelling, George W. Scott, M. of C.; Charles F. Young, Tiler.

HUGH DE PAYENS COMMANDERY, No. 1, KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.—This commandery was granted a dispensation by the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the United States March 12, 1858, was formed on the 30th day of the same month. It is now working in pursuance of a warrant granted by the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the United States of America, at its Grand Conclave, held in Chicago, Ill., on Sept. 16, 1859, and indorsed by the Grand Commandery of the State of New Jersey at its Grand Conclave, Sept. 12, 1861.

The charter members were M. J. Drummond, William H. Doggett, John Hilton, Alexander Driver, George A. Tater, A. G. Gilkyson, Samuel Titus, E. Roquet, F. Corlies, David T. Jeffries.

The following were the officers in 1858: M. J. Drummond, E. C.; William H. Doggett, G.; John Hilton, C. G.; George A. Tater, P.; Alexander Driver, Treas.; A. G. Gilkyson, Rec.

The present officers of the commandery are as follows: Em. Sir John H. Ackerman, P. G., E. C.; Sir Stephen Smith, G.; Sir John Mellor, C. G., R. E.; Sir William H. Doggett, P. G. C., Prelate; Sir John R. Wilson, S. W.; Sir Lewis F. Lyne, J. W.; Em. Sir Warren Dobbs, P. C., Treas.; Sir George Cutter, Rec.; Sir Thomas Harrington, Standard-Bearer; Sir Charles Cumming, Sword-Bearer; Sir George Gobel, Jr., Warden; Sir Thomas A. Chamberlain, 3d G.; Sir Benjamin M. King, 2d G.; Sir Charles E. Goodrich, 1st G.; Sir James N. Talmage, Q. M.; Sir Charles F. Buchen, Sentinel.

The following are the Past Eminent Commanders: R. E. Sir William H. Doggett, P. G. C.; R. E. Sir John Hilton, P. G. C.; R. E. Sir George B. Edwards, P. G. C.; R. E. Sir Samuel Stevens, P. G. C.; E. Sir Robert Dunshea, P. G. C. G.; Very E. Sir Thomas W. Tilden, D. G. C.; E. Sir Thomas Vreeland, F. Sir Warren Dobbs, E. Sir John H. Ackermann, G. G.

The commandery has one hundred and fifty-two members; its conclaves are held on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, except during July and August, at the asylum, 23 and 25 Newark Avenue, Jersey City.

Independent Order of Odd-Fellows.—Odd-Fellowship gained a foothold in Hudson County a few years after its introduction in the United States.

Although an institution of the present century, having been organized in Manchester, England, in 1812, it has attained immense proportions in all parts of the world, and is the most numerous of all the secret benevolent orders known. Its mission, while inculcating in the breasts of its members the virtues of friendship, love and truth, takes definite shape in relieving the sick and needy of the brotherhood, and caring for the welfare of the widows and orphans of their deceased members. Connected with the order are two other orders, or higher degrees. The one which ranks immediately above the Odd-Fellows lodge is called the Encampment, which is almost contemporaneous, or quite so, with the establishment of the mother-order. There are three encampments in Jersey City, viz.: Harmony, No. 47; Mount Sinai, No. 5; and Palisade No. 4. From the encampments are recruited the Uniformed Patriarchs. To enter the sacred precinct of this circle one must be a royal purple member of the Degree Camp. The order was established in opposition to what is known as the Patriarchal Circle, which was made up of Odd-Fellows, but acted independently of the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge is the head-centre to which all American Odd-Fellows throughout the world are amenable. It executes its edicts, of course, through subordinate governing bodies. That which is the arbiter in this State is the Grand Lodge, whose sessions are held regularly at Trenton. The Grand Master (the executive head of the order in the State) is August Grassman, of Hoboken. Constructively he installs all officers and looks after the affairs of the workings of the lodges within his domain; but as it is impossible for him to do all this work himself, he acts through the agency of district deputies. There are three of these deputies in the county. Jersey City is in the Third District, and comprises Lodges Nos. 14, 24, 32, 66, 126, and 180, Degree Lodge No. 2, and Lodge No. 3, Daughters of Rebekah. The district Deputy Grand Master is William H. Hall, P. G., of Lincoln Lodge, No. 126. District No. 5 includes the German Lodges Nos. 125, 147, 152, 163, and 173, and Lodges No. 25 and 36, Daughters of Rebekah. The District Deputy is A. H. Grunthal, P. G., of Steuben Lodge, No. 163.

HUDSON LODGE, No. 14, was organized in 1833, and has a present membership of one hundred and ten. Many gentlemen prominent in local circles have been at one time or another for over half a century connected with it, and from it have sprung the Iroquois and Mechanics' Lodges. J. W. Wakefield is the present N. G.; A. J. Mellor, V. G.; P. Potter, Sec. The lodge meets every Wednesday evening.

IROQUOIS LODGE, No. 32, I. O. O. F., was instituted Dec. 18, 1845, and therefore ranks among the oldest in the county. William Thomas, Thomas M. Alexander, William Gilchrist, James Norrie and Joshua T.

Gilbert, all of whom are now dead, were charter members. Robert B. Earle was the first initiate. On its rolls are to be found the names of such prominent citizens as Thomas M. Alexander, George W. Edge, Moses B. Bramhall, David Gould, Peter D. Vroom, James G. Gregory, John M. Cornelison, Alexander H. Wallis, Phineas C. Dummer, Jacob R. Wortendyke, John H. Lyon, Hosea F. Clarke, all now deceased. Three of the members—Alexander H. Wallis, George W. Cassidy, and John W. Orr—have been honored by the election to the position of Grand Master. Two of these have also been members of the Grand Lodge of the United States. It has a present membership of sixty-four, and has fifteen hundred dollars in the treasury for the burial fund. The lodge meets at Booraem Hall every Thursday evening. B. F. Wakefield is N. G.; J. G. Bagley, V. G.; and B. Stephens, Sec.

MECHANICS' LODGE, No. 66, was organized in 1845, and has a membership of one hundred and thirty-five, and is one of the most active lodges in the State. For thirteen years it supported a member who had suffered from an incurable ailment, and for nine years of this same period supported another who had been likewise afflicted. On these two sufferers the lodge expended nine thousand dollars. While it has at the same time done its usual share of benevolent work, it is in excellent financial condition. Its officers are: N. G., A. R. Bell; V. G., J. W. Kull; Rec. Sec., Albert Youmans; Per. Sec., W. A. Fisher.

LINCOLN LODGE, No. 126, was instituted May 5, 1868, by eight members of Hudson Lodge, and has grown rapidly in favor and in numbers till it has a membership of one hundred and twenty. J. C. Orr, C. Smithauser, F. Riker, S. Collins, J. T. Collins and P. Eller were the charter members.

The present officers are: N. G., Anderson McKnight; V. G., Henry Pusken; Sec., John Fletcher; Warden, August Alst; Conductor, Henry Burns; R. S. N. G., David Daly; L. S. N. G., C. Vegler; R. S. V. G., Charles Joel; L. S. V. G., James A. Rikeman; L. S. S., John E. Martin; Trustees, John Whiton, John Snellgrove, Christian Vegler; Organist, E. P. Lane, P. G. The lodge, with total assets of about ten thousand dollars, is in an excellent financial condition. It meets every Tuesday evening at Booraem's Hall.

MONTICELLO LODGE, No. 140, is the oldest lodge on Jersey City Heights. It meets every Monday evening at the corner of Bergen and Fairmount Avenues. Monticello was instituted in May, 1869, with eleven charter members. Its present membership is fifty-six. E. Britton is N. G., and J. S. Newkirk, Sec.

FARNSWORTH LODGE, No. 143.—About fifteen years ago Alfred Buschman, then of Columbia Lodge, of New York City, and John Muller, then of Lincoln Lodge, met late at night. They were both on their way to their homes on Hudson City Heights. Mutual inquiries elicited the fact that both were on their way from lodge-meetings, and the natural suggestion of the occasion was for a lodge nearer home. As the result of their efforts among their neighbors, Farnsworth Lodge, No. 143, was instituted on the evening of May 10, 1870, with Mr. Buschman, F. Muller, John White, Jacob Frank, Oscar Buckner and Henry Labonsuir as charter members. In December, 1884, the lodge numbered seventy members, with T. C. Manward, N. G.; H. Van Benlo, V. G.; M. Stevenson, Rec. Sec.; John Sutcliff, Per. Sec.; and Peter Tarsch, Treas. The regular meetings are held Tuesday evening.

UNITED BROTHERS' LODGE, No. 153, meets every Wednesday evening at 140 Newark Avenue. N. G., Charles Havenmeyer; V. G., M. Ehr Gott, Treas., S. Sauerbreg; Rec. Sec., Robert Lepke; Fin. Sec., Peter Herman. The lodge was organized Nov. 16, 1870, with a membership of thirteen; present membership, ninety-eight. On the death of a member the lodge pays his family one hundred and fifty dollars. This rule has but recently been established, it having been customary formerly to assess each member one dollar upon the death of one of their number. In case of sickness the lodge pays a sick benefit of six dollars per week. The lodge has three thousand dollars in its treasury.

ONWARD LODGE, No. 159, which meets at Excelsior Hall, on Communipaw Avenue, on Wednesday evenings, was instituted on the 23d of August, 1871, with fifteen charter members. The organization has now increased to seventy-five members in good standing, and with a clear bank account of three thousand dollars. The following are the present officers of the lodge: N. G., J. J. Griffith; V. G., J. Clark; Treas., William H. Brooks; Sec., F. R. McKee.

SUMNER LODGE, No. 180, is the largest lodge in the county, and although unwieldy in point of numbers, is not an old lodge. It was organized June 22, 1874, with a very large roll of members, which had increased to two hundred and twenty-four at the date of the last report. Its meetings are held every Monday evening corner of Newark Avenue and Grove Street. The present officers of the lodge are: N. G., John W. Moore; V. G., Jacob Raab; Rec. Sec., James R. Young; Warden, George Stephens; Conductor, W. H. Snyder; O. G., Robert Greigg; I. G., A. N. Voss; R. S. to N. G., J. B. Brangan; L. S. to N. G., Edward Scott; R. S. S., Charles W. Davis; L. S. S., J. H. Osborne; R. S. to V. G., Emitt Chapel; L. S. to V. G., S. McCarriek; Chap., Dr. W. J. McDowell; Organist, H. H. Hart.

JERSEY CITY LODGE, No. 24, is an offshoot of Sumner Lodge, which, growing to such large proportions, induced some of the younger members to organize a new lodge under the name of Jersey City, which was instituted Sept. 19, 1881, with the following charter members: John E. Miller, William Wentz, William W. Lawrence, Joseph M. Hough, James C. Currie, John J. Bullis, B. Withnebut, Jr., William Falcon, John S. Mitchell, Henry W. Guest, Edward F. Brown, Louis Mittelsdorf. The present membership is one hundred and fifty.

The first officers were John E. Miller, N. G.; James C. Currie, V. G.; John J. Bullis, Sec.; Joseph M. Hough, P. Sec.; Henry W. Guest, Treas.

The successive Past Grands have been James C. Currie, John J. Bullis, George W. Bishop, W. H. Allen, Henry W. Guest. The officers for the current term are John R. Mahlstead, N. G.; Charles C. Black, V. G.; Henry W. Clapp, Sec.; Henry Coleman, P. S.; William H. Allen, Treas.

The lodge meets every Monday evening at No. 13 Montgomery Street.

There is also in Jersey City two chapters of the Eastern Star Degree, viz., Esther and Aecia.

Knights of Pythias.—JERSEY CITY LODGE, No. 15, was organized Dec. 9, 1868. The first officers were Joseph W. Cochran, V. P.; John W. Orr, W. G.; William G. Parker, V. C.; John H. Orr, R. S.; John H. Garretson, B.; Frederick T. FARRIER, F. S.; Levi B. FARRIER, Guide; Edward Trudeau, I. S.; Reuben Howe, O. S.

The officers in December, 1884, were John Longstaff, J. P. C.; Charles B. Aten, C. C.; Lyman E. Brown, V. C.; John W. Woodman, P.; Charles M. Solomon, K. of R. and S.; Leonard L. Ruggles, M. of F.; Thomas M. Heffernan, M. of E.; William W. Poland, M. at A.; William Baxter, I. G.; Samuel D. Bennett, O. G.

The Past Chief Commanders were as follows: J. Wilson Cochran (also P. G. C.), John W. Orr, John H. Garretson, Frederick T. FARRIER, James B. FARRIER, Albert H. Garretson, Thomas M. Heffernan, William H. Littel, Samuel D. Kay, Henry A. Green, Roysten S. Tilden, Albert A. Poland, Robert D. Noonan, Samuel D. Bennett, James R. Solomon, Ferdinand J. Schober, John Patrick, Charles C. Skinner, William H. Hall, Jacob Z. Marinus, Adolphus A. Newman, Edwin Jennings, Thomas H. Langdon, Frederick Schober, William J. Mesehutt, Joseph Gilmour, Frederick Jones, John D. Van Saun, M. D., John Longstaff.

The lodge meets every Wednesday night at Roche's Hall, corner of Morgan and Grove Streets. The present membership is one hundred and sixty-one.

CINCINNATUS LODGE, No. 32, K. of P.—This lodge was organized Nov. 26, 1869, with the following officers: C. C., George W. Snow; V. C., H. Shuttlebotham; K. of R. and S., James E. King; Prelate, I. S. Griffing; M. of E., C. H. Horsman; M. of F., J. W. Jaynes; M. at A., John M. Culbert; I. G., James C. White; O. G., John S. Styles. The officers in December, 1884, were: C. C., Thomas K. Lewis; V. C., George Seifut; K. of R. and S., John Tracy; Prelate, J. J. Couton; M. of E., Edward Bronson; M. of F., John Gilmore; M. at A., John E. Campbell; I. G., George W. Benjamin; O. G., Louis Bowers. The Past C. C.'s have been J. L. Vanneman, W. W. Ward, R. S. Wyatt, R. Wright, E. Bronson, William E. Besser, A. Breiglob, Louis Bowers, J. M. Culbert,

J. Duke, J. Faherty, J. Gilmore, J. A. Gaskings, J. Green, R. Montgomery, H. H. Old, E. S. Powell, H. Shuffelbotham, J. S. Styles and Thomas R. Lewis. Meetings are held in Roche's Hall, at the corner of Grove and Morgan Streets, Jersey City. The membership is one hundred and twenty-four.

LINCOLN LODGE, No. 36, K. of P., was organized March 31, 1873. The first officers were: C. C., William T. Dey; V. C., I. Van Houten; P., — Morgan; K. of R. and S., T. J. Bolton; M. of E., L. A. Ricord; M. of F., R. M. Petrie; M. at A., H. L. Craven; I. G., H. W. Leonard; O. G., H. M. Abernethy. The following are the names of the officers in December, 1884: C. C., Walter C. Smith; V. C., John G. Berrian, Jr.; Prelate, Ellsworth Purcell; K. of R. and S., George Wm. Point; M. of E., William R. Allen; M. of F., Philip Lynch; M. at A., W. H. W. Bannister; I. G., Leonard Pelloth; O. G., Samuel Ward. The Past Chancellors are Henry Barnes, E. W. Corey, G. H. Hodges, Philip Lynch, H. W. Leonard, Charles Marks, George W. Point, James H. Purcell, Thomas J. Purcell, Jerome Rappleyea, P. F. Shanley, John L. Silpath, Gustav Steup, V. B. Sweeney, Gilbert E. Sutcliffe, W. B. Tompkins, Augustus Thiery, Charles H. Tracy and Walter C. Smith. This lodge meets every Thursday evening at Roche's Hall, corner of Grove and Morgan Streets. Membership in December, 1884, one hundred and ninety.

HUDSON LODGE, No. 87, K. of P., was organized June 17, 1873. The first officers were: P. C., J. T. Cook; C. C., A. R. Odell; V. C., C. N. Rollins; Prelate, E. B. Cook; M. at A., J. L. Vanneman; K. of R. and S., C. P. Vanneman; M. of F., T. F. Lent; M. of Ex., William H. Granger; I. G., Theodore Cook; O. G., B. Daniels. The following are the names of the present officers: P. C., J. B. Chevalier; C. C., A. M. Weston; V. C., H. M. Snyder; M. of Ex., Peter Closs; I. G., F. N. Stebbins; Prelate, Sidney Gould; K. of R. and S., E. R. Downing; M. of F., E. A. Borden; M. at A., F. J. Entwistle; O. G., W. Wethercott. The Past Chancellors are C. N. Rollins, J. G. Smith, E. A. Borden, A. J. Browe, L. Lyons, T. F. Lent, Theodore Miller, George H. Bennett, D. McGINLEY, F. S. Potter, J. B. Bechtold, C. P. Vanneman, R. L. Woodley and C. H. Buck. This lodge meets every Thursday evening at Fourth Street, corner of Grove. The present number of members is ninety.

PYTHAGORAS LODGE, No. 62, K. OF P., was instituted Sept. 6, 1881, with the following-named charter members, who were also the first officers; M. Ernst, P. C.; A. Kirsten, C. C.; G. T. Stumpfl, V. C.; P. M. Ernst, M. of E.; O. Lang, M. of E.; M. Commerce, K. R. and S.; J. Moller, M. at A.; J. B. Busch, J. G.; J. Schuler, A. G.; and H. Meyer, H. Eckel, P. Eckel, M. Cirkor, M. Fries, N. Hiltensperger, C. A. Zohan.

The regular meetings of the lodge are held on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of each month at Humboldt Hall, 186 Newark Avenue. Present membership, eighty.

The Past Chancellors have been A. Kirsten, J. B. Busch, J. Schuler, William Franz, J. Leehr, Ch. Geiger, H. Ritter, J. C. Lowy, Ch. Staib, Ch. Trefs, H. Dumke, Ed. Brandt, F. V. Bamberger, A. Witte, J. Reisenauer, F. Schleiher, H. Gunther.

The officers of the lodge in December, 1884, were: P. C., H. Gunther; C. C., P. Weyer; V. C., C. Wienandt; P., C. J. M. Mattern; M. of E., C. F. Staib; M. of F., Edwin Brandt; K. R. and S., William Franz; M. at A., A. Gerkens; J. G., V. Weiz; A. G., J. Knell.

CENTENARY LODGE, K. of P., is the youngest of the order in Jersey City, having been instituted in the month of July, 1884, with the following officers: P. C., George Graf; C. C., Frank P. Herig; V. C., John Bruckman; Prelate, Henry L. Fritz; K. of R. and S., Gustave Lutz; M. at A., C. L. Edinger; I. G., John Storer; O. G., John Keller. The lodge is growing in numbers and has excellent prospects. Meetings are held every Friday evening at Arion Hall, Greenville.

LAFAYETTE LODGE, No. 79.—This lodge, which meets on the first and third Wednesdays of every month at Masonic Hall, corner of Pacific Avenue and Maple Street, was instituted Nov. 20, 1872, by J. Wilson Cokran, Grand Chancellor, and had seventy original members. The first officers were: P. C., James Clark; C. C., George H. Kidder; V. C., Luther E. Hale; P., John Bird; K. of R. and S., H. J. Leonard; M. of F., Audney J. Hall; M. of E., George Johnson; M. at A., A. Warren Hatfield. The Past Chancellors are James C. Clark, Samuel P. Shipman, Frederick Closs, William Vail, John L. Arrowsmith, George W. Foster (now members of the lodge); Isaac Van Saun, Wolfgang Stoessel and G. R. Cary (deceased); John D. Van Saun (now of Jersey City Lodge); Alonzo Stevens and William J. J. Doll (now of New York Lodges); L. P. Hale, A. Warren Hatfield, Benjamin Van Riper, H. J. Leonard, and William H. Cornell (now out of the order). P. G. C., George H. Kidder and P. C. David J. Gibson are now of Woodland lodge. The present officers are: C. C., J. L. Arrowsmith; V. C., Lorenzo Vliet; P., J. Graham Ewing; K. of R. and S., George H. Curtis; M. of F., J. A. Knickerbocker; M. of E., John J. Roberts; M. at A., Jacob Youney; I. G., Otto J. Weber; O. G., Wandell Metzger. The present membership is eighty-five. The lodge has nearly fifteen hundred dollars in its treasury and owns a plot of ten lots in the New York Bay Cemetery.

WOODLAND LODGE, No. 5, K. of P., which meets every Friday evening at the corner of Fairmont and Bergen Avenues, was instituted Sept. 9, 1881, with fifty-six charter members. The first officers were: J. P. C., J. S. Alker; C. C., John Clark; V. C., J. S. Newkirk; P., Robert L. Hill; K. of R. and S., I. G. Wilson; M. of E., J. V. W. Perrine; M. of F., A. M. Paul; M. at A., W. W. Lawrence. The Past

Chancellors are Isaac Lawrence, J. F. Spengman, David J. Gibson, Peter L. Whicken, John S. Alker, John Clark, George W. Farrehan, Aaron M. Paul, S. P. Pool, Robert H. Hill. There is also one Past Grand Chancellor in the lodge, George H. Kidder. The present officers are: J. P. C., J. S. Alker; C. C., J. G. Wilson; V. C., J. F. Woodhull; P., W. Jackson; M. of E., J. V. W. Perrine; M. of F., J. A. Knoller; K. of R. and S., A. M. Paul; M. at A., A. E. Trotter. The present number of members is one hundred and twenty.

Knights of Honor.—IVANHOE LODGE, No. 509, K. of H., was organized March 12, 1877. The first officers were: D., G. H. Kidder; V. D., W. J. Underhill; A. D., C. E. Valentine; Treas., M. Mason; R., J. D. Harrington; F. R., H. Church; Guide, F. A. H. Smith; Chap., W. J. Cadmus; G., H. P. Oliver; S., A. McCullough; Med. Ex., W. J. Cadmus; Trustees, W. J. Cadmus, E. V. Lorton and F. A. H. Smith.

The officers in December, 1884, were: P. D., Charles A. Griffin; D., L. Sloss; V. D., James F. Wardhaugh; A. D., N. W. Pease; Treas., A. P. Dayton; R., R. H. Duff; F. R., W. C. Taylor; Guide, W. H. Ames; Chap., A. S. Athow; G. W., C. Barr; S., W. P. Wilder; Med. Ex., Theodore F. Morris, M. D.; Trustees, W. P. Wilder, T. C. Whitman and James Hunt.

The following are the names of the Past Dictators: E. V. Lorton, George H. Kidder, J. D. Harrington, W. J. Cadmus, T. C. Whitman, Robert Macdonald, W. C. Taylor, S. H. Beach, Charles A. Griffin.

This lodge meets on the second and fourth Fridays of each month, at Roche's Hall, corner of Grove and Morgan Streets. It has sixty-two members.

GERMANIA LODGE No. 469, K. of H., was organized Feb. 26, 1877. The following were the first officers: P. D., Fred Mandler; Dict.; Val. Mager; V. Dict., John Mueller; Asst. Dict., John Laekner; Rep., H. Feibel; Fin. Rep., P. Mueller; Treas., J. Schmidt.

The officers in December, 1884, were: P. D., Peter von Thaden; D., Carl Dieffenbach; V. D., T. Eigenbrodt; A. D., C. F. Meyer; R., Peter von Thaden; F. R., E. Achilles; Treas., John Lehmann; Guide, John Laekner.

The following are the Past Dictators: Fred Mandler, Valentine Mager, C. H. Luckmann, A. Wessienborn, A. Schaffer, Jac. Schweider, Jacob Schmidt, Henry Feibel, H. Hermann, H. Astheimer, Ludwig Wachsmuth, Peter von Thaden.

Meetings are held every Wednesday evening at No. 39 Ogden Avenue. The lodge numbers two hundred and fifty-five.

PALISADE LODGE, No. 714, K. of H., was organized July 21, 1877. The first officers were: P. D., Julius Hockberth; D., E. A. Sturges; V. D., W. I. Corwin; A., William Ainswerth; F. R., H. Astheimer; R., F. J. Angerboner; Treas., H. Schmidt.

The officers in December, 1884, were: P. D., John Nash; D., W. Allen; V. D., A. Straw; A. D., I. W. Eakin; R., C. P. Robinson; F. R., I. W. Henschen; Treas., William P. Hollingshead.

The Past Dictators are E. A. Sturges, Henry Schmidt, W. P. Hollingshead, C. P. Robinson, W. C. Roszell, Frastus Hollister, John Nash.

The present number of members is fifty-two.

Palisade Lodge meets on the second and fourth Wednesdays at Freidenburg's Hall, corner of Summit Avenue and Griffith Street.

CLAREMONT LODGE, No. 2600, K. of H., was organized Nov. 11, 1881. The first officers were Dixon G. Hughes, P. D.; H. B. Chaffin, D.; D. Pearson, Jr., V. D.; T. B. Pratt, Asst. D.; T. H. Freeman, Rep.; Jas. T. Haviland, Fin. Rep.; J. H. Winsor, Treas.; H. Watrous, Chap.; J. T. Van Alst, Guide; W. J. Borden, Guard; J. R. Gibb, Sentinel.

The following are the present officers: Mark R. Bowman, D.; Wm. E. Moore, P. D.; S. J. Pursel, Asst. D.; Theo. V. Pratt, P. D.; E. P. Griswold, Rep.; Wm. J. Borden, Fin. Rep.; J. H. Freeman, Treas.; Wm. Gamble, Chap.; John J. Hendrickson, Guide; J. W. Smith, Guardian; David Pearson, Jr., Sentinel. The roll of Past Dictators are Dixon G. Hughes, Horatio B. Chaffin, John W. Winsor, John J. Hendrickson, David Pearson, Jr., Theo. B. Pratt. There is a membership of thirty-two.

The lodge meets on alternate Tuesday evenings, beginning with the first Tuesday in January, at Excelsior Hall, 600 Communipaw Avenue, Jersey City.

ACERRA LODGE, No. 2805, K. of H., was organized July 28, 1882. The first officers were George Korell, Dict.; Fredk. Frank, V. D.; Edward Reidlinger, Rep.; J. F. Golding, Fin. Rep.; Henry Siewers, Treas. The officers for 1884 were Just. Herwig, Dict.; Aug. Bolller, V. D.; Bern. Bolller, Asst. D.; E. Reidlinger, Rep.; Henry Lauterbach, Fin. Rep.; H. Siewers, Treas.; J. G. Holzschuh, Chap.; Fred. Flecker, Guide; John Nesbihal, Guard, Cl. Lookhoff, Sen.; Rep. to Grand Lodge, Aug. Bolller; J. F. Golding, Lodge Physician. The Past Dictators are Aug. Bolller, George Korell and Louis Weber. The lodge has twenty-five members on its roll. It meets on the second and fourth Fridays of each month at Avenue House, Five Corners, Jersey City Heights.

AMBITIA LODGE, No. 2864, K. of H., was organized Nov. 13, 1882.

The following were installed as first officers of the lodge: John C. Scott, D.; Joseph E. Moore, P. D.; Benj. Murphy, V. D.; Fred. M. Lincoln, A. D.; Clark A. Bucklin, Rep.; G. R. Hough, Fin. Rep.; Hudson Clarke, Treas.; Chas. C. Becker, Guide; J. N. Merritt, Chaplain; John Strahan, Guardian; Leander Gumaer, Sentinel.

The officers in December 1884, were John E. Scott, D.; Joseph E. Moore, P. D.; Chas. C. Becker, V. C.; C. H. Van Pelt, A. D.; Clark A. Bucklin, Rep.; Geo.

R. Hough, Fin. Rep.; Hudson Clarke, Treas.; Wm. T. Ludlum, Guide; Thos. P. Van Beuren, Chaplain; John Strahan, Guardian; Fred. M. Lincoln, Sentinel.

The names of the Past Dictators are Joseph E. Moore, John E. Scott.

This lodge meets at Roche's Hall on the first and third Mondays of each month.

It has thirty-eight members on the roll.

Grand Army of the Republic.—G. VAN HOUTEN Post, No. 3.—This post was organized April 23, 1867, in the city of Bergen, now a portion of Jersey City. At the time of organization, and until 1873, it bore the name of Joe Hooker Post, No. 3, but changed it to G. Van Houten Post, No. 3, under a general order from the National Encampment prohibiting posts from taking the name of any soldier living. The post struggled along for years with a small membership, until about three years ago, when, through the exertions of several members, and more especially the present Commander, Gen. John Ramsey (who recruited more than one hundred men in one year) it placed itself in the foremost rank of the Grand Army of the Republic in the State. The present number of members is two hundred and seventy-eight, with an uniformed drum and piccolo corps of forty youths. The post room is the largest in the State, occupying the top floor of the City Hall. The room has been handsomely carpeted and furnished, at a cost of over three thousand dollars. Valuable pictures adorn the walls, and two large libraries, containing over one thousand volumes, furnish reading matter to the members. At the last State encampment the post was entitled to five delegates and thirteen Past Commanders. At the encampment in 1884 the post was represented by five delegates and fourteen Past Commanders. The post meets every Friday evening. Its finances are good. Following is the list of the first and succeeding officers:

1867.—Commander, G. W. Thorne; Senior Vice-Commander, H. Gaines; Junior Vice-Commander, F. Boorman; Adjutant, M. Bower; Quartermaster, J. Sieben; Officer of Day, C. Tuers; Officer of Guard, A. Zindle; Surgeon, H. V. Avery; Chaplain, G. Cottingham.

1868.—Same officers.

1869.—Commander, H. Gaines; Adjutant, George Sipp.

1870.—Commander, H. Gaines; Adjutant, C. Tuers.

1870.—Commander, F. Boorman; Adjutant, T. H. Stewart.

1871.—Commander, C. Tuers; Adjutant, E. G. Hand.

1872.—Commander, C. P. Knoeller; Adjutant, C. Tuers.

1873-74.—Commander, George Sipp; Adjutant, E. Kenney.

1875.—Commander, M. Schaeffel; Adjutant, George Sipp.

1876.—Commander, G. A. Jackson; Adjutant, George Sipp.

1877.—Commander, J. P. Whiting; Adjutant, George Sipp.

1878.—Commander, John I. Van Alst, Jr.; Adjutant, George Sipp.

1879.—Commander, John I. Van Alst, Jr.; Adjutant, G. W. Farnham.

1880.—Commander, George W. Lindley; Adjutant, Thomas W. Wightman.

1881.—Commander, George B. Fielder; Adjutant, C. Tuers.

1882.—Commander, William Verrinder, Jr.; Adjutant, F. O. Cole.

1883.—Commander, F. O. Cole; Adjutant, J. R. Van Syckle.

1884.—Commander, John Ramsey; Senior Vice-Commander, John Creesh; Junior Vice-Commander, G. C. Billoway; Adjutant, R. G. Lambert; Quartermaster, L. S. Willard; Officer of Day, John MeGruck; Officer of Guard, E. T. Baker; Chaplain, B. Van Riper; Surgeon, P. M. Schuchling, M. D.; Sergeant-Major, Albin Thompson; Quartermaster-Sergeant, W. H. Black.

GEORGE H. THOMAS POST, No. 20.—This post was instituted Aug. 11, 1870, with W. H. Weldon, A. Bellard, G. Dietler, J. F. Offen, Charles Sten, W. H. Weber, G. Urtner, A. Schuman, F. Blum and E. Zuik as charter members. The first Post Commander, W. H. Weldon, held the office until 1871, and R. Anderson, who succeeded him, filled the place until 1873. The succession since has been as follows: E. T. Reichhelm, 1874-75; J. Bastian, 1876; J. Hackbarsh, 1877; E. T. Reichhelm, 1878-79; Ernst Lockle, 1880-81; F. Blum, 1882; F. Hartman, 1883. The adjutants, in the order of their service, were W. H. Weldon, J. Hackbarsh, Ernst Lockle, J. Hackbarsh, F. Klien, Ernst Lockle. The present officers are: Commander, A. Zoeller; Adjutant, Ernst Lockle; S. V. C., W. Keiser; J. V. C., J. Schreider; Chaplain, Charles Borneman; Surgeon, J. Michel; O. of D., J. Dempsey; O. of G., G. Bochter; Q. M., J. Hackbarsh. This post has at present fifty-seven members in good standing and has upwards of fifteen hundred dollars in its treasury. Its meeting-place is in Middlends' Hall, on Palisade Avenue, Jersey City Heights.

ZABRISKIE POST, No. 38, which meets at the Avenue House, Five Corners, Jersey City Heights, was instituted Feb. 20, 1873, with G. D. Van Reipen, G. P. Robinson, Jacob Reinhardt, Abraham Ryerson, Thomas Gilrly, John G. Fisher, W. A. Stanton, E. V. Johnson, J. H. German and G. B. Fairgrieve. The first officers were: C., G. D. Van Reipen; S. V. C., G. P. Robinson; J. V. C., J. Reinhardt; A., Thomas Gilrly; Q. M., A. Ryerson; O. D., J. G. Fisher; O. G., J. H. German; Chaplain, W. A. Stanton; Surgeon, G. B. Fairgrieve. The Commanders since the first have been J. G. Fisher, 1874; Thomas Gilrly, 1875; G. R. Robinson, 1876; J. G. Fisher, 1877; Gideon Isley, 1878-81; Otto W. Meyer, 1882-83; Charles R. Wale, 1884. The adjutants during the same period were T. Gilrly, 1874; B. F. Cleveland, 1875; G. B. Fairgrieve, 1876-77; G. P. Robinson, 1878-84. The post has one hundred and twenty-three members, and is in a flourishing condition financially, having a relief fund of seven hundred dollars. Since organization nineteen members have died, two have been discharged, eight transferred, and fifty-nine dropped from the rolls or suspended.

HENRY WILSON POST, No. 13.—The charter members of this post, which meets on the second and fourth Fridays of every month, at Humboldt Hall, 186 Newark Avenue, were Gottlieb Deetler, John F. Kent, Albert Waugh, Martin Doyle, James Henderson, Fred. Roeder, John Patrick, Robert Brown, George Stanley and Charles Scheets. The original officers in 1876 were: P. C., Albert Waugh; S. V. C., Robert Brown; J. V. C., Charles Scheets; A., John F. Kent; Q. M., Martin Doyle; O. of D., Gottlieb Deetler; O. of G., — Erhardt; Chaplain, Samuel A. Teeple; Q. M. S., John Patrick. Since then the principal officers have been as follows: 1877, P. C.,

Gen. John B. McPherson

Philip Tunnulty; A., John F. Kent, 1878, P. C., Joseph Hooker; A., John F. Kent, 1879, P. C., John F. Kent; A., Philip Lynch, 1880, same, 1881, P. C., Alfred Hunsbeck; A., Bart. Stoneham, 1882, P. C., Philip Lynch; A., William A. Graham, 1883, P. C., Michael Mullone; A., Bart Stoneham, 1884, P. C., Henry Haase; A., Philip Lynch; S. V. C., Bart. Stoneham; J. V. C., George Mabie; Q. M., Robert Ryan; O. of D., Benj. H. Manning; O. of G., John Comer; Chaplain, J. T. Taylor; Surgeon, Geo. W. England; Q. M. S., F. F. Ullmer; I. S., H. Frank Quinn; O. S., Moses Conklin. The post has been represented at various times by Maj. D. A. Peloubet, Benjamin Murphy, T. J. Armstrong, Rudolph Schmidt, hauser and Thomas Burns. The present membership is about one hundred and fifteen.

There are two other posts,—Ellsworth, No. 14, instituted Jan. 24, 1876; and Maj. Chris. Woerner, No. 81 (Hoboken), instituted Sept. 28, 1883. They have each over fifty members.

Royal Templars of Temperance.—The object of this order is to promote temperance, industry and morality among all classes and prevent, by all just means, the growth of intemperance by discountenancing the manufacture, sale and use of everything that can intoxicate; also to give all moral social and material aid in its power to its member and those dependent upon them; to lift up the fallen, strengthen the weak, visit the sick, bury the dead, protect the widow, and educate the orphan by providing a sure and substantial benefit to the heirs or dependents of a worthy deceased member.

The order is a strictly total abstinence organization, and was instituted Feb. 3, 1877, with one council and ten members. The order numbered on Dec. 31, 1883, five hundred and thirty-four councils, with twenty thousand members.

Jersey City has two councils of the order known as Royal Templars of Temperance, of which we here give a brief history.

HUDSON COUNCIL, No. 4, of New Jersey, working under a charter granted by the Supreme Council, was instituted Feb. 15, 1881, by State Deputy E. Slater, of Newark, with eleven charter members.

The following were the first officers: R. S. Harrison, S. C.; J. B. Chace, V. C.; Samuel D. Edmunds, P. C.; Mrs. E. Curlott, Chap.; F. M. Huntington, Sec.; D. D. Clark, Fin. Sec.; A. G. Avery, M.D., Treas.; Mary A. Clark, D. H.; Mrs. W. W. Newton, G.; C. Wigg, M.D., Medical Examiner.

The names of those who have since been the presiding officers are R. S. Harrison, Samuel D. Edmunds, Edward J. Clark, John Wesley Curlott, D. Durell Clark.

The present officers are F. M. Huntington, S. C., Miss Mary A. Clark, V. C.; Mrs. Dora Clark, Chap.; Edward J. Clark, Sec.; D. D. Clark, Fin. Sec.; Edward Clark, Treas.; James Montgomery, H.; J. W. Sheppard, I. G.; Thomas Clark, O. G.; H. L. Lockwood, M.D., Medical Examiner.

The council holds meetings twice a month, meeting on the second and fourth Tuesday evenings at Union Hall, corner Grove and Fourth Streets. The present number of members is thirty. The finances are in good condition, with one hundred dollars in the treasury and all debts paid.

CENTENARY COUNCIL, No. 6, was instituted on July 21, 1884. The officers selected for the first term were as follows: James Young, S. C.; R. Wright, V. C.; William Brown, Chap.; J. Lonsbury, P. C.; Charles Carter, Sec.; George Young, Fin. Sec.; W. S. Pearson, Treas.; John White, Her.; W. H. Smith, I. G.; J. A. Young, O. G.; Calvin F. Kyte, M.D., Medical Examiner.

The regular meetings are held on the first and third Monday evenings at hall of Fifth Ward Savings-Bank building, corner Pavonia Avenue and Erie Street.

Centenary Council, No. 6, was instituted under the most auspicious circumstances, and has a present membership of about thirty. The initiating steps were taken by six members of Hudson Council, No. 4, who were also members of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church.

Independent Order of Good Templars.—EXCELSIOR LODGE, No. 104, was instituted Sept. 10, 1877. The following were the first officers: Rees Rees, W. C. T.; Mrs. E. A. Carter, W. V. T.; F. C. Parsells, P. W. C. T.; C. M. Solomon, W. Sec.; W. E. Greenwood, W. F. Sec.; James Machin, W. Treas.; F. L. Hopper, W. M.; Miss Ida Clark, W. D. M.; William Luker, W. I. G.; William Sleight, Jr., W. O. G.; J. Gallagher, R. H. S.; Mrs. Mary J. Maekin, L. H. S.; T. J. Gillen, P. W. C. T.

The following have filled the chair of the presiding officer: Rees Rees, W. E. Greenwood, F. L. Hopper, Mrs. E. A. Carter, T. V. Frost.

The officers in December, 1884, were as follows: W. McFee, W. C. T.; Miss Artie Sherman, W. V. T.; Mrs. M. F. Lee, Chap.; F. L. Hopper, P. W. C. T.; Thomas Mailey, Sec.; F. V. Frost, Fin. Sec.; David Birdsale, Treas.; Mrs. F. Kelly, I. G.; John Courtney, O. G.; Miss E. Brooks, D. M.

Temple of Honor and Temperance.—JERSEY CITY TEMPLE, No. 32, was instituted Oct. 7, 1880, with seventeen charter members.

The following were the officers for the first term: W. McKimm, W. C. T.; T. W. Ward, W. V. T.; J. W. McCabe, W. R.; N. B. Norton, W. T.; W. E. Greenwood, F. R.; W. Stewart, W. U.; Thomas Spurr, D. U.; W. T. Forman, W. S.; W. Meakin, W. C.

The following were the officers in December, 1884: J. Moulton, W. C. T.; R. Ruddick, W. V. T.; R. Longhogen, W. R.; John White, W. T.; A. Burtis, F. R.; J. McCoy, W. U.; John Courtney, Jr., D. U.; John Courtney, Sr., W. S.; J. W. McCabe, W. C.; William Green, P. W. C. T.

This lodge meets every Thursday evening at Union

Hall, corner Grove and Fourth Streets. The present number of members is forty-three.

Sick benefits are paid to all members, from three dollars to seven dollars weekly; also endowment insurance policies to the amount of one thousand dollars are issued to all members desiring such.

Order of Chosen Friends.—WASHINGTON COUNCIL No. 7, was organized June 15, 1881.

The following are the names of the first officers: W. C. Day, P. C. C.; J. B. Romar, C. C.; G. Ross Cary, V. C.; J. D. Harrington, Rec.; L. Sloss, Fin. Rec.; C. Boltwood, Treas.; W. C. Barr, Prelate; T. Weed, M.; C. Costello, W.; C. M. Laurence, G.; W. S. Mathews, Sentry; Trustees, Z. K. Pangborn, J. J. Youlin and E. H. Hammond.

The officers in December 1884, were Thomas Mahony, C. C.; George Burk, P. C. C.; Harry E. Howell, V. C.; R. H. Duff, Sec.; L. Sloss, Asst. Sec.; William Morgan, Treas.; Benjamin Fielder, P.; W. C. Barr, M.; W. Ives, Warden; Thomas E. Conroy, G.; Thomas Dunn, Sentry; J. Wainwright, Organist; Trustees, S. B. Bevaus, G. M. Seaman and S. P. Stevens.

The Past Chief Councilors have been W. T. Day, J. D. Harrington, J. B. Romar and G. Burk.

Washington Council meets on the second and fourth Mondays, at Roche's Hall, corner of Grove and Morgan Streets. Membership, one hundred and thirty-two.

American Legion of Honor.—SUPERIOR COUNCIL, No. 337, A. L. of H., was instituted Nov. 10, 1880, with the following officers: A. J. Holcombe, M. D., C.; W. A. Durrie, M. D., V. C.; H. F. Swayze, P. C.; Floyd Nail, O.; Clark A. Bucklin, Sec.; R. C. Vroom, Collector; C. E. Goodrich, Treas.; M. Terhune, G.; George Smith, Warden; F. M. Lincoln, Chaplain; J. E. Moore, Sentry; Trustees, George F. Lewis, E. E. Quail, T. Smith.

The officers in December, 1884, were D. R. Daly, C.; W. F. Hough, V. C.; F. M. Lincoln, P. C.; H. F. Halsey, O.; C. A. Bucklin, Sec.; Geo. R. Hough, Collector; J. H. Van Horn, Treas.; John Strahan, Guide; G. F. Lewis, Warden; J. W. Lewis, Chaplain; W. N. Jones, Sentry; Trustees, O. H. Lohsen, Henry Koster, H. Demmert.

Ancient Order of Foresters.—COURT HUDSON, No. 699, A. O. F., was organized Sept. 10, 1883, with the following charter members: Charles Munzing, Patrick McKenna, Thomas Byrnes, Thomas G. Henderson, Joseph Keogh, William Duffy, John Fahy, Edward J. Cavanagh, William J. Mackey, M. D., William Harding, Christopher Stevens, Peter Maypothor, Patrick J. Keegan, John G. Cooper.

The first officers were Joseph B. Delo, C. R.; William Duffy, S. C. R.; Charles Munzing, Treas.; Samuel T. Holmes, Sec.; Thomas Byrnes, S. W.; William Anglesen, J. W.; John G. Cooper, S. B.; John W. Fay, J. B.; William J. Mackey, M. D.

The officers for the present term are Joseph B.

Delo, C. R.; Charles Munzing, S. C. R.; Thomas Byrnes, Treas.; Samuel T. Holmes, Sec.; John W. Fahy, S. W.; E. J. Cavanagh, J. W.; Michael F. Casey, S. B.; Patrick McKenna, J. B.; William J. Mackey, M. D.

The number of members is forty-nine. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Mondays of each month at National Assembly rooms, 624 Newark Avenue.

COURT LITTLE JOHN, No. 5909, A. O. F., was organized March 4, 1874. The charter members were William H. Boffy, John Fowler, Robert Marston, Albert Snipe, Richard H. Fey, James Butler, Thomas Macarthy, David Tait, Joseph W. Morgan, George Adams, John Mills, George Washington, John Crane, John H. Holland, Frederick Matthews.

The following were the first officers: William A. Kitts, C. R.; William H. Boffy, S. C. R.; John H. Holland, Sec.; Frederick Matthews, Treas.; Albert Snipe, S. W.; George Adams, J. W.; Joseph W. Morgan, S. B.; Robert Marston, J. B.

The Past Chief Rangers have been Joseph B. Delo, Samuel T. Holmes, Thomas Rowan, John Faherty, Thomas Folan, William Saywell, Joseph N. Brown, Martin J. Flynn, Emrick R. Wessels.

The present officers are Emrick R. Wessels, C. R.; Frederick Verdon, S. C. R.; John Faherty, Treas.; Samuel T. Holmes, Sec.; Peter Marker, S. W.; Thomas Christensen, J. W.; William Shippam, S. B.; John Shannon, J. B.; William A. Durrie, M. D.

The present number of members is sixty-two. The court meets on the first and third Mondays of each month at Franklin Hall, Warren and Montgomery Streets.

COURT JERSEY CITY, No. 7129, is in its first year, and has been remarkably successful in point of numbers. It was organized July 10, 1884, with thirty-five charter members. Within the first month thirty-two candidates were initiated, and a like number were proposed and taken into the order the succeeding month. The officers were: C. R., M. J. Flynn; S. C. R., L. J. Jaquin; Sec., James Nugent; Treas., C. M. Hughes; S. W., Charles Dana; J. W., William Hogan; S. B., Thomas Holmes; J. B., George Austin; Physician, Dr. J. A. Finnerty.

The Court meets on the first and third Fridays of the month, at Roche's Hall, corner of Grove and Morgan Streets.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN RHODERICK McPHERSON.¹

John Rhoderick McPherson was born at York, Livingston Co., in the State of New York, on the 9th day of May, 1832. He received a common-school and academic education, and devoted his time to farming and stock-raising until he was twenty-six years old, when, in 1858, he removed to Hudson County, taking up his residence in Hudson City, which in 1870 was incorporated in the consolidated city of Jersey City.

¹ By Hon. Jacob Watt.

Wm B Shrope

Upon his removal to Hudson County he engaged in the live-stock business, and soon became one of the most prominent dealers. He took up the investigation of the problem as to the best mode of changing the vicious modes of transportation of live-stock and the slaughter of the same for market, and adapted the same to the growth of the great cities of the nation. He planned the abattoir from a poor French system, and so improved the same that it has gone into general use in this country, and is of the greatest utility to our people. He invented, perfected and put into practice new and hitherto unknown devices and principles in the treatment of animal matter. He found droves of cattle passing along the streets and highways, greatly endangering life, and slaughter-houses scattered all about, and great nuisances where they existed; and all this he changed, by making large storage places for cattle, where they were received directly from the cars, and then slaughtered in large numbers at one place, with the greatest cleanliness and care, and the dressed product transferred in the easiest manner to the points of consumption, and in this business he invented and put into practical use the live-stock car for the transportation of animals from the far West to the Eastern cities and the markets of Europe. In these cars the animals are fed, watered and transported with ease and comfort to themselves.

He is also now largely engaged in agriculture, growing out of a desire to utilize the refuse of the stock business for the improvement of the soil. In these great business ventures he has been successful, and while he has benefited himself, he has greatly benefited mankind.

Upon removing to Hudson County he soon began to take an interest in the politics of his adopted State; he was elected to the Board of Aldermen in Hudson City in 1864, and continued to be elected until 1870, and for the last three years of his term he was president of the board. He established in that city the Peoples' Gas-Light Company, and was elected its president, and he has served as a director in several banking institutions. In politics he has always been a Democrat. Upon entering into politics he soon attracted the attention of the late Chancellor Zabriske while he was at the bar. Mr. Zabriske measured his capacity long before he was much known to the general public. The first intimation that the writer of this sketch had of his ability was at a Republican caucus held many years ago, and the subject under discussion was the policy of the Republican party, and what would be the policy of the Democratic party; when to my surprise, Mr. Zabriske asked if it was known "what line of policy John R. McPherson was going to pursue," for at that time he had not as yet been looked to as a leading man of his party; but the chancellor judged correctly. In New Jersey, from that day to this, in political matters, the question has always been important, "What is McPherson going to do?"

In 1871 he was elected to the State Senate, and served in the sessions of 1872, 1873 and 1874. In the Senate his services were very valuable to Hudson County and the State at large. While he knew the value of great corporations and the power of the aggregations of capital to do good if held in proper restraint, still, in the battles between the corporations and the people of the State he has always been on the side of the people. He was a champion of the free railroad law, which crushed the railroad monopolies in the State; he voted against the national railroad bill after it had passed the Lower House, when his vote would have passed it in the Senate; he did it upon the ground that the way to get a general railroad law was to defend all special charters, and at the same session, 1873, the general railroad law was passed, which he helped to frame, and it is the broadest and most liberal of any in the country.

At the same session he aided the citizen's committee from Hudson County in the passage of the law for taxing railroads, which largely increased the revenues of the State and municipalities. This law could not have been passed except through his personal influence; for upon the roll-call of the Senate it only received ten votes, and the president of the Senate allowed the roll-call to halt until Mr. McPherson could leave his seat to persuade a Senator to vote for the same, whose vote passed the bill.

During the session of 1873 and 1874 Hudson County was represented in Trenton by counsel, sent there to prepare the bills for necessary legislation then required, and during these two sessions some twenty bills were passed affecting Hudson County and every bill that was prepared met Mr. McPherson's approbation, and they were all passed in the Senate without any serious trouble, while in the House many of them were passed after a hard struggle. Mr. McPherson's broad and liberal views grasped at once the necessities of the county. His senatorial term brought him into such prominent notice throughout the State that he was elected to the United States Senate in 1877 to succeed the Hon. F. T. Frelinghuysen, and was re-elected in 1883; his term will expire March 1889.

In the United States Senate Mr. McPherson has always advocated and carried out the principles and convictions of the Democratic party of the State of New Jersey, and upon two questions, the currency and protection to American industries, he has acted in accord with the party in this State.

Mr. McPherson was an earnest advocate of the resumption of specie payments, and his currency act, which passed the Senate at the last session, will be of great value to the country if it should pass the House this winter. His record in the United States Senate has been one of manly independence, never hesitating to vote against his own political party when he thought the public interest would be best conserved by so doing. This independence was forcibly illustrated in the tariff legislation of 1882, when he gave the casting vote in the Senate in support of that measure, he being the only Democrat in the Senate who so voted.

In 1876 he was a Presidential elector, when the State went for Tilden by a very large majority. He business for himself, and followed it assiduously for two years. When, however, in 1862, the call for volunteers was sounded for the war of the Rebellion, he offered his services, raised a company and went as captain in the Twenty-first Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers. This regiment served with distinction in the Army of the Potomac, in the famous Sixth Army Corps, which did such effective work, and earned its laurels at such great sacrifice in the battle of Fredericksburg, under Gen. Burnside, and at Chancellorsville, under Gen. Hooker. Capt. Farrier took an has also served for several years as chairman of the Democratic State Committee.

Geo. H. Farrier

GEORGE H. FARRIER.

George H. Farrier's parents were natives of Kent, England, and emigrated to this country in 1832. They settled in Jersey City in 1834, a brief interval having previously been spent in New York City. Mr. Farrier was a tailor, in which trade his son, after ordinary advantages at the public school of the city, served a long apprenticeship under his watchful care. In 1860, George H. Farrier began active part, leading his company amid the rain of bullets and shell, always at the front, distinguishing himself by his bravery during these terrible days of conflict. In the year 1863 he was mustered out of the service, and returned to Jersey City to the prosecution of his business, which has since been carried on successfully.

One remarkable fact may be recorded in regard to the family of which Mr. Farrier is a member. This family is conspicuous among all the citizens of the State of New Jersey for having sent most of its members to the war. Five brothers saw active service in the field, and all served gallantly and with great credit. In their family, alone of all the families of the State, is this glorious record. In the year 1871 the claims of Mr. Farrier for public recognition were acknowledged. He was elected alderman of the First District in Jersey City by a large majority, and was also elected president of the Board of Aldermen for that year. By virtue of that office he became a member of the Board of Finance and Taxation, which is the responsible official body in Jersey City, and chiefly by his wise and judicious counsels and business ability that body made an enduring reputation. After his term of service he was appointed by the Board of Aldermen a member of the Board of Finance.

In the latter part of the year 1871 he was elected a member of the State Legislature, in which he served to the credit of his constituents. In the year 1872 he was re-elected, and again served with distinction. Nine years afterward, in November, 1881, he was elected a third time to the Legislature. At that time the question of the exemption of railroad property from taxation came before the Legislature, and a powerful influence was brought to bear upon the members to vote in favor of corporate encroachments. To Mr. Farrier belongs the credit of having made the great speech of the session, which was applauded and animadverted upon at great length. He took positive ground, fortified by unanswerable arguments, against the powerful monopolies and in favor of the rights of the people and of the community. He is at present holding the position of county collector, and has already signalized himself by his efforts in the direction of economy. Mr. Farrier was one of the principal persons who suggested the idea of the centennial celebration of the battle of Paulus Hook, the anniversary of which was celebrated Aug. 19, 1879, with becoming ceremony and service. Mr. Farrier is also a well-known numismatist, and has in his possession over seven thousand rare and ancient coins, which have been collected by him at a great expenditure of time and money. These coins date from 700 years B.C. to the present time. He has the finest collection of American colonial money in the country, and one which is very highly valued.

Mr. Farrier was, on the 13th of December, 1854, married to Miss Juliette C. Smith, of Norwich, Conn. Emma L. is their only surviving daughter.

REV. WILLIAM B. SHROPE.

Rev. William B. Shrope is of German descent, his grandfather, Christopher Shrope, having emigrated from Lorraine and settled at an early day in Hunterdon County, N. J., after serving with credit in the war of the Revolution. He married in Germany and had children,—John, David, Isaac, Ferdinand, Joseph, Samuel, Mary, Catherine, Rebecca and Sarah.

John Shrope was born in Bethlehem township,

Hunterdon County, where his life was spent in farming pursuits and the sturdy labor accompanying the blacksmith's forge. He married Eleanor, daughter of Martin Smith of the same county, and had children,—Lewis, Christopher, Jacob D., William B., John, Jr., Henry S., Peter B., Theodore R., Mordecai R., Sarah, Thankful and Mary. William B. Shrope was born on the 13th of September, 1817, in Bethlehem township, Hunterdon County, N. J., and in his tenth year left his home for the township of Reading in the same county, where he became an apprentice to the trade of a tailor. He followed this trade successfully until twenty-two years of age, taking advantage of his leisure hours to acquire an education in so far as was possible in the district schools. He was on the 1st of August, 1839, married to Mary, daughter of John Higgins of Raritan township, a representative of one of the oldest families of the county. Their children are John H., George B., Rebecca H., Eugene K., Charles F., and Harry H. Mr. Shrope desired to fill a more distinguished career of usefulness than was possible at his trade, and in 1842 entered Madison University at Hamilton, N. Y., with a view to a thorough theological course, from which he graduated in 1846. His first settlement was at Lambertville, as pastor of the First Baptist Church of that place, where he remained six years, and was next called to Point Pleasant, Pa. Owing to ill health he discontinued his exertions in this field and accepted a mission charge at Peapack, Somerset County, N. J., where he labored for one year and subsequently supplied for two years the Bergen Baptist Church of Jersey City, as its first pastor. His health having again obliged him to discontinue pastoral work, he continued a resident of Jersey City and embarked in the real estate business in New York, in 1881 opening an office in the city of his residence. Mr. Shrope is a strong Republican in his political proclivities, his zeal and public spirit having prompted him to enter the field of local politics. He was elected freeholder in 1882, and re-elected for the two succeeding years without opposition, making one of the most useful members of the board in promoting important public measures. In public as in private life all worthy schemes have his loyal and earnest support.

FREDERICK C. BARLOW, D.D.S.

Frederick C. Barlow, D.D.S., the son of Dr. Edward Barlow, one of New York's oldest dental practitioners, was born on the 6th of November, 1835, in that city.

His early education was acquired at the Ninth Ward Public School, No. 3, of which the late Dr. David Patterson was principal, where he graduated from the ninth class, and subsequently attended a collegiate school on the Hudson. He determined to adopt the profession of dentistry, and began its study under the preceptorship of his father, graduating later at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery.

Taking an active interest in local politics, he, for a while, abandoned the practice of his profession and filled a position in the county clerk's office. In 1866 he was appointed by the Commissioners of Charity and Correction, clerk of Bellevue Hospital (filling the place made vacant by the promotion to the Wardenship of Thomas S. Brennan, now president of the Board of Commissioners), which position he resigned to resume the practice of dentistry.

Dr. Barlow came to Jersey City in April, 1869, thinking it a promising field for the exercise of his of the Central Dental Association of Northern New Jersey, and of the Hudson County Dental Society. He was for the years 1877, '78, '79, '80 and '81 a member of the Examining Board, of the State Dental Society, after which he was elected president of the Society, and on the expiration of his official term was again placed on the Examining Board, which position he still retains. He is now president of the Central Dental Society, and has been both president and secretary of the Hudson County Society.

skill. His ability has since been recognized by a steadily increasing practice.

He has always been an advocate of the advancement of dental education, and has been and is identified with most of the associations connected with the profession by many of which he has been honored with official positions.

He is a member of the American Dental Association, of the Dental Association of the United States of America, of the New Jersey State Dental Society,

Dr. Barlow served his full time in the Seventh Regiment, N. G., S. N. Y., and is a member of the Veteran Association.

The doctor was twice married, his first wife being Miss Josie Norris, of New York, to whom he was united on the 8th of January, 1860, and by whom he has one child living. His second marriage in April, 1873, was to Miss Fanny M. Winans, of Newark, N. J.

In politics he is a Democrat, though not active in the political arena since his residence in the State.

Henry Lombard

HENRY LEMBECK.

Henry Lembeck is of German parentage, his father having resided in Osterwick, Munster, Germany, where he followed the trade of a cabinet-maker. He married Elizabeth Wenning, of the same town, and had children,—Elizabeth, Cathrina, Bernard (deceased), Henry and Joseph. Henry was born on the 8th of April, 1826, in Osterwick, where he remained until eighteen years of age. He received in youth a rudimentary education, and on the death of his father, when his son was fourteen years of age, became an apprentice to the cabinet-maker's trade, serving three years in that capacity. For two and a half years he was employed as a journeyman, when, being drafted into the German army, he did duty as a soldier for two and a half years. His strong love of liberty, however, found expression in the revolutionary sentiments declared by him, which rendered his presence in his native land uncomfortable. He was therefore induced to emigrate to America, and on landing in New York at once resumed his trade, that of a cabinet-maker. Mr. Lembeck subsequently, for the purpose of acquiring a more thorough command of the English tongue, engaged as a grocer's clerk, and remained three years in that capacity, after which, with assistance, he purchased and conducted the store successfully for a period of three years. Jersey City then became his place of residence, where the business of a grocer was continued and greatly enlarged. Circumstances influenced a change in his pursuits and led him to engage for six years in market gardening, after which he became the agent for the sale of the ale made at the brewery of John F. Betz, of New York.

This was continued until 1870, when, in connection with John Betz, he established the firm of Lembeck & Betz, and erected their present brewery, of which ale is the staple product. They speedily won an extended reputation for the excellence of their ale, and created a wide demand for it in New York City and the vicinity. Mr. Lembeck was married, in 1853, to Mary Beadle, of New York, whose children are Henry F., Mamie (Mrs. H. W. Harms), Katie, Albert B. and Victor H. Albert B. is engaged in the produce commission business in New York, and Henry F. has embarked in that of malting at Watkins, N. Y. His wife died Feb. 8, 1870, and Mr. L. was a second time married, July 11, 1871, to Emma Kraus, of Jersey City, whose children are Gustave, Ida and Otto.

Mr. Lembeck in politics is a Democrat, and has taken an active part in local political issues. He was for four years a member of the Board of Public Works of Jersey City, two years of which period he was its president. He is also a director of the E. B. Parsons Malting Company of Rochester, N. Y. He is in religion a Catholic, and identified with St. Paul's Catholic Church of Greenville, in which place he has resided since 1857.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CITY OF HOBOKEN.¹

General Description—Sanitary Conditions—Statistical

THE city of Hoboken occupies a more unique position in many respects than any other city in the world. No other city of its size is so well known by name and so little known in fact. No suburb of New York city is so accessible and its notoriety is due to circumstances which in a great measure no longer exist. Situated on the west bank of the Hudson River, opposite that portion of New York lying between Grand Street and 23rd Street, it was for years a kind of picnic ground for the residents of the great metropolis. Its "Elysian Fields" and "River Walks" were visited by thousands, especially on Sundays. Its preponderating German population entered with all their national zest into the summer garden recreations, taking their entire families with them. Central and Prospect Parks had not been contemplated; Coney Island and Long Branch hardly known; Hoboken was the great pleasure resort of New Yorkers.

Now, all is changed. The great increase of population has encroached on the Fields until they have almost disappeared. A strong city government maintains perfect order and public peace; other nationalities are largely represented among the population and greater summer attractions lead the multitudes in other directions. In many respects the city is now becoming very favorably known. Here many live their early married years, and this accounts for the large proportion hereinafter noted of children among the population.

No city of its size has better credit; none where so large a portion of its population take a personal interest in the administration of municipal affairs, none where partisan ties are less binding. Hoboken has the honor of containing a college for the education of mechanical engineers which is unsurpassed in size, equipments and thoroughness by any in the world. Four great Ocean Steamship Lines and one of the most important trunk railroad lines have their termini in the city. Churches, schools, hospitals and other benevolent organizations are flourishing. An efficient police force, fire department and board of health, an excellent water supply, and, on the uplands an efficient sewage system, have all during the last few years produced a marked effect on the city. The streets are generally well paved with block pavement; excellent ferry accommodations exist with New York, and the mail, telegraph, telephone and district messenger service is generally satisfactory.

¹ In preparing the above sketch the writer has drawn freely from the records gathered during the last seventeen years by Speelmann & Brush, civil engineers of Hoboken, but he has been under special obligation to many other people to whom he returns sincere thanks. He can not allow the occasion to pass without especially acknowledging the assistance he has received from the officers in the various city departments—banks, churches, post-office, private companies, &c., The Democrat-Advertiser, the publications of the Hon. Charles H. Winfield and the personal assistance of Mr. T. H. McConn, Louis McCulloch and Edward Ross, Esq.

On the other hand, the drainage of the lower, or, as it is called, "The Meadow," portion of the city is bad. The public improvements are generally made without much system, and the frequent change in office of those in charge of the municipal affairs and the fact that those who are elected by the people to these municipal offices are often irresponsible, incompetent and improper men, results in a burdensome and unnecessary taxation, while many real and needed improvements in the city are not made.

An enterprising horse-railroad company not only furnishes excellent accommodation to surface passengers, but in 1874 built an elevator by which its cars, horses and passengers are elevated from the level of Hoboken to Jersey City Heights, an elevation of about 100 feet, in less than one minute, instead of taking ten minutes to make the ascent, as was necessary before the erection of the elevator. The business of this company, however, has now increased to such an extent that one elevator is not enough, and the company, in 1884, built an incline plain one mile in length and in places seventy-five feet in height, by which it proposes to transfer people from the ferry to the Heights in five minutes, where, even with the elevator, the time consumed used to be ten minutes.

Two creditable parks adorn the city, the one on the river, known as Hudson Square Park, being unusually beautiful and attractive.

The national and savings banks are both strong and safe institutions.

Title and Early History.—The great merchants of Holland, on receipt of the news, in 1610, of Captain Hudson's discovery of "De Groote Rivier" (the Hudson), were not slow to avail themselves of the possession of its shores. In 1614 a number of them formed the "United Netherland Company" under the authority of the United Netherlands. Immediately afterwards Herr Block, in the "Restless," explored "Scheychbi" (Indian name for New Jersey).

On the expiration of their charter, in 1618, these merchants formed another association called "The Dutch West India Company." This company purchased Manhattan Island from the Indians for sixty guilders. In 1629 the Assembly of the Nineteen granted to all such as should plant colonies in New Netherlands absolute property to such lands as the emigrants might be able to improve, and any member of the company who should plant a colony of fifty adults should be entitled to sixteen miles of river-front, and the title of Patroon, or feudal chief, provided he satisfied the Indians for the lands taken. Under these privileges, one Michael Pauw, burgomaster of Amsterdam and lord of Achtenhoven, near Utrecht, obtained from the Indians, through the director of the Council of New Netherlands, the right and title to the lands which now comprise Hoboken. The following is the deed:

"From the Director and Council of New Netherlands, residing on the Island of Manhattan and the Fort Amsterdam, under the authority of their High Mightinesses, the Lord State-General of this United Netherlands and the incorporated West India Company, at their chambers at Amsterdam, to Michael Pauw — the aforesaid lands, by us named Hobocan Hackling, extending on the south side, Ahasimus eastward, the River Mauritius, and on the west side surrounded by a valley (marsh) and morass, through which the boundaries of said land can be seen with sufficient clearness and be distinguished. Done at the aforesaid Island of Manhattan, in Fort Amsterdam, the 12th day of July, 1630."

The Ahasimus spoken of in the deed is the Indian name of that portion of Jersey City lying east of the hill, and between Hoboken and Paulus Hook. This is the first time the name of Hoboken was met with. It is an Indian word and is said to mean tobacco pipe. The name as given above, with its suffix Hackling signifying land, gives the land of the tobacco pipe. Here the natives were accustomed to procure a stone out of which they carved pipes.

The name is spelled in various ways: Hobocan, Hackling, Hobocan, Hoboken, Hobocken, Hobucken, Hobokina, Hoboquin, Hobuk, Hoebuck, Hoblock, Howbuck, Hooblock, Hooboecken.

This same Pauw obtained a deed from the Indians for Staten Island. Pauw bestowed his name on the river front, between Communipaw and Weehauken, in the Latin shape of PAVONIA. The ownership of Pauw was very unpopular with the members of the company. He did not comply with the stipulation to plant colonies on his land. This led to strife, and finally, in 1635, he delivered up to the company all his title and interest for twenty-six thousand florins, or ten hundred and forty dollars. Up to Feb. 16, 1643, no settlement had been made north of Hoboken. At this place a farm-house and brew-house had been built where Arent Teunissen Van Putten and his family resided, who rented it in 1640 for twelve years. The stipulation of the rent was, "The fourth sheaf with which God Almighty shall favor the field." From 1643 to 1645 there was constant trouble with the Indians. During a portion of this period, they had absolute control of the whole west side of the river. Van Putten while on a trading excursion was killed by the Indians, his farm laid waste and his cattle destroyed. On Aug. 30, 1645, the Indian war was concluded and a treaty signed.

In July, 1646, Petrus Stuyvesant was commissioned director-general, and for the next ten years we find the residents of the west side of the river pursuing the even tenor of their ways. But the killing of an Indian girl by Van Dyck while she was robbing his peach orchard at midnight, brought on another war between the Indians and Dutch in 1654, and for a second time, the west side of the river was laid waste and the savages gained an undisputed possession of the soil.

On Jan. 30, 1658, the Indians deeded to Petrus Stuyvesant all the land in the county, between Hackensack and Hudson Rivers, and so the Dutch under the good Governor Stuyvesant continued in possession. During the fifty years they had control they subdued nature and the savage. Through barter and judicious treatment by Stuyvesant the Indians had been induced to give up the land of their fathers. Government was established on these wild shores and the influence of the language and customs of these hardy Dutchmen is to be found among us even to-day. Nieuw Jar (New Year), with its open hospitality, while Kerstijl (Christmas), yet brings its Santa Claus laden with gifts.

But these Dutch pioneers were to endure other troubles; for in 1664 Charles II., of England, without any cause whatever, without any preliminary war between England and Holland, granted on March 12 of that year all that portion of the New Netherlands lying east of the Delaware Bay to his brother, the Duke of York. While yet the squadron was on its way to capture the country, the duke deeded, on June 23, 1664, to John Lord Berkeley, a brother of the Governor of Virginia, and to Sir George Carteret, the tract lying between the Hudson and Delaware Rivers, to be called New Cesarea or New Jersey. This name was given in honor of Sir John Carteret, who was born on the Island of Jersey in 1599. He had always been loyal to the king, having suffered confinement in the Tower in 1657 and afterwards held many high places under his sovereign's reign. On Sept. 8, 1664, Col. Richard Nichols captured New Amsterdam, and ignorant of the fact that his master had already named the country, he, in honor of the duke, called it Albania. Among the articles of capitulation agreed upon between Stuyvesant and Nichols, two were as follows:

"2. All people shall continue free denizens and shall enjoy the lands, houses, goods, wheresoever they are within this country and dispose of them as they please."

"11. The Dutch shall enjoy their own customs concerning their inheritances."

George Carteret commissioned his brother Philip to be Governor, and he assumed control in July, 1665.

The war between England and Holland arising out of the bad faith of the English was finally settled by the treaty of Breda on July, 1667, by which each party was to hold what had been captured. This confirmed the title of the English to New Netherlands, and they continued to govern the province under the same military form of rule as had been established by Stuyvesant.

On Feb. 5, 1663, Petrus Stuyvesant deeded the tract known as the Hoboken Patent to his brother-in-law, Nicholas Varlet, which deed or patent was confirmed by Governor Carteret May 12, 1668. This deed included all the uplands and marsh-lands within the present city limits. Varlet lived in Bergen.

Stuyvesant died in 1671, but the friction between England and Holland resulted in another war, in which the Dutch captain, Anthony Colve, in command of twenty-three vessels and sixteen thousand men, recaptured New Amsterdam July 29, 1673, but by the treaty between England and Holland made at Westminster, in 1674, the country was again restored to the English, who held control of it until the Revolution.

To clear up any shadow which the recent occupation by the Dutch might have cast upon former grants, Charles II. made a second grant, dated July 29, 1674, to the Duke of York, who, in turn, the same year granted to Sir George Carteret what was afterwards known as East Jersey.

In a minute description of the whole country in 1680, by one George Scott, Hoboken was referred to as follows:

"Further up is a good plantation in a neck of land almost an island, called Hobuck. It did belong to a Dutch merchant, who formerly, in the Indian war, had his wife, children and servants murdered by the Indians, and his house, cattle and stock destroyed by them. (This was Arent Truimden.) It is now settled again, and a mill erected there by one dwelling in New York."

But few incidents appear in the history of the city until 1700, when the inhabitants petitioned King William to take from the land proprietors their arbitrary powers, and the proprietors gladly surrendered a burden which was peculiarly unprofitable and productive of discord.

Land troubles continued, however, until 1673, when the legislature passed the Act providing for a complete survey and allotment of the common land among the freeholders. This survey was very accurately made and is to-day the basis upon which all land titles are founded.

The estate of Nicholas Varlet was inherited by his daughter, Susanna, who married Robert Hickman, a resident of Hoboken. Hickman and his wife conveyed Hoboken, containing one hundred and thirty-eight Dutch Morgens, to Samuel Bayard, a New York merchant. Bayard occupied it as a summer residence. His mansion was on "Castle Point." It was burned by the patriots, Aug. 24, 1780, and the farm laid waste. Bayard was at first a patriot, but when he saw the cause waning he turned loyalist. His property was confiscated, and at the close of the Revolution he went to England, where he lived to be a very old man, at his seat, Greenwich House, Southampton.

Hoboken is described by the commissioners of 1674 as beginning at the mouth of the creek, and running to a stake at the foot of the hill, N. 56.30; W. 18.63 chains, from the beginning; thence westerly 113 1-2 chains, on a straight line to a stake by a creek which parts Hoboken from the meadows lying north of Harsimus, and so down the creek to the Hudson, and thence up the Hudson to the point of beginning.

On March 16, 1784, the State of New Jersey sold

Hoboken, which had been confiscated from Bayard, to John Stevens, for 18,360 pounds. Col. Stevens, the founder of the present city of Hoboken, was born in New York in 1749 and died in 1838. His grandfather was a native of England, and came to New York as an officer of the Crown. His father, John, became a resident of New Jersey, and his son married Rachel, daughter of John Cox, of Bloomsburg, N. J. He was for several years treasurer of the State, and his sister married Robert R. Livingston, Chancellor of New York.

At the outbreak of the Revolution the patriots found many warm supporters on the west side of the Hudson River. Outposts of the American army under Gen. Greene were stationed at Hoebuck.

The Mercury of Jan. 20, 1777, says, "A party of forty Rebels came down to Col. Bayard's Mills, last Friday morning, near Hoebuck Ferry, and carried off some cattle, but being pursued by a few of the 57th Regiment, stationed at Powles Hook, they took to their heels and made off."

The New Jersey Gazette of April 28, 1779, says: "On Sunday, 28th ult., a party of thirty men belonging to Col. Van Buskirk's corps of Tories, and embodied Refugees, stationed at Hoboken, went out as far as Closter, horse stealing."

The city of Hoboken was founded by John Stevens according to a map made by Charles Loss, C. E., covering about half of the upland within the present city limits. The first sale of lots from the "Loss Map" was made at the Tontine Coffee House, in New York, by auctioneer, David Dixon, Mar. 20, 1804.

Early in 1774, a ferry was established to connect the Corporation Dock at Bear Market in New York, with Hoboken. It was under the charge of Cornelius Haring, Agent for the State of New Jersey. The boats were distinguished by the name "The Hoebuck Ferry" painted on the sterns. During the war of the Revolution this, like all the other ferries, was under the control of the military. Up to 1811, the Common Council of New York leased the ferry to different parties, although all the years since 1784 John Stevens had been owner of Hoboken. After remaining quiet, with only an occasional remonstrance against the management of the ferry, until Dec. 11, 1808, he came forward as a discoverer of a new power in navigation. He claimed to be the first man in the country who had successfully applied steam as a propelling power. On April 13, 1811, he obtained a lease of the ferry, and immediately set about to complete his steam ferry-boat. It was called "Julia Ann," carried one hundred passengers, and was the first steam ferry-boat in the world. It made sixteen trial trips, but not being as economical as the horse boats, it was taken off the Ferry.

John Stevens was in fact the first railroad man in this country. He published an elaborate pamphlet, addressed to De Witt Clinton advocating the construction of a railroad to convey troops to Canada during the war of 1812.

In June, 1817, John Stevens sold all his interest in the ferry to John, Robert and Samuel Swartwout, who assigned it in 1813 to Philip Horne. At this time the landing in New York was changed from Vesey to Barclay Street. In May, 1821, the Stevens family repurchased the ferry, paying to the city of New York eighteen hundred dollars rent per annum. The Stevens's started the steam ferry-boat at this time. The first boat was the "Hoboken," and made regular trips "every hour by the St. Paul's clock." The ladies' cabin was below deck, carpeted, and warmed by open fire-places. The Christopher Street branch was started in July 1836, taking the place of the Spring Street landing, which had been used since 1774.

On April 15, 1814, Samuel Swartwout and his brother Robert purchased from John Stevens the marsh portion of Hoboken, now known as the "Coster Estate." They made a vegetable garden of it, and attempted to reclaim a large portion of it. They failed, however, in 1819, and their mortgagee, John G. Coster, took title to the tract. In 1860 Coster laid it out into building-lots, according to a map made by Daniel and Austin D. Ewen, civil engineers of New York.

On Feb. 10, 1843, that portion of Hudson County north of New Jersey Railroad was set off and called North Bergen. Hoboken continued part of this township of North Bergen until April 16th, 1849, when it was organized as a separate township, under the name of Hoboken; this includes Weehawken.

The city of Hoboken was incorporated March 28, 1853; on March 15, 1859, a portion of it, including Castle Point was annexed to Weehawken, but in 1876 this portion was re-annexed to Hoboken.

The population of this city in 1850 was 2,698, United States census; 1855 was 6,727, New Jersey census; 1860 was 9,659, United States census; 1865 was 12,976, New Jersey census; 1870 was 20,297, United States census; 1875 was 24,766, New Jersey census; 1880 was 30,999, United States census; 1884 was 37,184 estimated.

John Stevens had five sons,—John C., Robert L., Richard, James and Edwin A.

Richard died young, and on the death of John Stevens, his sons, John C. and Robert L. and Edwin A., bought out the other heirs. Subsequently Edwin A., inherited from Robert L., and bought from John C., the whole estate. The Stevens Battery was commanded by Robert L., in 1837, and was intended as an impregnable protection to New York Harbor. The science of ordnance advanced so rapidly, however, that before the battery was completed, it was found to be vulnerable. Changes were made, the battery was enlarged from time to time, but the advance in ordnance was too rapid and the battery was at last abandoned.

The present city lies in latitude 40° 44' 21" north, and longitude 74° 1' 54" west from Greenwich.

Topography.—Hoboken contains about two hundred and seventy acres of upland and four hundred and fifty acres of meadow, of which about ninety acres of upland and one hundred and forty acres of meadow are built upon. Serpentine is the underlying rock of the Hoboken upland; blue mud underlies the meadow. The borings, which have been taken from time to time through this mud, indicate that it rests on a foundation of sand or gravel, and that it gradually increases in depth easterly from the upland to the Palisades, being some places over one hundred feet deep. The surface of the meadow before the tides were cut off was about on the level of mean high water; but since the river is, to a certain extent, kept off the meadow by tide-gates and street embankments the surface has sunk from one and a half to two feet below mean high tide.

The meadow streets of Hoboken that have been graded are generally filled in to the height of about two feet above high water. The city was originally founded on the uplands bordering the Hudson River and west of the promontory known as "Castle Point" but during the last thirty years it has spread westerly over the swamp land lying along the foot of the Palisades.

The average altitude of the entire city above mean high water is about twelve feet, while that of Castle Point is one hundred feet, and the top of the precipitous heights of the Palisade range, which bounds Hoboken on the west and north, and on which are located Jersey City Heights, West Hoboken, town of Union and Weehawken, range from one hundred to two hundred feet above the level of the sea. The uplands of the city (except Castle Point, containing thirty acres, which is the private ground of the Stevens family) range from eight to twenty-five feet above high tide. The soil is of a stiff clayey nature, with no rock near the surface. The uplands of Hoboken no doubt originally formed an island, which were cut off from the Palisades by the waters of the Hudson River for a width of about fifteen hundred and fifty feet.

The depth of the water in the channel of the Hudson River opposite Hoboken is about sixty feet; the bottom is blue mud or silt; the same is found underlying the meadow lands of Hoboken. The depth to hard bottom of the Hudson River is about one hundred and twenty-five feet below mean high tide.

The average difference between mean high and mean low water in the Hudson River at Hoboken is four feet and six inches. During northeasterly or northerly storms, especially in time of high spring tide, the level of the water in the Hudson River is several feet higher than mean low water, the greatest difference that has been noted being three feet, nine and a half inches,—that is to say, there have been times when even at low tide the water in the river was nine and a half inches higher than the surface of the meadows. On several occasions the water has risen more than three feet higher than mean high water, and, of course, at such times the water in the river was four and a half feet higher than the level of the meadows and one foot higher than the established grade of the meadow streets.

Sewage.—There are six sewer outlets from Hoboken, two of these main sewers are of wood, about four feet square, and lie in and are intended to drain only the meadow lands; one is a large brick sewer, which is very deep, and is intended as an outlet for lateral sewers on the upland as well as for draining the meadows; the other three main sewers all drain the uplands. All the meadow sewers are unsatisfactory. The upland sewers are efficient. The tidal box drain system for the meadows has already cost the city during the last fifteen years about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. They have proved to be simple elongated cesspools, which retain all the refuse which drains into them. They are almost entirely useless in time of heavy storms. Sometimes they are tele-blocked for days together, and there is no escape for the sewage except by evaporation. There is seldom any escape for the refuse except by putrefaction. A careful examination of health statistics in 1875 showed the death-rate on the worst portion of the meadow districts to be thirty-seven per thousand annually, while on the better portion of the upland it was only twenty per thousand. Earnest and repeated efforts during the last twelve years to introduce a low level system of drainage on the meadows has been unsuccessful, notwithstanding the fact that the practicability and economy of a pumping system has not only been demonstrated in other cities, but in certain portions of this city as well. The more intelligent portion of the community, as well as a majority of the landed interest, has strongly advocated the low level system, but it has been invariably defeated by those who are the greatest sufferers from the present condition of affairs, to wit: those living on the meadows.

Sanitary Condition of Hoboken.—In 1879 the New Jersey State Sanitary Association selected Hoboken as a city peculiarly well-fitted for determining the effect of soil, contour, and drainage on the death rate. An entirely original and exhaustive examination was made, from which the following facts, never before published, were ascertained. The examination was confined to the year 1875, that being the latest census year and the first complete year of the Hudson County Board of Health. No deaths were considered except those who had previously resided in Hoboken; all decedents from the public hospitals, formerly non-resident, were omitted.

The general death-rate in the United States in 1870 was 21.60 per 1000; New York City in 1875, 20.47 per 1000; Hoboken in 1875, 27.80 per 1000.

The death-rates per thousand living at the following ages of life, was.—

Age	United States.	New York.	Hoboken.
Under 1 year	170	307.4	139
Between 1 and 5 years	35	63	58
Between 5 and 21 years	7.10	8.2	7.8
Over 21 years	24	22	19.30

The object of the investigation was especially to locate three classes of diseases,—

Zymotic diseases, or those which are considered preventable under proper sanitary regulations, viz.: cholera, diphtheria, scarlet fever, croup, etc.

Fifth, or diarrheal diseases, a certain class of zymotic diseases, supposed to be generated by human excrement, viz.: cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, and typhoid fever.

Moisture diseases, or those which are supposed to be aggravated by the moisture of the soil, viz.: marasmus, consumption, pneumonia and bronchitis.

It was found that before the influence of soil and drainage upon the death-rate could be ascertained, there were two elements in relation to the population which would have to be considered, 1, the age distribution. 2, nationality.

The above life tables show that about one-half of all deaths occur among children under five years of age. Being 56.30 per cent. in Hoboken, 48.40 in New York and 41.40 in the United States; while the proportion of children under five years of age to the total population was 18.10 per cent. in Hoboken, 12.20 per cent. in New York and 14.30 per cent. in the United States.

The Effect of Nationality on the Death-Rate.— This may be shown in either of two ways; the first, and most common, but entirely incorrect method, is simply to consider the nativity of the population.

LIFE TABLE OF HOBOKEN, 1875.—NATIVITY.

BIRTHPLACE.	Population of each Specified Nativity.	Deaths among each Specified Nativity.	Death Rate per 1,000 of Population of Specified Nativity.	Proportion of Population of each Specified Nativity to Total Population.	Proportion of Deaths among each Specified Nativity to Total Deaths.
United States	12,973	532	41.60	52	77
Germany	6,238	72	11.50	10	10
Ireland	3,414	50	16.20	15	9
Other Foreign Nationalities	1,910	26	13.60	8	4
All Nationalities	24,766	680	28	100	100

CONDENSED LIFE TABLES OF THE UNITED STATES, NEW YORK CITY AND HOBOKEN.—SPECIFIED AGES.

AGE.	United States, 1870.
	Population of Specified Ages.	Deaths at Specified Ages by Birth.	Death Rate per 1,000 of Population at Specified Ages.	Proportion of Population at Specified Ages to Total Population.	Proportion of Deaths at Specified Ages to Total No. of Deaths.
Under one year	1,100,475	187,195	170	2.80	22.54
Between one and five years	4,114,208	157,231	35	11.30	18.95
All under five years	5,514,713	344,429	62.46	14.30	41.43
Between five and twenty years	13,641,490	106,651	7.10	35.40	12.76
Over twenty years	19,507,007	382,136	20	50.30	40.35
All ages	38,663,210	632,616	16.60	100	100
All over five years	33,648,497	488,187	14.80	85.70	78.60
New York City, 1875.
Under one year	27,782	8,540	307.40	2.64	27.8
Between one and five years	100,387	6,308	63	9.64	29.58
All under five years	128,169	14,848	115.80	12.20	48.46
Between five and twenty years	314,421	2,584	8.2	30.20	8.94
Over twenty years	269,296	13,277	22	50.20	40.24
All ages	1,641,886	30,709	23.17	100	100.00
All over five years	913,717	15,861	17.30	87.80	51.6
Hoboken, 1875.
Under one year	1,575	219	139	6.45	31.84
Between one and five years	2,944	169	58	11.64	21.54
All under five years	4,489	388	86.1	18.1	56.35
Between five and twenty years	7,838	61	7.8	31.74	8.94
Over twenty years	12,430	210	15.3	50.25	34.84
All ages	24,766	659	27.8	100	100
All over five years	20,277	301	14.8	81.9	43.74

This method and calculation seems to indicate that the death-rate among the native-born population of Hoboken is forty-two per thousand, and among the foreign population from twelve to sixteen per thousand. While the data in this table is literally true, the results obtained are entirely erroneous and misleading. From just such tables as this the false notion is obtained that the native element of our population is decreasing, and that to the continual influx of foreigners, with their larger families, the increase of our population is due.

The age of nearly all our immigrants range from five to fifty years, between which ages the rate of mortality is the minimum. Out of the foreign-born population of 444,166 in the City of New York, in 1875, only 2891, or three-fifths of one per cent. were under five years of age, and only 45,728, or about ten per cent. were under twenty years of age.

If, however, the children of these immigrants are all ranked as natives, then the deaths among these children are charged to the native population. The consequence is that the native population is charged not only with deaths among its own numbers and its own children, but also with the deaths among children of the migrant population. In cities where there is a large foreign element as in Hoboken, the effect of this improper distribution is very marked, eighty-five per cent. of the total population being of foreign parentage, and, as we have seen by above, fifty-six per cent. of all the decedents were under five years of age.

The census of New York for 1875 illustrates the error that would arise from this calculation by nativity in the most striking manner. The number of native-born married women was found to be 54,734, and of native-born children, under five years of age, 123,962. The number of foreign-born married women was found to be 124,989, and of foreign-born children, under five years, 2880.

The second and correct method of determining the effect of nationality upon the death-rate is to consider the percentage of the population.

LIFE TABLE HOBOKEN 1875—PERCENTAGE AND AGE DISTRIBUTION.

AGE.	Native Percentage.
	Population at Specified Ages.	Deaths at Specified Ages.	Youth Rates Per 1,000 of Population at Specified Ages.	Proportion of Total Deaths of Each Specified Age to Total Deaths of Each Nativity.	Deaths of each Specified Age to Total Deaths of Each Nativity.
Under one year . . .	296	38	133	8	46
Between one and five years . . .	548	20	36	14	215
All under five years . . .	834	58	69.5	22.3	61
Between five and twenty-one years . . .	1,224	10	7	20	130
Over twenty-one years . . .	1,286	27	17	4.8	20
All ages . . .	3,744	55	26	100	150
All over five years . . .	2,910	37	12.7	77.7	80

AGE.	Foreign Percentage.
	Population at Specified Ages.	Deaths at Specified Ages.	Youth Rates Per 1,000 of Population at Specified Ages.	Proportion of Total Deaths of Each Specified Age to Total Deaths of Each Nativity.	Deaths of each Specified Age to Total Deaths of Each Nativity.
Under one year . . .	1,389	181	140	6	22
Between one and five years . . .	2,366	119	63	14.5	24
All under five years . . .	3,655	330	90.3	17.4	75.33
Between five and twenty-one years . . .	6,514	51	8	31.5	81
Over twenty-one years . . .	10,853	213	20	72.1	30
All ages . . .	21,022	394	28	100	100
All over five years . . .	17,307	264	15.2	82.6	44.50

This table indicates the real facts in relation to the death-rates among the native and foreign elements of the population of Hoboken. The propriety of compiling such a table has been suggested, but the above we believe, is the first of the kind that has ever been published.

This table also reveals the fact that between the specified ages the death-rate in each case was less among those of native than among those of foreign parentage, of which fact the following extract from the census of Massachusetts for 1865 is corroborative. "From these considerations the conclusion is inevitable that notwithstanding the remarkable fact that the births among the native or American born, constituting 79.05 per cent. of the total population of the State, are at present annually exceeded by the births among the foreign born, constituting 20.95 per cent. of the total population, the native element is constantly growing in numbers, owing to the relatively less mortality of those of early age."

In this connection we present the following data taken from the report of the Board of Health of New York City for 1875:

CHILDREN.	WHITES.
	Native Born.	Foreign Born.
1st Child	27,4	616
2d "	27,4	616
3d "	1,775	2,004
4th "	67	1,511
5th "	44	1,275
6th "	180	800
7th "	116	700
8th "	77	444
9th "	42	272
10th "	9	127
11th "	1	61
12th "	3	47
13th "	4	12
14th "	1	1
15th "	1	1
16th "	1	1
17th "	1	1
Not stated	762	2,643
Total	6,752	15,000

The data in this table would account for an excessive death-rate among those of foreign parentage. In addition to this the mere fact of immigration aggravates the tendency to disease due to want of acclimation. Moreover, the majority of our immigrants especially those who settle in our seacoast cities are of the less enterprising and hardy classes.

The importance of a proper consideration of this question will at once be seen by an examination of the following table:

Total Population	POPULATION.		Percentage of Population of Foreign Parentage.	Percentage of Population of Foreign Nativity.
	Foreign Percentage.	Foreign Nativity.
United States	13,000,000	13,800,000	769,000	5.9
New York State	4,582,000	4,220,000	1,148,000	25.0
Pennsylvania	3,021,000	1,012,000	547,000	18.0
Massachusetts	1,417,000	680,000	310,000	44.0
New Jersey	960,000	350,000	188,000	54.0
New York City	512,222	78,745	41,000	80.0
Philadelphia	674,000	300,000	183,000	59.0
Boston	275,800	100,000	62,000	62.0
Hoboken (187)	24,766	21,126	800	3.2

The following was found to be the average number of persons living in each dwelling in Hoboken, as compared with other cities: Hoboken, 9.10; New York, 14.72; Boston, 8.06; Philadelphia, 6.91; Jersey City, 8.37; Toledo, 0, 5.20.

TOTAL POPULATION, PREVALENCE IN CERTAIN CLASSES AND IN DIFFERENT SECTIONS OF HOBOKEN.

CLASS.	Whole City.	Uplands.	Manhawa.	Native Percentage.	Foreign Percentage.
Population	24,766	9,709	15,187	7,744	21,022
Deceaseds, Total	469	215	470	93	394
Under 1 year	219	84	135	39	141
Bot. 1 and 5 years	109	43	103	29	140
Zymotic Diseases	544	79	177	25	218
Birth Disease	80	24	56	8	27
Mortality Diseases	196	28	78	5	91

TOTAL DEATHS IN EACH CLASS PER ONE THOUSAND OF TOTAL POPULATION.

CLASS.	Whole City.	Columb.	Meadow.	Native Parents.	Foreign Parents.
Death-rate, Total	27.81	22	31	26	38
Under 1 year	8	4	10	10	9
Between 1 and 5 years . . .	7	5	9	5	7
Zymotic Diseases	10	8	11	7	10
Fifth Diseases	3.23	2.50	3.70	2.10	3.40
Moisture Diseases	4.50	5	5.10	4.40	4.60

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

CITY OF HOBOKEN.

(Continued.)

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

THE mayor of the city is its chief executive officer. He is elected annually in the spring; is a member ex-officio of most of the public boards in the city and has the veto power over city legislation. The present mayor is an active, wealthy merchant, who has for many years interested himself in the welfare of the city.

The following is a complete list of all the mayors in the city since its formation;

MAYORS.

1855-56. Cornelius V. Cliekenr.	1860-70. Hazen Kimball.
1857-'59. Franklin D. Carpenter.	1871-72. Frederick L. Schumersahl.
1858. George W. Morton.	1873-74. Peter McGavisk.
1860-'62. John R. Johnston.	1875-77. Joseph Russell.
1863. Lorenzo W. Elder.	1878-79, 1881-82. E. V. S. Boss, Jr.
1864. Charles T. Perry.	1880. John A. O'Neil.
1865-66. Frederick H. Ogden.	1881-84. Herman L. Timkin.
1867-68. Frederick W. Bolmstedt.

Town and City Clerks.—The town clerks had, and the city clerks have, entire control of the records of the city. They keep the minutes of the council and all warrants against the city are drawn by them. During the last few years the records in the city clerk's office have been entirely rearranged and are now well systematized.

The following is a complete list of the town and city clerks up to date.

TOWN CLERKS.

1849-'53. J. Dunn Little.	1854. Andrew Mount.
---------------------------	---------------------

CITY CLERKS.

1855-56. Samuel W. Carey.	1875-77. George J. Deicker.
1857. Herman W. Brasilia.	1878-'81. R. H. Alberts (Wm. C. Mansell, for twenty-five days.)
1858. Augustus O. Evans.	1882. Charles H. Miller.
1859-60. William R. Harrison.	(Wm. C. Mansell, for twenty-six days.)
1861-69. John Kennedy.	1883-84. Martin V. McDermott.
1870. F. F. Rowald.
1871-'74. John R. McCullish.

Tax Commissioners.—The tax commissioners of Hoboken are elected annually by the people, two from each ward; they must be freeholders and electors in that ward. No ballot must contain more than one name for that office.

It is the duty of the tax commissioners to fix the amounts of money to be raised by taxation for the current year, for the following purposes, to wit:

For the support of the Fire Department, the police, public schools, Water Department, repairing and cleaning streets, improving public grounds, lighting the street and public buildings, erecting and keeping in repair such public buildings as may be needed for city purposes, militia, salaries of city officers, supporting the poor and such other purposes as may be necessary to carry on the city government.

The board meets on the second Monday of May, in each year, and has to file its return in the city clerk's office on or before the 1st of the following June. The action of this board is subject to confirmation by the mayor and council.

This board was created by the Legislature, April 6, 1871. Prior to this the citizens of Hoboken voted directly on the appropriations at each spring election. The following are the total annual appropriations and the names of the tax commissioners since their organization.

Year.	Amount.	Year.	Amount.
1855	$11,800	1870	$336,500
1856	12,850	1871	140,155.50
1857	13,300	1872	116,880
1858	16,375	1873	151,135
1859	17,580	1874	167,765.50
1860	18,750	1875	183,065
1861	18,750	1876	164,254.76
1862	20,100	1877	171,055
1863	21,100	1878	166,195
1864	24,300	1879	154,120
1865	30,900	1880	200,360
1866	31,300	1881	197,384.58
1867	79,350	1882	162,467.82
1868	88,740	1883	212,420.59
1869	86,000	1884	222,070

The value of the city property in 1856, was $173,081; 1873 was $500,500; 1884, was $938,478.

The total assessed valuation of Hoboken in 1855, was $7,948,311; 1873 was $14,099,100; 1884 was $15,965,700, less than ten per cent. of which was personal property. The net city indebtedness in 1855, was nothing; 1873 was $103,803; 1884 was $278,305.

TAX COMMISSIONERS.

1871.

First Ward, Herman D. Bush, John Livesey; Second Ward, Lorenzo W. Elder, Robert Hankins; Third Ward, Albert Bogert Jr., John Meighan; Fourth Ward, Matthew J. Meahan, Henry Winkle.

1872.

First Ward, John Livesey, Charles Clinton; Second Ward, Isaac Shreeve, Hazen Kimball; Third Ward, Robert Lundigan, Thomas D. Johnston; Fourth Ward, Matthew J. Meahan, Patrick Breen.

1873.

First Ward, John Livesey, Robert McCaigue; Second Ward, Lorenzo W. Elder, Isaac Shreeve; Third Ward, George Joekel, Thomas D. Johnston; Fourth Ward, Thomas Bourke, Matthew J. Meahan.

1874.

First Ward, Daniel Spencer, Samuel Whitney; Second Ward, James Williams, Charles A. Weber; Third Ward, Fritz Raab, Thomas D. Johnston; Fourth Ward, William O'Brien, Charles Kuenemann.

1875.

First Ward, Bernard Beyer, Charles Schmidt; Second Ward, Thomas McKens, John Walthers; Third Ward, Fritz Raab, B. F. Hart; Fourth Ward, William O'Brien, Charles Kuenemann.

1876
First Ward, John C. Benson, Henry Offermann; Second Ward, Thomas Butts, Isaac Shreve; Third Ward, William Hertz, F. L. Schlemmahl; Fourth Ward, James Clark, Frederick Seiler.

1877
First Ward, John C. Benson, Frank Hall; Second Ward, Lorenzo W. Elder, Henry A. Schlosser; Third Ward, Charles Benson, Daniel Donegan; Fourth Ward, James Clark, Isaac Ingleson.

1878
First Ward, John C. Benson, John Livsey; Second Ward, L. W. Elder, Frank Nichols; Third Ward, John Maltus, Daniel Donegan; Fourth Ward, John McArdle, Isaac Ingleson.

1879
First Ward, Carsten Sierch, Dieterick Bauges; Second Ward, Charles S. Schultz, Leonard Pfeiffer; Third Ward, Daniel Donegan, William A. Macy; Fourth Ward, Isaac Ingleson, John Logan.

1880
First Ward, Charles Schmitt, Frank Leopold; Second Ward, Charles S. Schultz, William H. Dulworth; Third Ward, E. Clinton Perry, Daniel Donegan; Fourth Ward, Joseph McArdle, Frederick Kammerer.

1881
First Ward, Henry Offerman, John Zulauf; Second Ward, Charles S. Schultz, Bethel N. Crum; Third Ward, August Moeller, Daniel Donegan; Fourth Ward, Robert Parker, Frederick Kammerer.

1882
First Ward, Henry Offerman, Charles Chamiserlain; Second Ward, Louis Budenbender, Charles Schultz; Third Ward, John McDermott, August Moeller; Fourth Ward, Arnold Mohr, John Lemkau.

1883
First Ward, Samuel Webb, John Bruning; Second Ward, L. W. Elder, R. V. Taft; Third Ward, John K. Pollock, John McDermott; Fourth Ward, Arnold Mohr, George Mutscher.

1884
First Ward, Charles Clinton, John Bruning; Second Ward, Lorenzo W. Elder, Charles S. Schultz; Third Ward, John McDermott, William A. Macy; Fourth Ward, Joseph McArdle, Frederick G. Kammerer.

Assessors.—The city assessor is elected annually. Prior to 1871 there was an assessor from each ward, but since that time there has been only one assessor for the whole city. His duty is to apportion upon the tax-payers the amount which has to be raised each year for city, county and State purposes. The following is a complete list of these officers to date:

ASSESSORS.

1849-52, David L. Stagg; 1853-5, James Houseman.

1856
First Ward, Garr A. Benson; Second Ward, Hoyt Sanford; Third Ward, James Houseman.

1856
First Ward, Garret Benson; Second Ward, C. P. De Greeck; Third Ward, Charles Clinton.

1857
First Ward, Francis Bolting; Second Ward, William G. Pummer; Third Ward, Charles C. Hagau.

1858
First Ward, William H. Peckham; Second Ward, Robert Hankins; Third Ward, Rees P. Francis.

1859
First Ward, Albert Pfantz; Second Ward, Robert Hankins; Third Ward, Rees P. Francis.

1860
First Ward, Benjamin G. Campbell; Second Ward, Charles A. Nottler; Third Ward, Rees P. Francis.

1861
John W. Dermott, William F. Parslow.
1862,
Julian Crevier, Fred. W. Bohmstedt.
1863,
Frederick W. Bohmstedt, Rees P. Francis.

1864
Christian Eldred, John Madden.
1865,

First Ward, Robert A. Reed; Second Ward, Gottlieb Wakerlin; Third Ward, James W. Van Keuren.

1866
First Ward, John White; Second Ward, Julien Crevier, Jr.; Third Ward, James J. Madden.

1867
First Ward, John White; Second Ward, Gottlieb Wakerlin; Third Ward, Rees P. Francis.

1868
First Ward, William Weyersheim; Second Ward, John M. Cluskey; Third Ward, Andrew C. Rowald.

1869
First Ward, Robert M. Crane, Jr.; Second Ward, John A. Grady; Third Ward, Andrew C. Rowald; Fourth Ward, James Hunt.

1870
First Ward, John A. McHenry; Second Ward, Thomas Eyster; Third Ward, John A. Grady; Fourth Ward, Michael Martini.

1871, Jacob L. Old H.
1872-73, John A. McHenry
1874-75, John Isomay
1880, William H. Child
1881-82, John R. Weisling.
1884, James A. DeHart.

Collectors.—The city collector is elected for a term of three years by the people, and has to collect the taxes after the same have been assessed and confirmed by the Council. The following is a complete list of these officers to date:

TOWN COLLECTORS.

1849, Bernhard Waldron. 1850-52, Thomas Merckins.
1853, Thomas Field. 1854-55, Jean Van Bokk.

CITY COLLECTORS.

1863-66, Joseph Wood. 1867, William F. Bugie.
1866-68, Andrew Mount. 1868, William Hersee.
1869-71, William H. Child. 1869-70, Peter H. Johnson.
1872-73, Henry J. Hopper. 1871-72, Andrew Krillmann.
1874, John D. P. Mount. 1875-83, John M. Mahan.
1884, Gustavus M. Stouffer. 1884, Richard Bowers.
1885, Alexander Stewart.

Treasurers.—The treasurer of the city is annually elected and is under very heavy loads, two hundred thousand dollars. He has charge of the city funds, and is responsible to the mayor and Council.

TREASURERS.

1855, George W. Morton. 1861, Solon M. Bogert.
1856-57, Ludwig Huesmann. 1862-71, William H. Child.
1872, Charles T. Perry. 1872-73, John Kamens.
1859-60, Benjamin S. Taylor. 1877-84, August Bente.

Corporation Attorneys.—The corporation attorney is the law officer of the city. He is annually appointed by the mayor and Council to serve during that year. The following is a complete list to date.

CORPORATION ATTORNEYS.

1855, Samuel W. Carey. 1870, William T. Hoffmann.
1856-57, Edwin R. V. Wright. 1874-76, James W. Vroom.
1863-64, 1863-64, Frederick B. 1867, Charles K. Cannon.
Ogden. 1878-81, Martin W. Nibben.
1862, J. Harvey Lyons. 1882, Samuel A. Bower.
1865-67, Leon Alford. 1883-84, William S. Stahr.
1868-69, 1871-73, John C. Bowen.

Town and City Committees.—The town committee of the former township, and afterwards the Council of the city, have entire control of the legislative power except such as is vested in the police board, water board, etc., over which their control is indirect. The mayor and Council have entire control over the finances of the city.

The following is a list of the town committee men and city councilmen since the original formation of the township.

TOWN COMMITTEE.

1842.—Charles S. Chamberlain, Peter Mehan, Thomas Mickens, Hoyt Sanford, George I. Teel, John Walker.

1843.—Peter Mehan, Thomas Mickens, Hoyt Sanford, George I. Teel, John Walker.

1844.—Garret Benson, James Heuseman, David Masters, Peter I. Powese, George J. Teel.

1845.—Michael S. Allison, Edwin A. Stevens, Garret Benson, Peter Mehan, Hoyt Sanford.

1846.—Cornelius V. Cickner, Edwin R. Kirk, Samuel R. Frederick, Thomas Mickens, Lafayette Tompkins.

1847.—Charles Chamberlain, Cornelius V. Cickner, John W. Haring, Joseph W. Stuckler, Abraham Stout.

CITY COUNCILMEN.

1850.—George W. Hampton, James H. Brush, Franklin B. Carpenter, Edward Smedeker, William White, James H. Wilson.

1851.—George W. Hampton, John Beard, Garet Van Mater.

1852.—Charles Chamberlain, William White, James H. Wilson.

1853.—Robert J. Betge, Charles M. Reed, Isaac Tinkey.

1854.—Sela M. Bogert, Charles Chamberlain, Silas H. Jessup.

1855.—Robert J. Betge, N. C. Carpenter, N. A. Wood.

1856.—Robert McCagney, Lewis Wallages, George Wilhelm.

1857.—Charles Chamberlain, David Tahl, Francis Bolting.

1858.—David Benson, Sela M. Bogert, William Buck, John McDermott, Edwin R. Kirk, Bernard Loughrey, Moritz Meyer, Ralph Thomas, George Wilhelm.

1859.—David Benson, Herman H. Brunies, William Buck, Charles Chamberlain, John M. Dermott, Theodore F. Pruden, Robert A. Reed, Douglas Wehle, George Wilhelm.

1860.—George W. Barker, Elbridge V. S. Benson, Hermann H. Briggs, Charles Chamberlain, John M. Dermott, William A. Macy, Theodore F. Pruden, George P. Schinzel, Frederick Schmersahl.

1861.—Elbridge V. S. Benson, John Duhkroop, Mahlon P. Green, Christopher Gregory, John M. Dermott, Henry Offerman, Theodore Parker, James Reed, Frederick L. Schmersahl.

1862.—Sumner B. Cole, Patrick Duffy, John C. Duhkroop, William H. Ellis, Christopher Gregory, Thomas F. Rister, John H. Pape, Theodore S. Parker, John Scott.

1863.—Charles H. Bagley, Robert H. Benson, Patrick Duffy, George Foster, Thomas F. Redmond, Peter Ritter, Frederick L. Schmersahl, Joseph Thomas, Henry B. Wallace.

1864.—Robert H. Benson, Joseph W. Bowles, Sumner B. Cole, George Foster, James Healy, John Lee, Peter M. Givisk, Thomas F. Redmond, Peter Ritter, Charles W. Schaak, Frederick L. Schmersahl, Ralph Thomas.

1865.—Charles Chamberlain, Sumner B. Cole, James Curran, Jr., F. W. Deiring, James A. Gonyea, John Lee, Peter McGivisk, Theodore L. Moskos, H. Reich, C. Steiners, H. L. Timpken, L. Hilleman.

1866.—James Curran, Jr., John Curran, F. W. Deiring, Alexander Feihl, Bradley Fisher, James A. Gonyea, William H. Havens, Michael Martin, Peter McGivisk, Christopher Stimus, H. L. Timpken, Charles K. Williams.

1867.—Sela M. Bogert, Lewis Baumbender, Sumner B. Cole, Alexander Feihl, William H. Havens, F. W. Heine, John Lee, John Logan, J. P. Morrow, John McMahon, Abraham P. Sanford, H. L. Timpken.

1868.—J. W. Bowles, R. M. Cook, F. W. Heine, C. E. Howard, J. Logan, J. P. Mansell, J. McMahon, P. Mullin, J. Russell, A. P. Sanford, L. Tivy, P. B. Williams.

1869.—Sumner B. Cole, James J. Colley, Edward Dwyer, Charles E. Howard, F. T. Lewising, Ferdinand Luthin, Thomas Miller, Peter Muller, Charles F. Rabe, Joseph Russell, Lorenz Tivy, P. B. Williams.

1870.—J. H. Bowles, W. H. Ellis, Charles Gross, F. A. Leonard, P. M. Givisk, J. McMahon, Thomas Miller, George F. Rabe.

1871.—William H. Ellis, Charles Gross, John McMahon, P. McGivisk, Thomas Miller, J. F. Pfeiffer, Charles F. Rabe, Samuel Wehle.

1872.—S. F. Chisler, J. C. Duhkroop, William H. Ellis, Charles Gross, P. T. Plunkett, H. H. Schmidt, Daniel Sullivan, Samuel Wehle.

1873.—S. F. Crispy, J. Curtin, P. T. Plunkett, Thomas Miller, H. H. Schmidt, Gustave Streng, Daniel Sullivan, Samuel Webb, J. R. Wiggins (conclusion of large until Mar. 25, 1879).

1874.—Lawrence Buckley, S. F. Crispy, John Curtin, William Mehan, Thomas Miller, H. H. Schmidt, Gustave Streng, Samuel Wehle.

1880.—Lawrence Buckley, S. F. Crispy, John Curtin, Frederick Kaufmann, William Mehan, Patrick T. Plunkett, Herman L. Timpken, Daniel Quirk.

1881.—John Curtin, Frederick Kaufmann, John Lee, Thomas Miller, Patrick T. Plunkett, Daniel Quirk, Herman L. Timpken, Thomas M. Valleau.

1882.—August Grassmann, Frederick Kaufmann, James Kinney, John Lee, Thomas Miller, Louis M. Stein, Herman L. Timpken, Thomas M. Valleau.

1883.—Bethuel N. Crane, August Grassmann, Frederick B. Kaufmann, James Kinny, John Lee, John Meighan, Louis M. Stein, William Winges.

1884.—Bethuel N. Crane, August Grassmann, James Kinny, John Lee, Patrick Landrigan, John Meighan, Patrick Maloney, William Winges.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

Police Commissioners.—The board of police commissioners, chief of police and recorder have charge of the public peace and good order of the city, and to see that the laws and ordinances are properly observed and all penalties for transgressions thereof duly enforced. All of these officers except the chief of police are elected directly by the people. The present chief, who has held the office for seventeen years, has a national reputation as an expert detective and executive officer. There are now forty-five policemen employed by the city.

The following is a complete list to date of the commissioners, chiefs and recorders:

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

1870.—Hazen Kimball, president; August Bente, William H. Child, William P. Judge, John E. McWhorter, F. E. Rowald, clerk.

1871.—Frederick L. Schmersahl, president; August Bente, William H. Child, William P. Judge, John C. McWhorter, John McCallach clerk.

1872.—Frederick L. Schmersahl, president; August Bente, William H. Child, G. M. Sinclair, John E. McWhorter, John McCallach, clerk.

1873.—Peter McGivisk, president; August Bente, William Child, G. M. Sinclair, John E. McWhorter, John R. McCulloch, clerk.

1874.—Peter McGivisk, president; August Bente, William H. Child, G. M. Sinclair, John E. McWhorter, John R. McCulloch, clerk.

1875.—Joseph Russell, president; Henry M. Bischoff, William H. Child, G. M. Sinclair, John E. McWhorter, John R. McCulloch, clerk.

1876.—Joseph Russell, president; Henry M. Bischoff, William H. Child, John McMahon, John E. McWhorter, George J. Ducker, clerk.

1877.—Joseph Russell, president; Henry M. Bischoff, William P. Judge, John McMahon, John E. McWhorter, George J. Ducker, clerk.

1878.—E. V. S. Benson, president; William P. Judge, John McMahon, John E. McWhorter, William Tiz, Robert H. Alberts, clerk.

1879.—E. V. S. Benson, president; ——— Clerk, William P. Judge, John McMahon, William Tiz, Robert H. Alberts, clerk.

1880.—John O'Neil, president; William H. Dilworth, William P. Judge, Michael Lally, Joseph Russ, D. William Tiz, Robert H. Alberts, clerk.

1881.—E. V. S. Benson, president; William H. Dilworth, William P. Judge, Michael Lally, William Tiz, Robert H. Alberts, clerk.

1882.—E. V. S. Benson, president; Frank Baeder, Charles Chamberlain, William Tiz, C. H. Miller, clerk.

1883.—Herman L. Timpken, president; Frank Baeder, Herman D. Busch, Charles Chamberlain, Michael Coyle, M. V. McDermott, clerk.

1884.—Herman L. Timpken, president; Frank Baeder, Charles Chamberlain, Michael Coyle, Charles W. Kaufmann, M. V. McDermott, clerk.

CHIEFS OF POLICE.

1875-81. Francis M. McDermott. 1885-84. Louis Salbury.

1861-62. William H. Felston. 1864-67. James Davis.

1862-63. Edward Monk. 1867-84. Charles Donovan.

MEMBERS.

- 1865-66.—George S. Avery, died in office.
 1866.—James Pope (H. B.) Avery, now in office.
 1867-76.—James Pope.
 1877-81.—Francis M. McDonough.

Fire Department.—The Fire Department under the township of West Hoboken was controlled by a Board of Trustees, but after the incorporation of the city, the department came under the direct control of the Council. The principal executive officers of the department are the chief engineer and his assistant.

The following is a list of the officers of this department to date:

TRUSTEES OF FIRE DEPARTMENT, TOWNSHIP OF HOBOKEN.

- 1849.—John Van Boskerck, chairman; H. S. Sanford, secretary; Edwin A. Stevens, treasurer; E. V. Brower, David M. Bennett, Philip Kip, George W. Martin.
 1850.—John Van Boskerck, chairman; Hoyt Sanford, secretary; Edwin A. Stevens, treasurer; David M. Bennett, Henry Cole, David Masters, David Walker.
 1851.—Peter I. Dowdes, chairman; David Masten, secretary; James H. Dewey, Capt. William Havens, William H. Jones, George C. Perry, Edwin A. Stevens.
 1852.—H. S. Sanford, chairman; Charles Chamberlain, secretary; Michael T. Wilson, Garret Benson, Peter Mahan, Edwin A. Stevens, Gilliam Van Houten.
 1853.—Gilliam Van Houten, president; James Houseman, secretary; James Davis, George J. Geer, George C. Perry, John Uglyk, John White.
 1854.—David M. Bennett, president; Benjamin G. Campbell, secretary; William C. Arthur, Walter Ball, John J. Menard, John C. Smith, Hazeltan Watkley.

CHIEF ENGINEERS.

- | | |
|--------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1854-56, John W. Van Boskerck. | 1873, James Curran, Jr. |
| 1857, Arthur Pope. | 1874, Samuel Archer. |
| 1858-60, John M. Board. | 1875, Nicholas D. Schmidt. |
| 1861-62, Stephen Rodgers. | 1876, James Curran, Jr. |
| 1863-64, Robert A. Reed. | 1877-78, James Kenney. |
| 1865, Charles Chamberlain. | 1879, William Bonner. |
| 1866-67, John Kennedy. | 1880, Frank Herwig, Jr. |
| 1868, Denis Coppers. | 1881, Joseph Kemp. |
| 1869-70, James Curran, Jr. | 1882, William O'Donnell. |
| 1871, John O'Donnell. | 1883-84, Charles German. |
| 1872, James H. Kniffin. | |

ASSISTANT ENGINEERS.

- | | |
|-----------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1854, None. | 1871, Michael Dwyer. |
| 1855, Francis M. Kay. | 1872-75, Michael McIntyre. |
| 1856, William Hersee. | 1874, Nicholas D. Schmidt. |
| 1857, James O. Bell. | 1875, John H. Durr. |
| 1858-60, John Lewis. | 1876, James Kenney. |
| 1861, John D. P. Mount. | 1877, Joseph Kemp. |
| 1862, Robert A. Reed. | 1878, William Bonner. |
| 1863, Samuel Archer. | 1879, Frank Herwig, Jr. |
| 1864, Laurence Kennedy. | 1880, John W. Eves. |
| 1865, Denis Coppers. | 1881, William O'Donnell. |
| 1866-67, John R. McCulloch. | 1882, Charles German. |
| 1868-69, John O'Donnell. | 1883, William Miller. |
| 1870, James A. Gexyer. | 1884, Adam Bonner. |

Water Commissioners.—The board of water commissioners and water registrars, have control of the water supply of the city. They are elected by the people, and the commissioners serve without salary. The chairman of the Council is a member of the board.

Hoboken was supplied by water from Jersey City from 1857 until November 1st, 1882, the supply being taken from the Passaic River, at Belleville. The rates charged Hoboken by Jersey City for water thus supplied was ten per cent. higher than the rate charged to the consumers in Jersey City. Since 1882 Hoboken has been supplied with water taken from the Hackensack River, at New Milford, five miles above Hackensack, by a private company, known as the "Hackensack Water Company, reorganized." The rates charged by this company are five per cent. less to the city than those charged in Jersey City. During the last two years the death-rate in Hoboken has decreased from 26.6 to 21.1 per thousand. The quality of the water from the Hackensack River had always been above criticism until July of the present year when for a short time it had an unpleasant taste and smell. Chemical analysis showed the trouble to be entirely of vegetable origin, a peculiar combination of the elements exhausting the oxygen from the water. Remedy was immediately had to Dr. Leeds' system of aeration, which consisted of forcing compressed air into the water at high pressure at New Milford. This liberated the oxygen in the air, and it went into solution in the water, thus entirely restoring its vitality. The trouble immediately ceased, and the water has since been of exceptional purity.

The rates charged consumers in Hoboken by the water board are about five per cent. higher than those charged the city by the water company, in order to cover the city's expenses. All the mains in the city belong to it, and the water board have entire charge of the distribution, collections of moneys and disbursements. The duties of the registrar require ability, good judgment and an intimate knowledge of an intricate system of distribution to consumers. All these are possessed in a marked degree by the present registrar, who has held the office during the last fourteen years.

The following is a complete list of the water commissioners and the water registrars to date.

COMMISSIONERS PREVIOUS TO 1857.

Edmund Charles, president; Edgar Broadhead, treasurer; Charles Clinton, secretary post-1857; John Ireland, John M. Board, George W. Knappin, chairman of Council.

SINCE 1857.

Edmund Charles, president; Edgar Broadhead, treasurer and Charles Clinton, secretary post-1857; John Ireland, John M. Board, W. W. Shippen, J. William White, chairman of Council.

1858.—Edmund Charles, president; Edgar Broadhead, treasurer; John Ireland, W. W. Shippen, James H. Wilson, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Calkner, assistant registrar.

1859.—Edmund Charles, president; Edgar Broadhead, treasurer; W. W. Shippen; Abraham Barker; Robert J. Bell, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Calkner, assistant registrar.

1860.—W. W. Shippen, president; Carsten Selick, treasurer; John Suckley, R. J. Bell, chairman of Council; Edgar Broadhead, Abraham Barker; Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Calkner, assistant registrar.

1861.—W. W. Shippen, president; Carsten Selick, treasurer; John Suckley, Edgar Broadhead, Abraham Barker, R. J. Bell, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Calkner, assistant registrar.

1862.—W. W. Shippen, president; Carsten Selick, treasurer; John H. Haldenhorst, ——— Carpenter, ——— Mason, chairman of Council; John Suckley, Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Calkner, assistant registrar.

¹ Sept. 8, 1857, appointed in place of J. M. Board.

1835.—W. W. Shippen, Carsten Seirck; Jobst Haddenhorst, John S. Ober; ——— Carpenter; Seth M. Bogart, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; Charles W. Clibaker, assistant registrar.

1834.—W. W. Shippen, president; Jobst Haddenhorst, John Suckley; Joseph Seirck, treasurer; John McGovern, R. A. Reed, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; J. T. Seirck, assistant registrar.

1833.—W. W. Shippen, president; Carsten Seirck, treasurer; Jobst Haddenhorst, John McGovern; R. A. Reed, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; J. T. Seirck, assistant registrar.

1832.—W. W. Shippen, president; Carsten Seirck, treasurer; Jobst Haddenhorst, John McGovern; John Linneman; E. V. S. Benson, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1831.—W. W. Shippen; Herman Lohmeyer; John McGovern; Jobst Haddenhorst; John Linneman; Theodor S. Parker, chairman of Council; Charles Clinton, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1830.—Jobst Haddenhorst, president; Herman Lohmeyer, treasurer; John McGovern; John Linneman; S. S. Edmonston; Peter Ritter, chairman of Council; R. A. Reed, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1829.—S. S. Edmonston, president; Herman Lohmeyer, treasurer; John C. Duhkoop; John Linneman; Jobst Haddenhorst; Peter Ritter, chairman of Council; R. A. Reed, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1828.—S. S. Edmonston, president; H. Lohmeyer, treasurer; J. C. Duhkoop; Jobst Haddenhorst; ——— Tobin; Peter McGavisk, chairman of Council; R. A. Reed, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1827.—S. S. Edmonston, president; John C. Duhkoop, treasurer; Jobst Haddenhorst; Herman Lohmeyer; Peter McGavisk; chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1826.—S. S. Edmonston, president; John C. Duhkoop, treasurer; Jobst Haddenhorst; Christopher Clark; John McDermott; Seth Bogart, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1825.—Jobst Haddenhorst, president; John C. Duhkoop, treasurer; C. Clark; John McDermott; Leonard J. Strastny; Joseph Russell, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1824.—John McDermott, president; C. Clark, treasurer; S. S. Edmonston; Jobst Haddenhorst; L. J. Strastny; Joseph Russell, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1823.—John McDermott, president; C. Clark, treasurer; Jobst Haddenhorst; S. S. Edmonston; L. J. Strastny; Thomas Miller, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1822.—John McDermott, president; C. Clark, treasurer; S. S. Edmonston; William J. Wings; L. J. Strastny; Charles Gross, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1821.—John McDermott, president; C. Clark, treasurer; S. S. Edmonston; William J. Wings; D. J. Strastny; John C. Pfeifferle, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1820.—William J. Wings, president; C. Clark, treasurer; S. S. Edmonston; John McDermott; Herman Fayen; John R. Wiggins, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1819.—William J. Wings, president; C. Clark, treasurer; S. S. Edmonston; Herman Fayen; John McDermott; Samuel F. Crissy, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1818.—William J. Wings, president; C. Clark, treasurer; Herman Fayen; S. S. Edmonston; John McDermott; Lawrence T. Buckley, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1817.—S. S. Edmonston, president; C. Clark, treasurer; John McDermott; Herman Fayen; Martin Steljes; John Curtin, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

1816.—S. S. Edmonston, president; C. Clark, treasurer; Herman Fayen; John McDermott; Martin Steljes; Thomas Miller, chairman of Council.

1815.—John McDermott, president; Herman Fayen, treasurer; Martin Steljes; C. Clark; S. S. Edmonston; Frederick Kaufmann, chairman of Council.

1814.—John McDermott, president; Herman Fayen, treasurer; C. Clark; Martin Steljes; Charles B. Rudolph; William Wiggins, chairman of Council; M. H. Murphy, registrar; George Perry, assistant registrar.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

CITY OF HOBOKEN.

(Continued.)

Land Improvement—Water Company—Banking—Steamship Lines—Courts—Societies—Military.

The Hoboken Land and Improvement Company was incorporated by an act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, passed Feb. 21, 1838, with power to purchase, improve, mortgage and dispose of lands and other estates in and about Hoboken, for the purpose of grading and laying out the streets and squares, erecting wharves, etc. The capital stock of the company was all taken by the heirs of John Stevens, by a deed dated May 6, 1839. This company pays at the present time about one-third of the taxes of Hoboken. The officers are W. W. Shippen, president, and S. B. Dod, secretary and treasurer. The directors are W. W. Shippen, S. B. Dod, John Stevens, Edwin A. Stevens, John J. McCook, Robert C. Livingston and William M. Macy.

The Hoboken ferries belong to this company. Their principal depot is at the foot of Ferry Street, from which boats run every ten minutes to Barclay Street, New York and also to Christopher Street. A new ferry, belonging to this company, is now building, to be run from the foot of Fourteenth Street, in Hoboken, to the foot of Fourteenth Street, New York. The company runs eleven boats, averaging seven hundred and fifty tons each. Capt. C. W. Woolsey is superintendent of the ferries.

All special street improvements such as grading, paving, curbing, flagging, sewers, etc., are done under the direction of the mayor and council on application of the property-owners affected by the improvement.

Improvement certificates are issued by the city to pay for these improvements, and when the improvements are completed their cost is assessed upon the property benefited in proportion to the benefit received, by commissioners of assessment appointed by the mayor and Council. In case the cost of any improvement exceeds the amount that can be assessed upon the property benefited, the balance is paid by the city.

These assessments are subject to revision by the mayor and Council, after an opportunity has been given to the property-owner assessed to present their objections to the same.

The money raised by these assessments is used to redeem the improvement certificates issued.

The Hoboken Gas Company has its works on Willow Street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets. It supplies not only Hoboken, but Union Hill and West Hoboken also. It was organized in 1863, and during the last year furnished fifty-five million cubic feet of gas, the price for which ranged from $2.25 to $2.75 per thousand cubic feet.

The officers are W. W. Shippen, president and treasurer; S. B. Dod, secretary; J. W. Bates, superintendent; William Havens, bookkeeper. The directors are Carsten Sierck, vice-president; Henry Offerman, Andrew Clerk, John P. Kennedy, John R. Hulladay.

The Hackensack Water Company Reorganized. was formed in 1881, and commenced to supply water to Hoboken Nov. 1, 1882. It also supplies the town of Union, West Hoboken, Weehawken, North Bergen, Hackensack and adjoining places through about fifty miles of pipe-mains. The principal works of the company are located at New Milford, on the Hackensack River, about five miles above Hackensack.

The company has a reservoir of about three million gallons' capacity at Cherry Hill, two miles above Hackensack, and one of fifteen million gallons' capacity in Weehawken, about two miles north of Hoboken. At the latter point their high-service works are located, which consist of a brick tower one hundred and fifty feet high, supporting at the top an iron tank containing one hundred and fifty thousand gallons of water; this tower, as well as the whole works, are supplied with a complete outfit of the latest and most improved pumping apparatus made by Henry R. Worthington. The average daily draft of Hoboken is three million five hundred thousand gallons, West Hoboken and town of Union together one hundred and twenty-five thousand gallons, Hackensack seventy-five thousand gallons, and of all other consumers two hundred and twenty-five thousand gallons. The officers of the company are: President, R. C. Bacot; Secretary, W. Shippen; Treasurer, W. W. Shippen; Chief Engineer and Superintendent, Charles B. Brush. The directors are W. W. Shippen, R. C. Bacot, Daniel Runkle, Henry De Forest, Julian Kean.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company started business in Hoboken May 1, 1881, and has one hundred and thirty-five subscribers. The average rate for each subscriber is seven dollars and fifty cents per month. It has one hundred and five miles of wire in use, and employs two female operators during the day and one male operator at night. Three Williams improved switch-boards are in use. The office is at 82 Washington Street (Crane's building). George G. Stevens is the resident manager. The officers at present are: Charles F. Cutler, president; Alexander Canum, vice president; Jacob C. Clark, treasurer; W. D. Sargeant, general manager.

The American District Telegraph Company opened its office for business Oct. 20, 1883, with eighty-five subscribers, at 93 Washington Street. The officers are: H. L. Timkin, president; T. L. Parker, vice-president; H. A. Gaede, secretary; J. C. Chamberlain, manager; J. Herbert Potts, attorney; Directors, H. L. Timkin, T. L. Parker, Robert Morton, Julius Schlatter, C. F. Kugelbehn, H. A. Gaede, E. A. Stevens, B. N. Crane.

Banking.—THE HOBOKEN CITY BANK was organized as a bank of deposit and discount under the general banking law March 25, 1857, with a capital of fifty thousand dollars, and commenced business April 28, 1857. President, Benjamin S. Taylor; Cashier, J. W. Van Boskirck; Directors, William Cooper, F. B. Carpenter, J. D. Littell, E. Montague, E. W. Dubois, Benjamin S. Taylor, S. H. Jessup, W. W. Shippen, Louis Becker, W. J. Plummer, J. W. Stieckler, Robert Hankins, John Gardner, George W. Morton, Frederick Bare, Samuel R. Syms, and Charles T. Perry.

Dec. 30, 1858, the capital was increased to one hundred and ten thousand dollars.

In 1858, Cashier J. W. Van Boskirck died, and was succeeded by J. H. Johnson, who served to July 30, 1863. On Sept. 3, 1863, W. G. Shepherd, teller, was elected cashier, and served until the death of President Taylor, in July, 1871, when he became president.

In June, 1865, the bank was merged into a national bank.

F. T. Lallindahl was cashier from July, 1871, to July, 1880, when he was succeeded by W. B. Goodspeed, the present cashier. In January, 1874, Mr. W. G. Shepherd, president, was succeeded by Samuel R. Syms, who still holds the office. The present capital is one hundred and ten thousand dollars, surplus and undivided profits ninety-two thousand dollars. Dividends have been paid regularly semi-annually from the start. An extra twenty per cent. dividend was declared to the stockholders of the Hoboken City Bank at the time of its conversion to a national bank.

THE HOBOKEN BANK FOR SAVINGS was incorporated March, 1857. It immediately opened business at No. 73 Washington Street, the business days being Monday and Saturday. The first officers elected were: President, Edmund Charles; Vice-President, James Pope; Treasurer, John Ireland; Secretary, Frederick W. Bohnstede.

Directors.—Edwin Stevens, Cornelius V. Clickner, Robert J. Betge, Charles Spielmann.

Managers.—Edwin Stevens, E. R. V. Wright, Cornelius V. Clickner, Edmund Charles, Charles Spielmann, Robert J. Betge, James Pope, Philip Lauer, Richard Coles, Wm. H. Gelston, John Ireland, Chas. T. Perry, Chas. Clinton, Philip H. Mulford, Jesse West, George V. De Motte, James H. Dewey, Gilliam Van Houten, Garret Van Mater, John M. Board, Henry Beard, Robert C. Bacot, Francis Priece, John Sturgis, Jr., Alexander Shaler, George Fausel, F. M. Bohnstede, Edgar Broadhead, Thomas Foster, John M. Platt.

The present officers are,—Bryan Smith, president; Robert Stobo, vice-president; Wm. Machold, treasurer; J. G. Pickenbeck, secretary.

Directors—James Benson, F. Nichols, C. S. Shultz, Augustav Freygang, W. H. Dilworth.

Book-keeper, A. E. Hornblower; Assistant, John Ryan.

The last report shows:

Total assets	$1,814,228 67
Total liabilities	1,741,712 17
Surplus	$72,516 50
Total Deposits	1,673,946 33

The Ocean Steamship Lines.—THE WILSON LINE, which occupies a pier on River Street, between Second and Third Streets, has eight steamers with an average of about two thousand seven hundred tons each. The route of this line is between New York and Harlem. Thomas Wilson, Sons & Co., of Hull, are the sole owners. Sanderson & Son, of 39 South Williams Street, are their New York agents. S. E. Tuck, Jr., is their superintendent. The Wilson Line carries no passengers.

THE THINGVALLA LINE, whose pier is situated at the foot of Fourth Street, has four steamers, with an average of three thousand tons each. The route of this line is between New York, Copenhagen, Stettin and Christiania. These steamers accommodate between eight and nine hundred passengers. F. W. Kjørboe, of Copenhagen, is president of the line, and Finch, Edye & Co., are the New York agents. Passenger agent of New York is G. C. Mariager, and in Copenhagen L. C. Petersen. The superintendent at Hoboken is W. Lithman.

THE HAMBURG AMERICAN PACKET COMPANY, at the foot of First and Newark Streets, have twenty-six steamers which ply between New York, Plymouth, Cherbourg and Hamburg. This was the first German line of steamers. Mr. Wm. Oswald is chairman of the board of directors, and Mr. E. Badenhausen is superintendent. Kunhardt & Co., are the New York agents. Each vessel carries from one thousand to fourteen hundred passengers. The steamers range from twenty-five hundred to three thousand five hundred tons each.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD STEAMSHIP COMPANY, at the foot of Third Street, has fourteen vessels, ranging from thirty-five hundred to seven thousand tons each, which ply between New York and Bremen, was started from New York in 1857, and from Hoboken in 1863. H. H. Meier, of Bremen, is president of the board of directors; J. G. Lohman is manager, and Captain C. Undtsch is superintendent at Hoboken.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company has a depot at the foot of Ferry street. The road runs through to Buffalo, and connects with the West, besides having a large number of smaller branches. The original company was chartered Jan. 29, 1825, and was known as the Morris and Essex Railroad Company. It was leased to the present company in 1868. Their tunnel under Bergen Hill was excavated in 1876.

Number of locomotives, 130; number of cars, 5000; passengers annually carried, 1,200,000; freight,

2,000,000 tons; distance traveled annually, 2,800,000 miles; average rate for passenger travel per mile, 2.05 cents; average per ton for freight carried per mile, 1.24 cents.

The present officers are: President, Samuel Sloan; Superintendent, Andrew Reasoner; Treasurer, F. H. Gibbens; Secretary and Auditor, F. F. Chambers; Directors, Samuel Sloan, Percy R. Pyne, Andrew Reasoner, Geo. Bliss, W. W. Phelps, B. G. Clark, S. Griffith, M. T. Pyne, Aaron Robertson and W. W. Shippen.

District Courts.—The District Courts were established in Hoboken by the State legislature in 1877, which perform the duties formerly devolving upon the justices of the peace, as well as some classes of cases of lesser importance, which were formerly decided in the higher courts.

Fred. B. Ogden has been the judge in this court in Hoboken, since its organization. The clerk in 1877 was Frank W. Moore; from 1878 to 1883, Fred W. Bohmstedt; in 1883, Gustave Streng.

Post-Office.—The United States post-office is located at No. 60 Washington Street. Mr. L. H. Kendrick is postmaster.

Annually 2,000,000 pieces of mail matter are handled; the income is about $16,000; the expenses, $8500; foreign money orders, $45,000; domestic money orders, $52,000; payments, foreign and domestic, $50,000.

The German Club of Hoboken, located on the northwest corner of Hudson and Sixth Streets, was organized in 1857 and incorporated February 19, 1864.

The following were the charter members: Leonard J. Strastny, Chas. Wehle, Louis Althof, J. A. Fisher, Charles F. Tag, Hans Kudlich, Herman H. Brujjes, John S. Linnemann, Francis Bolting, Ernst B. Lucke, Frederick Muser. The present building was erected in 1864, and enlarged in 1871. Number of members, one hundred and sixty, and value of property, fifty-two thousand dollars. The business meetings of this society are held first Mondays of each month.

The present trustees are E. Balthasar, president; W. Baeder, vice-president; E. Russ, secretary; A. Stein, treasurer; C. Willenborg, financial secretary; E. Heuermann, librarian; E. Arnstberg, H. Bartels, W. Strastny, G. Krebs, H. Beckmann, H. Schmalhansen, H. Esser, P. Fritzsche, F. W. Grelle, H. A. Ruhsamen. Entertainments are given about once a week during the winter. The rooms of the club are always open.

This club is peculiar in that it is constantly frequented by the entire families of the members, thus making it truly a social organization. Its members are composed of the very best citizens of Hoboken, with some from New York. The individual wealth of the members of this club is, in the aggregate, probably more than that of any other German club in the United States.

Business Places in Hoboken.—Among the promiment business industries in the city may be mentioned the manufactory of the American Lead-Pencil Company; the machine and boiler-shop of John McLaren; the Universal Rubber-Works; the manufactory of Kenffel & Esser, drawing instruments and artists' supplies; the paper-mill of J. L. Reynolds; the extensive riding academy of Phillip Hexamer; the manufactory of essential oils of Fritzsche & Co.; Mansfield & Fagen's iron foundry; also those of George Focht, and Messrs. Ferguson J. Gabagan's moulding and planing-mill; Thomas Langdon Co.'s coffin and casket factory; Page's Dye-Works; Klein & Brothers', repair shops, and the shops of the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company; Seitz & Campbell's file stores; S. M. Meyenberg's silk factory; Hotopp & Co.'s varnish factory; Francisco's opaque cloth-mill.

Busch's Hotel, on the northeast corner of Third and Hudson Streets, with an accommodation for one hundred and twenty-five guests. Hon. Hermann D. Busch, proprietor.

Naegeli's Hotel, on the southeast corner of Hudson and Third Streets, with accommodations for seventy-five guests. R. Naegeli, proprietor.

The Park Hotel, on the southwest corner of Hudson and Fourth Streets, with accommodations for seventy-five guests. F. Brückbauer, is the present proprietor.

The principal restaurants in the city are the Duke House, at the foot of Ferry Street, Mrs. Huncke, proprietor, which is the most attractive and best-managed restaurant in the State of New Jersey. Another one justly celebrated is that of Mr. Julius Schlatter, on Hudson Street, between Newark and First Streets.

Military.—Before the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion Gen. James T. Hatfield of Hoboken, and several gentlemen throughout the county of Hudson were desirous of organizing a battalion. Before their plans were fully completed the project was abandoned in consequence of that great civil struggle having begun in all its never-to-be-forgotten horror.

Several of the projectors of the movement enlisted at once in the various companies then being mustered into service in defense of the Union in this State and in New York.

Shortly after the conclusion of the war that martial spirit which dominated the breasts of the heroes of the late war began to show itself, and culminated in a call being made in Jersey City to organize a battalion.

B. Franklin Hart, of Hoboken, was appointed for that district, and by his untiring efforts succeeded in organizing Company F, First Regiment, Hudson Brigade, Capt. B. F. Hart commanding.

The company secured quarters at Odd-Fellows' Hall, Hoboken, at a rental of six hundred dollars a year, one-half of which amount was paid by the City Council and the other by the Hoboken Land and Improvement Company.

Drilling was practiced twice a week—one evening at the company room and one evening (Wednesday) in the basement of Capt. Hart's house.

Company A was organized as an independent company, by Patrick J. Mehan who was elected its captain.

Then Company B was formed by George Neuscheler, who became its first captain.

The Hudson Brigade not having thrived as well as was anticipated, it was suggested by Capt. Mehan, to his first lieutenant, John McCleskey and Capt. Neuscheler to Capt. Hart to form a battalion in Hoboken, with the latter-named officer as major. Capt. Hart consenting to this suggestion, caused his command to be changed from Company F, First Regiment, Hudson Brigade, to Company C, First Battalion. He was duly elected major, and commissioned as such from that date.

Company D was then mustered into the battalion, under the captaincy of Herman L. Timken.

The First Battalion, now consisting of four companies, became very popular throughout Hudson County, and on many occasions was lauded for its appearance and drill.

The battalion, standing in such high regard, experienced no trouble in organizing a fifth company, Company E, Capt. William Weeks commanding, which was mustered into service at Jersey City Heights.

The battalion now reached the proportions which entitled it to the classification of a regiment, and in the due course of time orders were received from headquarters confirming the late battalion as the Ninth Regiment, National Guard of New Jersey.

An election for officers was held, and resulted in the following being chosen: Colonel, B. Franklin Hart; Lieutenant-Colonel, Joel Green (captain of Company C); Major, William F. Hall. In the fall another company was added to the regiment, designated as Company F, Theodore W. Griffith captain. The usefulness of Company A began to wane, owing to the negligence of its officers, and despite every effort on the part of the colonel to fire it with patriotism, it succumbed to the inevitable and was disbanded.

The setback occasioned by the loss of Company A caused the officers at headquarters to bestir themselves. Through a chain of fortunate circumstances a Company A was organized at Orange, N. J., consisting of sixty-seven members, who were, on Feb. 21, 1881, mustered into service by Col. Howard, of Brig.-Gen., and Brevet Maj.-Gen. Jos. W. Plunier's staff. George H. Mills, a veteran of the late war, was chosen captain.

The regiment has been under arms prepared to do riot duty three times, namely: The Long Dock riot, Jersey City; the Orange riot, July 12, 1871; and the labor riots of 1877. On the latter occasion the regiment was encamped at the Elysian Fields, Hoboken, from July 23d to the 31st. The Second Battalion of Hackensack and a battery of artillery were also encamped at the same place. A number of prominent citizens, having heard that the regiment was to be dispatched to Phillipsburg, N. J., protested to the military authorities against the removal of the regiment from Hoboken unless it were absolutely necessary, believing, in case of an outbreak in Hoboken, the home regiment would be better able to cope with a mob. Accordingly, the Ninth remained at home, while the Second Battalion and artillery were, on the night of the twenty-seventh of July, sent to Phillipsburg.

In rifle-shooting the regiment leads the State. It has won many trophies, among the number being a silk flag presented by the State.

Capt. Theodore W. Griffith, of Company F, and Private John Smith, of Company C, were in the American team in the international rifle contest of 1882, and the latter-named in the American team of 1883.

Since the organization of the regiment many prominent and influential citizens of Hoboken have been in some way connected with it, notably the following:

Elwin A. Stevens, who was an adjutant, and resigned to accept an appointment as aide-camp on the staff of Governor Laidlaw. He was appointed to the same position by Governor Abbott.

Thomas L. Tinkler, mayor of the city, first captain of Company D.
Charles A. Adolph, city accountant, second lieutenant of Company D.
John Meighan, alderman, ex-paymaster.

James A. Gray, ex-alderman, ex-adjutant.
William E. Hall, late business manager of the New York Evening Telegraph, late major. He died Sept. 1, 1880.

Samuel J. Hill, brother of the late major, ex-adjutant.
Dr. Hugo Nast, late city physician (deceased), late assistant surgeon.

Patrik J. Meighan, editor of the Irish American, ex-captain of Company A.

James H. Symes, late town clerk of Union Hill, ex-captain of Company B.

John B. Wiggins, late assessor for Hoboken, ex captain of Company C.
Rev. Samuel B. Dod, ex-chaplain.

John De P. Mount, ex paymaster.
John Curtin, ex-chairman of City Council, ex-quartermaster.

James W. Vroom, ex-corporation attorney, Judge, advocate.

The following is a list of the present officers:

FIELD.—Colonel, B. Franklin Hart; Lieutenant-Colonel, Joel Green; Major, Charles Erlenkötter.

STAFF.—Major and Surgeon, Romeo F. Chabert; Captain and Inspector of Rifle Practice, H. E. Hauboldt; Captain and Chaplain, George C. Hamilton; Captain and Judge Advocate, Edward H. Snyder; First Lieutenant and Adjutant, Francis D. Jackson; Brevet Captain and Paymaster, John R. Stevens; First Lieutenant and Quartermaster, Edward W. Daub-erth.

LINE.—Company A: Captain, George W. Mills; First Lieutenant, Robert H. Haviland; Second Lieutenant, Merimian Mohor; Company B: Captain, Ignatz Kradtsch; First Lieutenant, Robert Boulanger; Second Lieutenant, F. W. Staussendit; Company C: Captain, Ramon M. Cook; First Lieutenant, Lewis R. McCulloh; Second Lieutenant, Louis S. Landon; Company D: Captain F. Raub, Jr.; First Lieutenant, Vincent; Second Lieutenant, Louis Badenbender; Company E: Captain, Harold A. Carver; First Lieutenant, Constantine Ludwig; Second Lieutenant, Edward F. Burtin; Company F: Captain, Harper W. Sagenendorf; First Lieutenant, Henry Weinhausen; Second Lieutenant, Charles Heppendieimer.

CHAPTER XL.

CITY OF HOBOKEN.

(Continued.)

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS.

THE Board of Education has charge of the public schools of the city. The members of the board are elected by the people for a term of three years, and serve without salary. Prior to 1854 the schools were under the charge of a superintendent appointed by the town committee.

The following is a list of these officers, as well as of the different public schools in the city, with interesting details in relation to the latter:

SUPERINTENDENTS OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HOBOKEN BEFORE INCORPORATION.

1840-51.—David I. Stagg.

1852.—John D. Littlell.

1853.—Edman M. Price.

1854.—John H. Scheffeld.

TRUSTEES ELECTED AFTER INCORPORATION.

1855.—George W. Morton, Hoyt Sandford, Thomas W. Thomas.

1856.—William Gelston, Edward E. Morton, Charles Spellmann.

1857.—Frederick Gerhaud, John R. Petheridge, Hazelton Walkley.

1858.—William H. Gelston, Andrew W. Rose, Louis Stoltze.

1859.—Jacob L. Odell, Andrew W. Rose, Peter Ritter, Jr.

1861.—William Gelston, James R. Hill, Fred. H. Ogden.

1862.—Michael Colman, James R. Hill, Peter Ritter.

1863.—Ernstus Hedges, William H. Pockham, Daniel P. Westervelt.

1864.—Benjamin G. Campbell, Julius E. Löwenthal, James H. Ward.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION.

1865.—N. A. Wood, president; Bradley H. Baldwin, clerk; Wm. H. Wilson, treasurer; B. G. Campbell, W. A. Jacobson, James W. Ward, C. Mansell (died in office), Frederick W. Heyne, Dr. E. J. Löwenthal.

1866.—Warren A. Jacobson, president; B. H. Baldwin, clerk; William H. Wilson, treasurer; James J. Brinckerhoff, B. G. Campbell, F. W. Heyne, John Logan, Peter Ritter, Dr. L. V. Stein.

1867.—Peter Ritter, president; John N. Bryce, clerk; W. H. Wilson, treasurer; Samuel W. Carey, Romeo F. Chabert, Peter H. Edmondston, Frederick W. Heyne, John Logan, John Walter.

1868.—Romeo F. Chabert, president; Samuel W. Carey, clerk; Peter H. Edmondston, treasurer; Benjamin G. Campbell, Christopher Turck, Cornelius B. Housman, Hermann Luhrs, John M. Dermott, James Williams.

1869.—William T. Hoffman, president; Samuel W. Carey, clerk; Bethuel N. Crane, treasurer; Benjamin G. Campbell, Romeo F. Chabert, William H. Havens, Ernestus Hedges, Cornelius B. Housman, James Hunt, John Logan, Henry G. Schluter, August Vornath.

1870.—William T. Hoffman, president; George G. Cooper, clerk; William C. Harp, treasurer. — Bawler, Bethuel N. Crane, William H. Havens, Ernestus Hedges, — Rugunson, C. Modler, — Peters, August Vornath, — Windertzy.

1871.—William T. Hoffman, president; George G. Cooper, clerk to October, 1871; Ferdinand Luthin, clerk from October, 1871; William C. Harp, treasurer; William K. Baker, Edward G. Brown, Robert Bruce, Bethuel N. Crane, John Logan, Frederick W. Miller, Charles W. Schalk, Oscar Simmons.

1872.—E. G. Brown, president; William C. Harp, treasurer; Ferdinand Luthin, clerk; Joseph Russel, Julius Schlatler, W. K. Baker, F. W. Miller, Nestor Aymong, William E. Hall, Robert J. Bruce, John C. O. Sullivan, James Roarty.

1873.—E. G. Brown, president; William C. Harp, treasurer; Robert H. Alberts, clerk; B. N. Crane, William H. Havens, Peter H. Edmondston, Ferdinand Luthin, Nestor Aymong, Samuel Archer, John C. O. Sullivan, John Reid, James D. Blair.

1874.—Ed G. Brown, president; William C. Harp, treasurer; Robert H. Alberts, clerk; James H. Kniffin, John Meehan, Gustave Boethgen

Stephen T. Munson, Samuel Archer, Nestor Aymong, John C. O. Sullivan, James Kilduff, Michael Downey.

1876.—Edward G. Brown, president; Robert H. Alberts, clerk; William C. Harp, treasurer; Nestor Aymong, Michael Downey, Edwin J. Kerr, James Kilduff, James H. Kniffin, Richard McCarthy, John Messiah, S. T. Munson, Gustave Koethgen.

1876.—Edward G. Brown, president; Robert H. Alberts, clerk; William C. Harp, treasurer; Charles Chamberlain, Michael Downey, P. H. Edmondson, William Hamell, John Kennedy, Edwin J. Kerr, James Kniffin, Richard McCarthy, S. T. Munson.

1877.—Edwin J. Kerr, president; Nestor Aymong, clerk; William C. Harp, treasurer; Charles Chamberlain, P. H. Edmondson, Charles Erbenkoster, James Harkness, John Kennedy, James Kniffin, Richard McCarthy, S. T. Munson, Thomas M. Vallien.

1878.—Edwin J. Kerr, president; Nestor Aymong, clerk; James Harkness, treasurer; R. A. Anderson, Charles Chamberlain, P. H. Edmondson, William H. Havens, John Kennedy, John J. Keenan, S. T. Munson, John H. Tangemann, Thomas M. Vallien.

1879.—William H. Hoffman, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; James Harkness, treasurer; R. A. Anderson, William H. Havens, John Kennedy, Edwin J. Kerr, John J. Keenan, S. T. Munson, John Reid, John H. Tangemann, Thomas M. Vallien.

1880.—S. T. Munson, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; Isaac Ingleson, treasurer; R. A. Anderson, Frederick Beltz, William H. Havens, William H. Hoffman, John Kennedy, Edwin J. Kerr, John J. Keenan, John Reid, John H. Tangemann.

1881.—Stephen T. Munson, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; Isaac Ingleson, treasurer; Robert A. Anderson, Frederick Beltz, William H. Havens, Thomas S. O'Brien, James Harkness, John Kennedy, Edwin J. Kerr, John Reid, Frank Ruppen, Edwin W. Gritten.

1882.—Frederick Beltz, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; Isaac Ingleson, treasurer; Edwin W. Gritten, Robert A. Anderson, Charles W. Benson, Thomas Fitzpatrick, Andrew Blackburn, William H. Havens, James Harkness, Edwin J. Kerr, Stephen T. Munson, John Reid.

1883.—Edwin W. Gritten, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; James Harkness, treasurer; Robert A. Anderson, Charles W. Benson, Andrew Blackburn, Thomas F. Hoffeld, William H. Havens, John H. Bahrbaur, Stephen T. Munson, John Reid, William Wolf.

1884.—John Reid, president; Lewis R. McCulloch, clerk; James Harkness, treasurer; John A. Bahrbaur, Charles W. Benson, Andrew Blackburn, Henry A. Hodges, Cornelius Kiel, Jr., Thomas H. McLean, Edwin W. Gritten, Thomas F. Hatfield, William S. Wolf.

Location and Teachers of Public Schools.—No. 1.—Garden Street, near Third Street. Principal, David Rue,¹ appointed in 1868; Vice-Principal, Miss Lela Allen. Capacity of school building, 825; the average attendance in 1883 was 782; expenditures in 1883, $16,428.

No. 2.—Garden Street, near Ninth. Principal, John W. Lycett, appointed 1879; Vice-Principal, Miss Margrette Stanley. Capacity of school building, 861; average attendance in 1883, 741; expenditures in 1883, 15,930.

No. 3.—Adam Street, near Third Street. Principal, Jeremiah Kelly, appointed 1860; Vice-Principal, Sara Cunningham. Capacity of school building 1066; average attendance in 1883, 1852; expenditures in 1883, $18,919.

No. 4.—Grammar and High School, Park Avenue, between Fifth and Sixth Streets. Principal of Grammar School, W. A. Campbell, appointed in 1874; Principal of High School, A. D. Demarest, appointed in 1881; Vice-Principal, E. A. Allen. Capacity of building, 1020; average attendance in Grammar and High School in 1883, 839; expenditures in 1883, both Grammar and High School under one principal, were $19,975. Founded 1878.

The total expenditures for school purposes in 1883 were, viz. salaries, $64,562.69; supplies, $5193.64; repairs, $4646.76; miscellaneous, $2908.69,—total, $77,311.78.

Hoboken Academy.—See chapter xxxi. on Education in Hudson County.

Stevens Institute of Technology and Stevens High School.—See chapter xxxi. on Education in Hudson County.

The Academy of the Sacred Heart.—The Academy of the Sacred Heart was founded in 1875, and is situated in Washington Street, between Seventh and Eighth Streets. It is governed by the Sisters of Charity, from whose number most of the teachers are selected.

The school contains five pianos for the use of the scholars. The class-rooms present a very pleasant appearance, being kept in perfect order and much attention being paid to cleanliness.

The building stands on three lots, having been built at a cost of about thirty-five thousand dollars. It has a capacity of one hundred and twenty-five pupils, the average attendance being about one hundred. The school is self-supporting.

Miss Matilda Schmidt's School for Young Ladies. Bloomfield Street, near Ninth. During the year 1868, Miss Matilda Schmidt took charge of a class of four girls without having any intention of receiving any more pupils. However, as more and more girls were offered to her charge, Miss Schmidt was encouraged to open a Young Ladies' Academy.

Up to the present time the number of scholars has increased to one hundred, although small classes have been the aim of the school.

The school has attained a widespread reputation, and many honors have been conferred upon the principal.

Young Ladies' Boarding-School.—At present there is a Young Ladies' Boarding-School in connection with the academy, at which the modern languages are taught very thoroughly, two days of the week being entirely devoted to each of the following languages, viz.: English, German and French.

Mrs. William McFarlane's English, French and German School, for young ladies and children, at the Franklin Lyceum, on Bloomfield Street, between Eighth and Ninth Streets. Mrs. McFarlane has been connected for many years with the public schools of New York. In conducting her work she avails herself of the numerous excellent features of the public-school system in combination with that attention to individual peculiarities of mind and character which ¹ Sept. 6, 1881, Ruppen's place was declared vacant by the Council, and Edwin W. Gritten appointed.

² Resigned presidency and his seat May 11, 1882.

³ President in Beltz's place.

⁴ Ousted by Circuit Court, and Andrew Blackburn declared the legally elected trustee May 29, 1882.

⁵ Died Feb. 21, 1814. William Sellberg was appointed by the Council.

⁶ Elected to fill Munson's unexpired term.

⁷ David Rue is also superintendent of the public schools of Hoboken.

the private school renders practicable. Particular attention is paid to all branches of mathematics and the study of the languages. English and German are taught in each of the classes. The English course receives special attention, and is conducted with the thoroughness characteristic of the public schools.

Martha Institute is located on the corner of Sixth Street and Park Avenue. It is a German-American school and classical academy, founded by the Rev. Leopold Mohn, 1857. The following gentlemen have been connected with the school as principals: Rev. Leopold Mohn, Rev. Edward Wall, Dr. F. Hinkel, Dr. C. A. Klein, Ph.D. The school building has a seating capacity of five hundred, and the average attendance was one hundred and fifty in 1883. The property is valued at thirty-five thousand dollars.

CHAPTER XLI.

CITY OF HOBOKEN.

(Continued.)

CHURCHES AND MEMBERS.

The First Dutch Reformed Church, on Hudson Street, near Sixth. The first worship was in the lecture-room on Church Square. This was the second congregation who started a structure on this square. While under construction the title of the land was found defective, and all the material on the ground was sold to the Catholics, who were just then starting St. Mary's Church, on the corner of Fifth and Willow Streets, during the year 1850. Twelve persons were in the first organization. In 1855 the Rev. Charles Parker was installed as pastor, and the erection of the present edifice commenced. In 1856 he was succeeded by the Rev. Alexander D. Mann, who officiated until 1861. In 1863, Mr. Riddle was installed. In 1865 he was followed by the Rev. W. H. Vroom, who remained until 1868. Rev. J. K. Allen was then installed, and remained until 1870, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Charles D. Buck. In 1874 the Rev. Charles Parker was recalled, and remained until 1878, when he was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Isaac E. House. Messrs. William Miller, Jr., and George Devoe are the present elders, and Messrs. T. Rae and George W. Tompkins the present deacons.

The church has a seating capacity of three hundred and an average attendance of one hundred. Mr. Thomas Rae is superintendent of the Sunday-school, which numbers two hundred.

The Church of Our Lady of Grace.¹—This church which fronts the public park on Willow Street, corner of Fourth, Hoboken, is the largest church in New Jersey, and one of the largest in the United States. It succeeded as parochial church to the old church of the same name, which was built on the corner of Willow and Fifth Streets by Rev. Anthony Cauvin in 1855. The new building was begun in 1875 by Rev. M. C. Duggan. The new pastor, however, became discouraged at the financial prospect, and discontinued work after having expended about fifty thousand dollars. He was succeeded by Rev. D. L. Senez, of St. Mary's Church, Jersey City, in 1875, who did not resume the work. Father Corrigan, who had succeeded Father Senez in St. Mary's Church, Jersey City, was sent to succeed him also in Hoboken. He resumed work on the building in 1877, and brought it to its present, almost finished, condition in 1878. There have been over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars expended on the building alone. The congregation numbers about six thousand five hundred souls.

The Sunday-school is in charge of the Sisters of Charity, and has an average attendance of nine hundred pupils.

Former Trustees, James Tallon, Bryan Smith, John McDermott, Leopold De Granval, Bernard McCloskey and Timothy Foley. Present Trustees, John Keresey and James A. Judge.

The German Roman Catholic Church, corner of Monroe and Ferry Streets, was started in 1874. The first pastor, appointed by the Franciscan order for the diocese, was Father Alphonsus Zoeller, O.M.C. The present site was purchased for seven thousand dollars; the cost for filling in the lot and preparing foundation was about four thousand dollars, but through the efforts of Father Zoeller this amount was collected outside of Hoboken. This pastor died in discharge of his duty in May, 1881, and the whole congregation was reduced to five families. In 1880 the district bounded on the north by Second Streets and on the east by Adams Street was designated as a parish by the bishop. The present pastor is Dominick Marzetti, D.D., O.M.C. He preached in English, German and Italian. All Catholics are considered members, and are entitled to assist in all ceremonies. The church has a seating capacity of three hundred and fifty and an average attendance of one thousand.

A parochial school connected with the church, and managed by the Sisters of St. Francis, has three hundred and fifty pupils. The entire cost of lands and buildings was about twenty-five thousand dollars, about one-half of which has been paid.

It should be noted that the late Father Alphonsus Zoeller was the founder of several churches in Texas, the St. Alphonsus parish in Philadelphia, the parish of the Assumption in Syracuse, St. Peter's Church in Louisville, Ky., St. Joseph's Church in Utica, and lastly the Roman Catholic Church in Hoboken.

The Franciscan order, under whose care the parochial school is, was founded by St. Francis in the twelfth century, and although it has a governor (provincial) for its internal management, still it is under the authority of the bishop of the diocese.

¹ By Rev. P. Corrigan.

First Presbyterian Church, on the corner of Hudson and Sixth Streets. The records of this church having been destroyed by fire in the house of Ehler Rose, 1869, all that transpired prior to that time can only be obtained orally from present members.

The society was organized in 1852; the founders were Joseph Boynton, Sarah Boynton, Andrew W. Rose, Alexander L. Cadmus, Mary J. F. Cadmus, Alida L. Stricker, Hannah P. Palmer, Sarah Palmer, Mary Crane, Sylvia B. Beckwith, with the first regular pastor, Rev. Isaac P. Stricker. He was installed in 1854, and resigned in 1856. The society first purchased the building, corner of Washington and Third Streets, belonging to the First Baptist Church. Rev. William Babbitt succeeded Mr. Stricker in 1856, and continued until 1867. During his pastorate, in 1865, the present site was purchased from Mr. John H. Bonn for three thousand dollars, and the old building was sold to the German Lutheran Church. The present building cost twenty two thousand dollars.

The Rev. E. P. Gardner was installed in 1867, and remained until 1871. Next came the Rev. James Marshall, installed 1872, who remained until 1876, and was followed by Rev. John Reid, who remained until 1879, succeeded by Rev. Addison K. Strong in 1880, then the present pastor, J. B. Kugler, in 1883.

The Sunday-school superintendent is Palmer Campbell. The church-school numbers three hundred and thirty, and the mission-school one hundred and eighty.

Value of church property, thirty-five thousand dollars. Seating capacity, three hundred and eighty. Average attendance, one hundred and fifty.

The German Lutheran Church of St. Matthew, on the corner of Eighth and Hudson Streets, was organized in 1858 by Messrs. H. Huster, G. A. Hems, L. Brumler, L. Korbett, J. F. Kampin, H. Grassau and the pastor, Rev. C. Wassidlow.

The first services were held in Odd-Fellows' Hall. The New York congregation decided to contribute three hundred dollars per annum. In 1859 they tried unsuccessfully to purchase the building belonging to the Presbyterians, on the corner of Third and Washington Streets. The purchase was consummated in 1864 for six thousand seven hundred dollars. A day-school was immediately started in the basement, and placed in charge of Mr. A. Van Duisveck.

In raising the cash for the purchase, three thousand dollars was borrowed from Henry Otto, proprietor of the Otto Cottage Garden. The society built a two-story brick house in the rear of the church which they rented for three hundred and fifty dollars per annum. The Rev. Mr. Wassidlow died of heart-disease March 18, 1875. The Rev. Mr. Driess took temporary charge while the congregation was discussing the propriety of calling a new pastor from Germany. This resulted in the engagement of the Rev. Hallerman, of East Frisia, who remained until 1880. The present pastor, the Rev. Peter Eiriele, from Albany, N. Y., educated in Columbus, Ohio, then took charge. He is equally fluent in English and German. In 1877 the society sold the property on the corner of Third and Washington Streets for ten thousand dollars, and purchased the new site, corner of Ninth and Bloomfield Streets, for eight thousand dollars. Before the edifice was started they exchanged this latter site for the present one, on the corner of Eighth and Hudson Streets, which cost them fourteen thousand five hundred dollars; it is sixty by one hundred feet. The large clock in the steeple cost eleven hundred dollars, and was presented to the church by Mr. Christ. Moller. The entire cost of the present property is about sixty-three thousand dollars. The church has a seating capacity of six hundred and fifty and an average attendance of four hundred.

Mr. Ferd. Ralty is superintendent of the Sunday-school, which numbers one thousand.

Among the principal subscribers were Messrs. Cord Moller, Carsten Sierck, C. Matilage, H. Offerman, J. Horsman and H. Harms.

The parochial school is on Bloomfield Street, near Seventh.

The German Evangelical Church, on the north-west corner of Garden and Sixth Streets, was the first church in Hoboken in which services were held in German. It was started in 1856 on Church Square, by the present pastor, the Rev. Leopold Mohn. At one time the congregation consisted of one man and his wife. It was permanently organized as a Dutch Reformed Church August, 1856. Present building was erected in 1860, at an expense of $10,000. The seating capacity, between 600 and 700; the average attendance, 500; the value of the property, $25,000; Sunday-school superintendents, Mr. William Meyer and John Straub. Number of pupils, 750. The following are the original elders and deacons: Mr. Diedrich Quellhorst, Heinrich Quellhorst, Louis J. Hansen, George Walter. During the first years the pastor's salary was two hundred dollars per annum, and yet this same pastor, Dr. Mohn, stood at his post and worked with tireless activity. He is to-day the oldest pastor in the city and the most successful. He has also established flourishing branches of his church in many neighboring places, and his ability is only equaled by his wonderful endurance.

The First United Presbyterian Church, on the corner of Seventh and Bloomfield Streets, was organized in the City Hall, Nov. 29, 1854 as an Associate Presbyterian Church, with nineteen members. Seven of the original members were named Harper, only one of whom now remains in the city. Among the officers elected were Edward East, John Harper and Robert Harper.

In 1858 the congregation went into the union formed between the Associate and the Reformed Presbyterian branches, hence the name as above given.

Rev. W. G. McElhenney was elected in 1855, and remained until his death, in 1861. He was succeeded by the Rev. Samuel C. Marshall, who resigned in 1863. From then until December, 1866, there was no pastor, at which time the Rev. Henry Allen took charge, but he died Sept. 6, 1867.

In 1868 a mission church was erected on Bowers Street, Jersey City Heights. Efforts were made during this year to sell the property, which caused dissatisfaction, during which the Rev. Mr. Armstrong resigned, and the fifty-eight members formed the United Presbyterian Church, on Jersey City Heights. The old congregation was without a pastor until 1874, when the Rev. James Price was elected pastor. The present efficient pastor, the Rev. John C. Scott, has been in charge during the last two years.

The church property was purchased in 1856, the pastor, Rev. John McCullough, and Robert Harper constituting the building committee. In 1860 they borrowed three thousand dollars to pay the balance due on the building, fourteen hundred, and fifteen hundred dollars due for land, and also to help build a parsonage on Seventh Street, adjoining the church. The present value of the church property is about twenty-five thousand dollars. From 1850 to 1869 the church was assisted by the Home Mission Society.

The seating capacity of the church is about two hundred; the average attendance, eighty-five; value of the property twenty-five thousand dollars; the Sunday-school superintendent, Rev. John C. Scott; with one hundred pupils.

The First Baptist Church is on the northwest corner of Bloomfield and Third Streets. This congregation, like several others which were founded in the early years of Hoboken, first met on Church Square. They built a little meeting-house on the northwest corner of Fourth and Meadow Streets in 1845. The church was founded by Deacon Field, Abraham Stout, Jacob Spier, Mary Field, Isabel Reeds, Eliza Morris, Elida Garman, Matilda Jennings, Sarah Stout, Sarah Banks, Susan and Sarah Whitney. The first pastor was the Rev. M. Battey. In 1854 the Rev. Josiah Hatt was called, who was followed in 1860 by the Rev. Alfred Patton, in 1873 the Rev. Alfred Harris, in 1875 the Rev. Webster Maul, in 1881 the Rev. W. S. Goodno.

In 1846, after finishing their church building, it was blown down by a heavy storm. Instead of rebuilding on the old site, they built the structure on the southwest corner of Third and Washington Streets, which was afterwards sold to the First Presbyterian Church. The present edifice was built in 1851.

Mr. Henry Barkeley is superintendent of the Sunday-school, which numbers one hundred and fifty.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church, on Washington Street, between Seventh and Eighth Streets, was organized in 1856, the Rev. Robert Graves as pastor. Their first building, on the northwest corner of Church Square, was blown down in 1848. The second pastor was the Rev. W. W. Christine, who was succeeded by the Rev. M. E. Ellison. In 1852 the property was valued at ten thousand dollars. In 1865 the city commenced litigation, claiming Church Square as a public square. A long and tedious litigation followed, which was decided adversely to the church. The City Council passed a resolution in accordance with a popular book that had been taken in the city, to reimburse the society to the extent of ten thousand dollars for the property they had vacated, but the resolution was vetoed by Mayor Bohmstedt. The present plot, on Washington Street, was then purchased from the Hoboken Land Improvement Company at a reduction of ten thousand dollars on its actual value. With a balance of three hundred dollars in hand, the society proceeded to erect their present church, which was dedicated in March, 1870. It has a seating capacity of one thousand and an average attendance of five hundred. Subscriptions to the amount of ten thousand dollars were obtained at that time, which were increased within a few years to seventy thousand dollars. In 1875, under the pastorate of the Rev. J. R. Bryan, a division took place, and two new societies were formed, viz.: The Methodist Episcopal Free Tabernacle of Park Avenue, and the German Methodist Episcopal Church, on Garden Street. Value of present property is seventy-five thousand dollars; the debt trifling. The society is very flourishing; the congregation is large, besides, and the Sunday-school has four hundred members, under Mr. Middleton as superintendent. Connected with the church there is a Ladies' Aid Society, a Young People's Association, and Free Reading-Room. Rev. Mr. Day is the present pastor.

The German Methodist Episcopal Church, Garden, near Second Street, organized April, 1875, by members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, on Washington Street, in order that services might be conducted in the German language.

Prominent among the founders of the new enterprise were Mr. G. Offenheiser and Messrs. J. H. and Claus Bahrenburg. The first regularly deputized pastor, was the Rev. Chas. Reuss, who was appointed in 1878.

The enterprise was successful, and in 1879 the present property was purchased and a building erected. Seating capacity, two hundred and fifty; average attendance, ninety. Prominent among the outside contributors were Messrs. Woltman, F. K. Keller, H. Hauschildt, H. McDougall, H. Meyer, F. J. Drescher and Crevier Brothers. The Sunday school, under the charge of Messrs. Offenheiser and Bahrenburg, has been very successful, and now numbers about two hundred.

In 1881, Rev. Charles Reuss was succeeded by the Rev. P. Haendiges, in accordance with the customs of their church, who was again succeeded by Rev. Charles Reuss.

The Methodist Episcopal Free Tabernacle, Park Avenue and Fifth Street. This is also an offshoot of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Washington Street, from which fifty-four members withdrew, April 6, 1875, and organized the present society in Martha Institute.

The Rev. J. Boyd Brady was the first pastor; Mr. J. B. Renwick was superintendent of the Sunday-school. The first board of trustees elected were E. H. McIntyre, C. L. Pitts, C. F. Kyte, William McNaughton, Jacob Vanderbilt, J. H. Bahrenburg and L. S. Davis.

Mr. J. H. Bahrenburg was elected president of the board. On May 9, 1875, the society first worshipped in their present building, which was erected by the Frei Gemeinde (Free Thinkers) Society in 1867.

In 1878 the Rev. D. B. F. Randolph was appointed pastor and C. F. Kyte elected Sunday-school superintendent.

The latter was succeeded, in 1879, by Mr. C. L. Pitts, The Rev. D. B. F. Randolph was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Collins, and in 1881 the church had a membership of one hundred and eighty and the Sunday-school of two hundred and fifty. In 1883 this organization reunited with the First Methodists, on Washington Street.

The Holy Innocents Church is on Sixth Street, between Willow and Clinton Streets. It is as yet unfinished, and has cost to date about eighty thousand dollars. It is of Gothic architecture, and built entirely of stone. It represents the high-school principles of the Anglican Church. It was built and endowed by Mrs. Edwin M. Stevens as a memorial to her daughter, Julia Augusta, who died in Rome, Italy, in 1870. It was built under the direction of the Rev. Robert J. Nevins, who is now president of the incorporated trustees, who managed the property in place of the vestry.

A parochial school is now being constructed on the west side of the present building.

The church is absolutely free, every corner being at liberty to take any seat (chairs are used), and is intended to copy the churches built in the poorer districts of the great English cities. The music is exclusively Gregorian chants, and services are held every day.

The parish began its work two years before the building of the church. Services were conducted by Rev. Henry F. Hartman, who resigned in 1874. The Rev. Charles C. Parsons was then called, and he remained until 1876, when he accepted a call to Memphis, Tenn. In 1878 he there fell a victim to yellow fever, and died at his post of duty. Rev. J. B. Wetherell had charge during the years 1876 and 1877, and was in turn succeeded by the Rev. John Sword, and later by the Rev. Wilberforce Wells.

Rev. S. S. Lewis was the assistant rector until 1878, when he resigned and went to Memphis to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Parsons. Five days after reaching Memphis this brave pastor also died of yellow fever. Since September, 1878, the assistant rectorship has been filled by the Rev. Louis Schuyler.

Up to date there have been six hundred and fifty-eight baptisms and three hundred and fourteen persons confirmed. This church has an endowment of one hundred thousand dollars.

St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, on Hudson Street, between Eighth and Ninth Streets. First service was held in 1852, William Tryon, rector. Permanent organization was effected March 2, 1855, Rev. Robert Davis, rector. The wardens were John Stevens, James Gore King. The vestrymen were Robert L. Stevens, Thomas A. Conover, Thomas B. Gautier, M.D., John Van Boskirk, Abraham L. Van Boskirk, Peter Ritter, Pierre L. Van Rensselaer, George Morton, Richard F. Cook, M.D., and William Tryon.

The first permanent building was on the corner of Hudson and Third Streets, where Bush's Hotel now stands. The land was donated by John Stevens. The Rev. John A. Ward was installed as pastor April 4, 1855, the Rev. Mr. Cruise in 1844 and successively the Revs. Messrs. Burnham, Hoyt, Parker, Moore and Bruce, to 1851.

In 1841 Trinity parish was formed, and located their church at Washington and Seventh Streets. In 1866, Rev. N. S. Harris was called. In 1871 the church moved to Hudson, between Eighth and Ninth Streets, where it erected the present building, at the cost of forty-seven thousand dollars, and called the Rev. Mr. Hartman to the pastorate. The same year the Holy Innocents was started. In 1873 the Rev. Edgar Johnson was installed, and in 1878 the present rector, Rev. Charles L. Newbold.

The present site was presented to the church by the Hoboken Land Improvement Company. Present debt is little over two thousand dollars. The seating capacity is five hundred; value of the property, sixty thousand dollars. The rector is the superintendent of the Sunday-school. It has an average attendance of two hundred and fifty.

Trinity Church (Protestant Episcopal), on the northeast corner of Washington and Seventh Streets, is the oldest church building in the city. This organization is an offshoot from St. Paul's Church, and was organized in the Town Hall, over the engine-house, corner of Washington and First Streets, Sept. 16, 1853. The first wardens were John W. Van Boskirk and William P. Wright, the vestrymen were A. L. Van Boskirk, M. V. Banta, William Hindhaugh, Hazelton Walkley, James F. Melliss, Daniel Wadsworth, and Peter Ritter. The rector was Rev. N. W. Camp, D. D., and the first service was held Oct. 18, 1853. Present building was begun in October, 1855, and finished in September, 1856. Value, eighty thousand dollars; seating capacity six hundred, average attendance, four hundred. The tablet was the work of the celebrated American sculptor, Mr. Crawford, who died before the work was finished, and it was finished by Rudolph Rogers. On its way to America the vessel containing it was shipwrecked off the island of Corsica, Feb. 2, 1859. After lying six months in the Mediterranean the tablet was recovered, and reached Hoboken in August, 1860. The inscription was written by the late Bishop Doane. In 1864 the rectory and school-house were built. In 1865 the Rev. N. Sayre Harris resigned after nine years of service. He was followed by the Rev. Frederick Fitzgerald, who died Aug. 31, 1866. The Rev. Reuben W. Howes remained pastor until 1874 and the Rev. Telfair Hodgson until 1878. Since then the church has been under the pastorate of the Rev. George Clarke Houghton, the present rector. There is a flourishing Sunday-school, numbering three hundred and twenty-five scholars, connected with the church, under the superintendence of the rector, also a Ladies' Missionary Society Guild and a choir of eighteen adult and eighteen junior choristers.

The baptisms to date are seven hundred; confirmations, three hundred and twenty-eight, marriages, one hundred and sixty; burials, three hundred and fifty; receipts, one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars.

Jewish Synagogues.—The only Jewish synagogue in the city is the temple, Adath Emuno, located at 279 Garden Street, dedicated April 15, 1883. The Rev. Isaac Schickler is the pastor and also the superintendent of the school. The church has thirty-three members, and the services are held Friday evenings and Saturday mornings. The school has forty scholars. Prominent among the members are Louis Ettinger, president; S. Wolfe, vice-president; M. Lesser, secretary; and Louis Hart, treasurer. The trustees are Messrs. R. Berel, M. Kouert, A. Marks and Charles Cohen.

Cemeteries.—THE HOBOKEN CEMETERY is located at New Durham, North Bergen township, Hudson Co., N. J. It contains seventeen and a half acres, and was purchased from John H. Bonn, Jan. 27, 1859, the consideration being four thousand dollars in cash, sixteen city lots, comprising old Potter's Field burying-ground, at Hudson and Sixth Streets, Hoboken, and the removal of the bodies therein to the present cemetery. This action was taken under the authority of an act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, passed in 1857.

In 1862 a map was made of the cemetery, after a plan suggested by Mr. B. N. Crane, who was appointed by the Council to inspect the laying out of the same.

In 1868 the control of the cemetery passed from the Council by an act of the Legislature to a board of six trustees, one of whom is annually elected for a term of six years by the lot-owners of the cemetery. All moneys received by the trustees from the sale of lots, etc., is paid to the treasurer of Hoboken, who pays all bills contracted by the trustees when countersigned by the president and secretary.

Each trustee must be a lot-owner. The law requires five acres of land to be reserved for a free burying-ground; the balance of the lots could be sold formerly only to citizens of Hoboken, but by a subsequent act this restriction was removed, and now any one can become a purchaser.

When the mayor and Council surrendered the cemetery to the trustees, in 1868, there was a debt of two thousand seven hundred dollars on the property. This debt has been entirely paid off, the running expenses promptly met and a surplus of about nine thousand dollars has been accumulated, which is laid aside as a sacred fund, to be used only for improvements and repairs on the cemetery.

The value of the property now is about thirty-five thousand dollars. About two-thirds of the cemetery is now occupied. There have been six thousand interments, four hundred of which were in the five acre free burying plot by donated Mr. Bonn, in accordance with his agreement with the city in 1859. On this plot the only charge made was for the opening of the grave. This cemetery is one of the finest in the State. This is due to its favorable location and to the judicious and indefatigable labors of the trustees and superintendent, B. N. Crane, who has made the study of cemeteries a specialty during the last thirty years.

Prior to 1875 the chairman of the Council was ex-officio member of the board of trustees, but during this year the act was changed, and the mayor since that time has been the ex-officio member.

The trustees report every three months to the mayor and Council. The officers of the cemetery have been as follows: From 1868 to 1877, Christopher Gregory, president; and from 1877 to 1884, Wm. H. Havens, president. Since 1868, Mr. B. N. Crane has been annually elected by a unanimous vote secretary and superintendent. He served without salary from 1868 to 1872, received five hundred dollars per annum till 1875, and one thousand dollars per annum since that time.

The trustees have been as follows:

Elected 1865: Charles Chamberlin, one year; John C. Duhrkoop, two years; Robert McCague, Sr., three years; John M. Francis, four years; Bethuel N. Crane five years; Christopher Gregory, six years.

Since then the following trustees have been annually elected:

1869, Charles Chamberlain, re-elected; 1870, John C. Duhrkoop, re-elected; 1871, Robert McCague, Sr., re-elected; 1872, John M. Francis, re-elected (William H. Havens elected to fill vacancy caused by the death of John M. Francis); 1873, B. N. Crane, re-elected; 1874, Christopher Gregory, re-elected; 1875, Charles H. Martin; 1876, John C. Duhrkoop, re-elected; 1877, Robert McCague, Sr., re-elected (Christopher Gregory resigned, and Joshua Benson elected to fill the unexpired term); 1878, William H. Havens, re-elected; 1879, B. N. Crane, re-elected; 1880, Joshua Benson, re-elected; 1881, Charles H. Martin, re-elected; 1882, John C. Duhrkoop, re-elected; 1883, Robert McCague, Sr., re-elected; 1884, William H. Havens, re-elected.

Charitable Institutions.—ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL.

—This is, and always has been, the only hospital in Hoboken. It was founded in 1866 by the Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis, under whose supervision it is at the present time. Since the extensive improvements of 1883 it contains one hundred and fifty beds, which are, as a general thing, all occupied.

All persons, of whatever religion or nationality, are received, those in good circumstances being asked a small sum as payment; to those in needy circumstances the hospital is free. The money for its maintenance is raised principally by alms.

THE WIDOW'S HOME is a private institution founded in 1859 by Mrs. Stevens. It is now in charge of Mrs. Ann Newberry, and the physician who attends the inmates of the home is Dr. Fisher. The original location was Washington Street, near Seventh; the present is 333 Bloomfield Street. The number of ladies who receive the benefits of the home varies from six to twelve.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

EDWARD PARKE CUSTIS LEWIS.

Gen. Robt. Lewis, the great-great-grandfather of the subject of this biographical sketch, who was an officer of high rank in the British army, emigrated from Wales to America and settled in Westmoreland County, Va., where he purchased large tracts of land, portions of which still remain in possession of the family. His son John married a daughter of "King" Carter, to whom was born, among other children, a son Fielding Lewis, who was united in marriage to Betty, only sister of Gen. George Washington. Fielding Lewis filled the position of quartermaster-general of the Federal army during the Revolutionary war, and also acted as aid-de-camp to Gen. Washington. Among his children was Lawrence, who resided first at Mount Vernon and later at Woodlawn adjacent to it, which was given him by the owner of Mount Vernon. Lawrence Lewis married Nelly Custis, granddaughter of Mrs. Washington, and adopted daughter of the general. Their living children were Eleanor Parke, who married E. G. W. Butler; Angela, who married Charles M. Conrad; and Lorenzo. The latter was born in 1803 and died in 1847, having made Audley, Clark Co., Va., his residence. He married Esther M., daughter of Professor John Redmond Coxe, of Philadelphia, a distinguished physician of the latter city. Their children are George Washington, John Redmond Coxe, Lawrence Fielding, E. Parke Custis, Charles Conrad and Llewellyn Daingertfield. E. Parke Custis, the third son, was born on the 7th of February, 1837, at Audley, Clark Co., Va., and received his early scholastic training at Staunton, Va., after which he entered the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville. Deciding later upon the law as a profession, he entered the office of Hon. Reverdy Johnson, and concluded his studies with S. Trinkle Wallis, of Baltimore. Not desiring to practice, Mr. Lewis then retired to his plantation in Virginia, and devoted his time to agricultural pursuits until the beginning of the late war. He had until this time been a firm adherent of the Union cause and opposed to the secession movement, but felt impelled to follow the fortunes of Virginia on her withdrawal from the Union, and at once joined the ranks of the Confederacy. He served as aid-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Chamberlain and as brigade inspector under Gen. William H. T. Lee. On being made prisoner he was confined four months in Fort Delaware, and when a second time captured was for eleven months a prisoner in both Fort Delaware and Camp Chase. He received promotion to the rank of major and later to that of colonel in the department of the inspector-general, and during his period of service took part in the battles of Bull Run, second Manassas, Antietam, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg, Chantilly and Winchester. At the close of the conflict Col. Lewis returned to his plantation and resumed its cultivation. He was, in 1859, married to Miss Lucy Ware, daughter of Col. J. W. Ware, of Virginia, and has one daughter living. He was a second time married, in 1869, to Mrs. Garnett, only daughter of Edward A. and Mary Picton Stevens, to whom were born four children. Col. Lewis made Europe his residence in 1869, and on his return, in 1875, became a citizen of Hoboken, his present home. His political proclivities are Democratic. He was in 1878 elected to the State Legislature, acting as chairman of the committee on education, and vice-chairman of the committee on municipal corporations. He was also delegate to the Democratic Convention held in Cincinnati in 1880, and member of the State Democratic Committee of New Jersey in 1884, but he declined active political preferment, though participating actively in the arena of politics. Col. Lewis has also been identified with various civil organizations, to which he has given substantial aid. He is a member and was for three years president of the Schenuten Association, is president of the Columbia Rifle Association, and filled the same office in connection with the Hudson County Driving Association. He has maintained the religious faith of his family, that of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and acts as vestryman of Trinity Church of Hoboken.

CHAPTER XLII.

CITY OF BAYONNE.¹

Formation.—This municipality was set off as a township from the town of Bergen on the 15th of

¹ By Hon. Anthony H. Ryder.

March, 1861, and became a city under chartered powers granted by the legislative act, dated the 10th of March, 1869. Subsequently those powers were varied, and a more elaborate charter was granted March 22, 1872. By the latter enactment the city is divided into five wards. The real and personal estate valuations, according to the assessors' estimate, September, 1876, amounted to $5,343,935. This was a little in excess of one-seventeenth of the entire county's valuation.

Early History.—The area comprises the southerly end of the county of Hudson, extending from the canal, and covering the land from bay to bay and ending at the Kill von Kull. The signification of the word naming the locality is Bay-on, or on the bay. The city is named by reason of its touching the borders and being on the shores of two bays, Newark and New York. Early designations in the region are of a purely and definitely Holland origin. Any close student readily picks up a name as from that source, because it has its characteristics. Within the Holland mind it would be next to sacrilege to name a locality Corpus Christi. The earth is God's footstool, according to a prevalent idea permeating a Holland mind, and recourse to any Scriptural name is beyond the bounds of propriety. Accordingly, the Hollander, where he has settled, names no locality Bethlehem, Jericho or Jerusalem. He thinks it is alienating to common purposes that which has been appropriated to sacred uses.

The word Kill has the sense of flow or stream, and Kill von Kull is the stream running from Arthur Kull Bay. Figuratively—or, better to say, literally—the expression designates a flow from a faucet. The crookedest stream to be seen to-day in the county is called Croma Kill, Crom signifying crooked. Kill is an affix to a number of local names, as found in the words Cresskill, Fishkill, etc., designating localities settled by the Hollanders. The word Neck, applied to places and the word Point were in frequent use when the early settlers affixed names, and within the boundaries of Bayonne both the ancient Bergen Neck and Bergen Point are included. Bergen Neck, as the limits of a congregation, was described in 1828 "as a most beautiful district of country, hardly two miles in its average width, about four or five miles in length, having Newark Bay on the west, the Kill von Kull on the south, New York Bay on the east and Bergen on the north." Subsequently the area was abridged to admit a Bergen Point congregation.

In the early times, going to continental days, it was customary to contribute pieces of wampum¹ when the deacons moved along the aisle or among the congregation to gather the collection. An early desire was here for a stated ministry. The services by the pastor began at the church before he stepped into the pulpit, with a solemn and silent invocation. As Dr. Taylor, in his annals, describes it: "The moment the minister arrived at the pulpit-stairs his private devotional prayer was offered, as he held his hat before his face seeking the presence of the Master of the house ere he ascended the sacred desk." Or, as another portrays the custom: "With nimble step he advances up the aisle, bowing to right and left, and pausing a moment at the bottom step of the pulpit, he reverently holds his hat before his eyes and offers prayer. He has been taught to seek the supporting arm of God, knowing that if it be withdrawn, his strength withers and his spiritual faculties decay. The assistance of the Holy Spirit is craved with a devout reverence. As the body is unable to perform its functions unless constantly supplied with the breath of life, so does the soul constantly require the vivifying inspiration of the third person of the Trinity."²

Means were sought to build up a spiritual household in those days,—a temple not made alone by the material hand, but one quickened by the spirit of God. There is not an instance cited in the New Testament of a church edifice, nor can it be said with assurance that Christians of that day set apart places for public worship. A group of worshippers gathered in a house consecrated to divine service must ever be conducive to social advantage; yet external religion may be said everywhere to vary in some measure from internal. The mere exhibition of a church assures us of a Christian idea. The pausing on the first step by the early pastor has its significant bearing, however, as it assures all that the present race of man will never be essentially better than their heathen predecessors so long as they rest satisfied with having only outwardly embraced the religion of the Messiah.

The Hollander had his peculiarities, his impressive ways. 'Tis well known that the humorous writer he led to an exuberant fame could never have found a more substantial race to suggest ideas to their fancy. When he took umbrage at an incident, the Hollander's ire flashed forth in "dunder und blitzen."³ He hardly thought it worth while to blaspheme. shafts from ironical writers do not touch him when they are prone to make merry with his superstition. The taciturn, contemplative mood he so often falls in attracts the more general notice and gets the pencil of the graphic artist. Caricature him as much as you may, there is still lurking about the scene a sterling quality that will show a redeeming feature. Hardly does the whimsical writer, whose mission was to amuse, reach his concluding chapter before he discovers a heart-

¹ Rev. G. S. Faber, D.D. New York: Eastburn, Kirk & Co., 1844.

² Remembering well, when a lad, how he viewed an attack upon his cherry-trees, grafted with the choicest scions. Happily for the urchin in this instance, a wasp visited the eyebrow of the irritated veteran, as he was hunting for a rod of correction. This diversion served as a counter-movement, and the offending youngster merely heard the preliminary roar without getting the shock of a castigation.

³ Annals of the Classis of Bergen, second edition, page 115.

E. P. Lewis

felt wish to have his lucubrations considered as mere invitations to further research¹

A sea-shell found on a mountain-top is as eloquent as an evangelist in preaching of the ingratitude of a world that caused a deluge. The plow of the pioneer is as potent in declaring a surrender by the emissaries of savage life, leading the mind by its accompaniments to all the innovations characterizing a new colony. One's notions are stirred at a glance, and straightway we begin to analyze and put forth the details so lively in demonstrating the march of improvement. The same brilliant temper, ready to blaze away at an irritating invasion, took a myriad of paths in varying the local scenes upon this stage of action.

The wigwam ceased to be, and soon one observes the houses provided with large doors and small windows. The family entered in at the gate and generally lived in the kitchen. Members of the household during the summer rose with the dawn, ate their dinners at eleven and went to bed at sunset. The front door leading into the parlor was rarely opened, except on marriages, funerals, New Year's day, the festival of Saint Nicholas or some such great occasion.

To some extent isolated from the metropolis, the early residents here pursued with diligence their rural labors, altogether oblivious to any thoughts of speculating in city lots. There was simplicity at the dwellings of the yeomanry; the current of life ran evenly at the fireside. The whole family, old and young, master and servant, black and white, nay, even the very cat and dog, enjoyed a rustic community of privilege. The fire-places were of a truly patriarchal magnitude. There sat the venerable Hergener, silently puffing his pipe, looking into the fire with half-shut eyes, meditating for hours together; the good Vrouw, on the opposite side, would employ the time in spinning yarn or knitting stockings. The young folks would crowd around the hearth, listening with eager attention to an old crone of a negro, the oracle of the household, perched like a raven in the chimney-corner, croaking forth a string of incredible stories about New England witches, grizzly ghosts, hair-breadth escapes and bloody encounters among the Indians.

'Tis easy to contemplate similar scenes of simplicity and comfort, the sociable and busy aspects so vivid in the years gone by. There were the receptions given the thoroughly tutored dominie, when the best room was opened and the sumptuous meal prepared. And then the urchins said their catechism, and there were comments and courtesies exchanged, accompanied by the choicest good cheer. Behold the gardens! how they glow with the rich products of autumn, the golden pumpkin and the green-tinted cabbage! See the lad and his team coming from the mill with the grist carefully ground! hear the blast of the dinner-horn calling the men from the field! Again notice the feathered race,—the ducks, the cackling geese, the turkeys, guinea-hens, with chanticleer and his retinue sauntering around him. Hear the lowing of the sleek cattle browsing in the meadows or cooling their sides at the edges of the kills or along the shores of the bay! Fancy the ring of the harvest blades, the thwack of the flail upon the floor of the open barn! Hear the whistle of Sambo in the corn-field, or his merry ditty, as, with axe on his shoulder he lies to the woods! "Yes," hints a graphic author, "the quilting-parties and the frolics and suppers that followed, and the sparking of the young folks when the old folks had retired." Those winter evening chats, too, about the ample fire-place, "where half a (modern) cord of wood blazed out its wondrous comfort." All these things traverse along the avenues of fancy as hints of what were. How varied is the position of today from that of those who first came to this field of labor!

On the opening of the court-house, among other remarks in the address of Chief Justice Hornblower, are noticed what he says about the old town and its early homes. "I remember," he says, "when it had very few inhabitants except old-fashioned, honest Dutchmen, and very few houses except those not built for show, but for domestic comfort and convenience,—long, low and unpretending in appearance, but durable in materials." He makes reference as well to another feature when speaking of their "two or three hospitable doors, into which the friend and stranger might enter and find a welcome." Dr. Taylor intimates that the acquaintance with strangers could not be said to be eagerly sought. When such acquaintance was formed and appreciated, however, it was not easily terminated.

Early Pursuits.—In their quiet way, the inhabitants are said to have followed their callings, principally in agriculture. Shad fisheries and the oyster-grounds furnished fields for busy enterprise and a profitable employment. By an act of the State Legislature, passed April 20, 1876, authority was given the pilot commissioners to prescribe regulations as to the placing of fishing-poles and for determining what would become an impediment to navigation.

Extreme Cold.—From the 6th to the 30th of January, 1792, both inclusive, for twenty-five days, the temperature kept about or below the freezing-point; the lowest was two degrees above zero.

From the 18th to the 24th of January, 1810, there was a cold term. Temperature Thursday, 18th, at 2 P.M., forty degrees above zero; next morning, sunrise, at zero,—a fall rarely noted within a range of nineteen hours. The 19th was known as the "cold Friday." Many trees were killed.

From the 11th to the 27th of January, 1821, a cold term prevailed. The lowest temperature was below zero. On the 26th many persons crossed on the ice from New York. The ice embargo on vessels continued till the 30th. During this sharp spell a half-way house (it may be, "a sample-room") was started for the accommodation of travelers crossing on the ice. Historian Winfield, in quoting a newspaper of January 30th, that year, says: "A 'drouthy crony' going from Jersey City for a glass broke through the ice. A wag standing at the door of the saloon said to the proprietor, 'Sir, there has a man just slipped down cellar; you had better look after him, or your liquors will be in danger.'" Accounts are given of a protracted cold term in 1780 that continued for a month. Sleighs were driven over the ice from Bergen to New York. At that time the hill from Fort Lee to Bergen Point, except what had been cleared for the farms, was covered with a fine growth of thrifty timber. A great want of fuel existed in the city, and wood commanded a high price.¹

¹ Washington Irving's "Knickerbocker." The author's apology, page 12. "If it has taken an unwarrantable liberty with our early provincial history, it has at least turned attention to that history and provoked research."

Cholera.—This scourge visited Bergen Neck with singular virulence in 1849. Among the deaths were Catherine J. Corrigan, Edwin Corrigan, Eliza Cubberly, Ellen Vreeland, Richard Crips (aged 20), Michael McDonald (aged 21), Abraham Van Boskirk (aged 82), William Pennington (aged 9).

The numerous deaths in this region all occurred within a belt of land running from New York to Newark Bay, not half a mile in width. It was the centre of disease also in 1832. No local cause can be assigned why it was so. Some who were very severely attacked recovered.² Deaths reported in New York City of the same disease for the week closing August 4th, were six hundred and seventy-eight.

The epidemic continuing, caused no little consternation among the inhabitants. The newspaper before quoted, at a subsequent date, announced, "the twenty-third death by cholera within the compass of a third of a mile, and the forty-third within a mile and a quarter." Compared with the population of those places, the mortality here exceeded the melancholy statistics of St. Louis or Sandusky.

Bergen Point.—This locality is favored with a commanding view of the New York Bay, Newark Bay and of the northerly side of Staten Island. So wrote a chronicler thirty years ago; and, continuing, added: "That beautiful island, which is also an outlet for the crowds of the great metropolis, whose daily business being over, they seek their homes amid the shaded hill-slopes of romantic Richmond, a county full of interesting reminiscences. Excursions are frequent during the summer season around Staten Island, in steamers with barges, passing through the Kill von Kull. Bands of music attend these tourists. The vessels are sumptuously decorated with flags and banners, and residents of the Point are much enlivened by these gala-day scenes. Even in midwinter here, when the ice is plentiful, the locality has attractions. The currents running from the bay are often strong, and the floating ice forced by the rapid current, at particular tides, comes rushing and rumbling, occasionally emitting sounds and tones like those heard at Niagara."³

The choicest localities were selected years ago for pleasant abodes. Especial preference was given to the north side of the highway leading along the banks of the Kill von Kull. Here was likewise an edifice originally designed for a lecture-hall, and during many years serving as a school-room. It was just east of the residence of the late Sheriff Garretson. The expressive name of the district is very significant of agreeable remembrances. An epistle now before the writer of these chronicles, written at Lawrenceburg, Ind., by one of the teachers once here, says, "And I am this beautiful May morning almost lost in thought. I fancy myself in the 'Good Stay' school-room, where I passed many very pleasant and profitable hours." The writer portrays the May-walk and the picnic; he refers to the best choir and choice melodies, to travels among "the vineyards and wine-makers in America;" and still there are happy recollections lingering of the Good Stay district. Nor is he by any means solitary in similar pleasurable remembrances, the writer having heard a number of the preceptors, whose experience occurred here, join heartily in corresponding retrospection. At this hall convened for several seasons the Bergen Point Lyceum, an institution organized to promote mutual instruction among its members, the ordinary exercises consisting of debates and lectures.

The elements of sociability joined in rendering their contributions to the rounds of amusement and pleasure. A straw-ride and a sleigh-ride were among the seasonable diversions. The corn-husking party was as apt to have its agreeable features as the more ceremonious sociable. To the singing-class—a legitimate successor to "ye ancient tuition in psalmody"—were united all the modern fascinations of the soirée. The occasional concert here won its notice and diffused its pleasurable impressions. In fact, here, as elsewhere, came forth the magical powers of the times. To be locally precise, at one period it may be said these elements were centralized at the Latourette House in the summer and more extensively scattered among the private dwellings during the winter. There were throughout the year constantly recurring forms of novelty in the phases of diversion and entertainment. No excursion, whether aquatic or over the land, seemed to lack features of pleasing diversion. Any gathering, conventional or convivial, gave evidence of animated sentiment. An examination and festival took place at the school-house April 13, 1854, chronicled at the time as a very pleasant affair.

It is suggestive and pleasant to know that modern history takes a course in a great degree varied from ¹ Winfield's "Hudson County," pp. 165-166.

² The Christian Intelligencer, Aug. 9, 1849.

³ There is a distinct sound in the wintery air closely akin to that heard near the great cataract.

Dr Oliver

that of other times, and it is more disposed to describe processes by which communities have been rendered happy than in commemorating startling alarms and tragic deeds. A history class at the local institute may be registered here,—

John J. Bradley	John R. Melick
J. M. Simonsen	William A. Burdett
A. E. Burdett	W. H. Dutcher
George C. Taylor	Stephen Enyard
Hartman Garrison	Amos L. DeBou
S. A. Melick	Harriet A. Trembley
J. H. Parnly	Emora L. Story
Winfield Poillon	Anna E. Parnly
John S. Furgis	Eliza J. Vreeland
A. D. Melick, Jr.	Samuel Waiters
A. H. Reed

Civil Organization.—Compared with present regulations, now governing five wards, it interests the reader to observe modes of official action in force nearly three decades ago. At the annual town-meeting in the spring of 1855 it was decided to hold the spring and fall elections at the hotel of Egbert Waiters, to elect three constables only, and to raise for support of schools three thousand three hundred dollars, for repairs of roads five hundred dollars, and for the poor three hundred dollars. Officials chosen that spring:

Chosen Freeholders
Mindert Van Horn	Jacob A. Van Horn
Superintendent of Schools
John Welsh
Commissioners of Appeal
Hartman Van Wageningen	Edmund J. Bromhall
William Stringham
Assessor
James W. Welsh
Town Clerk
Abraham P. Newkirk
Judge of Election
James M. Jones
Justice of the Peace
Francis P. Miller
Surveyors of Highways
Richard Vreeland	Daniel Van Winkle
Collector
Henry R. Welsh
Pauper-Keepers
George Anderson	James H. Farrant
John V. H. Clembony
Deacons of the Town
James J. Van Boskirk	Abraham Spear
Deacons of Highways
Abraham A. Vreeland	Henry C. Van Reypen
James J. Van Boskirk	Hartman Van Wageningen
Henry Brinkerhoff
Constables
James H. Farrant	Aaron V. P. Jones
George Anderson
Town Committee
Andrew P. Simonsen	John Brinkerhoff
Garret Van Horn	Henry Newkirk
Winfield Stringham	Daniel Vreeland
John Mandeville	Peter Rowe
Garret G. Newkirk	William Stringham
Nicholas S. Vreeland	Peter Jones
Ward-Keepers
Benjamin Hueston	Michael J. Vreeland
John Waiters

Six years subsequently the township of Bayonne went under similar municipal regulation, and in February, 1864, Bayonne is authorized to raise by taxation the moneys paid to procure volunteer. The preamble to this act sets forth as the primary movement in these outlays public meetings held by the inhabitants, at which the township committee were requested to offer bounties. The purpose of the legislative act was to authorize gradual payments of sixteen thousand five hundred dollars and interest at seven per cent., the sum for which the bonds of the township had been issued. In less than another decade the region here ceased to go by the name of township, and had become "the young and wide-awake city of Bayonne."¹ At few points are more progressive movements shown than in those referable to public instruction. Town Superintendent Stillwell, for the year 1863, reports that "it is probable a new district will be set off during the ensuing year; this district will include what is known as Constable's Hook." The State superintendent announced that year three districts with schools well-taught and disciplined. The State superintendent's report for the year ending Aug. 31, 1871, mentions "four new brick school-houses, twelve teachers and a sagacious Board of Education." The children reported in 1868 numbered 903, and in 1874 they numbered 1379. From the financial statement made by the mayor to the State comptroller in 1879 may be deduced a few facts,—

Obligations contracted $17,200 war bonds $228,000 funded assessments, $219,000 improvements, $165,000 tax bonds ten years, $106,500 city bonds twenty years,—total, $735,700.

The war bonds extend to 1887; $165,000 fall due in 1885, $228,000 from 1885 to 1889 and $106,000 from 1891 to 1897; $219,000 of the amount already liquidated. The indebtedness arose from causes before herein referred to when speaking of bounties; also from outlays for street improvements, for wharves, school buildings and City Hall. Yearly expenses were reported to be, for

Books and Stationery	$800
Board of Health	500
Printing	1,000
Registers and Envelopes	500
Estimates	200
Maturing War Bonds	2,000
Sinking Fund for twenty-year bonds	4,000
Interest on twenty-year bonds	7,450
Maintaining Public Schools	14,500
Repairs to Roads	1,000

DAVID W. OLIVER, the mayor of Bayonne in 1884, is of Irish origin, Alexander, the grandfather of David W., having emigrated when a lad with his father and accompanied him to Massachusetts, where the latter was proprietor of a cotton-spinning mill. He served with credit in the war of the Revolution, and subsequently removed to Marietta, Ohio, where he was among the earliest settlers. He married Mary Warner, a native of Vermont, whose ancestors were of English lineage. To this marriage were born eleven children, among whom was David W., a native of Marietta, who practiced his profession of medicine until 1832, when he retired to a farm in Warren County, Ohio. He married Mary Wade, daughter of David Wade, a Revolutionary hero, who was one of the pioneers in the founding of the city of Cincinnati, where he erected the third cabin on the site of the present metropolis. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver who survived were David W., Alexander L., Melancthon W., Warren S., Susan O. (Mrs. James H. Brooks, of St. Louis, Mo.), Sarah E. (Mrs. A. H. Young, of Miss Mary A., daughter of Dr. John P. Harrison, of Cincinnati. Their children are a daughter, Mary W., and a son, Alexander L. Mr. Oliver has since his removal to Bayonne been occupied in the superintendence of his varied business interests, having become a considerable owner of real estate within its limits. He is in his political convictions a Democrat, and although in no sense a politician, has served as councilman of Bayonne, and at present fills the office of mayor of the city. He affiliates in religion with the Presbyterian Church.

¹ So styled by Superintendent W. L. DeKrause.

JASPER A. CADMUS, who has been intimately connected with the civil government of Bayonne, is a di-

Jasper A. Cadmus

Newton, N. J.). David W. was born on the 19th of December, 1819, in Cincinnati, where he remained until twelve years of age, when the farm in Warren County became his home. He pursued his studies at the neighboring school, and was industriously employed in agricultural labor until twenty years of age, when for a year and a half he was engaged as clerk. After a brief interval Cincinnati became his home, where he engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. In 1860 his attention was more exclusively given to the sale of groceries, which continued until his retirement, in 1865, and removal to Bayonne, his present home. Mr. Oliver was, in 1853, married to rect descendant of Diedrich Cadmus, who was great-great-grandfather of the subject of this biographical sketch, and was of Holland descent, and the progenitor of the family in New Jersey. Among his children was a son George, who married, who became the father of Jasper Cadmus, one of whose twelve children was Andrew, born in Bergen township (now known as Bayonne City), in Hudson County, N. J., where he resided and pursued the occupation of a farmer until his death. He married Jane, daughter of George Vreeland, of Greenville, and granddaughter of Garret Vreeland. Their children were two sons, Jasper A. and Andrew. The life of Mr. Cadmus was suddenly ended by an attack of cholera in 1832, in his twenty-fourth year. His son, Jasper A., was born March 16, 1831, in Greenville. Having lost his father when but a child, a home was opened to him in the family of his maternal grandfather, where he assisted in the labor of the farm, and availed himself of such education as the country schools afforded. Not satisfied with these limited opportunities, he afterward entered upon a more extended course of study and became a proficient scholar. Having inherited a portion of the farm of his grandfather, he at once began its cultivation, and continued thus employed for ten years, when he rented the land and became a dealer in real estate, which has since engaged much of his attention. Mr. Cadmus was married, in 1851, to Catherine E., daughter of James and Mary Pharo, of Ocean County, N. J. Their surviving children are Mary J. (Mrs. E. S. Dowe), Julia E. (Mrs. N. G. Wiggins), Agnes E., Eleanor E., Augustina, Olive (Mrs. D. W. Diamond), Wilhemina and Benjamin F. Mr. Cadmus has for years been an important factor in local political issues, and indorses the platform of the Democratic party, though frequently acting independent of party. He has been for several years assessor of Bayonne City. He was also from 1874 to 1877 a member of the Board of Councilmen, to which office he was re-elected in 1884, and now fills the position of president of that body, bringing both wisdom and a large experience to bear in the performance of his duties. Mr. Cadmus is an ordained minister of the gospel, and has for sixteen years exercised the functions of a preacher, though not regularly settled over a charge.

Festive Days.—An annually recurring day finding favor in this region is that of New Year's. One can scarcely say it is one of idle and unmeaning ceremony, for the multitude is immense that have found it to be, as Irving styles it,—jolly as he is,—“a jubilee of the heart.” ‘Tis an annual festival, and just in this locality it has shown its merry features. “It comes,” says “Salmagundi,”¹ “in the dead of winter, when Nature is without a charm, when our pleasures are contracted to the fireside, and when everything that unlocks the fetters of the heart and sets the genial current flowing should be cherished as a stray lamb found in the wilderness, or a flower blooming among thorns and briars.” The same writer introduces the topic, as though he had just been enjoying the festival, by saying: “It is the season of festivity when the gate of time swings open on its hinges, and an honest, rosy-faced New Year comes waddling in, like a jolly, fat-sided alderman, loaded with good wishes, good humor and minced pies.” “If the people here,” hints the author of the “History of Bergen,” “did not possess the luxuries of the neighboring city of New York, they did possess and enjoy their home comforts.” No one was more competent to make inferences here than the excellent Dr. Taylor. His services began here July 24, 1828, and he was assigned to the position of emeritus pastor Sept. 22, 1870. Irving puts the festivity as abounding in social merriment and good cheer, and “one of the inestimable relics handed down to us from our worthy Dutch ancestors.”

Early Recollections.—Impressions of youth are ordinarily the most forcible and the most enduring. Even the trivialities of one's early years make a far deeper impression upon the mind than the more remarkable circumstances of maturer age. Who is it that does not, amid all the mutations of life, retain a vivid recollection of the early home? Events of after-life crowd and dim the view of the past; yet who could not shut his eyes and go from room to room in his father's house? That circle—the period of early life—presents the clearest events and those the most strongly marked. The tulips that adorned the earliest garden had the daintiest tints, the roses were the most odorless, the fruit that came from the old orchard had the finest flavor. Such memories have their uses, binding us to the past, serving to the mind as a pleasing anchorage that recollection gives it. No one will chat for an hour with an old resident of this vicinity without arriving at a similar conclusion. The early home and field, garden and stream and wood, are objects special in their beauty.

General Comments.—It is evident that the inhabitants here were for a long period a hearty, hardy and industrious people. Having privileges of fishing and fowling, there were advantages in this region not accruing to residents of the interior. Excepting the innovation made by the epidemic at one locality here, the vicinity compares favorably as to health with the neighboring regions. Wordsworth remarks pithily that all we need to make life what it should be is a few strong instincts and a few plain rules. The rules in vogue here, as a general thing, seem to have operated salubriously.

Living as citizens of a country whose proudest boast is that it has made the civil and religious rights of all the same, there was no division of sentiment respecting toleration. Universal education, beneficial occupation and local and general good government had their influences. It is not surprising that many of the inhabitants here enjoyed a hearty old age. Few of the earlier patriarchs here lacked genuine earnestness, and never when suitable occasion offered, neglected to enunciate their views. The method shown was to illustrate the fact that their liberal principles did not arise from indifference towards religion itself, as it is not uncommon to find preceding the bequests in their last wills an expression of this tenor: “Recommending my soul into the hands of my Creator, hoping for a remission of all my sins, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of mankind, I dispose of all my worldly estate,” etc. The convictions of a people receive tone and character in their forms and proceedings. Two hundred years and more have elapsed,¹ and vigorous representations of the earlier race remain, the descendants of the pioneer settlers here and the multitude that have since joined them in a wide field for industry. From what has just been said may be gathered a glimpse or so at the earliest inhabitants here, if such a view is obtainable from a few desultory facts.

¹ Number 20, Jan. 1, 1808.

These early inhabitants gained from as great a mind as our continent has yet produced a commendation of their progenitors. In whatever region they find their homes the Dutch descendants may point with pride to their ancestry in old Holland. They received and sheltered the fugitive founders of New England, they colonized New York, they gave to Great Britain the liberal and politic prince who rescued her from the tyranny of the Stuarts. They can contest with Germany the honor of the invention of printing, and they are certainly entitled to that of the invention of painting in oils. They led the great contest of Tentonic freedom against the absolutism of the Latin races, before either England or Sweden took the field. The declaration of independence of the seven united provinces in 1581 was the model of the declaration of 1776. That government was the earliest to send forth a well-organized navy; it was, in fact, the first example, in the modern world, of a powerful, though ill-compacted republic. In Erasmus was produced one of the earliest and most efficient restorers of the lost literature of the ancient world, and in Grotius, the great legislator of the international code. "The country," adds Edward Everett, "that can show such titles to the admiration and gratitude of mankind may be content with her place in history."²

The community here from time to time has had its sensations, and during the Revolution quite as many events happened as its exposed situation would lead the reader's mind to surmise might be likely to occur here. These of themselves constitute a chapter embodied in a more general view of the county. So also, it may be said, the more important roadways in the vicinity have met with notice and review.

Traveling Facilities.—The traveling facilities, since stages³ went, in 1764, via Bergen Point and Blazing Star ferries, to Philadelphia, from Paulus Hook, have varied and multiplied considerably. The wagon without springs the wagon with springs, the omnibus, appeared and disappeared. Plank-roads came to the front and ceased after a few years' service. The construction of the Morris Canal was authorized Dec. 31, 1824. The work was completed in 1831, and extended then from the Delaware to the Passaic. An extension to the Hudson was finished in 1836. In 1852 the traffic here showed three hundred and fifty-eight thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven tons, in 1862 it showed six hundred and twelve thousand and eighteen tons and in 1872 six hundred and eighty-five thousand one hundred and ninety-one tons. The railways are elsewhere viewed.

Fourth of July Celebrations.—Some one remarks, with a great deal of pungency, that the observance of a holiday in an agreeable and rational manner has an invigorating effect. Even the anticipation of a festival will have its enlivening influence. What may be called an excess of labor is decidedly pernicious; aye, it might be called, all views considered, a positive evil, as it destroys the power of laboring. Such a matter as that of a holiday, seen from this stand-point, gains merited notice. The populace here, though renowned for industry, have not been unmindful of occasional recreation, and know the ways to the best entertainments. July 5, 1776, John Adams wrote: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided that was ever debated in America; a greater, perhaps, never was, or will be, decided among men." The Fourth, he thought, would be thenceforth celebrated as the great anniversary festival. The noble notion has had its attractions here. The parsonage premises, then at Bergen Point, was the selected spot for a celebration of this anniversary in 1845. Access was announced as available by the steamer "Passaic," from the foot of Barclay Street, and by the Port Richmond boats. At the anniversary of 1850 the parsonage-house and grounds were likewise made the trysting-place. Military and a band of music joined in these attractions, access being by stage from Jersey City or by the steamers from New York. Orations were pronounced at each of these anniversaries; the anniversary of 1853 and that of 1855 were likewise attended by orations that were subsequently published. These several anniversary discourses were delivered by David S. Coddington, 1845; Gabriel P. Dissosway, 1850; A. H. Ryder, 1853; O. H. Morris, 1855.

Area and Population.—The area of the city covers what can be designated as "magnificent distances." The domain will be enlarged when extended to the exterior line for solid filling made out under directions of the riparian commissioners. That line at points in front of Hartman Vreeland's land, that of his neighbors on the south and the lands of Van Buskirk may be seen to extend far into the bay. So along the Kill von Kull, near its entrance at Constable's Hook, some increase of area is allowed in front of land of the Hazard Powder Company, and the shore in front of the copper and the sulphur-works. The same commissioners have also fixed an exterior line for piers. Quite probably the descendants of the present generation will be discussing the matter of these piers, now in the civil engineer's fancy, when some census-takers shall be realizing Pintard's prophecy as to the population of the great metropolis of the country. He figures a population in 1885 of 2,695,837, in 1890 of 3,364,796, in 1895 of 5,205,995 and in 1900 of 5,257,493. With every allowance, the city of Bayonne must, as a necessary consequence, share in a similar advance. The data here furnished kept fair tally in the anterior decades, Pintard, in 1806, putting down the population for 1845 as 451,616, for 1855 as 705,650, for 1865 as 1,010,577 and for 1875 as 1,722,766. Speculators in city lots may draw interesting inferences and the historical student note a progress in events.

¹ In a letter to the Classis of Amsterdam, dated New York, Oct. 28, 1692, Rev. Henricus Selwyn writes: "At the request of the people of Bergen, I have consented to preach there three times in a year, on Mondays, both morning and afternoon, and administer the Lord's Supper. I found there a new church, and at the celebration of the Lord's supper one hundred and thirty-four members. At other times they are accustomed to come over the river here to the hearing of the Word."

² What was called the great stage route was varied from time to time, with the view of having a better road or for other reasons. (See Winfield's "Hudson County," p. 306.)

Some of the Pioneers.—There are among the chronicles of this region no small number of biographies, the publication of which would contribute much to the local history. In this direction the mind turns to the late Capt. David Latourette, whose death occurred a score of years ago, at the age of seventy-seven. The life of the late Cornelius Van Horn, aged ninety-three, and that of many other veterans had entertaining features. The late Jasper Garretson, the county sheriff from 1853-59, was a well-known resident here; the late Archer G. Welsh, the erier of the court for more than thirty years, was familiar to old inhabitants; also the late Henry U. Chevens, an old resident and attache of the United States customs for a couple or so of decades; and also Richard Cadmus, whose patrimony extended from the one to the other bay, and the many yeomen similarly engaged with him and his sires in cultivating the soil. The old dwelling in the occupancy of Cadmus was erected by him on the site of an old stone house his father occupied. It is located on the New York Bay.

Agricultural Interests.—Market gardening about this locality exerted no little pressure upon other affairs. Credit is due this pursuit for encouraging the ferries,—the Knickerbockers across the stream had their old relish for cabbage, and no cultivators of the soil handled their nimble sixpence to a greater extent for that production than did the farmers here. History tells us that the farmers here paid for ferriage of this edible across the Jersey City ferry at the rate of one shilling and sixpence per hundred. In this case, one sees the old sixpence falling into the ferry proprietor's hands. Similar exorbitant rates led the shore-owners to a use of their own periaugers to some extent; yet the ferry was not without a fair share of patronage. Considerable maize had cultivation here for other objects as well as its noted dish, "soupaan,"¹ and that other salubrious Indian contribution to the culinary department, "suceotash." The older historians never allowed this cereal the niche it should hold in the aspect of encouraging civilization. The late Albert Gallatin, who was renowned for his criticisms of men and things, talked impressively upon this topic, and the notions he entertained show discernment worth historical notice: "I saw, in one of my excursions, a man felling trees in March, who, when I returned in October, had harvested a crop of Indian corn, grown on the very spot. He had also the leaves and the stems of the plant to serve for winter fodder for his cattle. He was an immigrant newly arrived, and entirely without the capital indispensable to enable him to cultivate wheat, that must have been twelve or thirteen months in the ground before it could be reaped." Gallatin considered this crop a great help to settlements upon this continent. He thought that an improvident race would live for support upon the potato, which, when healthy, can rarely be stored and preserved till the next harvest. No production, in his judgment, filled the place of the grain so prolific in its yield, and, when dried in the sun, so easily kept for many years, as maize or Indian corn. The cartilage of an inhabitant here, even when styled a market gardener, would have been considered lacking the needful when not exhibiting the corn-crib. Considerable traffic took place among the old residents in the seasons of small fruits. During the early season, when grass was a luxury to the city uags, many loads were taken to the city, being sold by the bunch and "yielding a good return in money."

Early Maxims.—The clever maxims in vogue among these people, if few, were pungent and pointed. Everybody at all familiar with current events recollects how Abraham Lincoln referred to the Dutch farmer as relating to a time for swapping horses. The remark made to a companion had its simple and yet startling force,— "It is not best to swap horses when crossing a stream." A terse way of talk had its influence here as well as elsewhere. The fashion extended often to names, as well as other themes. Our historian, when referring to the most skillful master of a sail-boat, names him "colored Abraham."—"Brom" for short,—as the man of that or a particular ferry. Many an Abraham besides Irving's Brom Bones received the abbreviated "Brom" among the old folks. By a similar process "for short," and following a current desire for brevity, early names often took no doubt a change. Staats, among those of Holland origin, had most likely its origin in the name Eustatius; Tice, in the name Matthias; Cole, in Nicholas, and Keese in Cornelius. In his "Annals," Dr. Taylor elucidates the name Van Wageningen and its colloquial source.

Religious Interests—EPISCOPAL SERVICE.—Services according to the Episcopal form began in the county in 1807, the worshipers availing themselves of the Jersey Academy, at Paulus Hook, as a place of meeting. A church edifice was not built till many years subsequently. It is styled St. Matthews. Fifty years or more elapsed before a church edifice appeared at Bergen Point. This was Trinity, in 1860. Residents here professing a choice for this service attended the church on Staten Island. Sabbath mornings, thirty or forty years ago, inhabitants along the Kill von Kull might have been seen entering their skiffs, and taking the most direct route to the church of their choice, on the north side of Staten Island. Old residents remember the late Capt. David Latourette,¹ and Cornelius Simonson and others, making their way in this manner. The perils of the sea and all kinds of water-craft were familiar to these worthies, the earlier years of their lives having been passed in maritime services. These veterans were, in fact, frequently on this route, cheerfully joining the devout assemblage in confessing before men their obligations to "Him who rides on the whirlwind and directs the storm."

¹ Maj. André, at verse 4 of canto I. of his "Cow Chase," gives the word exactly as it was used.

TRINITY EPISCOPAL CHURCH, of Bergen Point. Congregation organized in 1859. Church edifice consecrated Sept. 4, 1862. Earliest rector, Rev. Franklin S. Rising. Present rector, Rev. Howard Arrowsmith.

St. BARTHOLOMEW MISSION, instituted May, 1865. The field was assumed by a church organization, the corner-stone having been laid Nov. 3, 1866. The congregation took for their title Calvary Church, of Bayonne, March 22, 1867, and the edifice was opened for service the last Sabbath of June in that year. Location, Forty-fourth Street, between Avenues C and D. Earliest rector, Rev. Frederick M. Gray.

St. JOHN'S MISSION, instituted in 1872. Organized subsequently as St. John's Episcopal Church. Location, Avenue D, corner of Thirty-fourth Street. The earliest rector was Rev. Washington Rodman. Present rector, Rev. W. T. Picklesley.

REFORMED CHURCH.—The Reformed Church at North Side attracted residents also to its services from Bergen Point a century ago. In fact, that church and the church at Bergen were sharers in the services of the same pastor for many years. United in their purpose, they educated a student, sending him to Holland, where he passed four years in preparing for the ministry. On his return to this continent, in 1757, he assumed charge in September of that year, serving the two congregations with great faithfulness, and declining to accept a call proffered him by other congregations. The period of his ministrations here exceeded thirty years. His successor at Port Richmond, in 1790, was Rev. Peter Stryker. The families of the congregations here mentioned used the Dutch language. Many of the gravestones in the cemeteries adjoining the churches show inscriptions in that language. The Holland language was the current speech in use during Dominic Jackson's ministry. Public worship under his guidance and of his predecessors was attended by no undervaluation of education or of Scriptural research, the early dominies being profoundly learned in doctrinal faith.

THE REFORMED, organized Jan. 11, 1829. The earliest edifice was erected during the year 1828 at Bergen Neck. A second building, styled the First Reformed Church of Bayonne, corner of Avenue C and Bayonne Avenue, was dedicated March 31, 1867. The earliest pastor was Rev. Ira C. Boyce. The present pastor, Rev. W. W. Knox.

REFORMED CHURCH OF BERGEN POINT.—This edifice, west side of Avenue T, near Third Street, was erected in 1853. Consistory organized May 16, 1854. Earliest pastor, Rev. J. C. Dutcher. Present pastor, Rev. James F. Riggs.

THIRD REFORMED CHURCH OF BAYONNE CITY.—The corner-stone laid Oct. 12, 1873. The edifice is located on Avenue T, corner of Fourth Street. Rev. C. F. A. Klein, present pastor.

PEOPLE'S CHURCH.—The location, Avenue T, corner of Fourth Street. Pastor, Rev. H. W. F. Jones. The congregation worshipping in this edifice recently organized under the title of the First Presbyterian Church.

BERGEN NECK METHODIST CHURCH, instituted June 22, 1844. The corner-stone was laid and a church building erected in 1854. Name changed to the Mattison Methodist Episcopal Church of Bayonne Feb. 26, 1868. Present location, Avenue D, corner of Oakland Avenue. Pastor, Rev. C. S. Woodruff.

WESTVIEW AVENUE METHODIST CHURCH, Westview Avenue, near Avenue D. The present pastor is Rev. J. K. Aylsworth.

LUTHERAN.—Twenty-sixth Street. Present pastor, Rev. A. P. Bechtold.

SAINT MARY'S, STAR OF THE SEA (ROMAN CATHOLIC), located on Avenue C, corner of Twentieth Street. The edifice was consecrated March 18, 1860. Earliest incumbent, Pastor Callan. Present incumbent, Pastor Thomas M. Killen.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.—This is probably the youngest religious organization in the city, and but little information could be gained relative to this church beyond the following item, which appeared in the Evening Journal of Jersey City, of the date of Oct. 11, 1874:

"Yesterday afternoon the rites in connection with the laying of the corner-stone of the new edifice for the First Baptist Church of Bayonne were held at the site of the structure, on the corner of Bayonne Avenue and Avenue C, Bayonne proper. The audience was mainly composed of ladies and children, and numbered in the neighborhood of two hundred. The services were opened by Rev. Dr. Folwell, pastor of the church, who delivered a short address, after which the spectators sang a hymn beginning with 'I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord.' The Rev. U. S. Woodruff, pastor of the Mattison M. E. Church, read a Scriptural lesson for the occasion, and was succeeded by Rev. Dr. Farley, of this city, who delivered an appropriate prayer. 'All hail the power of Jesus' name' was sung with a will at the conclusion of the prayer, after which Rev. Dr. Everts, of this city, addressed the gathering, his theme being an explanation of the Baptist faith and doctrine. Rev. Dr. Taylor, of Newark, followed with an address of congratulation, and Rev. F. E. Osborne, of West Hoboken, read a short address adapted for the services. The hymn commencing with "Jesus shall reign" sung by the audience prior to address by Rev. Geo. Nicholson, pastor of the North Baptist Church, the city; Rev. D. C. Hughes, pastor of the Summit Avenue Church, this city; and Rev. A. W. Folwell, of Brooklyn. The pastor then deposited the box of bells within the stone, no special service being observed, after which the top stone was laid in place and the audience sang the long meter Doxology. Rev. Dr. Esart pronounced the benediction.

¹ Capt. Latourette was an expert at the oar, and seemed to enjoy the exertion that accompanied his little jaunt across the Kill to land from the church.

Rev. J. N. Folwell was pastor of this church in 1884.

Educational.—The town superintendent, reporting in 1863, remarks: "It is our purpose to call the attention of teachers to the importance of keeping accurate and reliable registers in their respective districts." Few localities in the State could keep the teachers more active in this particular. Rapid advancement, the brisk increase, and spirited movements of the young city put all on the qui vive.

Even the county superintendent had an opportunity here to exercise in due time all his numerous functions. These were, with other duties of a financial kind, to visit and inspect the schools, inform and counsel trustees, adjust district boundaries, examine and license teachers, suggest and direct in school matters. Matters of this sort, however, became rapidly complex in the new city. Accordingly, we soon find him suggesting a local board. Below appears the Board of Education for 1884.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

First Ward, C. L. Lord, president, H. M. Brash, George W. Cunningham, Second Ward, S. F. Hayward, C. A. W. Griff, Charles Stillman, Third Ward, William H. Fresser, E. F. Jordan, Arthur C. Webb, Fourth Ward, C. F. Schneider, S. J. M. Kemblicks, James M. Hugh, Fifth Ward, James Harley, James Van Winkle, Patrick Coffey, George W. Yates (secretary).

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

No. 1.—First Ward, Fifth Street, H. E. Harris (principal).
No. 2.—Second Ward, Avenue D, P. G. Vernon (principal).
No. 3.—Third Ward, Forty-first Street, E. C. Earl (principal).
No. 4.—Fourth Ward, Fifth Street, Miss Alice Wilson (principal).
No. 5.—Second Ward, Twenty-seventh Street, G. A. Atwater (principal).

The following sums of money were asked for by the board for 1884-85: Buildings and repairs account School No. 1, $250; School No. 2, $500; School No. 3, $300, and a bond for $1000 for the proposed alterations; School No. 4, $250; School No. 5, $400,—total, $1700. Salary account, $25,000; school-book account, $2000; Stoves and fuel account, $1300; furniture account, $600; incidental fund, $1000,—grand total, $32,600 for the purpose of conducting the city's five schools during the school years of 1884-85.

Athletic Sports.—Any one casting a glance over the waters of the Kill von Kull on a pleasant morning, then taking a tour along the main avenues of this city, will readily notice numerous evidences of recent enterprise. Quite a stress rests upon very able exertions operating for the moral and intellectual progress of the inhabitants, athletic sports—the American game among the most prominent—gaining a share of attention; aquatic entertainments also, the latter enjoyed by members of a brisk body that in 1883 dedicated a somewhat attractive club-house to the objects of their organization. This adventure, under the name of the Newark Bay Boat Club, has its nine trustees, with Sterling F. Haywood as their chairman. Officers for 1884 were Ernest C. Webb, president; William A. Holmes, vice-president; George G. Jewett, treasurer, Leonard W. Amerman, recording secretary; Arthur C. Webb, corresponding secretary; James R. Raymond, captain Eugene Macdonald, lieutenant.

Fire Department.—Regulations regarding fire alarms, as announced in one of the official papers, August, 1884, give incidentally a view of this agency, serving here to protect property from conflagrations. The bulletin begins with announcing that the city is divided into five fire districts, these corresponding with the five wards. First District is the First Ward, Second District is the Second Ward, and so on.

The City's Growth.—As years slip along, and a city in name gains more and more the compact appearance becoming a city in reality, agricultural aspects will here be seen vanishing. Just at present, however, varied and many as are the appearances that show a city to be advancing, there are still ample evidences of agricultural enterprise. The post-offices within the boundaries of the city are Bergen Point, Bayonne, Pamrapo and Van Buskirk.

The first is on Sixteenth Street, opposite the Central Railroad depot, C. T. Munn, postmaster. The second is on Avenue E, corner Bayonne Avenue, J. Murphy, Jr., postmaster. The third is the Saltersville post-office of years past, M. Mullaney, postmaster. The fourth is on New York Bay, about one mile east of Bayonne Station, G. Christians, postmaster.

Newspapers.—BAYONNE HERALD, an eight-page weekly, issued every Saturday at No. 93 Avenue D. The publication began Dec. 25, 1869, and it has reached its twenty-first volume. Editor and publisher, H. C. Page.

BAYONNE TIMES, E. Gardner & Sons, publishers. This is a four-page weekly, issued every Thursday. Vol. xiv, No. 50, appeared Aug. 28, 1884.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

SOLON HUMPHREYS.

Solon Humphreys, who has been a resident of Bergen Point, city of Bayonne, since 1856, is the son of the late Col. Decius Humphreys, and sixth in descent from Michael Humphreys, the emigrant from Lyme-Regis, England, to Windsor, Conn., in 1640,—a distinguished man of his time, whose descendants have been very numerous, and now constitute the largest portion of those bearing the name in this country. Mr. Humphreys was born in Canton, Hartford Co., Conn., Oct. 27, 1821, and educated in the District High School of his native town, in Wright's Academy (East Hartford,) and St. John's College

(Annapolis, Md.) He was a clerk in the employ of the late Governor E. D. Morgan, in New York, from 1840 to 1845, and removed to St. Louis in 1845, where he engaged in the wholesale grocery and commission business, remaining nine years at that point. He married, in 1847, Mary Ellen, daughter of the late Edward Walsh, one of the most esteemed merchants of that city, and has one son, Edward Walsh Humphreys, born in 1848. Mr. Humphreys returned to New York in 1855, as partner in the firm of E. D. Morgan & Co., which partnership continued until the decease of Governor Morgan, in 1883, when the business was continued by the surviving partners. He was one of the original promoters of the Ohio and Missouri Railroad, in Illinois, in 1851, also of the Iron Mountain road, in Missouri, in 1852. After his removal to New York his firm was the agent for the sale of the bonds of the State of Missouri, issued to its railroads, and was in other ways interested in the roads of that State. In 1871 he was one of the active parties in the reorganization of the North Missouri road into the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Railroad Company, and also, in 1877, in the reorganization of the Wabash road, and in 1879 in the consolidation of these two systems of railroads into the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad Company, with which he has been connected since the consoli-

James Annett

ness was continued by the surviving partners. He was one of the original promoters of the Ohio and Missouri Railroad, in Illinois, in 1851, also of the Iron Mountain road, in Missouri, in 1852. After his removal to New York his firm was the agent for the sale of the bonds of the State of Missouri, issued to its railroads, and was in other ways interested in the roads of that State. In 1871 he was one of the active parties in the reorganization of the North Missouri road into the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Railroad Company, and also, in 1877, in the reorganization of the Wabash road, and in 1879 in the consolidation of these two systems of railroads into the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad Company, with which he has been connected since the consoli-

1878. He has been warden of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Bergen Point, since its organization, in 1859.

—
JAMES ANNETT.

Alexander Annett, the grandfather of the subject of this biographical sketch, who was in religion a Protestant, resided near Newry, in the north of Ireland. He emigrated to America at an early date and became a boatman, and was drowned in the Hudson River, near Fort Lee, while pursuing his vocation. His children were Robert, James and one daughter. Robert was born in Ireland, and came when eight years of age to America. He removed from New York to Fort Lee in 1824, and purchased a large property, including the old ferry-landing. He built stores, a steamboat-landing, boats, etc., and contributed largely by his enterprise to the growth of the place. He also ran the sail-boat "Corinthian," purchased of the late Robert L. Stevens, to New York. In 1840, Mr. Annett removed to Brooklyn, and remained until 1855, when Fort Lee again became his home. He was second in rank among the tax-payers of Bergen County, and died in his ninety-fourth year. He married Catharine Moore of Bergen County, and had thirteen children, the survivors being Mary (Mrs. James Reynolds), James, Catharine (Mrs. John F. Burdett), Hannah (Mrs. Washington Hawes), Robert, Alexander and George W. James, who still owns sixty acres of the Fort Lee property, was born Aug. 6, 1813, at Fort Lee, Bergen Co. After limited advantages of education, he assisted his father in his various business enterprises, and subsequently for many years managed his extensive interests. On the death of the latter he removed, in 1879, to Bergen Point, since that date his residence. He married Mary Ann, daughter of John Quinn, of New York, and had children,—Eliza, Kate (Mrs. William Fury), Clara (Mrs. Michael Henry), Lulu (Mrs. Andrew Donald) and James. He married a second time Mary, daughter of Stephen Burdett, whose children are Charles E. and Richard C. S. The former has for some years had charge of large family interests in New York, and Richard C. S. has won some reputation as a promising amateur oarsman. Mr. Annett is in politics a Republican, and was during the late war a staunch supporter of the government, both with his means and influence. His religious associations are with the Protestant Episcopal Church.

John Humphreys

PHILIP ELSWORTH.

Philip Elsworth, the grandfather of the subject of this biography, was a native of Ocean County, N. J., and served as an officer during the entire period of the war of 1812. He married a Miss Seaman and had among his children a son William, who married Mary Pharo and had ten children,—Philip, Joseph, Mary, William, Jane, Robert, John James Watson, Wesley and Abraham, the last two being deceased. Philip, the eldest of these children, was born in West Creek, Ocean Co., N. J., on the 27th of October, 1828, and remained at the place of his birth until 1849, when he removed with his parents to Hudson County, his present residence. His advantages for obtaining a thorough education were very limited, the schools of the county affording him opportunities for study, such as they were, during the winter months, while the summers were spent at sea with his father. He early imbibed a taste for a sea-faring life, and before the age of twenty assumed command of a vessel, which occupation was continued until after the close of the late war. He had the satisfaction of taking the first cargo of provisions to Sherman's army at Savannah, Ga., after his memorable march to the sea, and at a period when it was in great need of supplies. Philip Elsworth was married, July 3, 1865, to Mrs. Lydia Cranmer, daughter of John Willets, of West Creek, Ocean Co., N. J., and has children,—Hannah, Adelaide, Philip and Christine. He has for many years been engaged in the whole-sale oyster trade in New York City, and conducts an extensive business which requires his personal attention during the season. Mr. Elsworth is more especially known to the public as the designer and builder of the fastest yachts sailing in American waters, if not in the world. These vessels have won all the prizes in their various classes and conferred upon their designer a reputation of which he is justly proud. Among these yachts are the "Mountain," "Comet," "Fanita," "Graying," "Elephant," "Crocodile" and "Penguin." He embodies in his designs all of his ripe experience in building and sailing vessels, and is justly acknowledged to have no superior as a builder of fast-sailing yachts. Mr. Elsworth is in his political preferences a strong Republican, but never aspired to office nor found leisure for occupations aside from his legitimate business.

CAPT. G. E. WINANTS.

Captain G. E. Winants, a self-made man, was born on Staten Island, N. Y. He is of Dutch and English ancestry, his progenitors having come to this country at an early date. The family name on Staten Island, where most are to be found, is spelled "Winant," in the south "Winans," in the west and north "Winan," but all trace back to the same sturdy stock. His father, Capt. Peter Winants, was lost at sea when young Winants was about nine years of age, being shipwrecked when on a homeward voyage, the ship and cargo being lost, and all the passengers and crew, except the mate and two sailors, finding a watery grave. The loss of this vessel and cargo, of which Capt. Winants was part owner and upon which there was no insurance, left his widow and six children in comparatively indigent circumstances, there remaining only a farm, the homestead and a few thousands invested. Shortly after his decease his money was called in, reinvested by his widow and subsequently lost. Through such a chain of adventitious circumstances our youthful subject was deprived of an early education from books, but necessarily learned habits of industry, economy and self-reliance, the foundation principles of his future success.

That he has largely overcome this early neglect may be gathered from either one of his entertaining and instructive volumes, "Journal of Travels Over the Continents of Europe, Asia and Africa and the Islands of the Sea," published in 1872, "Around the World," published in 1877, and other works not yet in print. He is widely known throughout New Jersey and other places by his writings on travels. As he approached manhood his first choice was to follow the sea, a desire strongly conulated by his excellent mother, who wished not her son to share the possible fate of his father. At eighteen, with a limited education and less than one dollar in money, he left the parental roof to carve out a fortune for himself. His first engagement was on a schooner as a hand before the mast, at eight dollars per month. In the hope of aiding his mother, who had done her all for him, he allowed his wages to remain for three months, and at that time was deprived of them through the dishonesty of the captain. He next procured a place at twelve dollars per month, soon made many friends by his activity and perseverance, and was rewarded at nineteen years of age by a few persons joining together and building for him a freighting schooner of forty tons burthen, named "Gilletta," with the proviso that as soon as young Winants could pay for any part thereof he should have an interest therein. After some three years he purchased this vessel, but shortly afterward he took on a cargo of plaster of paris, and was shipwrecked on Long Island Sound, nearly losing his life by the disaster, which swept away his all. Somewhat despondent, yet with undaunted courage, the young captain after a while succeeded in building a larger schooner, which he named the "Ellis Amanda." From this time fortune smiled upon his efforts, and he continued building and buying vessels until his fleet numbered fifteen, thus enabling him to conduct a large maritime trade, some being engaged in bringing pine wood from Virginia, others running to Albany in the lumber trade, and still others in the transportation of street sweepings and coal ashes. During the Rebellion Capt. Winants built and equipped five steamboats, which he chartered to the United States government for war purposes, one being placed in the revenue department of the port of New York, three on the coasts of North and South Carolina, and one carrying the United States military mail between New Orleans, Galveston, and Brazos de Santiago. At the close of the war he sold out his fleet of vessels and retired from active business. For several years Capt. Winants had the contract from New York City for cleaning its streets. He purchased some thirty acres of waterfront in Jersey City, formerly known as Harsimus Bay, paying therefor over one hundred thousand dollars. Nine-tenths of this land was covered with water, and ordinary vessels sailed over it in the pursuit of commerce. Here he deposited the street sweepings and ashes gathered under his contract in New York, and for ten years he was engaged in filling this land, building docks, grading, paving and sewerage the streets rendered necessary by the improvement, which added largely to the revenue of Jersey City by way of taxes, etc. On this property are now located the tobacco-factory of P. Lorillard & Co., one of the largest in the United States, the immense railroad terminal facilities, besides other large factories and buildings, which have added greatly to the growth of Jersey City. A large part of this land Capt. Winants yet owns. He is a large owner of real estate in New York City, Hoboken, Plainfield, Elizabeth and Bergen Point, to which latter place he came in 1872, and where he now resides.

Upon retiring from active business he devoted much time to traveling, and, in company with his wife, made several lengthy tours, one around the world, traversing some twenty-seven thousand five hundred miles; another, the continents of Europe, Asia and Africa and the islands of the sea, embracing some twenty thousand miles; and a third, through Central America and along the border of South America, up the Pacific coast to San Francisco, crossing the continent and covering about eleven thousand miles, besides traveling in and through the West India Islands, Canada, Mexico and every State in the Union except Kansas, around which they went twice, and several of the Territories.

During these travels Capt. Winants kept daily record, in accordance with a habit of some forty years past, an account of which he has given to the world in two handsome volumes, elaborately illustrated. While a resident of New York City he declined aldermanic honors on two occasions, as also other important places of public trust tendered by the Democratic party, and has always been inclined to favor the man more than the party. As director of Union Dime Savings-Bank, New York, for thirteen years, he aided largely in strengthening that successful institution. Capt. Winants' paternal grandfather, Jacob Winants, a wealthy farmer of Staten Island, felt called to preach the Word, and gave the remainder of his life to service in the Methodist Church as a traveling preacher, always refusing financial aid.

Like his honored ancestor, Capt. Winants gives largely from his abundant means to church and kindred associations, irrespective of sect or creed, besides educating young men for the ministry. He is an elder of the Dutch Reformed Church, trustee in the Board of Domestic Missions, delegate to the General Synod and one of the financial pillars in that denomination. He married, Feb. 10, 1841, Miss Amanda, daughter of James and Abigail (Birdge) Miller, by whom he had four children,—Mary Frances (died in 1872, was the wife of George H. Hilyer, who died in 1877, leaving children,—Clarence W. and Frank Ellis), James M., Ellis Sebastian and John Frederick, the latter two deceased. The maternal grandfather of Capt. Winants, Capt. Garret Ellis, was one of the heroes of the war of 1776, an uncompromising patriot. He was arrested at midnight on Staten Island, and after being compelled to walk shoeless over frozen ground almost the entire length of the island, was incarcerated in old Fort Richmond, where he was kept a prisoner until the close of the war. Capt. Winants' father, Capt. Peter Winants, was of similar patriotic heart, and served as adjutant in the war of 1812. Following in the footsteps of his ancestors, with unflinching patriotism, Capt. Winants, although not going to the front in person when the nation was in distress and needed the full support of all loyal citizens, gave substantial aid in the interest of the Union armies by his means and counsel, and thus was one of the pillars to support every measure of the government to suppress the Rebellion.

Philip R. Elsworth

G. C. Hinckley

The writer is largely indebted to ex-Governor Bedle, of New Jersey, and Hon. A. A. Hardenbergh for the material facts of this sketch, and the latter says of him, "Wealth has detracted nothing from the severe simplicity of his character, nor circumstance or posi-

It is by such self-made men the character of the community is conserved, the better interests of the State made safe and the happiness of the republic assured. There was one in particular who, while living, gave impress to the State, and who, at every fitting opportunity, gave voice to the character of Mr. Winants, and was his warm and devoted friend,—Hon. Dudley S. Gregory. Mr. Gregory was himself a self-made man, and his sympathies always leaned towards such.

Together they matured plans which gave development to Jersey City, and attracted to its waterfront the steamships of Europe, and pronounced for all time that in the near future the county of Hudson tion falsified any energy in his devotion to the common weal. He is of the stuff of which the 'really great' are made; masculine in temperament, yet the child unbends him; a liberal contributor to all worthy objects brought to his notice, honest, defiant in his nature, the outgrowth of physical manhood, yet kind and genial in his disposition, and a friend indeed to the young starting out in life who seek his counsel. He is devoted to his family, faithful to his friends, and ever ready with his sacrifice when necessary for the public good, yet without other ambition or aspiration than the respect of his fellow-men, the modest citizen and the Christian gentleman.

John Van Boskirk

w

could only be outranked by its near neighbor, the metropolitan city of the continent.

JOHN VAN BOSKIRK.

The Van Boskirk family are of Holland descent. James, the grandfather of the subject of this biographical sketch and the son of John Van Boskirk, married Sarah Vreeland, and had children,—John, Nicholas, Ann and James. John, of this number, was born at Constable's Hook (now known as Van Boskirk's), which has for generations been the home and burial-place of the family. He married Arabella, daughter of Garret Van Riper, whose children are Catherine (Mrs. Garret Vreeland), Sarah (Mrs. Henry G. Newkirk), Jane (Mrs. Jacob Van Wagenen), Ann Elizabeth (Mrs. Cornelius P. Vreeland), and John. The last-named and only son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Boskirk was born Aug. 30, 1832, on the homestead, where he has during his lifetime resided. His earliest educational advantages were derived from the country school, after which a year was spent at Keyport, N. J., in the pursuit of his studies. He then returned to Constable's Hook, and became associated with Joseph Elsworth in shad-fishing and the planting of oysters, devoting his attention also to the cultivation of the farm. He has since retired from active business pursuits, though the superintendence of the land on which he resides still occupies a portion of his time. Mr. Van Boskirk was married, on the 19th of November, 1851, to Mary Catherine, daughter of William Elsworth, of Bergen. Their children are John W., William E., Edward E., Margaretta M. (deceased), Mary, Gardetta, Arabella, Jenny (deceased), Philip, Eva and James W. Mr. Van Boskirk is a Republican in his political convictions, but not sufficiently active in the ranks to be regarded as a politician. He has, however, been a member of the City Council of Bayonne, served on the township committee and as commissioner of assessments. He was also appointed by the Legislature of 1883 oyster commissioner for the State of New Jersey. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and connected with Bayonne Lodge, No. 99, the charter of which he aided in obtaining.

CHAPTER XLIII.

TOWN OF HARRISON.¹

HARRISON lies directly east of the great manufacturing city of Newark, and is most directly and naturally considered as a part of that city. Although separated by the placid waters of the Passaic, yet East Newarkers are in such close proximity to the very heart of the city of Newark that the term suburb would even indicate a much greater distance from the central part of the city. Many parts of the suburban sections of Newark, which are largely and thickly populated, are much farther from the centres of trade and travel than any portion of Harrison. This fact combined with its manufacturing and commercial facilities has given, in the recent past and present, a healthy impetus to East Newark's general prosperity. Inasmuch as the larger most generally absorbs the smaller, it is most likely that at no distant day the term Harrison must legislatively surrender to the progressive march of the great city of Newark, and that what is now Harrison will become an additional ward of that city.

¹By Professor John Dwyer

Indian and Pioneer History.—The present territory of Harrison and Kearny, and as far north as a small rivulet called Sandford's Spring, was known to the Indians by the name of Mighgeetiock. Here the Indian loved to roam in his native wildness, the territory being exceedingly productive in fish and game, and also possessing great natural richness of vegetation. Tantaqua, known also by the name of Jasper, was the chief, and was very friendly to the whites. When asked the cause of his unusual kindness to the white population, he replied by saying, "I have always been inclined from my youth up to do good." What a lesson this answer from the simple child of the forest teaches to the boasted humanity and civilization of this nineteenth century! Manito, the Great Spirit, he said, constantly whispered to him to be kind to the whites. Capt. William Sandford came from the West Indies, from that section known as the Barbadoes Islands, in 1668, and bought of the proprietors, on July 4th, for the sum of twenty pounds sterling, all the territory now known as Harrison and Kearny, and as far into Bergen County as Rutherford Park now extends. The condition of the sale was that before three years would have elapsed he would settle at least six or eight families on the land so purchased from said proprietors. In a short time after Capt. Sandford purchased all the reserved right and title from the Indians, which was still held under the proprietors to this section. In this deed, drafted under the eye of Capt. Sandford and the Indian chief Tantaqua, the tract purchased is described as "lying between the Hackensack and Passawack Rivers, beginning at the mouth and proceeding northward seven miles till it come to what is now known as Sandford's Spring." For the Indian right and title to the fishing and hunting-ground of theirs, Capt. Sandford paid "one hundred and seventy fathoms of Black Wampum, two hundred fathoms of White Wampum, nineteen black coats, sixteen guns, sixty double hands of powder, ten pairs of breeches, sixty knives, sixty-seven bars of lead, one anker of brandy, three and one-half Fats of Beer, eleven blankets, thirty axes, twenty hoes and two cooks of dozens."²

Wampum was a term applied to small beads made of shells, used by the North American Indians as money, and also wrought into belts and other instruments as ornaments. The wampum was of two kinds, one being white and the other black, or of a dark purple color. It consisted of cylindrical pieces of the shells of testaceous fishes, a quarter of an inch long, and in diameter less than a pipe stem, drilled lengthwise so as to be strung upon a thread. The beads of a white color rated at half the value of the black or violet colors, and passed each as the equivalent of a farthing in dealings between the natives and the planters. An anker is a Dutch liquid measure formerly used in England, and containing ten wine gallons; cokes of dozens may probably mean coats of duifels, duifels meaning a coarse kind of cloth out of which clothing was made. This was the original disposition by the native population of the territory now known as East Newark, which transaction took place two hundred and six or seven years ago.

² Winfield, "Land Titles," 324.

Capt. William Sanford, the purchaser, was a member of the Council of Newark in the years 1681, 1682 and 1684, and complied with the conditions of purchase by settling six or eight families on the tract within the prescribed limit of time. He requested to be buried on his own plantation and implored some of his friends "To assist and favor the concerns of a poor ignorant widow and five innocent children with their best advice, help and counsel to preserve them from the cultures and vices who prey on the carcasses of widows and the blood of orphans." He died in 1692 leaving the new settlement in a prosperous shape for futurity. New Barbadoes Neck (so called by Capt. Sanford), from Barbadoes, in the West Indies, whence he came, was, up to 1710, a part of Essex County, and belonged to Newark. After that date (January, 1710) it became a part of Bergen County.

The Schuyler Purchase and Discovery of Copper-Mines.—In 1719, Arent Schuyler bought a plantation opposite Belleville, from Edmund Kingsland, for three hundred and thirty pounds sterling. This plantation must have occupied the present site of Arlington and the land northward toward Kingsland. A negro slave, while employed in the field, turned up a greenish heavy stone from the soil, which attracted his untutored attention not only in account of its green color, but also for its unusual weight. He took the stone to Mr. Schuyler, who had it forwarded to England to be analyzed, and find what were the component parts of the same. To the great surprise and delight of Mr. Schuyler, he was informed that eighty per cent. of the stone was pure copper. This discovery opened a road to wealth and independence for Mr. Schuyler, and in the excess of his delight he requested the negro who made the discovery to ask for the three things he most desired, and if possible, they should be granted. The negro's first wish was that he be permitted to remain in the employ of his good "massa" during his life. The second was that he be supplied with all the tobacco he could smoke, and the third was that he might have a dressing-down like his master's, with big brass buttons. The trifling nature of these requests, and the easiness and simplicity of complying with them, impelled the master to urge the negro to make a fourth request, and make it something of importance,—something valuable and substantial; the good old negro, after mature reflection, filled the measure of his earthly happiness by making his fourth request, which consisted of "a little more tobacco," after being granted already as much as he could use during his life. Verily the wants of this poor negro were few and easily satisfied, this is the great secret of contentment which the wealthy ever fail to discover or realize. Soon the copper mine on the Schuyler property was in full operation, and the first steam-engine ever used in the county came from England, and was used in 1750 in working the mine. With the engine came Engineer Josiah Hornblower, who was the father of the afterward celebrated Chief Justice Hornblower.

Arent Schuyler, having his fortune, did not work the mine with such energy and profit as his son John afterward did, yet he sent to the Bristol Copper and Brass Foundry, England thirteen hundred and eighty-six tons of rich copper ore. The steam-engine cost three thousand pounds sterling, together with cost of transportation, and was able to pump from the mine eighty hogsheads of water per minute. The engine and work of the mine were destroyed by fire in 1772, and lay in ruins during the Revolution. Mr. Schuyler inclosed two fine deer-parks on the ground now occupied by Arlington, and northward to Kingsland, where some thousand deer sported their beautiful forms at that early period.

Philip Schuyler, a son of Arent, we are to presume, had patriotic impulses towards self-government long before the tea was thrown overboard at Boston or Patrick Henry made his famous speech, for we are told that Philip was expelled from the New Jersey Assembly in colonial days for drinking a health "to the damnation of the government and justices of the peace." He was subsequently restored to his seat.

The Schuyler family ranked as the most prominent residents of New Jersey during pre-Revolutionary days, and Col. Peter Schuyler takes the lead in importance. Peter was one of the sons of Arent, the original copper-mine settler. Peter took an active part in the invasion of Canada in 1746, but by the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, 1748, returned to his home on the Passaic. Hostilities began again in 1754, and the New Jersey forces were again placed under control of Col. Peter Schuyler. After seeing to the safety of New Jersey from Indian and other depredations, he was called by Governor Shirley, of New York, to the defense of Fort Ontario, in that State. Gen. Montcalm, with overpowering numbers, invested and captured the fort, notwithstanding the brave defense of Col. Schuyler and his Jersey Blues, who were taken prisoners and sent to Montreal and Quebec. Our soldiers received the title of Jersey Blues in 1747, on account of the blue color of the uniform. Col. Schuyler was released on parole in 1757, and returned to his New Jersey home in East Newark. He was so popular that he was the occasion of the wildest demonstration all through New York and New Jersey. Bonfires, balls, processions, speeches, and delegations from cities and boroughs were wild with joy, and eagerly manifested their love and esteem for "the brave old Peter Schuyler of New Jersey," the plucky soldier and Christian gentleman. But the period of his parole having expired without being satisfied, he was compelled, Regulus-like, to go back to captivity. His stay this time was, however, brief, as the war having ceased, an exchange of eminent prisoners was duly executed. In 1759 he a third time led his Jersey Blues to Canada, and entered Montreal a victor in 1760. He died at his home in East Newark in 1762, full of years and honors, and though much of his life was spent on the tented field, his heart was never hardened to the cry of distress and poverty, as he left a reputation full of kindness, generosity and humanity.

Pioneer Town of Petersborough.—In 1815 the present site of East Newark (known then as Petersborough, or Kennedy's Farm) resolved itself into the village of Lodi, a name derived, no doubt, from the European epithet "Bridge of Lodi." Archibald Kennedy inherited all of Col. Schuyler's property by marriage with his only daughter, and hence the term "Kennedy's Farm." This Kennedy was attached to the British Royal navy, and was in command of the ship "Coventry," lying in New York harbor on the breaking out of the Revolution. He was afraid of losing his East Newark property, and for further security he came and lived during the early days of the Revolution at his East Newark residence. The Newark authorities, however, being in favor of the Revolution and separation from England, and not liking Kennedy's action, ordered his expulsion from the city to a place of security near Caldwell, where he was detained until he left for England, and left his farm, "Petersborough" (now East Newark), in charge of some tenants. All the Schuyler property, or Kennedy's Farm, was soon in litigation between the Bergen County authorities on one side and the representatives of Archibald Kennedy on the other. Finally a compromise was effected by the sale of the entire plantation to John B. Coles, of New York, Kennedy receiving $20,000 and Bergen County $14,285.75. Archibald Kennedy succeeded to his great-grandfather's title of eleventh Earl of Cassels, in the Scotch peerage.

Name of Township Changed from Lodi to Harrison.—In the early part of 1776 a company of Continental troops was formed on New Barbadoes Neck. Jacobus Jerolaman was captain, Peter Sandford first lieutenant, Elijah Sandford second lieutenant, and John Jerolaman ensign. In 1825 the Legislature, whose attention at that time was chiefly occupied in cutting up territories into townships and counties, changed the name New Barbadoes Neck into the township of Lodi, in the county of Bergen. Lodi at this time included the present township of Union. In 1840 the inhabitants of the townships of Bergen and Lodi and the villages of North Bergen, Secaucus, Greenville, Harsimus, Weehawken and New Durham petitioned the Legislature to create a new county on account of the great distance which the petitioners had to travel to reach the county-seat, which was at Hackensack. This appeal resulted in the creation of Hudson County, and the first mention of Harrison occurs in the law which was passed Feb. 22, 1840.

Section 8 reads,—“And be it enacted that the present township of Bergen, and that part of the present township of Lodi within the present County of Hudson, and the inhabitants thereof, are constituted bodies corporate and politic, Bergen inhabitants to be called the inhabitants of Bergen, and the inhabitants of Lodi to be called the inhabitants of Harrison.” Harrison was so named after William Henry Harrison, the ninth President of the United States, who was elected in 1840. The first meeting and form of government as a township appears from the records of the first meeting, held April 16, 1840.

Original Road Districts.—“First District, Henry Van Emburgh, Newry Morgan, Arent H. Schuyler, Moses Doty and John J. Vreeland, to work in District No. 2. The Second District begins at John J. Vreeland's north line and ends at Jacob Van Ripen's north line. Jacob Van Ripen and Walling Van Ripen to work in District No. 3, as before.

“According to previous arrangement, Peter H. Kipp, Cornelius C. Jerolaman, Enoch E. Vreeland, Isaac Van Winkle and James Jerolaman convene this day, at 10 o'clock A.M., as the town committee of the township of Harrison. Peter H. Kipp is elected chairman and John L. Condit is elected clerk.

“The recent separation of the township from the township of Lodi requiring some modification of the boundaries of the several road districts, the committee do hereby proceed to the arrangement of the same, and upon consideration it is determined on that it is more convenient to divide in the following manner into six districts: The First District to begin at Mr. Ogden's (now Watkins' Tavern) and ends at John V. Vreeland's north line. All the inhabitants on both sides of the Newark Turnpike, east of Mark Davis' tavern, to work in this district.

“The Second District begins at John V. Vreeland's north line, and ends at Garrit Van Riper's north line.

“The Third District to commence at the line between Frederick Veriance and Garrit Van Riper's, thence running to the line between Hassel Veriance and Isaac Van Winkle, thence from Richard Outwater's to the turnpike, and thence from the railroad to the Quackanonk bridge.

“The Fourth District beginning at the line between Hassel Veriance and Isaac Van Winkle, thence to the railroad, thence south along the river to the line between Henry Brown and Nicholas Jerolaman.

“The Fifth District beginning at the line between Henry Brown and Nicholas Jerolaman and terminating at Belleville Bridge. The inhabitants of Kingsland to work in the latter district.

“District number six to commence at Belleville Bridge and to terminate at the Newark Bridge. Mark W. Davis and all the inhabitants west of his house, on both sides of the Newark turnpike, to work in this district."

Settlement of Township Accounts. Mr. Abraham Van Winkle upon presenting his bonds as collector and constable, they were upon examination approved. The committee adjourned to meet the committee of the township of Lodi on Saturday, May the 9th, 1840, at Ed. Vreeland's tavern.

The second meeting of the committee of Harrison township was held on the above date at Vreeland's tavern, in conjunction with the committee from the township of Lodi; the following business was transacted:

"After consultation by the two committees, both separately and conjointly, it was unanimously decided to appoint a special committee, consisting of one member from each of the respective townships of Harrison and Lodi, who should be empowered to collect the assessments on the old Township, to discharge its debts, and to determine upon the mode in which the balance shall be divided, if any should remain after liquidating the debts of the old Township of Lodi. Mr. Peter H. Kip was appointed on the part of the Township of Harrison. Richard Outwater was appointed a commissioner of appeals, in place of Thomas M. Seward, who had resigned on account of not being a freeholder. Peter H. Kip and Joseph Budd were appointed overseers of the poor, in the place of Isaac Ackerman and Elmsner Sanford, who declined. Ed. Vreeland was appointed constable, in the place of Thomas M. Seward, declining, and Nathan C. Aber overseer of the mills, in the place of Peter Mackett."

"John S. Condit, clerk."

Civil List—1841.—Township Committee, P. H. Kipp, Isaac Ackerman, Abraham Brown and Stephen Kingsland, Jr.; Overseer of the Poor, Cornelius C. Brinkerhoff; Isaac I. Van Winkle, collector and constable.

1842.—Town Committee, P. H. Kipp (chairman), Abraham Brower, Stephen Kingsland, Isaac Ackerman, Nathan C. Abu; A. H. Schuyler, assessor; Ed. Vreeland, collector and constable; John S. Condit, clerk; Nicholas Jeroloman, overseer of the poor.

1843.—Town Committee, Peter H. Kipp (chairman) Cornelius S. Brinkerhoff, Francis A. Brown, Samuel Williams and Isaac Ackerman; Isaac I. Van Winkle, collector; William S. Ogden, constable; John S. Condit, clerk.

1844.—Town Committee, Joseph Budd, Thomas Watkins, Isaac I. Van Winkle, John V. S. Van Winkle, Edward Van Söllinger, (chairman).

1845.—Town Committee, P. H. Kipp, C. C. Brinkerhoff, Thomas Watkins, Isaac I. Van Winkle, Edward Van Söllinger (chairman); John V. S. Van Winkle, collector and constable; Abraham Tuers, overseer of the poor.

The following resolution appears on the minutes of the year:

"Resolved, Inasmuch as the damage to sheep, was done during the former year, and should be paid from the dog tax of that year—that the balance of that tax remaining unapportioned at the last annual report be appropriated to the payment of the sheep bills of John H. and Henry Van Emburg, at the rate of seven cents to the lb., which will give Henry Van Emburg $7.57; and for the estimate of damages, and to John H. Van Emburg $11.12 for his estimate."

It would appear from this resolution that the dog tax of those days served the same purpose as the license tax of the present day. When any appropriation in those days ran out, the way out of the difficulty was to take it out of the dog tax, but at the present time a similar difficulty is remedied by a resolution appropriating so much as may be needed out of the license money.

1846.—Town Committee, Joseph Budd, Enoch Vreeland, Thomas Watkins, Isaac Van Söllinger and C. C. Brinkerhoff (chairman); John V. S. Winkle, constable and collector; Abraham Tuers, overseer of the poor. John S. Condit, clerk.

1847.—Town Committee, C. C. Brinkerhoff, Edward Van Söllinger, Thomas Watkins, Enoch Vreeland and Richard Outwater (chairman); John V. S. Van Winkle, collector and constable, Abraham Tuers, overseer of the poor, John S. Condit, clerk; John A. Riker, overseer of highways.

1848.—Town Committee, Richard Outwater (chairman), C. C. Brinkerhoff, Edward Van Söllinger, Stephen Kingsland, Thomas Watkins. C. Jeroloman was appointed township superintendent of public schools. This is the first time that this office came into notice or received any attention from the committee. We are not, however, to infer from this that the schools were neglected, as a resolution appears on the minutes of 1843 distributing a surplus interest fund received by the township from the Board of Freeholders equally between the townships of Harrison and Lodi. The following resolution also appears in this period in the records of the township:

"Resolved, That hereafter the town committee charge for their services one dollar per day, dinner and horse hire to be charged by the landowner to the Town."

John S. Condit, who had been clerk under the different committees since the organization of the township in 1840, died in 1848, and was succeeded by Edward Van Söllinger. The township took such action as was appropriate on the death of a true, tried, and faithful officer, such as John S. Condit invariably proved himself.

1849.—Town Committee, Henry H. Veriance, Daniel Van Winkle, Edward Van Söllinger, Thomas Watkins and Cornelius C. Brinkerhoff (chairman).

Subsequently Edward Van Söllinger, being elected committee man, resigned the position of town clerk, and F. C. Watkins was appointed to fill vacancy.

1850.—Town Committee, Cornelius C. Brinkerhoff, Isaac I. Van Winkle, William McBeth, Henry H. Veriance and Cornelius I. Jeroloman; Stephen K. Jeroloman, assessor and collector; Abraham Tuers, overseer of the poor; and F. C. Watkins, town clerk.

1851.—Town Committee, William McBeth (chairman), Thomas Watkins, Robert Rutherford, Cornelius C. Brinkerhoff and Cornelius Shepherd; Andrew F. Kingsland, assessor and collector; Robert S. Seward, commissioner of appeals; and F. C. Watkins, town clerk; Peter Mackett, overseer of the poor.

The chairman of the committee, Thomas Watkins, died this year, and William McBeth removed from the township. On Wednesday, April 24, 1851, a meeting was held at which Hiram W. Davis was appointed town committeeman, Micajah Reynolds chosen freeholder, and F. C. Watkins road master.

1852.—Town Committee, John Boyd, William S. Ogden, Thomas Young, John Bell, Charles Lee and John Boyd (chairman); F. C. Watkins, clerk; Isaac I. Van Winkle, assessor and collector; Robert W. Rutherford, road master; Jabez P. Pennington, John Rutherford, and John Van Emburgh, commissioners of appeals.

On Wednesday, June 9, 1852, the committees of Harrison and Union townships met for the purpose of making a division of the moneys, debts, papers, etc., of the old township of Harrison. Present on the part of the Harrison committee, John Boyd, William S. Ogden and Charles Lee; and of the Union Committee, John Vreeland, Joseph K. Hasen, Yunes A. Brown, Joseph M. Roy and Robert Rutherford. After an examination of the assessment of 1851 the following arrangement was entered into, viz.:

"The committees of the Townships of Harrison and Union agree to a list of the moneys now on hand and hereafter to be collected. The debt owing by the Township of Harrison previous to the last annual town-meeting, and any debt that may accrue from any default of which the Township of Harrison previous to the last town-meeting was a party in the rate of seven to nine (7 to 9)—that is, Union to pay or receive seven dollars and Harrison to pay or receive nine dollars. The purpose supported by the Township of Harrison previous to the last annual town-meeting shall chargeable to the present Township of Harrison.

Witnessed, in the Township of Harrison, this 9th day of June, A. D. 1852, Joseph K. Hasen, Joseph M. Roy, Yunes A. Brown, Robert W. Rutherford, Charles Lee, J. In L. Vreeland, William S. Ogden and John Boyd, Jr."

The amount to be so divided was found to be $147.97, of which Harrison received $83.95 and Union the sum of $64.73.

1853.—Town Committee, William Seely (chairman), Thomas Jones, Jesse Hopper, Oscar Sanford, James P. Morgan. John Van Emburgh, Jr., gave bonds as assessor and collector; Mr. Young was appointed chosen freeholder, vice Mr. Reynolds, resigned; Mr. John Bell, Mr. Stephen Jeroloman, surveyors of highways; F. C. Watkins, treasurer and clerk; Cornelius Shephard, overseer of the poor.

1854.—Town Committee, William Seely (chairman), Jesse Hopper, Jacob Hoff, Ebenezer Sanford, Jr., and Oscar Sanford; Cornelius Shephard, assessor and collector; Joseph Ward, road master; Richard Wanamaker, Stephen K. Jeroloman, surveyors of highways; Nathaniel C. Auer, John Williams, commissioners of appeals; F. C. Watkins, town clerk.

1855.—Town Committee, Ebenezer Sanford, Jr. (chairman), Oscar Sanford, David J. Osborn, Leonard J. Seely and Garrett De Bann; John Van Emburgh, collector and assessor; Joseph Ward, overseer of the poor; Richard Wanamaker and John J. Maskers, surveyors of highways.

1856.—Not recorded in the archives of the town for some unaccountable reason.

1857.—Town Committee, John Van Emburgh (chairman), Peter R. Kip, William Tuers, John Pateman and Josiah Conly; Walter Rutherford, assessor; and Cornelius Shephard, constable; John Van Emburgh, surveyor of highways; F. C. Watkins, clerk; Abraham Harris, constable; and William Rutherford, school superintendent.

1858.—Township Committee, John Van Emburgh (chairman), William Tuers, John J. Masker, Abraham Harris (the fifth not recorded); Peter R. Kip and David J. Osborn, commissioners of appeals; Frederick C. Watkins, town clerk, since the decease of John S. Condit, George W. Douglass (appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the decease of William Watkins).

1859.—Town Committee, John Van Emburgh, Jr. (chairman), Hiram W. Davis, William Tuers, John J. Masker and Frederick Wright; John Van Emburgh was appointed treasurer; William S. Ogden, assessor and collector; Cornelius Shephard, constable.

We find in this year an opinion given by the present Secretary of State, Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, to the township committee, in the following language:

"The Collector of the Township should pay over the moneys he receives to the officers entitled to the positions thereof, as for school and County purposes, etc. And any balance in hand, after meeting all these demands, he should account for and pay over to the Township Committee at their risk and for their convenience, may appoint their own Treasurer and entrust him with such balance. The Town Superintendent gives bonds to be approved by the Township committee, and his accounts should be audited by them. His accounting is with the committee."

"Signed, FREDERICK T. FRELINGHUYSEN, CLERK."

"April 25, 1859."

The following notice appears in minutes of meeting held April 30, 1859, to wit:

"Came to the premises of subscriber on Friday, Oct. 23, 1859, one Brown C. W. The subscriber wants her taken away by the owner of such cow, if not taken away and all charges paid, if not done, I will sell her to pay for her keeping."

"Signed, JAMES TORNEY, HARRISON TWP."

"Nov. 3, 1859."

1860.—Town Committee, James Nolan (chairman), John Korb, Peter Terhune, Abel Seely, Josiah Conly; A. B. Stonehake (appointed town clerk, vice Dr. Douglas, resigned); Henry B. Sherman, school superintendent; John Murphy, overseer of the poor; and Cornelius Shephard, collector of arrears of taxes.

1861.—Town Committee, James Nolan (chairman), John Boyd, Jr., John Korb, Daniel Delaney, Abel Seely; William S. Ogden, collector and treasurer; Dr. George W. Douglas, town clerk; Abraham Harris and John J. Masker, commissioners of appeals.

1862.—Town Committee, Peter Kip (chairman), Oscar Sanford, Terrence O'Donnell, Nicolas Pfeiffer. (Patrick McAvney was appointed to act as committeeman instead of David O'Sullivan, who was elected, but refused to serve.)

1863.—Town Committee, Aaron Whitehead (chairman), Thomas McGrath, William Nicolls, Philip McAvney and Patrick Riordan; Cornelius Shephard constable; William Cunningham, town clerk; William Morrison, constable; Henry B. Sherman, superintendent of schools.

1864.—Town Committee, Aaron Whitehead, Charles Gilbert, Thomas McGrath and Oscar Sandford; Cornelius Shepherd, town clerk.

1865.—Judge of Election, Arant H. Schuyler; Town Clerk, Sylvester P. Case; Chosen Freeholder, Josiah Conley; Assessor, Stephen K. Jerolimian; Collector, Philip MacAvey; Town Superintendent of Schools, John Boyd, Jr.; Town Committee, Charles Gilbert, Ebenezer Sandford, Peter Arneson, Aaron Whitehead, Hugh W. Craig; Commissioners of Appeals, John Fullagher, David Pierson; Surveyors of Highways, John Van Emburgh and John Fullagher; Constables, Henry Newham, Joseph Hopwood, Cornelius Behan and Patrick W. Behan; Overseers of the Poor, William Pierson; Pound Masters, Edward Birdick, John Williams and Patrick Dolan; Road Masters, Henry K. Schuyler and N. N. Halstead.

1866.—Judge of Election, Arant H. Schuyler; Town Clerk, Sylvester P. Case; Chosen Freeholder, Charles J. Gilbert; Assessor, John Williams; Collector, Philip MacAvey; Town Superintendent, John Boyd, Jr.; Town Committee, John Fullagher, Ebenezer Sandford, John Wiseman, Terrence O'Donnell and Peter Arneson; Commissioners of Appeals, William S. Ogden, John J. Masker and John J. Phily; Surveyors of Highways, Patrick Smith and Squire Sandford; Constables, Edward Collins, Hugh Smith, Charles Gossett and John Mellon; Overseer of the Poor, William Pearson; Pound Masters, George Malone, William Fink, Alfred N. Raidley; Road Masters, Henry K. Schuyler and N. N. Halstead; Justice of the Peace, Stephen K. Jerolimian and Daniel Dehany.

1867.—Town Clerk, George Warren; Assessor, Michael Coyle; Collector, Michael Cogan; Chosen Freeholder, Hiram W. Davis; Town Committee, Peter Arneson, George Hutchinson, Terrence O'Donnell, John Pateman and Aaron Whitehead; Justice of the Peace, Sylvester P. Case; Commissioners of Appeals, Albert Schabel, John Bagan, Philip Bower; Constables, Charles Gossett, Joseph Hopwood, Cornelius Shepherd; Surveyors of Highways, John J. Masker and David O'Sullivan; Poor Master, William Roeser; Road Master, John Landrigan and Peter Anton; Pound Masters, Martin Volk, Patrick Dolan; road tax, ten dollars; poor tax, two hundred dollars, and school tax two dollars per capita. George Hutchinson tendered his resignation, and Mr. Nichols was appointed to fill his place on the town committee.

1868.—Town Clerk, Daniel Capran; Assessor, John Rohan; Collector, Michael Cogan; Chosen Freeholder, Hiram W. Davis; Town Committee, Abraham Phelps, Michael Cochran, John Card, James Terhune and Lawrence Burns; Justice of the Peace, James W. Thompson; Commissioners of Appeals, Albert Schabel, Thomas McGrath, Hiram W. Davis; Constables, Joseph Hopwood, Patrick Brannagan, Jacob Boyer, Surveyor of Highways, Terrence O'Donnell, Charles Gossett; Poor Master, Michael J. Carey; Road Master, James Tierny; Judge of Election, William Condon; Pound Master, Joseph Hopwood; Clerk of Election, Charles J. Gilbert.

1869.—Town Committee, John O'Sullivan, George Hutchinson, John Pateman, Christopher Kennedy, Abel Schabel and William Condon; Lawriter, Eagan was elected town clerk; George Hall, collector; James Costello was elected treasurer.

1870.—Committee, Peter Wilhelm, Philip Mulligan and Charles E. Gilbert, with John O'Sullivan, John Pateman and Abel Schabel holding over since the previous year; Town Clerk, Lawrence Eagan; Assessor, John Rohan; Collector, George Hall; Chosen Freeholder, Aaron Phelps; Superintendent of Schools, William Tierny; Judge of Election, Michael Cogan; Overseer of the Poor, John Dillon; Constables, Edwin Collins, Reuben Whitehead, Henry Newham and Louis Schaber; Commissioners of Appeal, David O'Sullivan, William Nicholas, Thomas McGrath; Pound Keepers, George Malone and Richard Nagel, John Pateman was elected pharmacist of the Town Council, David O'Sullivan was unanimously elected town treasurer.

1871 and 1872.—Committee, Samuel Darling, Peter Hauck and J. G. Burger for two years, and James Felix G. MacAvey for one year; Lawrence Eagan as town clerk; Assessor, Michael Coyle; Collector, Patrick Lynch; Chosen Freeholder, Michael Cogan; Overseer of Streets and Highways, James Tierny; Judge of Election, James Caffrey; Overseer of the Poor, John Mellon; Justice of the Peace, John O'Sullivan; Constables, Edwin Collin, Myles McSweeney, George Woerner and William P. Bayrer; Commissioners of Appeals, William C. Munde, James Keegan, William Lynch; Pound Keepers, William Gurling and Richard Nagel; John Korb was elected treasurer.

1872.—Council for the two-year term, David O'Sullivan, Peter Wilhelm and Philip MacAvey; Assessor, John Rohan; Collector, Charles Smith; Chosen Freeholder, Michael Cogan; Justices of the Peace, William Kenny, Daniel Capran, William Roeser; Judge of Election, James Caffrey; Overseer of the Poor, James Tierny; Constables, John Rice, Stephen McGarvey, Edwin Collins, Christopher Kennell; and James Conklin; Commissioners of Appeals, William Lynch, William Condon, Thomas Brady; Pound-Keeper, Richard Nagel; Henry Roth, treasurer.

1873.—Chosen Freeholder, John Rohan; Town Clerk, Lawrence Eagan; Assessor, Philip MacAvey; Collector, Joseph Coyle; Surveyor of Highways, Charles M. O'Brien and Timothy Burns; Pound-Keepers, George E. Woerner and Richard Nagel; Ward Officers—First Ward: for Aldermen, J. J. Mulligan for two years and Freeman Bowers for one year;

Ward Clerk, Patrick McCabo; School Trustee, Michael J. Carney; Inspectors of Election, M. Cockran and J. Gleason; Constable, James Conklin; Commissioner of Appeals, Daniel Lynch. Second Ward: Constable, William Evans; Ward Clerk, James MacAvoy; Inspectors of Election, James Caffrey and William Tierny; Commissioner of Appeals, Patrick Riordan; Alderman for two years, Bryan Henry. Third Ward: Commissioner of Appeals, John Van Emburgh; Inspectors of Election, Mark Williams and Abraham Van Winkle; Constable, George Woerner. Fourth Ward: Aldermen, William Walsh for two years, Philip Mulligan, one year; Constable, John Dwyer; School Trustee, Timothy Brosnan; Ward Clerk, Michael Lawless; Inspectors of Election, Charles O'Brien and Thomas Swift; Commissioner of Appeals, Peter Lyons.

1874.—First Ward: Councilman, John O'Sullivan; School Trustee, Michael J. Carney; Assessor James Prendergast; Commissioner of Appeals, Michael Ford; Inspectors of Election, Dennis, Dan and Thomas McGuire; Constable, James Conklin; Ward Clerk, E. M. Reilly. Second Ward: Councilman, Patrick Riordan; School Trustee, Joseph Morton; Assessor, Patrick McKenna; Ward Clerk, George Hall, Jr.; Inspectors of Election, James Caffrey and Eli Hobson; Constable, Edwin Collins; Commissioner of Appeals, David O'Sullivan. Third Ward: Councilman, Ebenezer Sandford; Assessor, Mark Williams; School Trustee, David J. Kerr; Commissioner of Appeals, Charles Smith; Inspectors of Election, Abraham Van Winkle, Henry W. Newlon; Constable, George Woerner. Fourth Ward: Councilman, Christopher Kennedy; Assessor, Anthony O'Malley; School Trustee, Timothy Brosnan; Constable, John Dwyer; Commissioner of Appeals, Peter Hauck; Inspectors of Election, Patrick Fagan and Thomas Hines; Ward Clerk, Stephen Riordan; William Walsh was elected president of the Board of Aldermen.

1875.—Aldermen: First Ward, J. J. Mulligan; Second Ward, Bernard Henry; Third Ward, John Kerr; Fourth Ward, Thomas J. Swift. School Trustees, Andrew Michael Rhatigan, David J. Kerr and William Lynch; Assessors, J. F. Prendergast, Patrick McKenna, David J. Kerr and Anthony O'Malley; Commissioners of Appeals, Joseph Morton, Thomas Kane, Frederick Frank, James Terhune; Constables, James Conklin, Alexander Southerland, George Woerner, William Kenny; James Caffrey, overseer of the poor; Surveyors of Highways, Andrew McGrath and Philip Kearns; Pound Master, George Woerner; Richard Nagel, justice of the peace; Joseph Morton, collector of taxes; Lawrence Fagan, town clerk.

1876.—Aldermen: First Ward, John O'Sullivan; Second Ward, David O'Sullivan; Third Ward, William J. Tierny; Fourth Ward, Thomas Hines. Assessors, John R. Cullen, George Hall, John W. Herman, Patrick Tierny; School Trustees, Philip Kearns, Michael Rhatigan, David J. Kerr, Sr., John Mellon; Constables, Mathew Reilly, Edwin Collins, George Woerner and Caleb Coakley; Commissioners of Appeals, Peter White, Francis Mason, Henry Trapper and Philip McManus; John Fagan, poor master; George Woerner and Richard Nagel, pound masters; Surveyors of Highways, Andrew McGrath and Florence Fitzpatrick; E. M. Reilly, treasurer; Lawrence Fagan, clerk.

1877.—Aldermen: First Ward, J. J. Mulligan; Second Ward, Bernard Henry; Third Ward, John Kerr; Fourth Ward, Thomas J. Swift. Assessors, James Sullivan, George Hall, Sr., John Horrigan and Anthony O'Malley; School Trustees, Philip Kearney, John H. Cowerford, Lawrence Groschauser and Allen J. Scott; Constables, Caleb Coakley, Edwin Collins, George Woerner and Richard P. Alwood; Commissioners of Appeals, Thomas McGrath, Joseph Spitznagle, Frederick W. Frank and John Murray; Surveyors of Highways, James Mahoney and Philip Mulligan; Overseer of the Poor, Joseph Haller; Town Clerk, Lawrence Fagan; Treasurer, Edward M. Reilly.

1878.—Aldermen: First Ward, John O'Sullivan; Second Ward, Michael Phatique; Third Ward, Henry W. Newlon; Fourth Ward, John Fagan. School Trustees, Thomas Keegan, John H. Conford, Lawrence Groschauser and Francis H. Coyle; Assessors, William Socoly, Henry E. Roth, John Millet; Commissioners of Appeals, James Nugent, Frederick W. Frank and James Coburn; Constables, Edwin Collins, George Waldner and Richard P. Aylwood; Overseer of the Poor, James Foster; Surveyors of Highways, Thomas Leen and John Creighton; Police Justice, Philip Mulligan.

1879.—Aldermen: First Ward, John Rohan; Second Ward, John H. Conmelford; Third Ward, John Kerr; Fourth Ward, Thomas J. Swift. School Trustees, Thomas Keegan, Arthur Fitzpatrick, Rawson Hargreaves and John Malone; Assessors, William Bower, Patrick McKenna, Henry E. Roth and John Millet; Constables, Mathew Murray, Edwin Collins, George Woerner and John Keenan; Commissioners of Appeals, Thomas Bulger, David J. Osborne, James Coburn and John Kusler; Stephen Shannon, overseer of the poor; Surveyors of Highways, Edward F. McDonald and Philip Mulligan; Clerk, Lawrence Fagan; E. M. Reilly, town treasurer.

1880.—Aldermen: Thomas Geary, Patrick Brannagan, Henry W. Newlon and Francis H. Coyle; School Trustees, Thomas Bulger, Arthur Fitzpatrick, Stephen D. Hall and John Malone; Assessors, John Lynch, William Nicholas, John W. Harriman and John Millet; Commissioners of Appeals, Francis Cane, John Kusler, Sr., Thomas Austin and Peter Schumaker; Constables, Mathew Murray, Edwin Collins, George Woerner and Luke Reilly; Overseer of the Poor, James Foster; Overseers of Highways, Michael Keefe and Lawrence Groschauser; Lawrence Fagan, clerk; E. M. Reilly, town treasurer.

1881.—No record.

1882.—Aldermen: First Ward, Thomas Geary; Second Ward, Patrick Brannagan; Third Ward, Henry W. Newbon; two years and John Kerr to fill vacancy, vice Alderman Williams resigned, one year, Fourth Ward, Francis H. Coyle. School Trustees, Thomas Cully, Edward J. Rice, Gustave Baudendestal and Bernard Walsh; Assessors, William Bowery, John Wade, Henry E. Roke and John Millet; Commissioners of Appeal, William Murray, John Kusler, Richard Whiting and Patrick Lynch; Constables, James Moore, Francis McNiny; Overseer of the Poor, James Foster; Overseers of Highways, Charles J. Gilbert and Alexander Stork; Joseph Haller, clerk; E. F. McDonald, treasurer.

1883.—Aldermen: First Ward, Michael Cogan; Second Ward, John Wade; Third Ward, Richard Whiting; Fourth Ward, Anthony O'Malley. Assessors, William Bowers, Michael Collins, Henry E. Roth and John Millet; School Trustees, John Lynch, William McNally, Gustave Baudendestal and Bernard J. Riley; Commissioners of Appeals, Henry Joaschkie, Joseph Spitznagle, Frederick W. Frank, Frederick Gossert, Jr.; Constables, Peter Rudden, Michael Carroll, Francis McNiny, and Joseph Schlickmeyer; Overseer of the Poor, John Mellon; Surveyors of Highways, Charles J. Gilbert and Cornelius Shepherd; Edward J. Grace, Jr., town clerk; E. F. McDonald, treasurer.

1884.—Aldermen: First Ward, Thos. H. Keegan; Second Ward, Edward J. Rice; Third Ward, William H. Wilhelm; Fourth Ward, John Callahan. School Trustees, Robert Fleming, William McNally, Louis Foder and Bernard J. Riley; Assessors, Philip Kearns, Joseph Morton, Henry E. Roth, Joseph Coburn; Commissioners of Appeals, Patrick J. Conroy, Joseph Spitznagle, Frederick Frank, Frederick Gossert, Jr.; Overseer of the Poor, John Mellon; Surveyors of Highways, Charles J. Gilbert and Peter Schumaker; Pound-Keepers, Richard Nagel and Francis McNiny; Edward F. McDonald, town treasurer; Edward J. Grace, Jr., town clerk.

Fire Department.—In 1879 there was built on a site adjacent to the Town Hall, and opposite the present site of St. Pius' Church, at the corner of Third Street and Jersey Street, an engine-house for the reception of the new steam-engine, purchased that year, mainly through the efforts of Alderman Michael J. Rhatigan, chairman of the Common Council fire committee. A Fire Department was duly organized and named the Swift Fire-Engine Company, in honor of Thomas J. Swift, then president of the Common Council. The town accordingly took great pride and honor in its engine. Chief McIntee was the first officer duly elected to that position, and was succeeded by Chief Coburn. Fires were frequent during the existence of the Fire Department, and a great many fires of an insignificant character were supposed to be the creation of some incendiary. The department was regularly organized into an engine company, hook-and-ladder company and salvage corps and received great patronage from the Common Council and generous indorsement from the community at large. The engine-house, through some agency not yet definitely determined, together with all the property of the Fire Department, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss to the town of twenty-five thousand dollars. Many efforts were made to detect the culprits of the supposed incendiary work, but failed. Since the destruction of the fire apparatus the town is under the protection of the efficient Newark Fire Department, which has been seldom called upon, as fires are much less frequent than formerly.

Educational.—East Newark, from its pioneer settlement up to the present, would appear to be well supplied with means of education. The first public school was situated on the Copper-Mine road, and was fostered and encouraged by the enterprising and public-spirited Schuyler family. The old jewel-factory, a part of the present Edison works, was the parent and predecessor of the present public school-house, which was built in 1873. The present public school is situated on Washington Street, on a well elevated location, which would seem to be specially selected for its hygienic advantages as well as for its central position. It can accommodate six hundred pupils, and is at present, and since Sept. 1, 1873, in charge of Professor John Dwyer as principal and James Prendergast as vice-principal and six lady teacher assistants. The school has a fine reputation from State and county superintendents, and citizens generally, for the merit of the education imparted and the zeal in the discharge of duty of the staff. The average daily attendance of the school for the year ending August, 1874, was one hundred and twenty-two, and the total number enrolled two hundred and three. The average daily attendance for the year ending August, 1884, was three hundred and sixty-six, and total number enrolled six hundred and eighty-one. These figures speak louder than words for the rapid development and growth of the school, and of the town generally, during the above decade.

St. Pius' Roman Catholic School is attached to St. Pius' Church and is under the control of the Sisters of Charity, aided by a male principal, at present Professor Doherty. The attendance at this school exceeds in some measure that of the public school, as the Catholic population is largely in the majority.

The Convent of the Sacred Heart, on Jersey Street, is another educational institution controlled by the Sisters of Charity, where music, language, and other accomplishments are taught.

The German-English School, on Hebron Street, supported by the German citizens, is an old and respected educational institution of Harrison, and is at present very largely attended, as it is superintended by Professor Lorenzen, a highly cultured gentleman of large experience in teaching.

Professor Noble keeps a select academy near his house, on Fourth Street, where many of the best citizens send their children. Mr. Noble is a highly qualified teacher, being a former principal of one of our large public schools. With such school facilities, it is safe to say that the educational interests of Harrison are in a healthy condition. The national aid recently extended to education will, fortunately, not reach Harrison, as it has none within its limits between the ages of eleven and eighteen unable to read and write, and for this reason is not entitled to one cent of national money for educational purposes. The above fact concerning the literacy of Harrison was ascertained in the taking of the school census in June, 1884. In the public school is held regularly every winter, a night school, which is mainly instrumental in establishing the fact of no illiteracy existing in Harrison.

Churches.—ST. PIUS' CHURCH, representing the largest congregation in Harrison, is situated on Jersey Street, corner of Third. Services are held at present in the church five times every Sunday morning, with large congregations each time. This is for the purpose, as the church is small, of giving all the people an opportunity of hearing mass. The present pastor is Father Maurice O'Connor, assisted by Father Brady, both young and energetic and able expounders of the gospel. The church was built in 1872, but is at present insufficient to meet the growing demands of the large parish; hence efforts are being made to push to completion the large church, the foundations of which are laid, on the new church site on Harrison Avenue. As the old church is nearly out of debt it is ~~not~~ too sanguine to expect that under the able administration of the present pastor a new church, grand in proportions, will ere long be erected on the new foundation.

St. Pius parish is an offshoot from the Cathedral parish, Newark. Rev. Father McGann was the first pastor, succeeded by Rev. Father Hogan, Rev. Father McCarthy and the present incumbent, Father O'Connor.

RUTHERFORD MEMORIAL CHURCH, representing the Episcopalian population of Harrison, is an offshoot of Trinity Church, Newark. It was built on Third Street, and served its useful purposes for a long period. It has, however, been recently superseded by the erection of a beautiful church, called Christ's Church, on Fourth Street, which is not only an ornament to religion, and an honor to the Episcopalians of the town, but is also an ornament in an architectural sense to the town at large. The present rector of the church is Rev. Dr. Carver, who is highly esteemed by the community for his kindly disposition and Christian virtues, and is also widely known as a preacher of great power and an orator of acknowledged ability.

THE METHODIST CHURCH is a fine, imposing structure, corner of Fourth Street and Harrison Avenue, and is the pride of the Methodists of Harrison. It was built in 1876, and is ornamented with a fine spire easily seen from a long distance and from the boats as they pass back and forth through Newark Bay, being one of the means of recognizing the exact location of Harrison by excursionists. The present pastor is the Rev. Dr. Seran, an able preacher and popular Christian gentleman.

Societies.—HARRISON LODGE, No. 120, I. O. O. F., meets Wednesday evenings in East Newark. The lodge was instituted by Grand Master John W. Orr, Aug. 16, 1865, with the following charter members, who had taken their cards from Columbian Lodge, No. 117, Newark, on the 27th of July previous: Richard Jones, John Petter, William H. Casler, Francis B. Eager, Richard Powell, Cornelius V. Poland. The institution ceremony was performed in the hall of the parent lodge in the afternoon, and in the evening of the same day, the first officers were publicly installed in the Methodist Church at East Newark by Grand Representative Theodore A. Ross, who was deputized for the occasion. The first officers were: N. G., Richard Jones; V. G., William H. Casler; Rec. Sec., Cornelius V. Poland; Per. Sec., Richard Powell; Treas., John Petter. The present officers are: N. G., Mark Williams; P. G. V. G., Henry E. Rothe; Rec. Sec., John L. Patterson; Per. Sec., Lewis Fader; Treas., William Black. Harrison was the first and only lodge in the city and vicinity to invest its capital in a building of its own. It erected a large Odd-Fellows' Hall, and for several years the members were aided very materially by Harrison Rebekah Degree Lodge, No. 12.

THE CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATION was organized in 1873, and has continued a flourishing existence. The pastor of St. Pius' Church is president of the society, but the vice-president generally occupies the chair. The association numbers nearly one hundred young men at present. Their rooms and hall are situated on Jersey Street, near the Sacred Heart Academy. This hall is now entirely clear of debt, and the young men are bending their energies to establish a first-class library, which effort will, in the near future, be crowned with success. The association is one of the standing conservative institutions of the town, and is destined to play no small part in shaping the future of Harrison.

THE CATHOLIC BENEVOLENT LEGION was organized Oct. 5, 1883, with sixteen charter members, viz.: Rev. Pierce McCarthy, John Dwyer, Michael Bender, Peter J. Goodman, Patrick Toohy, John Condon, Bernard J. Murphy, Bartley Smith, James McCloskey, Michael Kierman, Patrick Bridges, Francis Sherlock, John Gillen, Patrick Maher, Patrick McAvney, James J. Kenny. The association numbers forty members in good standing. The legion is a co-operative insurance society, founded by the Supreme Council, who reside in Brooklyn, and chartered under the laws of New York State. There are six grades, ranging in age from eighteen to sixty-five years, and in insurance from five hundred dollars to five thousand dollars. The present officers are: President, John Dwyer; Vice-President, Patrick Toohy; Secretary, Peter J. Goodman; Treasurer, John Condon, Collector, Bernard J. Murphy; Marshal, Patrick Maher; Chancellor, James McCloskey; Guard, Patrick McAviney; Orator, Michael J. Bender. The council is known as Assumption Council, No. 42, Catholic Benevolent Legion, and holds its meetings on the second and fourth Mondays of each month at St. Pius School hall.

The Temperance Society is at present (July, 1884) commanding the close attention of Harrisonians, as it is making a war upon saloon business on the Sabbath-day. This organization numbers at present some one hundred and fifty members, with Patrick Wallace as president, Thomas Mulligan secretary, and Patrick Clerk treasurer. At the State Convention of Temperance Societies, held at Trenton, June 28, 1883, Rev. Luther O'Connor, of Harrison, was elected State president. The Harrison delegates represented the banner society in numbers on that occasion. If the war against rum-selling is prosecuted with energy and determination Harrison will become a model city on the Sabbath day, a consummation devoutly wished for by all good Christians and law-abiding citizens.

THE ST VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY is doing much annually to alleviate the distress of the indigent people of the town.

Industries of Harrison.—Harrison is most favorably situated for manufactures and industries of all kinds. Its immense water front along the Passaic is destined to become the abiding home of commerce of all kinds, and its numerous railroad facilities affording rapid means of travel and transportation of merchandise is calculated to develop Harrison into a great city at no distant day. Everything seems to favor the sanguine estimate of its future. Indeed, if we judge of the future by the recent past,—and all philosophers agree that experience is the great teacher, that we can best judge of the future by illuminating it with its lamp of experience,—we are compelled to agree with those who draw such sanguine pictures of the future growth and development of Harrison into a large manufacturing centre. The important industries that have found an abiding home in Harrison within the past few years is a strong indication that others will quickly follow and take up the vacant and available sites, and place on them mills and factories, and so contribute to the formation of the great city of the future within the boundaries of the Hackensack and Passaic Rivers. Herewith are described some of the most important mills, manufactories and industries of Harrison.

J. Lagowitz & Co.'s trunk-factory is located at the junction of the Pennsylvania Railroad and First Street, on the bank of the Passaic River. His first factory was built at Newark in 1844, and destroyed by fire, and the Harrison building were subsequently erected, at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars, and has been experiencing steady enlargement until its present value is vastly above this figure. His factory employs some four hundred persons, and has a capacity of, and regularly turns out two thousand trunks every week, and one thousand dozen bags. It uses in the manufacture of boxes, roughly made, to inclose the trunks and bags during transportation to New York, two million feet of lumber. All the trimmings, frame, and everything used in the manufacture of the trunks and bags is prepared from the raw material in a department of the factory. The factory is one of the prominent features of the section of Harrison in which it is located.

North of Lagowitz's factory are the stone-works of J. J. Spurr, wheresome of the most beautiful marble is polished, cut and shaped into all kinds of styles, and shipped to all parts of the country. The Passaic River fronts the works.

Southward along the river-front is the large Royal Hamburg Cordovan tanning establishment, known as Hahn & Stumpf, but recently, since the death of Mr. Hahn, is controlled by his brother-in-law, Jacob Stumpf. The building is surrounded by Jersey street on the north, Warren on the south and Dey Street on the west, and occupies over an acre of ground. The company was organized in 1862, and turns out five hundred sides of leather per week and employs from fifty to sixty persons constantly. Mr. Walter Howard is book-keeper. The building is three hundred and twenty-five feet long by thirty feet wide. Cordovan leather of every description is manufactured here, also English grain cow-hide and alligator leather. One hundred alligator-hides are converted into leather every week.

The Thomas A. Edison Lamp Company occupies the buildings formerly occupied by the Peters Manufacturing Company. Peters Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of oil-cloths of all kinds, built these works in 1877; but, frequent fires having completely destroyed a great part of the buildings, the business was abandoned. After some time Edison, of Menlo Park fame, rented the buildings, improved and enlarged the same, and is now manufacturing his newly-invented electric lamps. There are over two hundred persons employed by Mr. Edison, and the business is in a flourishing condition. Mr. Edison has attained world-wide fame for his invention. He is yet a young man, and may startle the world once more with some other discovery or invention of his fertile brain. He is possessed of the genius which all great men of history had, that which invariably accompanies constant toil and indefatigable industry. The Edison Company commenced work in Harrison in 1880, and promises to become a permanent industry of the growing city.

South of Warren Street, between that street and the Morris and Essex Railroad, is situated the Woodward

Steam-Lump and Steam-Heating Company, doing a prosperous business.

South of Centre Street bridge and of the Pennsylvania Railroad is situated the stone-yard, worked by machinery, of Mr. Reilly, of Newark. This establishment has constantly on hand a large supply of orders from all parts of the country, as the work done has a reputation not to be excelled by any other similar concern in any part of the country.

The Pennsylvania Railroad shops, employing over fifteen hundred persons, situated at the northeastern extremity of Kearny township, were, some sixteen years ago, situated in Harrison, adjacent to the present East Newark Station. They were burned, and subsequently rebuilt in their present location.

Stammer & Lufey's brass and copper wire and wire-cloth factory is situated on Passaic Avenue, opposite Hebben Street. This is a very conservative institution, and any approach to the same, either by a local historian or newspaper reporter, would be considered in the light of an "inquisitorial" attack on the secrets of the business. The factory is one of the very few of its kind in the country, and was erected in July, 1866. The present value of the work done annually may be estimated at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, but the actual capacity is double these figures. There are forty-five persons employed. One of the buildings was burned some years ago, after which the entire works were renovated and enlarged to their present capacity. These works were an offshoot from the paternal works, at present in operation at Belleville, a suburb of the city of Newark.

The next factory of note on the north side of Harrison Avenue is Stewart Hartshorn's shade-roller manufactory, located at the corner of President Street and Grant Avenue. It was built in 1870 and cost about twenty thousand dollars. This factory gives employment to about two hundred persons, and turns out one hundred dozen shade-rollers daily. It is one of the very prosperous institutions of East Newark, and has made its proprietor, Mr. Hartshorn, who at present resides at Short Hills, N. J., very wealthy.

John D. King's dye establishment, on Passaic Avenue, was built in 1870 and cost about twenty thousand dollars. It is capable of manufacturing eight thousand pounds per week, and employs eighteen persons.

The insulated wire works recently founded east of Davis Avenue, on Cross Street, and between that street and the Erie Railroad, were in 1884 only in their infancy, but promises to be one of the great industries of Harrison, and to give employment to a great many persons. The buildings are surrounded by a high inclosure and a gate-keeper guards the entrance. Ingress or egress can only be secured by positive business with the institution or its officers. Mr. Dallas is the superintendent.

Peter Hauck & Co.'s large brewery is situated on Harrison Avenue, between Fifth Street and Washington Street. The brewery was built in 1880 to take the place of the old buildings, which were consumed by fire the same year. New machinery has been recently erected in the building for refrigerating purposes, which entirely supercedes the necessity for ice. The machinery of these works was manufactured by Becket & McDowell, of Arlington, N. J. It is rather paradoxical to call the machine a refrigerating one, for, while in close proximity to the machine itself, in the engine-room, one experiences the torrid temperature of the tropics, while passing through the building one experiences the cold of the frigid zone; this will have the effect of cheapening the ice crop, as the machine will stop the immense brewery demand for the article through the country.

It is worth noting that the first factory built and operated in Harrison was located on the spot where St. Pius' Church now stands. It was a japanning factory, and was owned by a Mr. Young, from Newark. It gave employment to many of the older residents, and was finally consumed by fire some twenty years ago, after which the site came into the possession of St. Pius' parish, which first erected thereon a school building, which was afterwards enlarged, in 1873, to the present dimensions of school and church.

The gas-house of Harrison is situated on Passaic Avenue, and is a branch of the gas corporation of Newark. The streets are well lighted and also the public buildings, and gas is to be found in all the stores and most of the private residences.

Kerr & Co.'s spool-cotton factory is also situated on Passaic Avenue, at which a large number of persons are employed. In the same vicinity are the machine-works of George A. Old, which turns out some fine work.

The Greenfield Steam-Engine Works, situated corner of Fifth and Cross Streets, East Newark, were built, the new factory in 1882, and are owned and incorporated by the brothers, William Greenfield and George Greenfield; date of charter of the old works on Fourth Street, April 1, 1874. The business was started in the Hope Machine-Works on Fourth Street, and in April, 1882, was moved to the new building corner of Fifth and Cross Streets. The main building is forty by eighty feet, with an extension for the boiler-room, eighteen feet square, and is considered the best lighted and ventilated shop in this vicinity. The lower floor has a fourteen-foot ceiling, and the upper floor twelve feet. It has windows on all the four sides, and sufficient ground has been secured to prevent the obstruction of light and air. The principal production of these works is indicated by the name of the business, and as such it has a national reputation, having engines in most of the States and Territories, and also in Mexico, Cuba, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and many parts of South America. They also manufacture the Riley Patent Foot-Press and many other articles of great value, and their work is of the very first quality. The firm is destined at no distant day to enlarge the present buildings and become the most popular machine-works in this part of the country.

H. M. Davis

There are in Harrison some veterans of the Mexican war, among whom may be mentioned the popular Justice Collins. The horse-cars, which had ceased running in 1882, resumed their usual trips in 1881. The company have laid excellent tracks and built spacious stables in Harrison. The people find this a great accommodation which gives a healthy impetus to the prosperity of the town. The future historian of Harrison and Kearny will no doubt be chronicling the industries of the great city which is destined to grow up in this location, so favorably situated for such development.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

HIRAM W. DAVIS.

Aaron Davis, the grandfather of the subject of this biographical sketch, was born Oct. 23, 1775, and on the 10th of July, 1796, married to Mary W. Williamson, whose birth occurred July 15, 1776. Their children were Rebecca, Eliza, Rebecca (2d), Mark W., Harriet, Charles R., Jabue and John A. Aaron Davis resided in Hope, Warren Co., N. J., where his death occurred on the 27th of July, 1839, in his sixty-fourth year. His son, Mark W., was born March 4, 1804, in Warren County, his place of residence until his later removal to Harrison township, in Hudson County. He was, on the 9th of February, 1826, united in marriage to Ann Read, of the same township, and had children,—Irene M. (Mrs. George W. Cross), Hiram W., Jerome and Jerome B. Hiram W. of this number was born Feb. 9, 1829, in Hope township, the scene of his youthful experiences. In the year 1839, he removed with his parents to Harrison township, and there continued at school until his father fitted an establishment for diving and wrecking, when his son joined him in an effort to recover the lost steamer "Lexington," in which they were partially successful. On the culmination of this enterprise Hiram W. for a while continued his studies, meanwhile assisting his father in various business undertakings, and finding his time and attention much occupied with interests of a general character. Mr. Davis had invested much of his surplus earnings in land, all of which was eventually inherited by his son, the subject of this biography. The care of this large property absorbed his time and precluded the conducting of other business operations aside from the purchase and sale of real estate. In 1873, Mr. Davis disposed of much of this land to the East Newark Land Company, reserving certain lands in East Newark and three acres now the site of the family residence. On the same tract is erected the Davis Memorial Church, in which Mr. Davis manifested much interest and made liberal contributions. Hiram W. Davis was married on the 24th of November, 1861, to Miss Emma L., daughter of David Sandford, of Hudson County. Their children are Mark W., Mary Celeste, Annie E. (Mrs. George L. Blake), William Jerome, Mar. Coates (2d), Irene M. (Mrs. Theodore Cuyler) Now and Emma C. (Mrs. Edward Palmer). Mr. Davis was formerly a Whig in politics, and later became a Republican, though his ultimate allegiance was to the principles of the Democracy. He was an active worker in the field of politics, and held the office of freeholder for successive terms during important periods. He was influential in obtaining a free bridge between Essex and Hudson Counties, and was also a member of the building committee for the erection of the Hudson County Penitentiary. He was one of the incorporators of the East Newark Gas-Light Company, and active in other public enterprises requiring both executive ability and public spirit. Mr. Davis possessed a genial nature, was benevolent without ostentation, and enjoyed the esteem and confidence of the public until his death, Aug. 22, 1876.

CHAPTER XLIV. TOWN OF UNION.

General View of the Town.—This compact German settlement covers a limited area of territory, extending, in its main dimensions, from Bull's Ferry Avenue, on the east, to Bergen Turnpike in part, and Bergenwood or Dalletytown road, on the west; on the north is Union township; the south, West Hoboken township.

The boundaries, under the original act, were to a small extent changed by adding a triangular-shaped plot, bounded by the Bergen turnpike at Cox's Corners, the southerly line of Louis Becker's land and the Bergenwood road. The area here added included Lewis Street, or Pennsylvania Avenue, and what is called Durham Avenue, as they are opened to the Bergen turnpike. The town has for its westerly neighbor the township of North Bergen, and for its easterly the township of Weehawken.

It was set off March 29, 1864, and dashed at once ahead upon a career of improvement. An inventory of the properties of the town, recorded at page 9 of the second annual report, shows,—

School-houses, with three lots	$ 4,000 00
School-house furniture	100 00
Town hall furniture	100 00
Engine-house and two lots	400 00
Fire Department apparatus	200 00
Indian Pond lots	100 00
Treasury balance	100 00
Total amount, excluding tax-payers' taxes	$ 5,800 00
5,000 not yet collected	$ 14,500 00

At the first charter election of the town of Union the following officers were chosen :

Town Clerk, Wm. Moll; Board of Councilmen, Robert E. Gardner, George Fassel, Christian Rickert, John M. Myr, James Wiggins, Daniel Sturm, Assessor, Wm. Moll; Collector, John Reinhardt, Jr.; Overseer of the Poor, Fred. Etzold; Constable, Charles Stahl; Treasurer, James Gardner, Overseer of Streets and Highways, Christian Bault; Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Charles Siedhof; Chosen Freeholder, John Gardner; Pound-keeper, John Reinhardt, Sr.; Judge of Election, George H. Mann; Commissioners of Appeals, Conrad Woerner, Henry Meigs, Henry Bell.

The receipts of the town from all sources from March 23, 1865, to April 1, 1866 (the close of the first fiscal year), made a total of $29,305.01; and the disbursements, including $3617.91 paid for support of the public school during the same period, to April 1, 1866, made a total of $28,599.95. Expenses on military account, denominated "war debt and interest," were $19,261.82, in addition to an amount of $696.51, paid on account of Union township volunteer bonds.

During the years 1864-65 the representative in the Board of Chosen Freeholders from this town was John Gardner, and in 1876, '67 and '68, Frederick Etzold. While yet part of Union township the latter's representative in the board was from this locality in 1861-62, being Jacob Schweitzer, who resigned in the second year, John Gardner taking his place in December, 1862, and following him was Cornelius Van Vorst, in 1863. The Board of Councilmen attesting the annual report, before referred to, are Robert E. Gardner, Henry J. Rottmann, James Wiggins, Christian Rickert, Daniel Sturm, Carl Meyenberg, John R. Wiggins, town clerk. The same collector who served the township of Union in 1863 was the earliest collector for this town. The school superintendent, Charles Siedhof, served in township and in town.

A local resident, removing from Philadelphia, and taking up his abode corner of Durar and Kossuth Streets in 1863, refers to the streets and avenues at that period as raw and rough, being then neither graded nor improved, and sidewalks not flagged. The largest building at that time was Schweitzer's brewery. The business of the town about that time, including theatrics and picnics, was transacted at Mitchell's or at Xavier Stoppel's summer resort. Everything was more country-like, and rural scenery won the visitor's notice. Trees were more numerous than at present, and the approach to the hill during the autumn, when the foliage displayed variously tinted leaves (crimson and yellow the prevailing colors), could not be excelled.

Earliest Aspects.—All the older inhabitants whose recollection takes in this territory mention a small number of residents here sixty years ago. Much of the domain was a dense woods. The remembrances of three or four veterans and the traditions of others agree in the brief chronicles given. On the east side of the area were the families of Gardner and of Lyons.

A dwelling near the Indian Pond was occupied by one Whitehead, then Zuel, and then Cantelo. Farther to the west, on Bergenwood road, lived Van Vorst. To the extreme west, within the area added to the town after set off from Union township, was the dwelling of John Burnet. Quite a variety of recollections have survived concerning these families.

Burnet was employed at the ferry then plying between New York City and this side of the river, of which more will be mentioned when Weehawken is considered. The daughter of Burnet, who occupied the location many years after his death, died but a few years ago, never having married. Van Vorst, father and son, cultivated a few acres of land. The late Cornelius Van Vorst, who died at the homestead a few years ago, was a justice of the peace within the town, and, as was before stated, represented the township of Union in the county board in 1863. Early in life he was a wheelwright, having his shop near his dwelling, a building that stood many years on Bergenwood road. Mr. Van Vorst had a son Garret, whom he survived, and another son, Cornelius, who is still living.

Samuel Whitehead cultivated but little of the land more than a garden spot. He had a wife, but no children. Zule, a Scotchman, had one son and three daughters, the girls often working in the corn-fields like so many men. Zule had the land around him cleared of trees, and went more extensively into cultivation than his predecessor. An old resident who remembers Zule well alludes to devotional services at his house under the ministrations of Rev. Mr. Demerest, then officiating in this latitude. Mr. Zule had a great admiration for vocal music; his own ear, however, was not a sufficient prompter to variety,—he himself would sing every hymn to the same tune.

Cantelo is remembered by a considerable number of the senior inhabitants. One refers to a variety of cherries and to his fine peaches another, "It was the first place I ever tasted celery."

An old inhabitant remarks that Lyons, whose wife was from Gloucester, N. J., had two sons,—James and Jacob. Jacob was a ship carpenter. One daughter married a Mr. Clinton; the others were named Margaret, Letitia and Mary. The wife of the senior Cornelius Van Vorst was a daughter of Letitia, whose husband's name we could not learn. The farm of Mr. Lyons was cultivated, as was also that of Gardner. Van Vorst owned a slave named Ben. Gardner owned one also called Cuff. Ben mowed salt hay every summer at Secaucus for his master, who kept a horse, a yoke of oxen and several cows. The negro Cuff perished in the cold weather while on a spree, in 1821; the other darkey, Ben, lived to be an old man. He was uncommonly spry and supple, and wrestling was a pastime to him. Once he was bantered to enter the lists as a pugilist, in combating with a darkey that considered himself the smartest in the rôle. Ben came to time, and the contest resulted in showing his superior power and prowess. Just as the contestant considered he had had enough Ben gave the spectators an exhibition of one of his somersaults in which his heels flew up, hitting the boasting champion on the head and giving no further inclination to seek collision with Ben.

The land owned by Gardner extended to what is now styled Bergen Line Avenue and, with the Lyons place, went as far north as Fulton Street. The new house built by Gardner was erected in the year 1841 or 1842, and is the one sold to Mr. Schwitzer. The real estate up on the death of James F. Gardner, in 1851, went to the children, making twelve shares, the homestead remaining in the widow's possession till the sale mentioned. Four sons were living within the town of Union in January, 1884.

Very much of the area of the town was wood and in 1824, and the trees were varied in description, as pepperidge, red cedar, dogwood, whitewood, maple, hickory, chestnut and several species of oak. Not a few gigantic trees were here, and considerable timber was procured here for ship-building. The heavier timber had the reputation of being as fine as any throughout the State. The oaks served for beams in the construction of vessels, post and rails were made of the chestnut, and the whitewood afforded material for boards. Knowledge of the use of coal as fuel extended none too soon. Wyoming Valley in 1765 witnessed Oldiah Gore, a cute blacksmith, using anthracite coal; a hunter, Philip Güter, discovered Lehigh coal in 1791, while the Schuylkill coal came first into use about the year 1812. Old residents about Bergen, however, clung to the wood fuel, and many cords of hickory and of chestnut were taken from Bergen woods, as this region was early called, to the wood-piles in the lower part of the county.

In decimating the forest Mr. Dalley, at an early period, less than sixty years ago, started a sawpit on the south side of Fulton Street, opposite the site of the old Liberty Pole. Here his operations continued for a number of years. From this adventurer in a business enterprise the name Dalleytown is derived. A neighbor recollects his operations among the trees, and remarks that they run on for the space of fifteen years. He sawed up a great deal of the ship-timber and also white cedar for slabbing. Dalley inaugurated the hack business subsequently, and in a pioneer style came out with a public conveyance, leading others who likewise found profit in it. This preceded the stage line afterwards put in motion.

Town Laid Out.—By degrees the South Bergen farmers, proprietors of the woods, sold their real estate, speculators and actual occupants taking possession. Local owners, who had held the land for years, disposed of their acres or parceled them out amongst their successors. A spirit of emigration to this region was moving, the city's multitudes gaining access to these hill-tops. Associations were formed and settlements were effected by organized adventure. As early as February, 1802 a Real Estate Association was instituted in New York City looking to the settlement of this locality. Henry J. Rottmann, now a resident of the town, was an early director with others who took up their abode here. During a south-law of Lattide, sold to the association forty-two acres, reserving some twelve acres, that were afterwards sold by him. William Haxamus mapped the property, pointing out the Indian Pond and certain school lots as reserved for use by the community at large. In April, the same year, a metropolitan journal announced that "a German Building Association had bought a thousand acres of land on the slope of the hill, laid out the domain into lots, the owners of which have bound themselves to commence building next month." In July the same paper says, "A German village has been commenced up at Weehawken," and adds that "lines of stages have been established." It became an era of land and building associations, and years elapsed before the enthusiasm subsided. Vast changes were wrought in the aspects of the region, and what is now the town of Union was the focus of a building enterprise, or, rather, a combination of adventures of this character. Union Hill proper, which is the region south of the present Union Street and North Hoboken, which includes a locality betwixt the Hill and Dalleytown, made a great advance.

Improvements.—What were designated county roads had early attention among the people in this locality. They varied from turnpikes, inasmuch as they called for more opening. The Bergen turnpike, at the southerly border of the town, was constructed about the year 1804, under incorporated powers conferred by legislative act, dated Nov. 30, 1802. As early as June 3, 1718, the opening of a road is mentioned from the Kroma Kill to Wiehawk ferry. Old people speak of an ancient road crossing what is now the town of Union, and tracing a route north of Van Vorst's house and south of Gardner's homestead, leading to the ferry. A title was entered July 8, 1858, at a Court of Common Pleas, held at the county court-house, appointing Edward Earle, of North Bergen, Charles Sturges and Conrad Stock, of Hudson City, Nicholas S. Vreeland and Jacob A. Van Horne, of Bergen, and Richard Wannmaker, of Harrison, to meet as surveyors of the highways at George Fausel's tavern on the 10th day of August. The purport of the citation was that a road fifty feet wide, from Bergen turnpike to Paine (now Union Street, had been declared to be necessary, and these six surveyors were called by the court to assemble at the place named

¹George Fausel was a pioneer among German settlers in this town, was the place chosen for many public meetings. It was on the west side of the highway at that time formally opened, but was still maintained by the inhabitants on the south-west corner of Franklin Street and Paine Avenue. Fausel conducted a brewery in the same town, making annually a considerable number of barrels of beer. He subsequently built a mansion on the east side of Halsey Avenue, became interested in

"at the hour of ten in the forenoon," and lay out the road. This road began at a point near where stood John Buck's hotel for many years, and traversed a line northwardly to a point immediately east of Peters, bakery, being an extension of Palisade Avenue.

Needed improvements were thence daily talked of throughout the town of Union at a period encompassing the work mentioned in the subjoined excerpt, which is but a chip from a block enumerating many progressive proceedings.

"TOWN OF UNION, Aug. 24, 1868.

"To the Hon. the Board of Council of the Town of Union.

The undersigned, persons owning property on Gardner street, in said Town of Union, petition the Council of said town to make the following improvement, namely: to make a drain box of 2 inches spruce plank, the same size as the one now laid on the corner of Hudson avenue and Gardner street, to commence 110 feet west of Palisade avenue and to be laid on the south side of Gardner street, and to run from said point until it connects with the old sewer now laid in Gardner street, between Hudson avenue and Bull's Ferry road.

"JOHN GARDNER,
"AUGUST KLECK,
"WILLIAM TEPPER,
"R. E. GARDNER,
"PIETER BORGES,
"G. NEUSCHELER, SR.
"CHARLES FOX,
"GEORGE HOFFMANN,

"GEORGE NEUSCHELER, Town Clerk.

"Town of Union, Aug. 26, 1868."

The nature of the soil, the swamp and bog not uncommon, the solid rock surface here and there, with an uneven grade, called for great labor within the town of Union. Obstacles of this character were not appalling; the resolution in the Board of Council backed by an energetic populace put improvement foremost, and many measures at first glance regarded as impracticable reached a seasonable achievement. Purposes leading to substantial roadways in this vicinity gained merited notice. The narrow highway on the west side of the town called the Bergenwood or Dalleytown road, beginning at a point opposite Cox's store on the north line of the Bergen turnpike and running the entire length of the westerly line of the town, had been for many years an eyesore to residents of that region. Plans for the approval of the line-owners to better this road were submitted to a meeting of property-holders in July, 1868; and these being approved, the work went on under contract early in the autumn of the same year. Excavation and grading and labor involved in widening the road to make it the required fifty feet consumed several months. The work was in some degree retarded by the winter weather and the intricacies of the undertaking. Along the edge of Grove Church Cemetery the widened roadway called for the removal of graves, and in other localities much rock-blasting was needed. The co-operation of the Board of Chosen Freeholders was important in the construction of culverts and bridges; a retaining wall was likewise required. The efficient surveyor, whose battery had discharged many an effectual explosive in the martial ranks, was now busy here, as may be inferred from the following momento of his industry upon this road:

"Sir—

"The Bergenwood Road Commissioners require the space now occupied by certain fences, trees, etc., on the northwest side of the Road, lying in front of the premises owned by you.

"Please attend to their removal, and accept this as notification in due form. The supplement to the Act for the Improvement of Bergenwood Road authorizes the Commissioners to remove said fences, trees, etc., after twenty days' notice, and to charge their removal to the owners of the property from which such fences, etc., have been removed. Such charges will form a part of the assessment for the improvement of the road and will become a lien upon your property.

"Respectfully, your ob't serv't,

"WILLIAM HEXAMER,

"Engineer in charge of the work."

The work was finished at a cost of $9963, in July, 1869. Many other evidences of improvement were shown as years elapsed. In January, 1871, action was taken to widen and improve Fulton Street; Anthony, H. Ryder, John Sturges and Abraham W. Duryee were appointed to carry the measure into execution. The same commissioners were appointed in October of that year to assess the valuation of land to be taken in widening Bergen Line Avenue, this avenue extending from Bergen turnpike to the north line of the town. And the next movement evidencing progress was the widening and regulating of Bull's Ferry road,—a work that achieved vast benefit for the town.

Fire Department.—The annual report emanating from Chief Engineer Thomas B. Brown, March 20, 1876, was as follows:

1. Pioneer Hose Company, house in good order, carriage and hose in good condition. Active members, sixteen.
2. Union Hill Hook-and-Ladder Company, house in good order, truck in good condition. Active members, thirty-two.
3. Liberty Engine Company, house in good order, engine in good condition. Active members, twenty-seven. Officers of the latter organization chosen in 1876 were: Foreman, John A. Ross; Assistant Foreman, Albert Knack; Secretary, Jabez Chambers; Treasurer, Albert Littlefield.

Sentimental Patriotism.—So early as January, 1844, in his annual message, Governor Daniel Haines remarked, touching a subject regarded with increased interest, that "several of the States have had each an agent in Europe, employed in searching the archives of France, England and Holland for documents illustrating the provincial history of our country. The depositories of England are said to be peculiarly rich in documents relating to this subject. It is supposed that there, alone, can be properly explained, many events which occurred during the existence of the proprietary and provincial govern-a brewing business at East Newark, and one day, while in a light wagon at that vicinity, the vehicle encountered a steam locomotive, resulting in Mr. Fausel's death. Mr. Fausel left a widow and several children. Fausel was a corpulent man, generous, popular and possessed of a great deal of energy.

N. Goetz

ments, and which are interesting in their effects, and in their connection with the origin and growth of principles which are felt to this day."

Insignificant incidents often elucidate an enlarged and patriotic principle, and views are suggested by incidental events. In this light may be witnessed the fact that during the conflict to maintain this republic intact the people of the town of Union gave a willing ear to patriotic sentiments.

Mass-meetings were held at different times for the purpose of recruiting troops and raising means for supporting their families while absent. At one of these war-meetings held Nov. 4, 1864, the following-named persons composed the committee of arrangements: C. Van Vorst, Sr., John Gardner, J. W. Force, T. Betz, N. Goelz, F. Koth, F. Beggins, J. G. Earle, James Wiggins, George Cox, J. H. Fink, W. Moll.

Many sentiments were announced here, as elsewhere, upon the various courses to be chosen to attain a pacific position during the contest "on the Potomac." The people of this locality, however, were always "with compass and chart" amply ready to sustain the standard authority. All sides of a patriotic question were looked at, and refuge chosen under the banner that waved during the Revolution of '76, and had been leading the republic to a most eminent degree of prosperity ever since.

Methods of Transit.—Stages ran for many years from Haekensack to Hoboken, by way of the turnpike at the southern border of the present town of Union. In May, 1860, Goelz & Mechler announced for their Hoboken and Union Hill stage line a timetable making known to passengers at what hour they would run to North Hoboken and Dalleytown, and at what times the stage would make the direct trips through to Cox's Corners. The stages of this firm and of the two proprietors acting independently operated during several years. These as they superseded hacks, were themselves superseded by the horse-cars, and tables were soon issued announcing the hours at which cars left the station and the point of connection, with Bergen Line Avenue and Union Street, for Guttenberg. Car-tracks now run within the town from Bull's Ferry Avenue, along Lewis Street and along Union Street, to Bergen Line Avenue throughout its entire length. The tunnel of the West Shore Railway passes under what is called the northern portion of the town, near the Union Township line, and ranges from the west to the east boundaries, at a depth of more than forty feet from the surface. Communication is had with the city by horse-cars going every ten minutes, by way of Union Street and Bull's Ferry Avenue, to Hoboken, or by means of Bergen Line and Palisade Avenues, via elevator, to Hoboken. The cars on return trips from Hoboken use the tracks on Lewis Street. Car to Guttenberg leaves the connection (Union Street) every half-hour. Access by way of the West Shore ferry adds much to the saving of time in reaching the city.

NICHOLAS GOELZ. Mr. Goelz is of German parentage, his father, George M. Goelz, having resided in Kallstadt, Hesse Darmstadt, where he cultivated a farm. He married Elizabeth Kadel and had children—John A., Eva E., John George, J. Nicholas, Christina, Annie E. and Marie K. Their son Nicholas was born May 2, 1824, in Kallstadt, and when an infant taken to the home of his paternal aunt, at Reisen, in the same duchy, where he remained until fourteen years of age, meanwhile receiving a rudimentary education at the public school of the town. In the fall of 1828 he removed to Weinheim, and was regularly apprenticed to a country merchant. At the expiration of the third year he repaired to Heidelberg, and entered a wholesale and retail store for the sale of fancy goods, but owing to failing health at the close of the year returned to his home, and devoted some time to rest and recuperation. He next accepted a position in a grocery and crockery-store at Mannheim, and later received an advantageous offer with a house in Speier, in the Palatinate, where he remained three years, first as clerk and subsequently as traveling representative of the business. Returning to Mannheim, he remained one year, and in 1848 emigrated to the United States, locating in New York City, where he was in various capacities industriously employed. Mr. Goelz eventually became proprietor of a grocery-store on Sixth Avenue, New York, but his restless and energetic nature found little to satisfy it. The superintendence of a stage line on Third Avenue next engaged his attention. In 1854 he became a resident of the town of Union, and for six years controlled an important stage line at this point.

In the fall of 1859 he conceived the idea of converting this stage line into a horse railroad, and called upon Mr. John H. Bonn, the future president of the company, and Jacob Schweitzer, who became its treasurer and held the position until his death, in 1884, to assist him in the enterprise. They, with Mr. Charles Spielmann, who for many years was the secretary of the company, William Hexamer and Peter Mechler (the latter the partner of Mr. Goelz in the stage line), formed the Hoboken and Weehawken Horse Railroad Company, which in course of time consolidated with other lines, under the name of the North Hudson County Railway Company. Mr. Goelz was made the superintendent of the company on its organization, and has continued since to fill the position. A more active, efficient and reliable superintendent no street railway company can desire. The excellent condition of the horses and cars of the company, as also the prompt and regular service of the cars early and late, summer and winter, is largely due to the untiring zeal, supervision and care of Mr. Goelz, who, in the heat of summer or the snow-storms of winter, is at his post of duty, his strong constitution and robust health enabling him to perform the arduous labors connected with his position with unflinching regularity.

Mr. Goetz was married, in 1849, to Miss Eva Maria Gerhardt, of Auerbach, Germany, whose children are Charles M., Annie K. and Johanna. He was in politics formerly a Whig, and on the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks, though not an active worker in the political field. He has held no office other than that of member of the Board of Education of the town of Union, which he has filled for twelve years. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1850, first in connection with the German Union, No. 54, of New York, and latterly of Palisade Lodge, No. 84, of which he is at present the treasurer.

Attractive Points.—The late C. Loring Elliott chose this vicinity for a home. As a portrait-painter he was admitted to be without his peer on the continent. His neat cottage, occupied by him in 1864, was north of Cox's Corners, and west of Bergenwood road, upon the peak of a palisade slope, commanding an extensive prospect. Judge Pope, of Hoboken, named the place "Belle Vue." Elliott in the way of his profession passed considerable of his time in the vicinity of his patrons, receiving professional calls from various parts of the Union. His death occurred at Albany, where he was busy upon the portrait of one of the magnates of the country. Many of his choicest paintings are in one of the noted galleries at Washington. After his death his widow traveled in Europe and subsequently married George Renton, of Newark. They occupied the residence referred to about the years 1871-73. Both have since died. Another location mentioned as eligible and prominent was that occupied by Mrs. C. C. Burr as an academy, where she taught piano and vocal music in 1879. At that period Mr. Burr was editing the North Hudson County Ledger, a weekly four-page newspaper published every Saturday by Burr & Thomas.

The Burr property was subsequently owned by Jacob H. Fink, and became a popular resort for tourists and pleasure-seekers, and known as the "Claremont." The "Claremont" was bought by D. P. Westervelt, who had a residence adjoining on the east. It is about one hundred yards east of Cox's Corners, upon the southern line of the town of Union.

Upon as lofty a situation as any (indeed, no doubt the highest point within the town) stands the handsome residence of Frederick Michel, a merchant of New York City. The dwelling is on the south side of Blum Street, west of Palisade Avenue, erected nearly two decades ago. John Morgan, who was a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders in 1869-70 (Henry Brunjes having vacated and removed from the State) owned an eligibly located residence corner of Columbia Street and New York Avenue. Mr. Morgan was a member of the county board for equalizing assessments, established under legislative act of April 4, 1873. The dwellings of John Gardner, west side of Palisade Avenue, of Nicholas Goetz, east side of Bergenline Avenue, of the late Judge James Wiggins, west side of Bull's Ferry Avenue, possess attractive features as places of abode.

Public Resorts.—Although noted for the thrift and industry of its people, this town makes conspicuous its halls for recreation. The Academy of Music, of which A. Boeckmeke is the present proprietor, is located on the south side of Franklin Street, near Hudson Avenue. The building is capacious, and was erected as a club-house nearly twenty years ago. It was kept by Carl Meyenberg in 1874.

Ruth's Hall, south of the famous Sans Souci, once the resort of many local gatherings, is located north of Union Place, its main entrance on Lewis Street, east of Bergenwood Avenue. Mr. Ruth came from Germany to this country when a lad, and located here about nine years ago. His earliest ball was given by the Sobriety Council, Junior, a local organization. Succeeding that entertainment were performances by the Union Dramatic Association. His edifice, including stage and auditorium, was made more roomy in 1879, so that accommodations here at present are ample for large assemblies. Another noteworthy resort was the Swan Brewery, recently burned down. It was located on the corner of Bull's Ferry Avenue and Weehawken Street. The Swan Tavern, Yorktown, Va., lived over a career of one hundred and sixty-two years, having been opened as a house of entertainment March 18, 1732; during its term of hospitality, though so protracted, it numbered perhaps no greater multitude of guests than did the Swan Brewery during its briefer career.

Centennial Committee.—Arrangements were made by this committee for a demonstration commemorative of the one hundredth anniversary of independence. Salutes and a civic and military parade, with a reading of the Declaration and an oration, were included in the exercises of the day. There were displays of flags and an imposing procession passing through the streets of the town. In the afternoon the programme concluded at the Hudson County Park, Union township. The day was propitious and no embarrassment attended the committee's arrangements, which were effectual in having it observed as the centennial anniversary of the American Republic.

The exhibition was creditable to the locality. The people at large observed it here as a general holiday, making it memorable for its patriotic recollections. On the part of the Board of Councilmen were Messrs. Dietz, Sturm and Wittreich, and on the part of the citizens Henry Albring, Henry Bell, I. J. Casey, Nicholas Goetz, Jacob Hofmeister, Henry F. Maackens, F. A. Meyer, Henry J. Rottmann, John A. Ross and Frederick M. Schwartz.

Post-Office.—The name of the post-office within the town is Weehawken, having a distributing area going beyond the municipality at all points. Mails arrive at 8.30 A.M. and 2.30 P.M. Mails close 8.55 A.M. and 4.25 P.M. The postmistress, who has served here for a decade or so, is Mrs. Merklein, the widow of a veteran soldier who held the position of post-master at the time of his death.

Rob. Simon

Business Operations.—The operations attending this town's history are varied; a sketch of them will show no ordinary diligence nor any lack of skill. The industry here is marked by that energy people call go-aheadativeness. As early as 1854 appears one of the citizens launching upon the sea of uncertainty always attending novel adventures. Henry J. Rottmann owns the store he occupies on the southeast side of Palisade Avenue and Blum Street. Besides being an expert in his business as a grocer, he has contributed a vast amount of service in promoting the advancement of the town. In the progress of events Mr. Rottmann¹ has witnessed a multitude of changes in his neighborhood during the thirty years that have elapsed since he made Union Hill his home. His energetic labors in the public behalf have been varied and wrought no inconsiderable advantage to the town. Others in the same line of business with Mr. Rottmann were more or less interested in town affairs, yielding less assiduity, however, than he, and giving no such measure of attention. Among the latter might be named Messrs. Schwartz, Reimenschneider and Wehnke, Mr. Albrint, on Main Street; Bode, on Columbia Street; F. Boggins, north side of Bergen turnpike; Pape, south side of Fulton Street; Meyers (now Katt), west side of Bull's Ferry Avenue, and Faist, north side of Lewis Street, with several others, add, by their enterprise and tact in business, much to the enterprise of the town.

From an early period the brewing of lager beer has been prominent in this locality. In May, 1866, Daniel Bernes, George Fausel and Jacob Schweitzer were at the head of establishments where this business was conducted; in May, 1864, Brunjes & Linneworth, Peter & Meyenberg; in May, 1865, Kovermann & Spingler; and in May, 1866, William Peter & Co. During the month of August, in the latter year, the brewers of the town of Union disposed of two thousand eight hundred and four barrels as follows: Bernes, 320 barrels; Brunjes & Linneworth 914 barrels; Kovermann, 721 barrels; Peter & Co. 848 barrels.

In addition to the lager beer, there were manufacturers of Weiss beer and a distiller. The business of making beer progressed, as did other traffic, and the various sorts of manufactures were from time to time added to the pursuits followed throughout the town. In September, 1867, the manufacturers within this settlement were busied as follows:

M. Baumgartner, hats; Edward Bell, clothing; A. D. Bogert, sashes; Conrad Dicks, shutters; John Einle, bands; Frederick Koth, bungs; Meyer's Sons, buckskins; William Knoke, fancy covers; H. Siedentrop, gimp; James Ware, clothing; Frederick Etzold, shuttles.

¹ Mr. Rottmann was born in Hunsvor, Germany, Dec. 22, 1802. He came to this country in 1847, and to this State in 1854, locating as above stated. He married in 1802, and has eight children.

SILK.—The manufacture of silk has sprung up within a few years past, and several large buildings were put up and many operatives have found employment at this business. Chief amongst these are the manufactories of Leskin & Co., located south side of Kossuth Street, west of Bull's Ferry Avenue; of Simon, on the north side of Garden Street, near Bergenwood Avenue and of Kamp, a short distance south (or southeast) from the dwelling of the late Cornelius Van Vorst. Kamp died recently and Ernest Otz has charge. The third floor of Kamp's was lately in the occupancy of Emil Pletschmann, engaging twenty-five operators in fabricating many varieties of trimmings, ornamental borders to wedding and other cards, and some fashionable fringes.

ROBERT SIMON.—Mr. Simon, who is of German parentage, was born Nov. 9, 1851, at Frankfurt-on-the-Main. His youth was wholly devoted to the acquisition of a thorough education, first in his native town, after which he studied successively in France, Italy and Switzerland. He then entered a weaving-school in Germany, and subsequently acquired a practical knowledge of silk manufacturing in various silk-factories in Germany and other countries. Mr. Simon on becoming proficient in the art of silk-weaving sought in America a wider field for his abilities, and on his arrival, in 1870, located in West Hoboken, where he became superintendent of the mill owned by Messrs. Bankard & Hatton. Two years later, in connection with his brother, he built the mill at Weehawken, which has established a reputation for the production of a special brand of silks known as the "Regatta" silks. The "Royal Standard," another brand, has also won much favor. During the year 1882, Messrs. R. & H. Simon established another mill at Easton, Pa., which is engaged in the production of the same fabrics. Mr. Simon's time is chiefly devoted to his various manufacturing interests, which leaves no leisure for participation in the political issues of the day. He is not a partisan in politics, and influenced less by party demand than by character and integrity in the casting of his ballot.

PIPES.—One of the longest established manufactories here is that of the smoker's comfort,—the clay tobacco-pipe. John Winters Smith has conducted the manufactory for many years, beginning the business in 1864. He uses both imported and native New Jersey clay, and manufactures all kinds of tobacco pipes. The location of the furnace is on the rear of the lot where his dwelling is, on the south side of Van Vorst Place, between Bergen Line and Bergenwood Avenues.

Prominent throughout the town as an industry conducted for a period of years is the business of cigar-making. These manufacturers are an important factor in the local business operations. August W. Bode, one of the number, an inhabitant of this locality, residing permanently here during a period of more than twenty-two years, has a store and dwelling situated on the northwest corner of Union Street and Hudson Avenue, having occupied these premises about seventeen years. Mr. Bode was born in Germany, Sept. 27, 1835; came to America, August, 1855; married here Aug. 10, 1862, and has two children, a son born April 20, 1865, and a daughter born May 21, 1867. About the year 1865 this business throughout the town was carried on by August Bode, Henry Bode, James Clark, Frank Lippert, Jacob Meuschler, Andrew Ritchel, Gustave Ritchel, F. J. Wappler. The business more recently includes the names of William Schroeder, George Kahler, Gustav Foorch, Charles Waas and many others.

FURNISHINGS.—Quite a brisk business is conducted at a factory established five years ago corner of Palisade Avenue and Jefferson Street. It is a branch of a business more largely operated at 74 and 76 Leonard Street, New York City, by Blum & Weill. The resident superintendent here is H. A. Behn, who employs daily from ninety to ninety-five hands, mostly girls. It is a shirt and drawer manufactory, all the machines running by steam-power, and, like the silk manufactories, in June, 1884, presenting a scene of busy activity.

HARDWARE.—An extensive business inaugurated here in 1861, employing from twenty-four to thirty workmen, came under the auspices of the late Frederick Etzold. This enterprising citizen was born in Saxony, Oct. 15, 1836, and came to America in 1852; as an official here, he became a member of the Town Council, the Board of Education, and succeeded John Gardner in 1866 as member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, serving in that board till 1869, when Henry Brunjes was chosen to succeed him. He gave likewise some care to the public concerns, the business being chiefly managed, as now carried on, by a son, F. O. Etzold. The elder Etzold, in addition to business done in the hardware line, made immense numbers of shuttles for sewing-machines.

At the time his building was erected, now twenty-three years ago, it was quite alone. Dwellings were scattered and population sparse. Etzold relied mainly upon the business of shuttle-making, to which he gave the earnest attention he was apt to display in a business enterprise. The traffic now at this store exhibits local sales of garden implements and household goods, builders' supplies, etc.

PAINTS, ETC.—Charles Wittreich, now located on the west side of Bergen Line Avenue, a little distance from Union Place, has had much experience here in his business as a dealer in the white lead and window-glass line, or to whatever pertains to convenience or household adornment in this direction. He served the people acceptably in the Board of Education and in the Town Council with zeal.

GENERAL STORES.—Emil and William Schneider, aided by the tact and experience of their father, stir the round of wants in many ways. Their prominent store, on a thoroughfare so much traversed as Bergen Line Avenue at present is, wins the notice of many buyers. They supply the house-keeper with oil-cloth, crockery, stoves, cutlery and tin-ware.

P. B. Lawton, west side of Bergen Line Avenue, offers to the community, at reasonable prices, his china, wood and willow-ware, and holds out for sale a thousand implements and utensils, ranging from a sauce-kettle to a scythe, a pruning-knife to a patent pump. Wire-cloth, door-knobs, varnish and padlocks and a host of other merchantables can be found at his store.

Several yards north of Lawton is the store of M. C. Hall, started here in 1881, and now exhibiting millinery goods in all their varieties. In the same vicinity Mr. Palmer sells dry-goods, and Mr. Gulden house furniture.

BUILDING MATERIALS.—Mr. Robert E. Gardner, born in 1821, and for many years a proprietor of the lumber-yard north side of Union Street, conducts the same business at present in conjunction with his son-in-law, under the firm-name of Gardner & Meeks. They deal largely in building materials, making carpenters' lumber and masons' commodities their chief merchantables. Mr. Gardner served several terms in the Town Council, was several years treasurer of the town, and in June, 1881, was made collector of the Bull's Ferry road improvement. Mr. Gardner is conspicuously identified with the real estate and the business interests of the town, and has exercised his skill and tact in many directions to add to its advancement, as well as its prosperity.

ROBERT E. GARDNER.—Three brothers of the Gardner family came from England to America in the year 1600, the first of whom settled in New Jersey, the second in Connecticut and the third in New York. The progenitor of the subject of this biographical sketch is Thomas, who found a home in New Jersey. In the direct line of descent from him was Elijah Gardner, born in Jeffersonville, Essex Co., N. J., where he was an enterprising farmer. He subsequently removed to the present town of Union, in Hudson County, where he became a considerable land-owner and continued to cultivate the soil. His wife was a Miss Force, whose surviving children were Phebe (Mrs. George Decker), Sarah (Mrs. Robert Pierce), Eliza (Mrs. Montgomery Crane), James F., John and Thomas, of whom the last-named only is now living. James F. Gardner was born in the present Weehawken, where he came into possession of a large handed property, and for many years followed the pursuits of a farmer. He married Mary, daughter of Daniel Earle, of the same town and county, and had children,—Sarah (Mrs. John Morgan), Charles E., Mary, James F. (lately deceased), Elijah, Eliza (Mrs. Richard Carrey, deceased), Phebe Ann (Mrs. James Youmans), Robert E., Jane (deceased), John,

Robert E. Gardner

Charlotte A. (Mrs. James Brown), Thomas (deceased), and Cornelia S. (Mrs. William Hazzard). Robert E. of this number was born Sept. 25, 1819, in Weehawken, and received his early instruction at the grammar school of the neighborhood, from which he entered the preparatory school at New Brunswick. While here engaged in preparation for a collegiate course he was summoned to the assistance of his father in his business operations in New York City. He remained thus occupied for seven years, meanwhile retaining his residence in Weehawken. He afterward engaged in farming and marketing, and during this period acquired a thorough knowledge of the carpenter's craft, which for five years absorbed his energies. In the year 1853, under the firm-name of J. & R. Gardner, he embarked in the business of contracting and the sale of lumber, in connection with which a branch was established in Hoboken under the firm-name of Gardner, Harp & Co., making a speciality of lumber, masons' materials and coal. In 1870 the firm of J. & R. Gardner having been dissolved was succeeded in 1874 by the present house of Gardner & Meeks, who are extensive dealers in lumber and other builders' materials. Mr. Gardner was married, Dec. 22, 1849, to Miss Eleanor M. Gardenbrook, daughter of Abram Gardenbrook, of New York. Their children are Charles (who died in infancy), Eretta E. (Mrs. H. V. Meeks), Robert E. (who died in childhood) and Ella Louisa. The father of Mr. Gardner was in early life an Andrew Jackson Democrat in his political views and subsequently indorsed the principles of the Whig party. These Whig predilections were transmitted to the son, who later found the platform of the Republican party in harmony with his convictions. He has devoted some attention to local and political issues and filled various offices, such as a member of the committee of the township of Union, member and chairman of the Council of the town of Union and treasurer for several years of the town of Union. He is in religion a member of the Reformed (Dutch) Church of New Durham, in which he has been for several years both deacon and elder.

Miscellaneous.—Continuing a business started in 1855, Isaac Hammel deals in supplies of dry-goods, corner of Washington (now Palisade) Avenue and Franklin Street.

Martin Baumgartner, corner of Lewis Street and Hudson Avenue, began his straw hat manufactory about the year 1860. The building, thirty-six by fifty, is three stories and a half high, and yields ample room for the business. He occupies a dwelling here, and transacted business in New York City during several years before removing the manufactory to this place.

Frederick C. Wienken located himself as a cigar manufacturer corner of Palisade Avenue and Jefferson Street, May 1, 1875. Besides making cigars, he deals in chewing and smoking tobacco, pipes, etc.

REAL ESTATE.—The store of Chas. H. Wedemeyer is located corner of Columbia Street and Bergen Line Avenue.

The store was opened here under the management of Mr. Wedemeyer. He was born March 13, 1829; arrived in New York from Germany, Dec. 17, 1848; married in 1853 a native of Germany, and has had thirteen children. Mr. Wedemeyer makes an effort to advance local enterprise in many ways, and achieves his purpose. Decoration day, 1884, he remarked to a neighbor, "I am now busy on the nineteenth house." It appears that his attention was early turned to making vacant lots habitable.

HOTELS.—The Columbus House, a resort for recreation and refreshment, located on the corner of Bull's Ferry and Liberty Street, was established about the year 1867. A popular Italian, Louis Canuto, is the proprietor of the "Columbus."

On the corner of the same avenue and Humboldt Street, in June, 1883, across the way from the elevated water tower, James Finerman opened a saloon called the "Tower House."

The northeast corner of Hudson Avenue and Jefferson Street is occupied by a grocery kept for fifteen years past by William Muller. Saloons and groceries are not rare objects throughout the town.

Education.—Scanty facilities for education were manifest here at the earliest periods. It was happily in the way for Mr. Gardner, the elder proprietor of much of the soil in this locality, to add to the general convenience here. Tradition tells us that the immediate neighbors had the privilege of availing themselves of the tuitional services he employed, more particularly for the instruction of his own children. Private schools were established here so soon as the population made marks of home settlement in any degree conspicuous. Among the prominent academies was that of Augusta Fredericks, conducted under the supervision of Charles Siedhof, who was town-school superintendent in 1865-66. The institution flourished for years. Several other schools, with a parochial school or so, gained patronage. Miss Maria Brecht opened a select school Oct. 2, 1882, corner of Kossuth Street and Palisade Avenue. Miss Brecht graduated from a public school in New York City, and has thirty-six pupils in her present little academy. She teaches what she calls the "English and German branches," and the children in her care range from six to fifteen years of age.

The school-house on Lewis Street devoted to the public use has been at the command of the local educational department for many years. It was dedicated Nov. 6, 1857. Repairs and additions were made from time to time as these were considered needful. It has been deemed too limited in its appointments for convenience for a few years past. The authorities are upon the eve of dedicating a new brick edifice more commodious and better adapted to present requirements.

The new edifice faces the east and stands between two streets, with ample means of illumination and ventilation; the location is altogether, in fact, eligible. Its interior accommodations will also commend themselves to the judicious mind. Present Board of Education: William Kothe, president; Henry Lohaus clerk; Henry J. Rottmann, Ephraim De Groff, Christian Gorman, Ch. Heitzmann, Nicholas Goelz, Warne Smyth, Robert Schlemm.

Societies.—The town contains its charitable institutions that exercise a benign influence upon the community.

I. O. O. F.—This order has a lodge working in the English and another in the German language. Jefferson Lodge, No. 125, is the German, and Jackson Lodge, No. 150, the English. Both convene upon particular evenings in the week at Odd-Fellows' Hall, Union Street, and, according to their rules of order, discussions are there conducted in that "spirit of candor and open generosity which leads men to the altar of concord and good-fellowship."

These lodges are instituted by virtue of a warrant from the R. W. Grand Lodge of the State. The principal officers are elected by the members, and have a term of service named by the regulations. Members are elected after a form peculiar to the institution. Early initiation follows an election. During the earlier part of the year 1880 the following gentlemen were initiated in Jackson Lodge or became members by card: Franklin Adrian, Calvin Clarke, Frank Meyer, Henry Petmore.

V. AND A. M.—A German and American lodge met west side of Hudson Avenue, near Kossuth Street, many years. A Masonic Hall, on Union Place, was dedicated in 1884. Palisade, No. 84, and Mystic Tie, No. 123, are the lodges in this locality. This venerable institution maintains that wisdom dwells with contemplation; its members appeal to the Supreme Architect of the Universe to harmonize and enrich the heart with love and goodness. In His name they assemble, and in His name desire to proceed in all their doings. They entertain ceremonies designed to adorn the mind, and exercise at their communications the intelligence of a Senior and Junior Deacon, a Senior and Junior Warden besides that of several other officials. Among the latter are a Senior and Junior Master of Ceremonies and a Chaplain. A lodge ordinarily has its trustees, those of Mystic Tie for 1884 being Harvey Wilkins, Anson B. Guilford and Edwin B. Young.

JACKSON LODGE, No. 150, town of Union, was instituted Oct. 10, 1870. Members here had been previously connected with Columbia Lodge, No. 63, of Hoboken. In respect to the second order here named,—

* It is generally conceded that Masonry in this country dates from the year 1783, when the Right Honorable and Most Worshipful Anthony, Lord Vincent Montague, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, appointed and constituted the Right Worshipful Henry Price as Provincial Grand Master over all the Lodges in New England, who, on the 30th of July, 1783, constituted the first Grand Lodge of Free Masons ever opened on the American continent. This was known as St. John's Grand Lodge which title it retained until it was mutated in 1792 with the Grand Lodge founded by the Earl of Dalhousie, Grand Master of Scotland, of which Gen. Joseph Warren, who fell at the battle of Bunker Hill, was the first Grand Master."

G. A. R.—Ellsworth Post, No. 14, Department of New Jersey, meets twice a month. The officers are elected in December and installed in January of each year. Meets at Odd-Fellows' Hall, Union Street.

VETERAN ASSOCIATION.—Headquarters at No. 89 Union Street. Meet first Monday evening of each month. Organized in the autumn of 1889. In 1884: President, William Rottmann; Secretary, Jacob Bowers.

A. D. O. H.—This "Sick Society," so termed in common parlance, now meets at Odd-Fellows' Hall, in Union Street. It organized about the year 1862 as Worth Lodge, No. 217. Jacob Ikert, O. B., and Conrad Bickard, Sec.

COUNCILS OF THE O. U. A. M.—Sobriety, Junior, Garfield. The latter is at present operating, Union Hill Division, No. 7, A. O. H., has for its current year's President Thomas P. Wall; Secretary, Patrick Woods.

OTHER ASSOCIATIONS.—Quite a number of ephemeral institutions figured here during the past two or three decades, many of which were mainly convivial or social in character. Occasionally the promptings of some ruling circumstance urged union of sentiment upon particular propositions, and organization prevailed for a season, the combination ceasing on the achievement of the purpose. Similar ideas come to us when reading that Pioneer Hose and Liberty Engine Companies went on an excursion to Iona Island, or that the annual ball of Fidelio Club took place at Meyenberg's, or when told that the Weehawken Glee Club danced with their friends and were merry at the Franklin Street club-house. The town of Union always seems to admit that merriment has a share in human experience, and that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Accordingly, the reader can be assured that in any elaborate light of history the chronicles of this town carry many a festive event.

But a faint glimpse of the town's history would be given were we to pass over vivid recollections that awaken on a mention of certain headquarters so renowned among old inhabitants as the California Store, corner of Main Street and New York Avenue; Ludlow's, west side of Palisade Avenue, corner of Kossuth Street; the noted Mitchell's, east side of Palisade Avenue; and Stoppel's, west side of Duran Street (now Hudson Avenue). These public resorts named among the earlier residents of the region are sure to stir some recollections and to invite special comment.

Considerable attention is evinced by the populace here in musical matters. Lively appreciation, in fact, has been shown the science in this locality. Quite a number of associations designed to foster the art have flourished, and a club, the Liedertafel, comprising twenty or more of the prominent citizens, having the encouragement of musical education among its objects, was incorporated by special act of the State Legislature, Feb. 23, 1872. The following gentlemen were the incorporators:

Jacob Alt	Carl A. Pieper
Theobald Betz	Charles Rau
Fredrick Bezenbach	Henry J. Robinson
Daniel Beines	Georg Schneider
Charles Dillke	Jacob Schwetzer
John Gschwend, Sr.	Christian Tjebke
Louis Linnmerth	Georg Thomas
Paul Linders	Fredrick Vanderloft
Fredrick Michel	David Zander
William Peter	Gottlieb Zorn

Churches.—EVANGELICAL REFORMED CHURCH, south side of Columbia Street, constituted a society Oct. 4, 1853. Earliest pastor, Rev. Leopold Mahn, installed Aug. 5, 1855; Elders, William Icke, H. F. Manckens; Deacons, John Hofer, John Kessler. A frame edifice, with basement and belfry, the original structure having been remodelled and enlarged in 1858. A new parsonage was built in 1883, taking the place of that erected in 1854. Present pastor, Rev. John Justin, who has officiated here since June 25, 1865.

IMMANUEL CHURCH, instituted June 27, 1865, as a mission of the German Evangelical Association of North America. A small frame edifice, with belfry erected in 1865, west side of New York Avenue, south of Lewis Street. In 1865-67 the Rev. Christian Meyer officiated there as its earliest pastor. At the present time this Union Hill Mission, which includes service at Zion Kirche, in West New York, is in charge of Rev. John P. Lueppold, who resides on Palisade Avenue, north of Lewis Street.

ST. JESUS THE MARTYR CHURCH, reared corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and Bergenwood road in 1875. Episcopal services held here. Edifice was sold and moved in 1881.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, organized Feb. 17, 1878, and attached to the General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America. Building located northwest corner of Franklin Street and New York Avenue. Rev. Herman Shoeppe, who was installed as the pastor of this congregation June 22, 1878, has had charge also of St. John's Lutheran Church at West New York, since Oct. 19, 1879. Services in the morning at the Franklin Street Church and in the afternoon at West New York.

FIRST BAPTIST, on the northeast corner of Franklin Street and Bergen Line Avenue. Small frame edifice, built in 1866. Present pastor, Rev. P. F. Jones.

GERMAN PILGRIM BAPTIST, a mission organized with eight members in 1881. Building located north side of Morgan Street, east of Hudson Avenue. Pastor, Rev. C. F. Sievers.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY FAMILY, located east of Bergenwood Avenue on the north side of Jefferson Street. Frame building. Present pastor, Rev. J. N. Griefel. Pertains to the diocese of Newark.

GERMAN PILGRIM BAPTIST CHURCH, town of Union. This church was organized April 26, 1866, in Paterson Street, in what was then Hudson City, (now Jersey City Heights), with the following named persons as constituent members: Charles Kaiser and wife, Mr. Steinhilber and wife, Mr. Kittner and wife, Mr. Seidel and wife, Mr. Konig, Mr. Shand and Mr. Lowenberg.

The pioneer deacons were Messrs. Kaiser and Kittner, and the first trustees were Seinite, Kaiser and Lowenberg.

This organization is doing a good work among the German population, and until May, 1881, the church service was held at Jersey City Heights, when the services were all transferred to the town of Union, where the church has at present a comfortable frame house of worship, valued at four thousand five hundred dollars, with a membership of sixty-eight.

The pastors of the church have been Rev. H. Gableman, from 1867 to 1882, and Rev. F. Sievers from June 1, 1883, to the present time.

The deacons of the church for 1884 were Messrs. Grippand Branstelt. Trustees, Charles Kaiser, Shand and Branstelt.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

JAMES WIGGINS

James Wiggins was born in the town of Caran, in the northern part of Ireland, Oct. 1, 1813, and was descended from that sturdy class, the Scotch Covenanters. Under the early instruction of the most pious and godly of mothers, he dedicated himself while very young to the service of the Lord, and pursued his education with a view to entering the ministry at a later period.

Circumstances over which he had no control caused him to relinquish this cherished desire, and, in accordance with his father's wish, he entered the gardens of Lord Farnham, Earl of Maxwell, near his native town, for the purpose of learning gardening and horticulture. His excellent knowledge of Latin soon made him a proficient in his business, and before the age of twenty he had offered to him the charge of one of the largest estates in Northern Ireland. He was particularly fortunate at this period of his life in meeting some celebrated French, German and Scotch botanists, his natural genial manner and cultivated mind causing them to take more than a passing interest in the youth. His love for reading was intense.

and more than gratified by daily access to the well-filled library of Lord Farnham. The latter noted his literary taste, and afforded every opportunity to indulge it. In later years the knowledge gained at that time proved of great benefit.

His father determined to settle in America, and James, being the oldest child and actuated by a strong filial love, gave up his bright prospects for the future, and accompanied his parents and seven other children to New York, in 1834. In that city he found employment with the firm of Greenfield & Co., by whom he was engaged in matters of interest and become overseer of the estate of James Brown, Esq., of the banking firm of Brown Brothers, of Wall Street, New York City. Mr. Brown found in Mr. Wiggins a man of more than ordinary intellect and culture, and, being himself a true Christian gentleman, recognized and appreciated those qualities.

Mr. Wiggins remained with Mr. Brown for eighteen years, and during that time was identified with the town committee of Weehawken, besides holding other offices of trust. On making Weehawken their residence he and his wife united with the Reformed Church of New Durham by letter from Eighth Street Pres-confidence until the financial revulsion, occurring in 1836-37, led him to Mattewan, near Fishkill, where his father and mother resided. He became a member and an active worker of the Presbyterian Church of Mattewan, at that time under the charge of Rev. Dr. Irenaeus Prime, now senior editor of the New York Observer, whose friendship he always retained. Here he was married by Dr. Prime, Aug. 14, 1838, to Mary Ramsay.

James Wiggins
" "
" "

He came to Weehawken from New York in April, 1846, where he had resided, after leaving an official position which he held for several years, and which became vacant in the political changes of the day, to byterian Church, New York, and became thoroughly identified with the church-work, the former as deacon, Sabbath-school superintendent and treasurer of the church, holding the last two positions for more than twenty years.

In April, 1873, Mr. Wiggins was appointed associate judge of the Hudson County Court. His affable manner and genial nature made him an acceptable associate on the bench, and those with whom he came in contact from day to day recall his kindness of heart and the correctness of his judgment. He was disposed to take the merciful side in every case that admitted of it. He had time to attend the funerals of those who buried their dead. He had a kind word for the boys and girls growing up around him, interesting himself greatly in their education. In the earlier years of the town, when schools were of an inferior order, many men now living recall his suggestion that they seek a higher education in New York City, accompanied by an introductory letter from him.

In a word, no man more sincerely rejoiced in the good of others, or more sincerely grieved for others in trouble, than James Wiggins. It is to his credit that, coming to this country with nothing but his purity of character and an excellent education, he and his wife reared a large family of children, giving them a liberal education and qualifying them for places of trust and importance, bequeathing to them the comforts of a good home and the legacy of so excellent a reputation.

Worthy also of notice was his habitual and lifelong fidelity to Christianity. He read the Bible daily, devoting the early morning hours to his loved pursuit. He was able to quote Scripture, as also religious and secular poetry, with great accuracy, and could give chapter and verse for Scripture. He was exemplary in coming himself and bringing his family to the social religious meetings of the sanctuary. For more than thirty years he was always in his place at the Sabbath and social gatherings, in the latter place contributing not only his prayers, but addresses, which his bright and cheerful temperament enabled him to do with salutary effect.

The study of higher astronomy claimed a large portion of his time, and during his earlier life, while in New York City, he spent many hours of the night on the house-top surveying the heavens through his telescope. All the standard works on this science were found in his library, and read and studied with profit to himself and others. He gave several lectures on astronomy for the benefit of the Sabbath-schools a few years before his decease.

His family was his crown. For them he lived, and in him they ever found a most tender and sympathetic friend.

Mr. Wiggins loved the promises of Scripture and the worship of God's people, and died as he had lived, in their enjoyment, on the 21st of July, 1877.

CHAPTER XLV.

TOWN OF GUTTENBERG.¹

THE name of this locality arose from an enterprise of what is styled "The Weehawken Land and Ferry Association," who proposed the plan for a settlement to be called the new village of Guttenberg. An outline of the property took form in a map made of the tract of land showing numbered lots, avenues and streets. That map was placed on file June 7, 1853, and made a public record at the county clerk's office. The widening of roadways in subsequent years made it expedient to direct surveys of a later date. The original map of 1853, by William Hexamer, was therefore followed by another, presumed to be nearer exact, the work of D. E. Culver, in 1870.

The deeds conveying property about this locality usually contain the phrase "being part of a tract of land known by the name of Guttenberg."

As a town under municipal authority the area is small,—extending from the Hudson on the east to the Bergenwood road on the west. The northern boundary is Bull's Ferry district of North Bergen, and the southern is the northerly line of Union township as now constituted. About the year 1852 immigration increased quite rapidly. The New York Herald announced in its issue of April 7th the incoming at that port² of more than two hundred and ninety-nine thousand passengers from foreign ports during the previous year, and only a few days before the New York Times made the announcement that "a city almost as large as Philadelphia is annually emptied from ships upon the New York docks." Such a wonderful increase by immigration stirred the spirit of enterprise, and suburban settlements increased in population at a rapid rate. Looking in this direction, we soon see a quickened progress in the way of land sales. The Weehawken Land and Ferry Association covered by its possessions a considerable area, and brisk sales were made to purchasers desiring to locate. The deeds given by the association in the years 1854, '55 and '56 are signed by John Hofer as president and Aaron Frank as secretary, enumerating lots in Guttenberg. The association, it seems, organized in January, 1853, with thirty shareholders, chose officials, trustees and a committee of finance, and announced their purpose to be to divide the tract³ into lots and sell them "at a moderate price."

Earlier Chronicles.—Very early in the present century there stood upon the summit here, just in the rear of Meckert's brewery, since erected, a log house. It was encompassed by a clearing, and in the occupancy of one John H. Rapp, his wife, Elizabeth, and a number of children. Of the latter, we mention Elizabeth, who married Benjamin Westerfield; Ann, who married James Brower; Katrina, who married William Greene; Maria, who married Samuel Moore; Syntie, who married Barney De Klyne; Henry, who married Katie Dodds; Conrad, nick-named Coon; John, who died aged about thirty.

This family occupied the old home for many years. Rapp and his wife came from Europe, the former being what is styled of the High Dutch, and the latter of the Low Dutch race. The old log cabin was still standing about the year 1830. Parties owning the lands near them were D. Van Winkle on the north, while Michael G. Vreeland and David Lozier, of Tea Neck, held the other adjoining land. Quite likely Rapp and his family were about the only inhabitants for several years of what is now Guttenberg.

¹ Arrivals at Code's Garden in 1856 numbered 341,625, and during the next year, 185,387. In 1860, 101,648.

² Described as "the farms of M. Cooper, situated on the banks of the Hudson River, in Hudson County, N. J."

¹ By Hon. Anthony H. Ryder.

The son Henry, who married Katie, or Catharine Dodds, and who died Aug. 6, 1880, aged eighty-seven years, showed himself a worthy son of a worthy sire in replenishing the earth. His children were Eliza, who married Anthony Sailer, Sarah, who married John Green; Sophronia, who married D. Westerfield; Hannah, twice married, and at present a widow; James, David, John.

Another early inhabitant here was Benjamin Westerfield, who was born June 14, 1775. He married Elizabeth Rapp, who survived him many years. The father of this Westerfield was a resident of Bull's Ferry, near the river. A reference to this elder Westerfield will be made a little later. The lands in the occupancy of the Westerfield family here were on the west side of the Bergen Line Avenue, and had been bought by Gen. Ives for the heavy timber upon them. This was hewn down and sent as river-rafts to the ship-yards. About sixteen acres of the area thus cleared were bought by Benjamin Westerfield, who settled himself here. The frame house erected then was still standing in 1884. The location was in a measure favorable for cultivation. A resident in the neighborhood recollects that about the year 1820 the peach-trees there yielded fine peaches in abundance. Fruit, it seems, was not scarce in the vicinity; a few years later old residents discovered on the property of Rapp ancient trees bearing Harrison apples, Spitzenbergs and excellent plums, the latter being of the large blue sort. Westerfield and his neighbors sent their fruit to the city market by way of the Hyler ferry. At this ferry a perianger and row-boats were in service. In seasons of great abundance, one old resident remarks, his eyes sparkling as he tells it, peaches were taken in large quantities to Demarest's cider-mill and still. At this establishment were made two kinds of whisky and peach brandy. Demarest's was near what is now called Fairview, and the spry old resident remarks: "Oh, many and many a load of apples have I carted there." Westerfield, who continued to occupy the premises named till his death, had several heirs, comprising daughters and sons, as follows: Ann, who married James Wiley; Eliza, who married Hiram Seely; Hannah, who married William N. Day; Catherine, who married Richard Earle; Bridget, who married John McDonald; Jasper, who married Sarah Day; John, who married Mary Short; Henry, who married Eliza Danielson; Cornelius, who married Adeline McLane.

By a conveyance bearing date Aug. 11, 1821, to William W. Cowan, of New York, it is ascertained that Benjamin signed his name Benjamin C. Westerfield. His brothers numbered five, and he had one sister, named Hannah. The brothers were named Jasper, David, James, Cornelius and John. At the demise of Benjamin C. Westerfield, about the year 1829, the real estate went into the possession of the heirs, who disposed of the bulk of it to the association located here. John occupied the homestead for several years. This property was west of Bergen Line Avenue.

The real estate vested in the Rapp family was near the Hudson and about the brow of the hill. It included, according to one informant, "the log house, the orchard and the land around it." March 26, 1816, Martin Winney and Rachel, his wife, of Bergen, conveyed to John, mentioned as the seventh child in the previous record, about five acres of land adjoining "the out-water line on the Hudson," the tract being bounded northeast by lands of D. Van Winkle, east by the North River, southwest by lands of the late D. Lozier, and west by lands of Michael G. Vreeland. By the last will of this John, bearing date Sept. 4, 1826, all the property vested in him is devised to his father and mother. The attesting witnesses to the instrument, which is admirably drawn,¹ are neighbors of the testator,—John Bertolf, Michael Carley and John Brower. Subsequently to the demise of John the care of the father in his extreme age devolved upon the daughter, Elizabeth, now the widow of Benjamin C. Westerfield. Five acres of land came into the possession of Mrs. Westerfield at about this period, and these were ultimately deeded to William Cooper, who purchased other lands in the vicinity. The region went then by the name of Mlonga. Cooper enlarged the cottage he lived in about the year 1837. His real estate here passed into the possession of the Wechawken Land and Ferry Association. Mr. Cooper was twice married. The heirs surviving him were two children by each wife.—Fanny, James, William and Nellie.

Like a multitude of other localities, the town of Guttenberg met with vicissitudes. All is not gold that glitters. Adventurers who made exuberant investments, here as elsewhere, did not in every instance realize their anticipations. The philosopher, as well as the student in history, will observe a great deal to edify him when he looks closely into the chronicles of a little town. The breeze, so lively and brisk about this region at one period, met its hull; the quickened march of progress attending land sales had its time to halt; calculations took shape occasionally in fictitious estimates; the consequences were some mishaps. From the old and slow plod the locality here had got into a prance. Subsequent events developed the fact that mistaken estimates lodged somewhere.

¹ The messenger, W. N. Day, then a lad, or still living, who went, as he says, wearing an old straw hat, in his shirt sleeves and barefooted, for the official to prepare this testament. Esquire Paradise, of Newark Avenue, Jersey City, came up to Rapp's dwelling and drew the document.

Improvements.—As early as 1836 steps had been taken to widen Bull's Ferry road,¹ this road crossing what is now the town of Guttenberg. Special measures were matured for the improvement of a part of the Ferry road about the month of May, 1859. That part included the space from the easterly line of Bull's Ferry road to the dock on the river. An assessment for this work was confirmed August 15th. Among the councilmen at that time were Adolph Meckert, Peter Handwerk, John P. Weisgerber, Heinrich W. Tigges.²

Several proceedings and enactments relating to the work done upon this road ensued as years elapsed. A supplement to the charter of this town, passed Feb. 28, 1868, permits seven thousand dollars to be levied under an ordinance to improve the Ferry road; a supplement preceding this, passed March 22, 1864, related likewise to the improvement of this road. All the "improvements" making the Ferry road the most eligible of the local highways were really more of the fancy than of fact. The Ferry road assessment yielded food for local gossip a number of years, leaving a limited area for its levy; the assessment ultimately spread all over the town. At least sixty-two plots or pieces of property within the town were announced for sale the 20th day of October, 1868, to meet calls for this assessment, together with costs, interest and expenses. At this time Henry Meyer was chairman, and the following-named persons were of the Council: A. Meckert, F. Walker, Joseph Schwartzmeyer, Christopher Farnkopf.

All this expensive diversion over Ferry road did not achieve any much-desired ferry, although there were passed, from time to time, several legislative acts relating to the subject. The earliest of these was "An Act to incorporate Guttenberg Ferry Company," approved March, 25, 1869. Occasional landings during the summer were made at the dock here, keeping a sort of ferry convenience, by a number of the steamboats. This was the case when the "John Hart," Capt. Green, and the steamer "Mercury," Capt. H. Mallan, years ago, made stated trips to suburban resorts.³ The ferry at Guttenberg is a thing yet to be, and while on its winding way its seekers can be led to an incident among historical characters persevering in the line of river navigation by the following anecdote of the first experiments of Robert Fulton, from the pen of R. N. Haskins, of Buffalo:

"Some years since I formed a traveling acquaintance upon a steambond on the Hudson River, with a gentleman who, on that occasion, related to me incidents of the first voyages of Fulton to Albany, in his steambond the "Clement," which I had never met with elsewhere.

"I inquired," said my narrator, "to be at Albany on business when Fulton arrived there in his inland-of-craft, which everlastingly felt so much interest in seeing. Being ready to leave, and hearing that his craft was to return to New York, I inquired on board and inquired for Mr. Fulton. I was referred to the cabin, and I there found a pale, gentlemanly man, who sat alone and engaged in writing.

"Mr. Fulton, I presume?"

"Yes."

"Do you return to New York in this boat?"

"We shall try to get back."

"Can I have a passage down?"

"You can take your chance with us."

"I inquired the amount to be paid, and after a moment's hesitation, a sum—I think six dollars, was named. To avoid delay, I then I sold my hat upon my hand, and with eye fixed upon it, he rose to take my money, but as I stepped forward he caught me by the arm, and said to him, 'Is that right, sir?' The young man, as from a start, and as he looked up at me the first fear was striking in his eye, and his voice faltered as he said—

"Excuse me, sir, but memory was busy as I contemplated this, the first pecuniary reward I have ever received for all my exertions in adapting steam to navigation. I would gladly surrender to the captain over a bottle of wine with you, but really I am too poor for that, just now, and I trust we may meet again when this will not be so."

"The steamer to New York was successful as all know, and terminated without accident.

Particular ordinances were framed giving the popular advantage. Plans were entered upon regulating grades and facilitating drainage. Streets gained improved aspects by being given more regular and even surfaces; the avenues were guttered and curbed, the sidewalks were flagged, and access to one and another point in many ways improved. Among the more prominent labors in these directions we may mention a few projects which were shown by the results following the Hudson Avenue improvement, for which an assessment was levied in 1864. Next came the sewer from Hudson Avenue to Ferry road, an assessment for which was confirmed May 28, 1875. The improvements as to grade of Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Streets gained attention, assessments for which were matured in September, 1879, at which time assessments were likewise made for the curb, gutter and flag along Hudson and Hermann Avenues.

By a report emanating from a financial statement as to the local improvements, published early in the year 1877, it is made known that the total amount assessed for

First Street, to Sept. 10, 1874, was	$4,000 00
Second Street sewer, to May 28, 1875	11 21
Fourth Street, to Jan. 7, 1876	2 15 00
Fifth Street, to April 2, 1875	2,115 10
Hermann Avenue, to Aug. 6, 1875	40,171 82
Hudson Avenue, to March 15, 1875	44,271 00

Of the First Street assessment the treasurer that year says,—

"All the improvement certificates issued on First Street, numbered from 1 to 4, were redeemed and cancelled, which, together with the 60% of the commissioners and the printing of bill-heads, amounting to four dollars, makes the amount received the amount of assessment, so made by the commissioners, $29,350. Said amount being due from the town's treasurer."

Very moderate amounts were collected upon the other assessments. The annual report issued in 1884 shows sum due April 1, 1881, upon what is styled the Second and Third Street improvement $9363.18. The latter sum was reduced by payments up to April, 1884, to a total of $8776.54. The sum due upon the Fourth Street certificates at the latter date, ¹The ancient road ran east of Cooper's residence.

²John Henniman, one of the councilmen, had just died (November, 1860).

³The steambonds "Jolly Son" and the "Thomas E. Hulse," Capt. George Amos, made this a landing place.

$332.07. The amount due upon the Fifth Street, April 1, 1884, was $699.85. Sum due at latter date on Hermann Avenue accounts, was $30,877.28.¹ Sum due at latter date on Hudson Avenue accounts, was $49,488.20.

The board that closed their labors March 31, 1884, report a continued improvement in the financial condition of the accounts.

COUNCILMEN FROM 1882 TO 1884.

1882-83	1883-84.
Georg. Sneath, chairman.	Geo. N. Kleeflugel, chairman.
August Umhoefer.	August Umhoefer.
George N. Kleeflugel.	Henry Misegades.
David Keddle.	Peter Handwerker.
Charles Klein.	John Minnix.

As years elapsed ordinances multiplied here, the duties of the recorder taking a wider range with the lapse of time and the increase of population. In a casual way the recorder serving in 1879 remarks, in his annual report, "Everything has been provided," and the recorder filling that chair during 1882 says, "The ordinances are intended to enure to the best interests of the town." Every year presented an exhibit of valuations, as follows:

For the year 1874, Guttenberg	$561,600
For the year 1875, "	443,750
For the year 1877, "	447,000
For the year 1881, "	376,400
For the year 1882, "	377,300

Efforts of the Ferry Association.—The Land and Ferry Association gave their attention almost exclusively to sales of their lots. The fourth clause of the fifth article of their constitution was never fully operative. At any rate, it may be said that it had merely spasmodic force, coming into play when the season of travel supplied the passengers. Nevertheless, the clause, as a section of the constitution adopted in 1853, declares that

"Until the Ferry Company shall be able to run its own boats, arrangements have been made with the owner of the Bull's Ferry boat to land and take passengers at the property."

An enterprise in the vicinity eventuating in the establishment of a ferry half a mile south of the Guttenberg dock rendered any extra exertions in this direction useless; although, as one may observe, there is here a diversion from the earlier purposes of the association. Quite probably a reason appeared for not pressing this ferry enterprise. Guttenberg has its charms, and one may bask upon its lovely heights in the genial weather, watch the porpoises, gaze upon the passing sloops and steamers and enjoy a panoramic scene seldom surpassed. The solid substantial residents who came hither to exercise their capacity in lawful pursuits did not care to be overrun by excursionists, who came across the river to be just too jubilant. Picking out this spot to show a greater exuberance of the frolicsome spirit did not shape itself to the local demand. Every thoughtful person will, upon a little reflection, determine that mere love of sunshine does not go a great way in building up a thriving community. Says a writer,—

"The inhabitants of Norway are active as squirrels, while sunny Italy has more than one-half its inhabitants sturly beggars, poetically called lazaroni, who consider basking in the sunshine, with liberty to ask alms and scratch themselves, as the tallest kind of terrestrial enjoyment. A Yankee will make money amid snow and icebergs, while a Brazilian would wait out in a thunder-storm for laziness to lift the latch of his cottage to get under the roof. Did our own sunshine continue some months longer than it does, we should soon be all laid up in the country as lazy as the worst of them."

Of such material the Guttenbergers who began their settlement here were not made. They looked to thrift and industry as the main source of happiness.

Local Industries.—Quite a buzz was given to the business of brewing here at one period, the locality having two important breweries. The first was an establishment at Belle Vue, near the river, and the other on the east side of Bull's Ferry Avenue, between Hermann and Franklin Avenues. Adolph Meckert had the supervision and ownership of the latter, and Otto Kohler, for a time connected with Andrew Fink, and subsequently with Woltze Kamena, the former. The lager sold by these manufacturers went mostly to the city. At one time, however, considerable quantities of the beer made by the large concern at which Kohler was the head went bottled to distant ports.

On withdrawing from the firm, Andrew Fink established himself in the city, and Woltze Kamena, who had served as the old firm's accountant, entered into copartnership with Kohler. The latter firm continued a number of years; the business was, however, at length conducted (after Kamena's withdrawal), for a short period, under the firm-name of Kohler & Son. Otto Kohler was a conspicuous resident of Guttenberg, efficient at many adventures, and never disposed to discourage any effort to enhance the interests of the town. His years glided away amid the active scenes encompassing the large establishment at which he stood as head. Every proposition made to enhance local interests won an expression of opinion from Kohler. He was frank, open and often zealous. Business had his principal notice, public affairs gained a part of his attention, and when leisure arrived the grape-vine and the cactus were the objects of his care. He took delight in rearing the latter tropicals, of which he could exhibit several varieties, always in a thrifty condition. The building occupied by the firm gave an embellished aspect to a location so rocky as the Palisades. In fact, it has stood many years as a landmark,—a tall feature upon the hill-slope from which the tourist, on his approaching it, knew he was nearing this little town, by the appearance before him of this big brewery.

Meckert's brewery was located at a less conspicuous point; adjoining it, however, was a grove, with summer-houses and all the cozy attractions peculiar to ¹ Amount here includes what are styled bonds and due bills. To this sum to ascertain a correct total must be added a still further sum,—being the amount of certificates, $1723.37. Correct sum due, $32,603.65.

Fred W. Herrmann

what are termed public gardens. The hall and other appointments of the establishment had ample accommodations to meet the demands of the populace. Since Meckert's demise the business has been conducted by several parties; at present it is under direction of Haunstein & Weiss.

Among the earlier manufacturers here were those of Mr. Deegan, of Frederick Dedereux, Philip Gregory, F. T. Lillendahl & Co. and Thomas Weckesser. More prominent than any other industry stood the walking-cane manufactory of Frederick Walker, corner of Belle Vue and Hudson Avenues. Here collected in the warm season admirers of the beautiful in scenery. Mr. Walker, who was a native of Germany, purchased three lots here in 1806, and in April, 1831, took possession of the brick edifice he had erected the previous year. He died Jan. 27, 1880, aged sixty. A widow and eight children survive him, viz.: Herman, Lewis, Frederick, Albert, Emily, Ida, Bertha and Louisa.

Michael Clark caters to the popular taste in the beverage line, southwest corner of Bull's Ferry and Hudson Avenue. Among the masons, carpenters and builders of Guttenberg are Michael Clark, Charles J. Asmus, Jacob Kaechele, Philip Mendel, Christopher Haller, Joseph Loettler, William Sauerland, Peter Handwerk, Peter McMahon, George Weil, George Sneath.

In the cigar line of manufactories are Joseph Beckert, C. W. Hoppe, Frederick Morey, John Schultz and A. Weckesser. Since May, 1880, the druggist has been Henry Gordon, and the physicians, Drs. Hill and Vanderbach.

For a masterly mathematician, a manufacturer of intricate as well as elaborate instruments adapted to practical and amateur operations, one can call here upon August Herzog. He is an inventor, patentee and a skillful artist, engaged in the manufacture of various instruments, not excepting those of measurement for railroad engineers and ship-builders. He arrived in the United States in 1865.

Among the other business enterprises, it would not be out of place to mention some of the prominent business places of the town, among which are Louis Emmerich, Henry Schneider, J. E. Lutz, John Wehne, Edward Ahrens, William Prosser, on Bull's Ferry Avenue, and Frederick W. Herrmann, corner of Franklin Avenue and First Street. These two latter are large and well-appointed grocery-stores, where may be found almost everything calculated for the comfort and convenience of the towns-people.

FREDERICK W. HERRMANN.—Mr. Herrmann is of German parentage, his father, also Frederick W., having been a native of Kongsberg, Prussia, where he resided and followed his trade of shoemaking until 1831, when his emigration to America occurred. He married Frederika Seecamp, and had two sons, Frederick W. and Daniel. The death of Mr. Herrmann occurred at his home in New York City in 1845. His son, the subject of this biographical sketch, was born June 24, 1836, in the latter city, where he remained during boyhood, receiving instruction at the public schools of the city. In 1854 he removed with his step-father to Guttenberg, and engaged with him in the sale of groceries, continuing this business relation until the death of the latter, when he came into possession of the property. He has from that date until the present conducted an extensive and profitable trade, confining his stock to groceries, hardware and such commodities as are in general demand. Mr. Herrmann was, in 1872, married to Miss Frederika, daughter of Johannes Hess, of Wertenberg, Germany. Their children are three sons,—Frederik William, Daniel and George. Mr. Herrmann, in his business transactions, has manifested both enterprise and intelligence, qualities which have rendered him successful and given him a commanding influence in the community. He has in politics been and is an active Democrat, having served for five years as a member of the Board of County Freeholders and later been elected assessor of the town of Guttenberg. He has also held other less important offices, though these distinctions have not been sought by him. He has been among the foremost to advance the interests of the town of Guttenberg, and both in the use of his means and influence has manifested the zeal of an enlightened and public-spirited citizen. Mr. Herrmann was educated in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

Guttenberg Quarries.—No little stir to local industry arose from the quarries heretofore. Bergen Hill, with its extension to the Palisades, presents a show of trap-rock in abundance, and much of this is utilized by being manufactured into Belgian blocks. Many of the inhabitants make of this vocation a conspicuous source of emolument, the business of block-making contributing largely to the general thrift and prosperity of the community. Amongst the town's citizens employed, with others, in this calling are

Michael Buckly,	John Lamm,
James Deegan,	Jacob Meier,
Thomas Deffy,	Edmund Miller,
August Dunderf,	Joseph Nae,
John Elhardt,	Michael Bissel,
George Fellingner,	Michael Rosen,
John Farnkopp,	Joseph Schalk,
Owen Gorman,	John Strick,
Christian Heuser,	Michael Wauters,
John Heiler,	Jacob Weizel,
Joseph Heiler,

Post-Office.—The Guttenberg post-office was established in 1874, A. E. Birkenstock, postmaster. At his death the widow¹ received a commission, the post-office continuing in her care till the present time, May 1, 1883, the circular showing arrival and departure of mails announced as follows: Depart 8.40 A. M., 3.50 P. M.; arrive 8.40 A. M., 2.40 P. M.

The post-office is on the west side of Bull's Ferry

¹ Laura E. Birkenstock.

Avenue, a few doors north of Hermann Avenue, where horse-cars leave every half-hour for Union Hill.

Voting Population.—The vote within this town, showing the number of citizens exercising right of suffrage and the expression of choice for candidates named, will be seen from the following data:

Autumn, 1878: for Meeks, 120; Wellman, 47,—total, 167.
 Autumn, 1880: for Hancock, 127; Garfield, 95,—total, 222.
 Autumn, 1881: for Ludlow, 125; P. 418, 97,—total, 222.
 Autumn, 1880: for Casey, 122; for Landei, 93,—total, 215.
 Autumn, 1882: for Rich, 129; Gardner, 80,—total, 209.
 Autumn, 1883: for Abbott, 10; Dixon, 116,—total, 223.
 Autumn, 1883: for Brinkerhoff, 100; Cator, 124,—total, 224.
 Autumn, 1883: for Rich, 106; Peppor, 118,—total, 224.
 Spring, 1884: for Conner, 105; Ellis, 178,—total, 283.
 Spring, 1884: for Zeller, 111; Hermann, 172,—total, 283.
 Spring, 1884: for Dwyer, 121; Walker, 160,—total, 282.
 Spring, 1884: for Gersham, 101; Hill, 181,—total, 282.

Since the year 1878, running over five years, the increase of actual voters is observed to amount one hundred and eighteen.

Local Records.—Every act of the man inscribes itself in the memories of his fellows and in his own manners and face. The air is full of sounds, the sky of tokens; the ground is all memoranda and signatures, and every object covered over with hints which speak to the intelligent. All things are engaged in writing their own history. The planet, the pebble goes attended by its own shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain, the river its channel on the soil; the animal its bones in the stratum, the fern and leaf their modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes its sculpture in the sand or stone. Not a foot steps into the snow but prints (in characters more or less lasting) a map of its march. So is it with records of a town, as it moves onward with ever-varying Time. One of the earlier settlers, who located here in 1853, makes comments upon the wonderful changes about this region. Had he noted in a daily book events as they transpired, the register would be rich in historical. Yet he cannot recall when the earlier inhabitant, Westerfield, busied himself in making baskets for the city market and in fabricating strings of wampum for use by the traders with Indians in the far West; to still older citizens than he recourse is had for traditions of that sort. Yet the comments made regarding the situation experienced by him during the earlier years of his residence here make an entertaining chapter. Allusions made to dense thickets then abounding in this vicinity, and to the rural and rustic experience he encountered season after season, show a wonderful change. Rabbits and squirrels, with other game that abounded here, the tall trees that bore the butternuts, chestnuts, rochas and kiskatomis, all once seen by him, have gone. The woodman's axe felled the trees, goats assisted to sweep away the thickets, and the eager quarryman himself has assisted greatly in altering the aspects of the surface. Busy contractors, too, made radical alterations here and there in the grade, so that in certain localities a wide variation shows it elf.

To particularize each incident of alteration would occupy more space than can be possibly afforded here; the general reference is all that seems required to indicate very extensive transformations in this locality. And of such is true history.

HERMANN WALKER.—Among the prominent and progressive men of the town is Hermann Walker, who has served for several years as town clerk. He was re-elected justice of the peace at the spring election in 1884, and has been an efficient attaché of the Fire Department. An excerpt taken from a local print indicates one of the agencies in service to protect the property of the inhabitants from fire,¹ with which he is connected.

Festivities.—Like many other communities where Teutonic suggestions prevail more or less, one observes here the social element predominant. Many festivals admit description from treasuries of pleasant recollection. Our space permits here and there but a passing allusion. The first annual ball of the Guttenburg Guard occurred at O. Kohler's, Monday evening, Oct. 29, 1866. M. Klein, Jacob Shalk, Jr., and Joseph Schwartzmeyer were officers here. An organization had its headquarters at Ehler's club-house in 1872,—M. Wunder, captain; Charles Asimuss, secretary; and W. H. Tigges, treasurer. Guttenburg Guards had their fourth annual target excursion Sept. 12, 1874. The Calathumpian Glee Club, as well as the I. D. K. Socials, made the town merry by occasional festivities.

Educational.—In school matters Guttenburg may be said to do anything else than lag. Children from the Cooper dwelling had access to the school at Bull's Ferry about the year 1842. So soon as the settlement assumed neighborly form here, due attention was given to tuition in elementary branches. The Lodge, a building east side of Bull's Ferry road, a little way south of the Cooper house, was at one period appropriated for a school-house.² Here the youngsters gathered to be taught their earlier lessons. Men who were the lads of that day refer to several pedagogues who had charge of the schools here held in buildings subsequently called the Fink dwelling and the Kohler residence, on Harrison Avenue. The names of the teachers here include Messrs. Jackman, Carter, Wallace, Donohue, Flynn and Birkenstock.

Flynn was the earliest teacher who taught in the large new brick edifice on the south side of Franklin Avenue, near Fourth Street. That building is of two stories, eligibly located and very well adapted to school purposes, having ample space and needful accommodations. The teacher's merit is that he is qualified to teach, and the school building's merit is that it is adapted to teach in. The authorities at this point did their share in the way of providing facilities. Education was early appreciated. Trustees having in charge the erection of the school house were Messrs. Dwyer, Fink and Hermann. According to the State report for the school year ending Aug. 31, 1872, there were enrolled here three hundred and fifty-five scholars, showing an average attendance of one hundred and fifty-nine. The same year's report gave the total number of children as five hundred and three, while the report for the year ending Aug. 31, 1875, gave the total number six hundred and thirty-four, exhibiting as the three years' increase one hundred and thirty-one throughout the district. By a reference to Dr. Siedhof's report for the year 1883, it is seen that this school was supplied with efficient and faithful teachers and evinced a prosperous condition, joining the rest of the county in manifesting a lively educational interest. The State report of 1871 showed two hundred and ninety scholars enrolled. Valuation of school property, fifteen thousand dollars. County superintendent Dickinson reported that "all pupils are furnished here with books and stationery free of cost," and that District No. 8 is managed by its board of trustees.

¹ A hook-and-ladder company erected years since a truck-house on the south side of Franklin,—a building in service. The hose company organized in 1867 disbanded in a few years. At present the department consists of Washington Hook-and-Ladder Company, No. 1, Adam Lutley, foreman; Washington Chemical Fire-Engine Company, No. 1, Frederick W. Hermann, foreman.

² Both Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Walker remember attending school in this edifice. It is now in the occupancy of Mr. Luby.

Sabbath-School and Church.—To live at random, remarks an author, is not the life of a rational, much less of an immortal, least of all of an accountable being. A Sunday-school was established here in 1864 under the auspices of the Grove Church. The institution operates cordially with its books, tracts and papers as so many leaves for the healing of the nations.

From the Sabbath-school and its enlivening influence came the thought leading to church organization. Steps were taken to erect a chapel here. It was dedicated January, 1868. A church was organized in November of the same year; Rev. W. V. V. Malon served till 1872, Rev. T. B. Collins assuming in August of that year the full pastorate. The church building is located on the north side of Hudson Avenue. It is of wood, surmounted by a belfry, and neatly accommodated with all the appointments pertinent to a place for public worship. Recent pastor, Rev. Alexander Shaw. It is known as the Reformed Church of Guttenberg.

The other church within the town is on the corner of Hermann Avenue and Sixth Street. It is of brick, with belfry, fronting on the west side of Sixth Street, and has a frame parochial dwelling at its rear fronting on the north side of Hermann Avenue. A large school-house was recently erected just north of the church. The church was incorporated as St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Guttenberg, March 19, 1866; pastor, Rev. Timothy Pacitti. Present pastor, Rev. F. O'Neil.

EARLIEST TOWN OFFICIALS.

1790—1800, 1810—1820
Edward Williams
Amolph Markert,
John H. Lenneman
John S. Miller
Christopher Farnsworth.

LATEST TOWN OFFICIALS.

1880—1890, 1891—92
Charles Kott
August Ueberle
Peter Henschel
John Mueck
Henry Mueck

CHAPTER XLVI

KEARNY TOWNSHIP.¹

Organization.—The present township of Kearny was included in Harrison until 1867. The people residing in this territory were by a large majority Republican in politics, but their vote was regularly entirely negated by the overwhelming Democratic vote of the southern part of Harrison, and they therefore sought to bring about the division that they might secure independence and a greater influence in local affairs.

The late Gen. N. N. Halstead, who was killed in May, 1884, at the Market Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in Newark, while getting off a train, was untiring in his efforts to separate the northern part from the southern part of Harrison. He succeeded in getting the necessary laws passed in Trenton, and in March, 1867, Kearny became a separate township. It was named in honor of the late Gen. Philip Kearny, major-general United States Volunteers, who was born June 2, 1815, and killed at the battle of Chantilly, Va., Sept. 1, 1862. Gen. Kearny's son and family are at present living at Kearny Castle, in Kearny township. As Gen. Kearny's history is a part of the nation's history—"he died that she might live,"—it is unnecessary to make any extended remarks of "Fighting Phil Kearny's" career at this place.

The line separating Harrison and Kearny may be described as follows: It commences at the Morris and Essex bridge on Passaic Avenue; thence runs along Passaic Avenue to Reynolds Avenue; up the centre of Reynolds Avenue to a house formerly owned by Frank Allen; thence north, along the line of the Muloch property, crossing Bishop Street, to John Williams'; thence east to a little above Professor Noble's residence; thence across the railroad and through the woods surrounding the vegetable farm of Mr. Grubb to the Copper-Mine road. The line thence proceeds south to the Lodi Hotel, along Harrison Avenue, west to Ogden's Lane, along Ogden's Lane straight to the gravel dock, and into the Passaic. Probably not a dozen persons in either Harrison or Kearny could locate this line without map assistance. It is generally condemned as a most arbitrary and meaningless line, as it is truly said that houses and premises are so injudiciously cut up by it that persons sometimes sleep with their feet in Kearny and their head in Harrison. This is the case with William H. Loughman, whose house is bisected by the separating line, and the bed so situated that his feet, while sleeping, are in Kearny township and the upper part of the body in Harrison. As Mr. Loughman humorously says, he can, by assuming the conventional winter curve in cold weather, at any moment during the night become a full citizen of Harrison. Mr. Loughman pays taxes to both governments alternately, and hopes that his location as a full citizen may at some future time be definitely settled. There are other examples as vexations and unaccountable as this, so that it would appear as if a dynamite explosion located the line of separation. However, although this may appear to be the offspring and irregularity of madness, yet, upon a closer insight into motive, we find consistent method in this madness, being simply the result of trying to take into Kearny certain persons and properties and exclude other certain persons and properties. It is hoped that this line will be straightened at no distant day, and that if the towns are to continue apart, the Erie Railroad may be determined upon as the best separating boundary.

¹ By Prof. John Dwyer.

Roster of Officers.—Following is a list of the officers of Kearny township since it was organized, in 1867, up to July, 1884: Town Committee, John Boyd, John Van Emburgh, Jr., Gen. N. Norris Halstead, Joseph L. Hewes Francis Newbold; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Assessor, Stephen K. Jerolaman; Collector, William L. Ogden.

The town committee for 1868 was the same as that for 1867.

Town Committee for 1869, Simon R. Van Emburgh, John Boyd, Jr., John Van Emburgh, Jr., Gen. N. Norris Halstead and Joseph L. Hewes; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Assessor, Stephen K. Jerolaman; Collector, John F. Fullager.

Officers for 1870: Town Committee, John Boyd, Jr., Gen. N. N. Halstead, Joseph L. Hewes, Francis Newbold and Simon R. Van Emburgh; Town Clerk, Henry Kenton; Assessor, John Boyd, Jr.; Collector, Henry K. Schuyler.

Officers for 1871: Town Committee, John Boyd, Jr., J. L. Hewes, Stephen K. Jerolaman, Henry Boan and Francis Newbold; Town Clerk, Henry Kenton; Collector, William S. Ogden; Assessor, Stephen K. Jerolaman.

Officers for 1872: Town Committee, Stephen K. Jerolaman, Henry K. Schuyler, Gen. N. Norris Halstead, J. L. Hewes and Francis Newbold; Town Clerk, Henry Kenton; Assessor, G. K. Van Emburgh; Collector, William S. Ogden.

Township Officers for 1873: Town Committee, Henry Boan, I. M. Stewart, James Johnson, Samuel D. Smith, Henry K. Schuyler; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Collector and Treasurer, William S. Ogden.

Officers for 1874: Town Committee, Richard Hill, James Johnston, Augustine T. Rilev, Joseph Randall and William G. Greenfeld; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Assessor, Stephen K. Jerolaman.

Officers for 1875: Town Committee, Richard Hill, Henry Boan, Byron Binninger, R. O. Babbett and George Head; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Collector and Treasurer, Alexander Jacobus.

Officers for 1876: Town Committee, Henry Boan, Richard Hill, David Moon, Byron Binninger and Seldon Goff; Clerk, Henry Kenton; Collector, Alexander Jacobus; Assessor, James Johnston.

Officers for 1877: Town Committee, James C. Johnston, Francis Newbold, G. G. Hardy, Byron Binninger and David Moon; Clerk, Josiah B. Stearns.

Officers for 1878: Town Committee, Richard Hill, James C. Johnston, James A. Bell; Clerk, Patrick J. Cairnes.

Officers for 1879: Town Committee, James A. Bell, Richard Hill, Frederick W. Hortsman, John Quinn and Joseph Randall; Town Clerk, Edward J. Kenny; Assessor, James C. Johnston; Treasurer, Byron Binninger.

Town Officers for 1880: Town Committee, Dr. Clayton, Richard Westlake, John Quinn, Richard Hill, Geo. J. Hardy; Town Clerk, Edward J. Kenny; Assessor, James C. Johnston; and Treasurer, Byron Binnenger.

Town Officers for 1881: Town Committee, S. B. Ferry, Dr. S. W. Clason, John Quinn, Thomas Hood and George C. Hardy; Town Clerk, Edward J. Kenny; Treasurer and Collector, Byron Binninger.

Town Committee for 1882: Town Committee, William Green, Thomas Hood, S. B. Ferry, R. P. Messiter and John Quinn; E. J. Kenny, Clerk.

Township Officers for 1883: Town Committee, William Green, Patrick Doran, James McCloskey, John Quinn and Richard P. Messiter; Patrick J. Cairnes, clerk.

Officers for 1884: Town Committee, James McCloskey, William Logan, George B. Read, Patrick Doran and William Green (chairman); Town Clerk, H. Kenton; Treasurer, Joseph Parker, Jr.; Assessor, James C. Johnston; and Counsel for the Board of Town Committee, Ludlow C. McCarter; the School Board was William Robertson, Arthur Greenfield, Charles Hubbard and Charles Hill.

Arlington is a beautifully situated village in the northern part of Kearny township. It was founded about the same time that Kearny township was organized, in 1867, by the Arlington Homestead Association, under the jurisdiction of the North New Jersey Land Company and Fuller Brothers. It was so called after Arlington Heights, Va., being elevated and sloping on both sides, like the heights alluded to in Virginia. The Montclair and Greenwood Lake Railroad runs through Arlington, and has a station which was called "Arlington Depot" before the name was given to the village. Trains run every few minutes to and from New York from the depot, and extra accommodation is afforded on Saturday afternoons. It is a flourishing village, over twenty new houses being in course of erection at the present time (July, 1884).

ARLINGTON CATHOLIC PROTECTORY.—The mansion known at present as the Arlington Catholic Protectory was built by Knapp, the great gun manufacturer, during the civil war. It was sold recently to Bishop Wigger for sixteen thousand dollars. Ten acres of ground are attached to the building. It is estimated that the building itself cost Mr. Knapp not less than one hundred thousand dollars.

The Protectory is at present in charge of Rev. Father Curran, assisted by Rev. Father John J. Tigue, of Harrison, who was recently (1884) ordained at Seton Hall College. Some fifty boys are at present cared for here, and taught printing and other useful trades. The typesetting and printing of the Sacred Heart Union, Catholic Review and other publications are done here, and the institution is destined to play a prominent part in the history of Hudson County.

BECKETT & McDOWELL'S MANUFACTORY of all kinds of heavy machinery, is the largest institution of its kind in Kearny. The machinery for the great refrigerator used to supersede ice at the brewery of Peter Hauck & Co. was made by this firm. Another of a similar kind is now in operation for the great Kruger Brewery, in Newark. This firm, on account of the great strength and artistic beauty of its work, is always overstocked with orders.

In the rear of Beckett & McDowell's is a large building once used as a gold refinery, but now dismantled by fire and not occupied. There was once a famous watch-factory here, but that, too, was burned. Across the railroad from the depot is Butler & Goulding's machine-shop.

Arlington is not yet rich in manufactures, nor in many other of the accompaniments of modern civilization and improvement, but from its healthy location and beautiful surroundings, and also from its refined and cultured society, it is destined to make rapid progress, and become the principal and most interesting part of Kearny township. It is safe to say that Arlington will in the future agitate a breaking up of Kearny township, giving the lower part to Harrison, and organizing herself into the town of Arlington.

SCHOOLS.—A large new brick building is called the Public School. It is a fine structure, of which Arlingtonians are proud. Professors Le Cato, Pierce, Fiedler and Hubbard have consecutively filled the principal's chair in the school, aided by a staff of lady assistants. Mr. Le Cato, a gentleman of dignity and fine culture, has, in addition to his public-school duties, figured as a journalist and novelist while in Arlington, being once editor of a paper there and having also written a popular novel.

Churches.—On the Main Street of Arlington stands the newly-built First Presbyterian Church. It looks to be a very solid piece of masonry. The pastor, Dr. George Shuter, is an eloquent preacher. Right across, on a side-street, stands the Methodist Church, presided over by Dr. Coorten, another preacher of ability and force.

The Knave Presbyterian Church, recently erected on Kearny Avenue, is a beautiful structure, and reflects credit upon the taste and religious zeal of the Presbyterians of Harrison and the lower end of Kearny. Its pastor is Dr. J. Kerby Smith, an eloquent preacher and popular Christian gentleman.

Within Arlington no saloon nor rum-shop can be found, and this, perhaps, accounts for its solid prosperity, and also for the tone and respectability of its residents.

The house of Mr. James A. Bell, formerly a State Senator from New York State, occupies the most prominent and elevated land in Arlington or in Kearny township. The population of Arlington is of a very cosmopolitan character, composed of retired millionaires, State Senators and legislators, merchants, clerks and business men of all kinds, who are employed in New York, and find congenial rest in their country homes at Arlington after business hours.

Clark Thread-Works.—The southern section of Kearny, touching Harrison, is ornamented with the great thread manufactories of the Clark Brothers. Next to Harrison is the Clark Mile-End Spool-Cotton Company, organized in 1883, with Thomas Russell, Robert W. Ferguson and William Russell & Co. as incorporators. George S. Lings is superintendent of the spinning-mill, and Richard Hill of the spooling mill. The spooling-mill was built in 1874, and the spinning-mill in 1882. The firm employs from seven hundred to eight hundred hands. The officers are William Clark, president; W. R. Ferguson, vice-president; and Thomas Russell, secretary and treasurer. This firm has agencies in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco.

Clark Thread Company.—The next factory or mill to be found adjacent to the one already described is the surprise and wonder of residents and visitors, on account of the huge proportions of the buildings and the great area of ground occupied by them. They are the Clark Thread Company (C. N. T. Thread-Works). The parent buildings of this company's mills, both of Newark and East Newark, are the Anchor Mills, at Parsley, Scotland, where more persons are employed than at Harrison and Newark together, and it must be recalled there are two thousand three hundred persons employed in the Newark works. The company was organized May 2, 1865, and chartered April 17th of same year. The first directors and officers were: President, Henry Sanger; Vice-President, Lewis Coleman; Treasurer, George A. Clark; Secretary, Alexander Clark; Directors, Henry Sanger, Lewis Coleman, George A. Clark, Charles H. Ludington, Isaac T. Barr, William D. Jones, Alexander Clark, Thomas Barbour and Henry and carry away his equal proportion of Mines, Minerals or Ore, & Convert the same to his own proper use during the full time and Term of Twenty five Years, he, the said Cornelius Clopper, his heirs, Executors, Administrators or Assignes, Yielding and paying therefore unto the said John Dod, his heirs, or assignes, the full and Just Sum of Six Pounds fifteen Shillings Current money upon his first Entering into the said work, and to find a man for one Year to work in the said mines for y^e use and benefit of y^e sd^d John Dod, at y^e proper Cost and Charge of the sd^d Cornelius Clopper, & y^e sd^d man to Sett in to work when they shall come to y^e hly of y^e same, and the sd^d John Dod for himself, his heirs, Executors and Administrators, doth Covenant, promise and grant to and with the sd^d Cornelius Clopper, his heirs and assignes, that he the said Cornelius Clopper, his heirs or assignes, that he or they performing the Covenant which on his part are or ought to be performed, fulfilled, accomplished, paid or kept, shall enjoy the said demised Promises, with the one Equal Eighth part of all the profits arising therefrom, without any Lett, Interruption, hinderance, Molestation, Eviction or Ejection of ted from Amsterdam, Holland, in 1650, and settled in Albany, N. Y., having married Margritta Von Slechtenhorst. To this marriage were born ten children, among whom was Arent, a native of Albany, where his birth occurred June 25, 1662. He was the pioneer of the family in New Jersey, having settled at Pompton in 1697, and removed to New Barbadoes, in the same State, in 1710. Here he purchased a tract of land, upon which the Schuyler copper-mines were discovered. Among his eight children was Col. John, who was twice married, first to Ann Van Rensselaer, of Albany, and second to Sarah Waters, of New Jersey. His son

Arent J. Schuyler

him the sd^d John Dod, his heirs or assignes, or any other persons whatsoever, by from or under me, or by my meanes, Act, Consent, privily or procurement. In Witness whereof we have hereunto Sett our hands and Seals y^e day and Year first above written

" J^s COOPER.

" J. HYBENS

" CORNELIUS CLOPPER."

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

ARENT HENRY SCHUYLER.

The progenitor of the Schuyler family in America was Philip Pietersie Von Schuyler, who emigra-

Arent J. was united in marriage to his cousin, Swan Schuyler, daughter of Adonijah Schuyler. Their children were a son, John Arent, and a daughter Ann, who died in infancy. Arent J. resided in Bergen (now Hudson) County, N. J., on the original Schuyler estate situated on the banks of the Passaic River. John Arent married Eliza Kip, a daughter of James H. Kip, a merchant of the city of New York, to whom were born children.—Arent Henry and Harriet Ann (Mrs. Smith W. Anderson, of New York). By a second marriage, to Catherine Van Rensselaer, of Albany, N. Y., were children.—Angelica Van Rensselaer, John Arent, Robert Van Rensselaer, Jacob Rutson and Catherine Gertule. The death of Mr. Schuyler occurred at the ancestral home in October, 1817. His son, Arent Henry, the subject of this biographical sketch, was born in the Schuyler mansion, on the banks of the Passaic, where much of his early life was spent. When a lad he became a resident of Jamaica, Long Island, for the purpose of pursuing his studies, and subsequently completed his education under the direction of Rev. Mr. Eigenbrodt. Returning again to the home of his parents, he determined upon the life of an agriculturist as the most congenial to his tastes, and at once became interested in the varied employments of the farm. The early death of his father threw upon him much responsibility, and made his assistance and knowledge especially valuable at this juncture. In the division of the paternal estate he chose that portion now the residence of his widow, located in Kearny township, Hudson Co. Here he erected, in 1827, a commodious dwelling, which was destroyed by fire in 1870, and at once rebuilt. The healthful pursuits of a farmer engaged his attention for the remainder of his life.

Mr. Schuyler was, on the 24th of April, 1828, married to Mary Caroline Kingsland, daughter of Judge Henry W. Kingsland, of New Barbadoes, Bergen Co., and granddaughter of Edmund William Kingsland. Their children are Henry Kingsland, married in 1859 to Ellen P. daughter of Anthony P. Valentine, of Spottswood, N. J., who has three children,—John Arent (deceased), Smith Anderson (deceased), Edwin Nesbitt (deceased); Harriet Anderson (Mrs. Sidney A. Schieffelin (deceased); Sarah Jauncey (Mrs. Van Courtland Van Rensselaer; Arent Henry (deceased); Richards Kingsland; Mary Caroline (deceased); and Catherine Gertrude (deceased).

Mr. Schuyler as an Old-Line Whig, and later as a Republican, manifested much interest in the local issues of the day. He served as justice of the peace, filled the office of chosen freeholder of his township and held various minor positions. He found, however, little pleasure in the exciting scenes of a political career, and seldom abandoned, even temporarily, the congenial labor of the husbandman for the busy arena of politics. He was in his religious belief a firm Episcopalian, and both vestryman and warden in that church, to which he was zealously attached.

The death of Mr. Schuyler occurred on the 19th of May, 1878, shortly after the interesting occasion of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage with Mrs. Schuyler, who survives him.

CHAPTER XLVII.

NORTH BERGEN TOWNSHIP.¹

ON the 10th of February, 1843, North Bergen was set off, making two townships to cover the area before covered by the township of Bergen. This was about three years after the creation of the county, which, with the present change, now consisted of Jersey City, Van Vorst, Harrison, Bergen and North Bergen. This township organized in April, 1843, with all the territory lying north of the Mill Creek and the New Jersey Railroad, and chose for its representatives in the county board Edwin R. V. Wright and John Tonele, Jr. Local interests and an increasing population prompted further subdivisions, and the territory so covered by North Bergen was parceled out as years went on, in making up several other municipalities. This fact is noted when we see Hoboken set off March 1, 1849; town of Hudson, March 4, 1852; Weehawken (in part, March 15, 1859; Guttenberg (partially), March 9, 1859; West Hoboken, Feb. 28, 1861; Union township, Feb. 28, 1861.

The courts began their sessions within this township Sept. 20, 1843, availing themselves of the conveniences then offered by the Newkirk House. The subsequent year Lafayette, the nation's guest, received an ovation here, being then en route to Newark. An elegant walking-cane mounted with gold, with a suitable inscription,² was presented to the hero. The address, by Rev. John Cornelison, on this occasion, concluded as follows: "As a tribute of esteem and veneration, permit me, sir, to ask the favor of your acceptance of this small token of respect, taken from an apple-tree under which you once dined, and which once afforded you a shelter from the piercing rays of noonday; and, although it possesses no healing virtue, may it still be a support. And may you, sir, after ending a life of usefulness and piety be admitted into the regions of everlasting joy and felicity." Large numbers of people gathered to welcome the hero, and to testify their regard for one whose example inspired no little courage and patriotism during the struggle for liberty and independence. On his reaching Jersey City he had already been presented to Governor Williamson. This event occurred Sept. 23, 1824.

County Poor Farm.—What in earlier days was denominated the Poor-House Farm had ceased to be an institution needed by a populated region showing three incorporated cities. Broader regulations must be made looking to a more complicated condition. Accordingly, as early as November, 1845, some thoughts were given to the subject of the future condition and requirements. Following these came estimates predicated upon the purchase and improvement of the property at Seaucus. That property consisted of two hundred and seventy-five acres, seventy-five of which were in a cultivatable state, besides woodland and meadow sufficient for all practical purposes, and an inexhaustible quarry of stone well adapted to yield the Russ and Belgian pavement. The quarry lies at least one hundred feet above the level of the river and directly on its bank. The committee delegated to consider the subject of purchase in 1855 were Gilliam Van Houten, of Hudson City; John Sarges, Jr., of North Bergen; Charles W. Fisher, of Hoboken; Mindert Van Horne, of Bergen; Cornelius Shepherd, of Harrison; and John H. Platt, of Hudson City.

² "Shaded the hero and his friend, Washington, in 1779; presented by the Corporation of Bergen in 1824." The tree was near Hartman Van Wageningen's house, and the heroes had dined there during one of their visits to Bergen.

The committee found, among other matters, the poor-house and farm at Secaucus to be owned as follows: North Bergen, two-sixteenths; Hudson City, two-sixteenths; Hoboken City, four-sixteenths; Bergen, eight-sixteenths.

The recommendation to purchase the farm came eventually into operation, commissioners from these four municipalities gaining by a legislative act the needed powers in 1861, and the sale was consummated in February, 1862, the county taking the property in the manner, as years before, it had bought the plot where the court-house stands.

Beacon Course.—Turf matters gained no small attention from sportsmen far and near at the races in this locality. The course was upon lands purchased of John J. Newkirk, by Cyrus S. Browning and Hiram Gilbert. Large gatherings were convened when the noted steeds were announced to show their speed here. The course was eligibly situated, and eminent points in swift movements got notched at this course during the time it was in vigorous operation. "Dutchman" made a memorable record here Aug. 1, 1839. A large concourse witnessed this spectacle, and Hiram Woodruff, years afterwards, declared that "it was not by any means all that 'Dutchman' could have done that day." He rode the animal, and believed the people that saw "Dutchman's" exploit shared the same opinion. "Dutchman" achieved three miles in 7:32½. A running horse accompanied this trotter, the race being against time.

An achievement won by Lady Suffolk here, July 12, 1842, met with much notice. She outdid two competitors upon the track, and went one mile under the saddle in "the then unheard, even undreamed-of time, 2:26½." Beppo and Oneida Chief had been pitted against this mare. Succeeding this grand race a city chronicler says: "There were Lady Suffolk neckties, Lady Suffolk boots and Lady Suffolk bonnets. Everything and everybody smart and fast was compared to my Lady Suffolk." This performance by Lady Suffolk continued unsurpassed for a period of nine years. Tacony then beat the Lady's time by that half-second, and in four years Flora Temple stepped along, taking Tacony's chaplet by trotting a mile in 2:24. Of course these were mere introductions to what the county has since exhibited. At the Beacon course Seneca Chief and Billy showed their speed as pacers, July 14, 1841; Dutchess, Cayuga Chief and Pleasure Boy tested their speed Sept. 19, 1842; Sir William, Ajax and Jersey Blue, Oct. 8, 1844; Lady Tompkins and Amira, October 17th, same year. Moscow and Reality had a one-mile heat Oct. 6, 1854. In a hurdle race November 5th, same year, C. S. Browning was thrown from his horse and killed. The track ceased to be much frequented, became less and less popular, and got no credits for either speed or endurance during the later months of its career. The Grand Inquisitor took cognizance of it as a public institution, deemed it objectionable, made a presentation to the court of their sentiments, and the course gradually ceased to gain patronage—and went out.

Frenchman's Garden.—Lot No. 18, forms a part of the present Maepelah Cemetery, and was a part of the "Frenchman's Garden." Concerning this garden, I have met with the following poetic and somewhat sonorous accounts:

"In a mild and romantic situation on Bergen Creek, nearly opposite the city of New York, thirty acres of land were purchased for a garden and fruitery by the unfortunate Louis XVI., who, as proprietor, became a naturalized citizen by act of the Legislature."¹ This statement of Warden seems to have been based on a notice relating to this garden in the New Jersey Journal, June 27, 1787, in which it is said: "Part of this is at present inclosed with a stone wall, and a universal collection of exotic, as well as domestic plants, trees and flowers are already begun to be introduced to the elegant spot which in time must rival, if not excel, the most elaborate gardens in Europe. The situation is naturally wild and romantic, between two considerable rivers, in view of the main ocean, the city of New York, the heights of Staten Island and a vast extent of dismal mountains on the western side of the landscape." As "tall oaks from little acorns grow," so these exaggerated statements had their origin in the following simple fact: "On March 3, 1783, Andrew Michaux, in his petition to the Legislature of this State, set forth that the King of France had commissioned him as the botanist to travel through the United States; that he had power to import from France any tree, plant or vegetable that might be wanting in this country; that he wished to establish near Bergen a botanical garden of about thirty acres, to experiment in agriculture and gardening, and which he intended to stock with French and American plants, as also plants from all over the world. The Legislature granted his petition, and permitted him, as an alien, to hold not exceeding two hundred acres of land in this State.

"He came to this country fortified with a flattering letter of introduction, dated at Vienna, Sept. 3, 1783, from the Marquis de Lafayette to Washington."² "He was attached to the Jardin des Plantes in Paris. He brought with him the gardener, Paul Saunier, who took the title to the ground bought for the garden. The place was stocked with many plants and trees,

¹ Warden "Hist. of the U. S.," i, 40.

² Correspondence of the American Revolution, iv, 115.

among which was the Lombardy poplar. From this garden this once celebrated tree was spread abroad through the country, and pronounced an exotic of priceless value."¹ (Winfield's "Hist. Hud. Co.")

Paul Sannier, the veteran gardener, lived to an old age. His house was upon the site that afterwards became Temperance Hall, the latter-mentioned edifice having been erected by John Shields, who was one of the ten members of the Board of Chosen Freholders in the year 1848. Shields was likewise a member of the same board with John Hagne, in 1850. Traditions touching Sannier are not scant, and accounts of his floral and pomological operations are somewhat interesting. One Anthony Parmentier is said to have introduced the potato in France; the gardener of one H. B. Pierreport the dahlia in America. Commodore Chauncey, it is said, introduced to garden cultivation on this continent, about the year 1812, the Lima bean. Taking the accounts touching Sannier's novelties, as related by old residents, we would find quite a variety of introductions by him. His activity in fostering and making thrifty exotic plants and shrubs was one of the characteristics of the man. Assistants were employed to collect local seeds, many of which were sent to France and in other directions.

What in common parlance is styled the smoking bean tree, had origin with Saunier here. There is one in front of the premises to-day that grew up from the old stump of a veteran tree that blew down some years ago. He had a thorn-tree upon his grounds, another tree that bore what the boys called the checker-pin, a nut having a flavor like that of the ordinary chestnut.

Pioneer Tannery.—Another industry arose in this immediate vicinity. It was toil in a different department, being that of tanning. One proprietor inaugurated the business in or about the year 1789, and carried it successfully on till about the year 1817. The tannery was a rod or two north of the Three Pigeons, on the east side of the Bergen turnpike, as that highway now runs. The structure was of wood, and some of its timbers were still to be seen so late as the year 1855. The dwelling of Cornelius Doremus, the prime mover in this business, still stands, it being an old-fashioned mansion of stone, located west side of the Bergen turnpike. Doremus had a store, hay-scales, a farm well-tilled, and took a prominent position both as a man of enterprise and of a sturdy principle. The land, coming into his possession by purchase towards the close of the last century, continues mainly with his heirs at this period. Mr. Doremus did not lack zeal nor public spirit, as evidences of this appeared in the gift of two lots for the purpose of a lecture and school-room. Subsequent evolutions of doctrine overtaking Mr. Doremus, with others using this property, caused considerable contention. The questions were intricate and got into the courts. The fact was ultimately reached, however, that on separating themselves, Jan. 29, 1824, from the Classis of Bergen, those acting with the favorers of that dissolution ceased an allegiance where this property was vested. In this category stood Mr. Doremus and those representing him. Himself and the adherents to the new cause went to a new fold, and took none of the real property with them. "The law," remarked Daniel Webster, on the 10th of May, 1847, in one of his brilliant speeches, "is an instrument and means of instruction to the mass of the people, manufacturers, merchants, and farmers; acting as litigants, jurors, witnesses or spectators find it a useful school." No doubt, Doremus found some edification in the law. The veteran had one son and four daughters. Of the latter, two married and two continued single. Only one daughter survives at this writing. Her residence is in the city. As years passed the dwelling was tenanted by James MacFarlane, Jacob Willse, Ferris Scott and others. It is at present in the occupancy of Charles De Clyae.

SMITH FAMILY.—Another resident of New Durham mentioned among the older residents was Baker Smith. Mr. Smith lived on the west side of Bergen turnpike, a rod or two north of the Doremus dwelling. The ancient abode made way some years since for another house, now occupied by a son, Baker B. Smith. Yet many of the older inhabitants remember this ancient domicile, a view of which appears on the following page. Mr. Baker the elder died Jan. 7, 1853. After his demise the widow continued to occupy the premises with an invalid daughter. Here gathered many a social evotional meeting; the fashion of the times led the local worshippers to the house meetings on a week-day evening, and the social prayer-meeting of the little village circle often gathered here. The meetings, as years passed by, were attended by Elder Ackerson, Deacon Greenleaf, Dominies Perry, Hendrickson, Gibbs, Martin, Northam and others. A quiet serenity accompanied the gatherings mentioned here, and the chronicler who wrote the memoir of a resident of New Durham on one occasion might say of others, "He neglected not the public assembly of the saints, nor the meeting for prayer." Mrs. Smith survived her husband seventeen years. She closed her mortal career, aged eighty-six years. Her maiden-name was Elizabeth Sickles. Her marriage with Baker Smith occurred June 1, 1803. Five sons and five daughters blessed these nuptials. The eldest son, Enoch, a resident of New Durham, died Feb. 28, 1878, aged seventy-three.

New Durham.—When the little community and limited area of territory holding for years the name of New Durham earliest took that name cannot be definitely ascertained. What impressive incident suggested the name does not transpire. The English name of Durham, with the prefix "New," seems a suggestive source; yet what immigrant announced that choice cannot be heralded. An ingenious origin is mentioned by one of the inhabitants. It is to this effect: that in days far back, singing-schools were popular here, and New Durham was a favorite tune. So lively a suggestion as this comes very rarely to mind, and carries with it plausibility. The cuckoo gives name to a bird through a transfer of sound. The katydid derives its designation in similar style, and the name under consideration grew out of the tune holding an intimate relation to the place. Such is the present postmaster's idea as to the derivation of the name New Durham,—the name of a tune once practiced at a singing-school here being applied to the place.

¹Old New York, 23.

years ago stood a dwelling at one time occupied by a family named Masters. The scenery had its very fascinating attractions; few prospects could equal it. The writer remembers having heard the view here extolled, and has often noticed the especial features of the landscape. Few admirers of a variegated view would be otherwise than delighted with the prospect here enjoyed. The slope is to the east and south, and the stand-point referred to is near the northeast corner of Flower Hill Cemetery, at East New Durham.

Agriculture.—Agricultural enterprises are by no means isolated about this township. Mention is made of J. F. Furley, who bought the Van Gieson place about the year 1830. This is on Secaucus. Finley

THE SMITH FARM HOUSE.

Topography of the Township.—The topographical aspects of this township are various, mingling plain and meadow, hill and dale, rock and sand. Considerable quantities of the area attain extensive cultivation, being well calculated to yield very productive crops with but the ordinary amount of labor. Few domains of the same extent show such a diversity of surface. At North New Durham, southeast of the present toll-gate, is a sand-pit that yields superior building sand. To the north and to the south the soil is susceptible of an easy and high degree of cultivation. A rod or two west of the sand-pit a meadow may be seen having the darkest-colored mould. Towards the east, after ascending the slope, may be noticed a rocky ridge.

Near this site, a short distance to the west, some subsequently, it is said, sold to another party, who afterward sold to Dr. Glover; Dr. Glover sold to Huber. Finley was a gold-beater, and made efforts to conduct the latter business here also, employing a couple of journeymen, with a brace or so of apprentices. Success was not, however, uniform with Finley; his style of farming encountered many mishaps. The California fever overtook him, and he migrated to the Golden Gate. A very interesting chapter, edifying to the reader, upon agricultural themes would emanate from Secaucus. Its cultivators of the earth were numerous and enterprising from an early period in our American history, and the results of their exploits have been more fortunate than in Finley's case. Then the De Motte farm, at the southern extremity of the present township's bounds, has its early history, like that of Van Vorst, north of that farm. The homestead of the late Judge Sturges holds its recollections in many minds. The cozy garden of William Scott, where the late Samuel S. Day and his son, William T., located some twenty years ago, wakens remembrances. Scott¹ is said to have been the earliest market gardener who planted the Lima bean in this vicinity. Agricultural matters made headway under the guidance of Joseph Danielson, his brothers, James and William, and his brother-in-law, Evert Greenleaf, and Jesse Van Gelden. Enoch Smith and John Williams made the business profitable at their places. Others exhibited scarcely less skill. An exhibit made by a market gardener of the results of his labors—not including receipts from sales of milk and fruits—during the year 1866, shows: From sales of beans and peas, $643; of potatoes, $140; of garden produce, $2920; of pork, $85; of hay, $109; of sand, $900.

Few farms numbering their hundreds of acres evince more remunerative results than here; the fields of enterprise where the foregoing figures were worked out cover less than forty acres. Andrew Beck began operations here in the spring of 1856 as a farm-hand. By dint of industry he has become another exemplar of the fact that any pursuit followed with energy and conducted with tact takes a man to success. Beck resides nearly opposite the site of the Paul Saunier house. Mr. Beck confines his attention to market vegetables. For a few years he canned tomatoes grown on his grounds, but abandoned that addition to his yearly vocations. A considerable care for several seasons past has been given to his celery crop, an edible he was first to cultivate to any extent in this neighborhood.

Blue-Bent Industry.—At an early period considerable trade was carried on in blue-bent, cooper's flag and cat-tails. The blue-bent, like the other commodities named, is a production of the meadow land along the Hackensack River and the neighboring creeks. The flag was used for chair-mats, it being a material for making the rush-bottomed chairs. Blue-bent was early used in thatching barns and barracks, and in later years has served to make mats to cover the sashes of vegetable gardens and florists. The cat-tail industry gained the attention of a good many of the earlier inhabitants. That and the wood business employed the populace here to a considerable extent during the autumn and winter. The traffic in Christmas greens extended here somewhat during the months of November and December. The cooper's flag was usually cut in August and during the early autumn. The cat-tails were stripped during the cold weather. Some of the inhabitants showed great briskness in this work. It is said that the late John I. Earle, when a young man, stripped eight hundred pounds in the space of a single day, a feat very few persons have attempted, much less performed. The bulk of these merchautables attained sale in New York City. Space is too limited either to make mention of those considerably engaged in that domain of labor or to extend our chronicles in the agricultural department.

Pioneer Modes of Travel.—Old residents refer to the years when the mail-coach was running from Hoboken to Hackensack, also to the era when the plank-road served as the highway for travel. They make mention of the toll-gate near Hoboken as tended by Willse, of the Hill-side toll-gate tended by Ryer. The present toll-gate is at North New Durham, tended by George H. Mabie since April 20, 1882. Among those having the stage lines were Edward Van Buren and one Vanderpoel. The accommodation coach was run by Peter Riker or by Edward Seeley. One Doremus blew the stage-horn, carried the mail and run a line of stages for many years. The stage halted at the Three Pigeons, in going to Hoboken in the morning and when returning in the afternoon. The terminus of this line was Hackensack. As the Hackensack route was relinquished an omnibus line or two succeeded for the shorter distances. The latter mode of travel, however, soon ceased, the conveniences attending steam-car travel superseding all others.

Pioneer Training-Days.—Recollections among the older citizens here leads them to mention the training days of years past. An annual parade took place in June of each year, when the militia, in their regimentals, won some little renown by going through the drill in open field. A recourse was had to grounds owned by Abraham Saunier, near the present railroad station. Here the gallant officers issued summer-day commands, and the rank and file took even steps, being armed and equipped as the law directs. The spectacle gained considerable notice, the populace appearing in large numbers to witness the display. Everybody admires the precise movement seen in the military march, and where the manoeuvres are made for the purpose of instruction they are undoubtedly useful. Independent of all this, there are a number of advantages to be derived from keeping this branch of service abreast of the age in skill. Old residents mention military encampments within this township at different periods. One that attracted comment throughout the community took place near the Three Pigeons in the neighborhood of thirty years ago. It covered four days, beginning on a Wednesday and closing the following Saturday. On that occasion the beautiful pasture-fields about the broad Doremus manor, east side of the Bergen turnpike, were covered with white canvas tents. Martial music greeted the ears of the lookers-on now and then, and the whole array had attractions both for the ear and eye. Very great enthusiasm attended the showy gathering, as is usually the case at all military encampments. The commanding officers inspected and reviewed the forces in and out of drill. From all accounts the affair at times waxed jolly. Garry Day, the genial host of the Three Pigeons, appointed four aids, so needful was it for him to have assistance in meeting the lively run upon his beverage bank. It was sangaree here and julep there, otard in one direction and milk-punch in another. His efficient accomplices in doing justice to the crowd were Enoch Greenleaf, Egbert Post, Peter Vincent and William Young. Years after, even to this very hour, the great encampment near the old Three Pigeons will gain a lively remark from all who were there, as well as all who heard of its graphic scenes.

¹ He died here March 30, 1857, aged sixty-one.

Cricket Club.—In the month of May, 1856, the little community here had occasion to note the formation of a cricket club. Quite a degree of earnestness succeeded its formation. Fortifying themselves by practice, most of the members attained considerable proficiency in the game. Monotony begets a dullness; the sport and emulation attending this exercise had their enlivening influences. Any close observer could discover the direct aim of such an active organization to be the elevation of the physical condition. The club, if not protracted in its career, never displayed more activity than discretion, nor more enthusiasm than strength. William Smith, president; John Sealey, secretary.

Young Men's Association.—The Bergen Woods Young Men's Association operated for a number of years, and about the year 1856 merged in the North Bergen Lyceum. Many of the inhabitants showed an interest in promoting this institution, and quite a considerable number exercised their talents in contributing to its entertainments. The older citizens about the township occasionally recur to the meetings, which were frequently attended by animating debates. Occasional lectures were produced by its members, or announced to the public through its agency. Its object was the promotion of a useful knowledge by mutual instruction. A record of the debates, some of which were upon local questions,¹ would fill many large volumes. Occasionally its proceedings, in view of local intertainment, were varied.

This lyceum had been inaugurated to do service. Its opening exercises occurred Feb. 6, 1856, and consisted of able addresses by Revs. W. V. V. Mabon, Leopold Mohr, Joseph Perry, and Hon. Washington B. Williams. The more festive associations were also attractive,—any local history would be most lamentably short-sighted if neglecting to mention the "Old Tops." An organization under this title continued in operation a number of years.

The gilded top wound up at the opening of the ceremonies was suspended from a centre piece in the ceiling. It continued to spin till the small hours, the social assembly meanwhile joining the top in all those gyrations the poetry of motion is accused of suggesting. The 22d of February was the usual time for a festive anniversary. In 1856 this anniversary took form and got merrying at the Three Pigeons, the gathering there having an enjoyable festival. The custodian of the top was the veteran and genial Cornelius Day, who retains it as an heirloom, suggestive of a pleasant lang syne. Mr. Day was born Dec. 19, 1812. Himself and a shopmate, Henry Banta, have been noted many years as the early risers. Banta has been thirty-five years doing business at one establishment, and is said never yet to have been late. Neither was ever known to "run for office."

At one of the Old Tops' celebrations appeared a genial citizen, a local justice, holding his commission to administer justice in one of the municipalities of the county. His conversation soon proved him to be a cosmopolitan in sentiment and amply supplied with reminiscences of the past. His graphic accounts of early sleighing scenes seemed to bring the sleighing-party at once before his auditors. Accounts given by him made the roads leading through this township popular highways in the sleighing season. Here especially the admirers of the winter's carnival were wont to assemble, the Three Pigeons having been a trying-place for these excursionists for a period now "time out of mind." He had met jovial parties here fifty years ago. There is at all times a large scope for enjoyment at such a season. The atmosphere is bracing; the bells are jingling; dashing steeds step speedily along; every class of society has at service a source of diversion; the happy voices of youth are heard; young and old, in fact, are gay, smiling, buoyant and free. Our clever talker would fain say hurrah! to the sleighing season.

The Evening Class.—Many residents here and there no doubt remember the evening class. The writer has seen somewhere a roll of pupils who were studying history in this region in 1856. Such an excerpt from the memory of the past would in all probability be attractive to many readers. Multitudes in the land recollect that they once were members of an evening class. At least a list of one of these, now an item of years gone by, our records permit us to publish: Peter E. Ackerson, John Cox, Edward A. Danielson, James Danielson, George D. Hassard, Job Sealey, H. H. Von Geahn, Paul Van Cleft, John Willse William Wilmington.

At a popular meeting held at Buck's, on Bergen turnpike, Daniel Lake acted as chairman, March 30, 1857. At a meeting held 23d instant the following local committees were appointed: Bull's Ferry, Dyer and Meehler; New Durham, T. D. Eckerson, John Sealey; Secaneus, Adrian Post, Job Smith; Union Hill, Henry J. Rottmann, S. Goely; West Hoboken, A. Anderson, James Ludlow.

Old Turnpike Difficulties.—No history would measure the ground completely and neglect to name the contest with the Turnpike Company. When the latter came to run the roadway just south of the early Saunier site it met with a blacksmith-shop in the occupancy of Joseph Danielson. Mr. Danielson, according to all accounts, took umbrage at the proceeding; he determined to hold the forge where he had been accustomed to see it for many years. The corporation sought to remove it. Danielson demurred. Old people say the company removed the shop. Danielson put it back. The company at length got weary and allowed the road to remain abridged and abridged by the obstacle rather than litigate further. The old rookery, as many styled the disused shop, remained in the roadway many years. At the demise of Danielson the item of realty went, with others, to one of the heirs, who conveyed it to John Seely, Feb. 8, 1867. He passed it to the company, describing the property as "lot marked H, and known as the blacksmith-shop and the land on which it stands and covers, being about twenty feet square, and bounded northwardly, southwardly and westwardly by the Bergen Turnpike Company's road."

¹ One of these was, "Would a race-course be of benefit to the county?" On the affirmative, John I. Earle, Henry Allen, negative, Jacob Norrborn, Thomas Gardner.

North Bergen in the Rebellion.—At the outbreak of the civil contest a war circular, couched in the following language, emanated from a delegation deputed to take action on the subject:

"Inhabitants of North Bergen: The War Committee of the township are deputed to say a few words to you upon the present crisis in the country's affairs. But a brief time ago and our town had no organization for operations in this work; in doing our part with other townships' special committees have been directed to call upon you for contributions, and you are earnestly invited to deliberate upon 'ways and means' at a public meeting to be held at the Old School-House in New Durham, October 15th, at 7½ o'clock P. M. Fellow Citizens! a formidable Rebellion is in the land; the institutions under which we live so pleasantly prosper are in peril. A just constitution is in jeopardy. The ship of State is menaced by a malignant crew. Our President, with those in authority, should at no time seek aid or aid in vain; loyalty to the Union must stay the hand of Treason, and put down an unreasonable effort to usurp the authority of the Government. Traitors have taken our Forts and other public property, closed the ear to the voice of patriotic duty, quelled the spirit of fealty to the Federal authority and set up a policy of their own, arraying themselves in a defiant and hostile attitude toward the general Government.

"In efforts to retake the public property, so stealthily seized, you also serve the most honorable and rigorous resistance; in endeavors to put the laws in force—the Union authorities receive rebellions and belligerent buffets; calls to these prevalent and ruthless sons of the Republic to return to their allegiance are unheeded. The mild influences of the Moral law avail not. The sound reasonings of the good old 'common law' restrain no rebel. The stern force of Military rule can be alone effectual against treason. 'An appeal to arms and the God of hosts' has been all that was left us. Those whom we once delighted to honor and were pleased to call us 'brethren' are now our foes. A sufficient force to make the laws respected is required. Demands upon patriotism are here, as money, 'the sinews of war' and men mighty in battle. To withhold that which you have as a power in war, is to give aid and comfort to the enemy." By your military talent you exhibit how heroic and resolute you can be in deeds of fortitude, when leaping forth to the rescue; already our stalwart and valiant youth strengthen the arm of the Government in rebuking the seditious and subduing the foe that would dishonor our flag. A CITIZEN CAN HOLD NO INTEREST DISTINCT FROM HIS COUNTRY'S. Are you, fellow-citizens, generous to the Government that has hitherto nurtured you? Have you an earnest devotion for the general good? Can it be that any among you would show 'the white feather'? Will we hear your safe decision when the many are in counsel? Will you be prompt and ready in all emergencies? While amid the clash of conflict, brave sons are as steel against sedition will not your means and your zeal and your energies be at the service of the Republic? Let us hope that our township will be liberal to the levies upon its loyalty, and that its patriotism in this crisis will never be questioned.

"ABM W. DYER,
"JOHN STURGES,
"HENRY VAN GLAHN,

"A. H. RYDER, Secretary.

"Committee."

At the spring election in this township a ticket appeared with the American standard in its true colors, and measures were consummated by which the families of such men as enlisted in the military service should not experience the pressure of want. About this region, as in others, there were utterances made that neither pure patriotism nor the sternest loyalty could sanction. The sentiment of toleration, however, prevailed, and the injudicious expression had no further effect than is ordinarily the result of similar indiscretion. There is no better antidote to much of that sort of imprudence than to pass it by, allowing it to evaporate as something evanescent. Life with the dullard, as with the blind aborigines, passes away with merely the narrowest conception of the loyal dignity to which human nature, under more genial auspices, is led to aspire. The years of the civil war passed with a popular eagerness here to suppress the evil of insubordination. Among the martyrs to the country's cause, dying in the service, were Edward A. Danielson, Garret Earle, Joseph Greenleaf, John Snyder.

In his proclamation of Oct. 8, 1866, the President said, "The civil war that so recently closed among us has not been anywhere reopened. Foreign intervention has ceased to excite alarm or apprehension. Intrusive pestilence has been benignly mitigated. Domestic tranquillity has improved. Sentiments of conciliation have largely prevailed, and the affections of loyalty and patriotism have been widely received." And he adds, "these great national blessings demand a national acknowledgment."

Autumn Holiday.—Thanksgiving met with no ordinary celebration under these impressive circumstances. The aggregate of the populace must unite in a rendering of thanks. Without these, this central combination of thought, there is a repleteness of desolation. The tree needs something, the nourisher of its roots. The moon has a centre towards which it gravitates. The earth has a sun to sustain it, to bathe it in its beautiful light and give it warmth. So the intelligent creature derives life from, and renders his annual thanks to, the source of all goodness, the eternal Being, the benign Father. In 1613 a company of traders from Holland established themselves at the site of the present metropolis of which this region is an environ. Happily, with them came ideas in no degree tinctured with superstition. We have the best of evidences going to show the settlers in due time made spiritual matters objects of regard. They were careful to extend and to preserve "the blessings of education and religion."

The mind within a republic is active. We recognize times for thought and for thankfulness. Intellect was not bestowed to lie dormant; its faculties merit exercise. More people die annually from a want of sufficient brain-work than from an excess of it. Many are inclined to think that it is good to give the mind full play, to expand the powers of thought by reading and observation. A great deal depends upon the mind's having its full share of activity.¹ In no department is it more sublimely exercised than when invoking the favor of heaven. Here it harmonizes with the most renowned of poetries early engrafted upon our judicial system, and which marches in the front ranks of human progress. It is a system that bears inscribed upon it principles of everlasting fidelity to the recorded laws of God. No public sentiment extant, to any degree noticed here or in our vicinity contravenes these enunciations. Two stanzas of a metrical piece sung in one of the public schools within the township in 1857-'58, yield poetic expression to pleasing ideas,—

"May streams of knowledge flow
Throughout the land,
Thou shalt the light of life
All in us expand.

Chorus—"Long live America,
Land of the free;
Firmly stand, freedom's land,
Long life to thee!"

"God save America!
Oh, may she be Overshadowed evermore
Father, by Thee

Chorus—"Long live, etc.

Testament Reading Class.—The members of a Testament reading class, about the year 1857, within this township were

- | | |
|-------------------------|----------------------|
| Samuel H. Greenleaf, | John J. Greenleaf, |
| George W. McDonald, | John H. Woodrington, |
| Charles W. Woodrington, | David T. Ekersen, |
| Edgar F. Perry, | Marie Chasmar |
| Philip P. Smith, | Nancy Greenleaf, |
| George W. Stanton, | A. F. C. Holstein, |
| Alvah F. Perry, | Margaret Williams, |
| William H. Van Gieson, | M. A. Van Glahn, |
| John S. Ekersen, | E. M. Brulman, |
| Charles W. Bullen, | Martha F. Sturges, |
| Jaime Everson, | Euphemia Williams |
| Adolphus Holstein, | Susan McDonald, |
| John Collins, | Penelope A. Smith, |
| Rosert Greenleaf, | Sarah J. Durston, |
| Henry Collins, | C. McDonald, |
| August Appel, | Anna M. Smith, |
| H. Ekersen, Jr., | Sophronia McDonald, |
| J. A. Danielsch, | Mary E. Williams, |
| William F. Greenleaf, | |

Attendance at this school, No. 4, at dates mentioned were as follows:

	Boys.	Girls.		Boys.	Girls.
1857, May 12	35	16	1857, Nov. 4	33	14
1857, May 25	46	17	1857, Dec. 3	37	25
1857, May 29	45	18	1858, Jan. 3	47	24
1857, June 3	42	19	1858, Feb. 4	51	22
1857, June 15	46	21	1858, Feb. 10	60	30
1857, Oct. 23	39	19

¹The fact is, knowledge purified, refined, is the attribute of God himself.—School Superintendent B. F. Collins, in School Report of 1856, page 36

The following is a list of the meritorious awards attained by superior recitations, giving the date, class, prize, and name of pupil gaining the award:

- 1857, Dec. 15—Intermediate, Youth's Day Spring, J. H. Rowland.
- Dec. 24.—Number two, "Morning Rambles," W. H. Post.
- Dec. 24.—Number one, coin, Robert Allen.
- Dec. 30.—Number four, "American Southerner," Samuel H. Greenleaf.
- Dec. 30.—Number five, "The Student," Henry Collins.
- 1858, Jan. 8.—Intermediate, "Class Teacher," Winfield S. Danton.
- Jan. 8.—Number three, "Class-Book," William H. Van Gieson.
- Jan. 17.—Number three, "Normal Reader," Sarah Jane Danielsch.
- Jan. 17.—Intermediate, book of poetry, John E. Danielson.
- Jan. 17.—Number two, "Robin Red-Breast," Robert Ramsey.
- Jan. 17.—Number one, coin, Billy Paulson.
- Jan. 29.—Number two, coin, Samuel Masters.
- Feb. 5.—Number two, coin, George W. Ekersen.
- Feb. 12.—Number one coin, Frederick Johnston.
- Feb. 19.—Number two, illuminated card, Catherine Von Glahn.
- Feb. 26.—Number one, coin, Egbert Post, Jr.
- March 5.—Number one, coin, William H. Danielson, Jr.
- March 12.—Number one coin, Aaron M. Payne.
- March 19.—Number one, coin, Frederick Johnston.
- March 26.—Number two, illuminated card, George W. Ekersen.
- March 26.—Intermediate, "Biblical passage," Henrietta L. Smith.
- March 26.—Number three, "Robin Hood," John Chasley.
- March 26.—Number four, "National Reader," John H. Woodrington.
- April 2.—Number five, "Book of Fables," Charles W. Bullen.
- April 30.—Number one, coin, Frederick Johnston.
- April 30.—Number two, illuminated card, C. Greenleaf.
- May 21.—Number two, illuminated card, C. Von Glahn.
- June 4.—Number two, illuminated card, P. E. Ekersen.
- June 7.—Number one coin, W. Evert Greenleaf.
- June 7.—Number two, illuminated card, George W. Ekersen.
- June 7.—Number three, "Gulliver's Voyage," S. J. Danielson.
- June 7.—Intermediate, "Marial Scenes," Winfield S. Danielson.
- June 7.—Number four, "The Boy's True Joy," Samuel H. Greenleaf.

Educational.—A view of the school interests taken in the year 1856 presented an exhibit of six districts, which were, excepting one, wholly within the township. There was but one township at that time having a greater number, and that was Bergen, which numbered seven, with an aggregate of thirteen hundred and eighty-five school children. North Bergen reported thirteen hundred and nineteen children. Hoboken and Harrison each numbered three districts, although the former exhibited four times more children than the latter. The report touching Jersey City showed one district, and yet the number of children there was more than four times the number reported by Hoboken. Two of the schools in the township here were each provided with two departments, the more advanced pupils attending in the one, and the primary pupils in the other. Such arrangements made eight public schools. The superintendent speaks of select and parochial schools. Among the former were those kept by Mr. Penfield and by Miss Augusta Fredericks.

WEAVERTOWN DISTRICT.—At present there is no district by this name. Quite a considerable number of scholars attended a school here many years. The frame building used as a school-house was removed when Hudson City became a separate municipality. The school-house stood alone as a solitary object a number of years at the southwest corner of the Weaverstown or Bergenwood road, and the road leading down the slope to Secaucus. The grounds about the premises had a rural aspect till the tide of immigration and real estate speculations wrought out great changes. An early list of the parents in this district and the number of school children, signed by trustees Jacob Newkirk and Thomas Taylor, will show the range of the district. The record is as follows:

Parents.	No. of Children
Mr. Korriann	5
Mr. Masker	4
Mr. Francois	1
Mr. F. Eyth	2
Mr. F. Goppner	1
Mr. T. Roseman	2
Mr. F. Schupp	2
Mr. Julius Reichhelm	3
Mr. J. Bernhammer	2
Mr. A. Hollinger	2
Mr. Stewart	1
Mr. George De Motte	4
Mr. W. Diez	1
Mr. Buttiger	3
Mr. Dubois	1
Mr. Jacob Newkirk	5
Mrs. Heritage	4
Mr. Seifert	2
Mr. Kuhl	1
Mr. Stone	5
Mr. Weiser	1
Mr. Sharon	1
Mr. John Zabriskie	4
Mr. Jacob Zabriskie	2
Mr. William Adam	2
Mr. Joseph Scott	3
Mr. Thomas Taylor	4
Mr. George Williams	5
Mr. Jacob Anderson	3
Mr. Robert Tweed	1
Mr. Alexander Gambettie	2
Mr. Walkner	1
Mr. Grafenhorst	1

The designation given this region arose from a domestic industry at an early period in vogue among the inhabitants. Many of the dwellings of the people inhabiting that neighborhood were provided with the conveniences for weaving. The fabrics used were home-made. Citizens still residing there have recollection of this feature amongst the old folks, all of whom knew well the use of the spinning-wheel and to what purpose flax was raised. In conversation with a resident near by, at one time the occupant of the old stone house, she said recently she had been accustomed to spinning, the families all about there following that old-time industry. The girls there, when they married and migrated to new homes, in some instances took their spinning-wheels along with them. Of course the use of these machines had had their day, and other household conveniences soon sent them into the garrets, where many of the obsolescences remain to this day. As one of our poetic observers remarks,—

The quidding-stick, too, which our grandsires made,
The broom, which they shaped in the birch tree's shade,
The staffs' buzz, and the old quill wheel,
The thump of the loom, and the twirl of the reel,—
You see them rarely, and then they say,
Fading away, passing away

School Districts.—The successive changes in township boundaries varied those of the school districts. By a supplement to the act dividing this township all the territory was declared to be one district, and authority was given in that supplement (which was approved Feb. 19, 1862) to subdivide the township into four districts. These were created under the authority of that act, as follows: 1. Bull's Ferry; 2. Secaucus; 3. South New Durham; 4. North New Durham. Another district (East New Durham, No. 5) came from a division of No. 4 a few years afterwards. The latest school census shows the number of children to be in No. 1, 206; in No. 2, 235; in No. 3, 346; in No. 4, 139; in No. 5, 144. The latest school erected is that of No. 5. Each district has its chronicles. Bull's Ferry is memorable for being the site of the noted Block House, a Revolutionary landmark. Secaucus is memorable for many Revolutionary events. Snake Hill, near by, is the seat of the county's almshouse.

Old Time Deer-Chase.—Modern chronicles give us no moose-hunting. And yet in the far back the deer was not unknown in this region. There are still here standard representatives of the ancient monarchs of the forest. In front of the late Cornelius Doremus' mansion and in front of the late Michael Fisher's, along the Bergen turnpike, are two tall elms having commanding aspects. A brace of tall oaks and a noble elm are to be seen to-day on Richard Stanton's place. Similar trees were numerous, from all accounts, in the Bergen Woods decades ago, and the deer was enjoying the shelter of these primitive occupants of the soil. Here the brisk animal reveled amidst the sylvan retreats of centuries gone by, a swarthy race sharing with him the vast area around them. How readily one at all acquainted with such scenes can conjecture the exhibitions presented here? The fine ear of the American moose is known to detect, even at a great distance, the snapping of the smallest twig or any noise foreign to the natural sounds of the forest.¹ Fancy a young quadruped startled by some alarm. Instantly you hear the twings-snap and the rustling of his feet in the laurels, for he has the fleetness of the wind. It is easy to contemplate these beautiful animals in every variety of posture, whether in repose or in brisk action. Some are at the river's brink supplying themselves with Nature's choicest beverage; others may be seen grazing along the grassy slope; others stand serenely or loiter slowly, snatching a tuft of grass by the way. This is an animal that has often been the solid game of our North Bergen sports-men, graphic accounts of the hunt being often narrated in the region. The venison feast of itself arises from expeditions to localities to which such sterling denizens of the wood retreated as habitations of our race have multiplied. A number of the native inhabitants still with us upon this mundane sphere, and, indeed, living at present within the bounds of the township now meeting notice, can portray the deer-hunt by a reference to incidents taken from their own experience. The moose so much admired in our American forests is a captivating animal,—one of the tenants of the wilderness 'tis a pleasure to contemplate. No other animal that runs in the woods is so difficult to approach, and few are said to equal the moose in swiftness. Its flesh is exceedingly good food, easy of digestion, nourishing and palatable. The two species of deer talked about making variable features from the moose comprise a common sort, and the red deer, or elk. The latter are well proportioned, have gigantic horns and present a majestic appearance. They shed their horns in February or March and by August new ones are nearly at their full growth. They have branches extending front and rear. Those noble animals feed on grass and buds and the twigs of trees. The flesh of the deer is tender and of a fine flavor.

¹ The least noise made by a hunter, such as the rustling of dry leaves or the breaking of a small branch, will be heard by this animal at a great distance, and will alarm it.

Along the Hackensack the reports of fowling-pieces were frequent. Game there in certain seasons was abundant. James H. Earle is still an authority in matters referring to that region. Hunting is his hobby. He is a resident of New Durham, and holds trophies of his skill. J. Frizer Kinzie, of whose experience historians may still avail themselves, led his fancy in leisure hours to some extent in these directions. He has called the taxidermist to his assistance, and preserves a few mementos of his gunning days. Of these, with several varieties, still appear the robin, oriole and wren, with blackbirds, bluebirds and meadow-larks. Earlier observers talk of Conrad Rapp, whose skill and quickness gained many a partridge. He found the quail without difficulty. "I have seen him" remarks a neighbor "come in with fifteen gray squirrels and other game." Conrad, it seems, made his living out of this pursuit for many years. He took to the hunter's life, and on Sundays the boys would make a visit to the hermit.

Domestic Animals.—Rearing of sheep is not among profitable speculations undertaken here. The animal is seldom seen here. The late Philip Greenleaf gave at one time considerable attention to the raising of swine, a business he relinquished at a subsequent period. No limited attention has been given to the cow in this region. The dairy at Secaucus and in neighboring localities sixty years ago gained a large measure of notice. Butter was among the common marketables going from this region sixty years ago. Milkmen now find a ready sale for most of the milk produced. Jacob Reiner has been twelve years in the latter business. In 1884 he was keeping about a dozen cows at his homestead in New Durham. He avails himself of the fine pastures in the vicinity. Henry F. Perry, for many years the keeper of a dairy, and residing at New Durham about thirty-nine years, confers upon a theme of this kind rather cheerfully. Mr. Perry claims to have owned a cow for forty-three years, and surely the animal he now has is a choice one. It is an Alderney, and his fifth cow of that breed. Finding a heifer he bought six years ago turnout so well he has become convinced that for milk and butter choice in quality no breed excels the Alderney. The Holstein and other breeds may he says, yield a larger quantity of milk; yet the quality of this milk is by no means the same as is the quality of the milk of the Alderney cow. The cream and the butter are correspondingly superior. Engaged in the dairy business at one period were Van Dine, at Secaucus, and Samuel Peck, at Bull's Ferry. The business has been energetically pursued by David Van Vorst, of Weavertown, and receives at present considerable attention from Samuel H. Greenleaf, of North New Durham.

Pomology.—Both at Bull's Ferry and at Secaucus much attention was at certain periods given to orchards. In fact, the fruit-tree received the care of the early settler to such an extent as to evoke the frequent comment of a successor. The areas not limited altogether to the places named, where care was shown in this art. Traces of the early planting of fruit-trees are scattered all over North Bergen. A few of these were years ago obliterated by incursions of new enterprises; yet here and there stands a straggling sentinel, telling of the departure of his companions. The old apple-tree is a familiar expression in this township. One is readily seen without going very far. The old folks sedulously guarded themselves against any future apple famine. Some of this fruit was very fine. The orchards of the late John Meeks were supplied with trees that bore very choice fruit. At Baker Smith's old place were full pippins, the Van Dine and other superior apples. The Doremus, the Downer, and the Job Allen property, the Post farm, at Secaucus, the Peck place, at Bull's Ferry, Van Vorst's, near West Hoboken, were all noticeable in this particular. The orchard of Mr. Richard Meyer, but particularly that of Mr. R. Stanton, at East New Durham, deserve notice. That, too, of Mr. Williams, and the orchard of Mr. Wragg, at North New Durham, merit mention as yielding excellent apples. Mr. Duryee in 1844 had an unusually prolific yield from the orchard then on his farm. The apples he has are chiefly Newtown pippins. In the autumn and winter of the year just mentioned Mr. Duryee sold at least four hundred barrels, the fruit being all in fine condition and fit for shipping to foreign ports.

Of other fruit, as plums, quinces, peaches, Mr. Duryee has no market supplies. His pears—here by the blight a few years ago—are now fine. He names among varieties the Bartlet, Duchess and Vicar of Wakefield. By the way of cherry sales, the neighbor of Duryee, W. J. Danielson, can have few pears. His yearly crop is heavy. He sold last year (1884) eight thousand pounds. He mentions among his varieties the Black Eagles, Dickemans, Napoleons, Ox-hearts, Richmonds and others.

The cranberry and the wortleberry are indigenous here. The latter, commonly called the huckleberry, may be found in large quantities about the Secaucus swamps. There are two or three varieties of this berry, the blueberry being the largest and of the finest flavor. All the garden fruits gain considerable cultivation in this latitude, as currants, gooseberries, lawsons, raspberries and strawberries. John McFarlane, of South New Durham, is zealous in cultivating the latter. Dr. Seidhof, some years ago, gave considerable care to the cultivation of the grape. He edited a work on the subject and superintended a nursery for several seasons. Robert Seimer, of North New Durham, has quite an extensive vineyard. It is upon a high slope. Wild grapes grown in wet localities are not compared to those grown in dry soils. The wild grape here has a thick skin, hard pulp, large seeds. The cranberry improves in many respects by a transfer from marsh to upland. As to grape, by culture in dry situations the seeds and skin become less large and thick and the pulp almost disappears. So early as 1839, or thereabouts, J. W. Paulus, subsequently a resident of this township, made known a method, inaugurated in Hamburg, of forcing grapes in hot-houses. The method embodied three features,—it required no outlay after the first year, did not weaken the vine and produced ripe fruit in the middle of the winter.

Sociabilities.—Records of cordial gatherings of the young folks could be made very elaborate. Years ago the social chat was sometimes carried on in the Holland language; less so, however, here than in South Bergen. The late Thomas Rosman (he owned and occupied the old stone house at Weavertown) was among the number who conversed in that lingo very fluently. He was, like many a neighbor of his far and near, a devotee to whatever is styled social. The occasion for raising a new building was at one period made a social event. Neighbors collected together, the work was done, and a little festival followed. What was called a husking-bee often had social features. These meetings were sometimes hastily formed, and young and old united not the less merrily on that account. At the work there was a quiet way pursued. Yet in the sports there were pranks enough to diffuse good cheer. Old inhabitants mention the quilting-party and the sewing-circle as having had their pleasures. Birthday-parties and holiday occasions won the social attention. Neighbors name the nuptials of several of the older residents as having been celebrated with some degree of festivity. Good cheer was abundant at the Huyler abode in 1856, the occasion being the marriage of Michael I. Fisher and Mrs. Sophronie Huyler. Mrs. Huyler was a daughter of Thomas McDonald. Miss McDonald was born at Peas' Point, well known throughout the community; and the evening entertainment is still spoken of by the guests that participated in it. The host and hostess upon that happy occasion did the honors in the most acceptable style. Mr. Fisher was many years a resident of New Durham. It was his custom to gather his friends around him on the first of the year, a famous festal day with him. The family-circle convened at the homestead was on that occasion a scene of sociability. Children and grandchildren joined in the festivities.

Mr. Fisher was frequently a member of the township committee. He was one of the grand jury first convened in Hudson County. He represented the township in the Board of Chosen Freeholders during the years 1846 and 1847, and served at one period as the treasurer of the county. Occasionally a jaunt took his fancy, and his subsequent account of that tour was always interesting to his auditors. A few years since a granddaughter of his, Miss Tracy, passed a year or two on a visit to the East, taking Japan among the countries through which she traveled. Upon her return she exhibited the curiosities of travel gathered on the route, and her grandfather evinced considerable interest in these and in the narrative of her travels. The present history set before our readers is to some extent indebted for facts gleaned from Mr. Fisher's memory. Fisher Avenue in the town of Union and at New Durham were named in his honor. The old gentleman met friends socially on the occasion of his eighty-sixth birthday, April 29, 1880. His death, which was that of a patriarch surrounded by attentive kindred, occurred the following November. The dwelling he occupied was assumed by the West Shore Company a year or so after his demise, and it served in the occupancy of that company for an office, in which the engineers matured their plans. Mr. Fisher left two daughters, one a resident of the township. The dwelling she occupies is one of the most eligibly located among the residences that are rural and suburban within the county. It is some distance from the highway, occupying an elevated site, with fruit and ornamental trees dotting the declivity front and side, and altogether just the home one would choose who desired a sylvan abode. The curtilage includes ample grounds that are carried to a high state of cultivation. North of this dwelling are the fine residences of A. M. Duryce and of James McFarlane, and to the south are the dwellings at one period occupied by the late John Lovet and his son-in-law, the late D. H. Wilson.

In Taylor's history of the ancient township of Bergen allusion is made to the marriage occasions. The twain made one, with a mirthful escort, go in a procession, the whole company singing by the way. Similar events no doubt took place within these bounds, and recollections are revived by this reference. Graphic accounts and such as enliven the social circle are often those making reference to nuptial events, and of narrations of this nature the neighborhoods hereabouts have their full share.

Among social gatherings might be mentioned donation visits by Rev. Joseph Perry, Nov. 13, 1855, and by Rev. L. Mohn, Dec. 10, 1856; the nuptials of Joseph Fahys, April 19, 1856; the birthday festival by C. Drescher, the florist, Feb. 26, 1857; a ball at the Saint Nicholas (now Granton) Jan. 21, 1857, the same host entertaining the Old Tops, February 23rd, same year. On the 22nd of February, 1856, the Red White and Blue Association figured at a ball at the New Durham Hotel. Committee of Arrangements, Abraham D. Greenleaf, Henry Allen, Garret D. Lozier, Edward A. Danielson, George T. Bath and James Wilcox. Social parties were gotten up occasionally to visit distant points of attraction or to witness some metropolitan drama. The former include a view of Niagara, the fair of the American Institute, the latter "Mazepa" and "Meg Merriles." "Metamora" also, Oct. 16, 1855. Festivals, hilarious celebrations, house-warmings, parties and surprise-parties came and went among the ordinary incidents of the day. These are, with other methods of social recreation, the recourses had for enjoyment.

Indian Springs.—These springs are upon the westerly slope, north of Tyler Park and betwixt Paterson plank-road and the railway. There are other springs, each going by the name of the Indian Spring, in several localities throughout the township. At East New Durham there is one upon the premises now in the occupancy of Richard Meyer, and at South New Durham upon lands of the late James G. King. About the latter spring, for many years, there grew quantities of fine water-cresses. The waters of these springs may be said to hold a reputation for purity and clearness, and in warm weather a welcome coolness. Old inhabitants who are familiar with these springs join in a recommendation of them.

Early Architecture.—Accounts show the most primitive styles. Here and there one saw the log-house. The larger frame buildings showed what is styled the hipped roof. Where a stone house was erected there was usually an overshot or projecting roof. Beneath this appeared a front stoop, and in some instances a piazza extending the entire length of the building. The later houses were usually of one-story, with a garret. Many of the houses had a kitchen extension, smaller in its dimensions than the main building. Ceiling with the modern plaster was an after-innovation; in these antique dwellings the upper beams, usually of oak, appeared to the eye. These and the lower surface visible of the garret floor were whitewashed, painted or colored by protracted time and smoke. The usual appendage to the kitchen was an oven, in which a weekly batch of bread, cake and pies was baked. Frequently the barns were of fair size. Near by were the hovel and the corn-crib. The roofs of the barns were thatched in some instances, as were those of hovels and of barracks. The latter, instead of being inclosures for the resort of soldiers, were the entrepôts for the farmer's hay or straw. In fact, that was the local designation for the depository of the crop of cornstalks, as well as that of straw and hay, and these objects were often observed upon the open salt meadow and in the corners of cultivated and grass fields.

Cemeteries.—The ancient graveyards attached to several of the homesteads are of some interest to the antiquarian. With the outcome of speculation in real estate changes occurred, and here, as elsewhere, even a graveyard has taken to itself wings. The principal private burial-ground now is that of the Smith family at Secaucus. The burial-ground of Hoboken was removed to the township about the year 1857. Changes were made at Green Cemetery in 1869, the widening of Bergenwood road causing the appropriation of a portion of its area to highway purposes. Additional territory was bought for this cemetery afterwards. The earliest interment within this cemetery was in 1845. There are, besides this, four other cemeteries, Macpelah Cemetery and Hoboken City Cemetery are on the east side of the Bergen turnpike, in North New Durham. Weehawken Cemetery is in South New Durham, north of the Old Secaucus road, and Flower Hill Cemetery is located west side of Bergenwood road, at East New Durham. The last-named is an incorporation revived. The plot, which covers ten or twelve acres, was recently fenced, and the entrance is provided with a tasty Queen Anne cottage erected of stone, and in the occupancy of the cemetery superintendent.

Improved aspects show here a contrast to the old-time graveyard. The better instincts of human nature have given charms to the burial-plots, a care and a tidiness being shown the place of sepulture not so observable in the earlier epochs of our history. Preparations were observed by plot-owners during several years past to make impressive floral scenes, the exhibit being in many instances decidedly attractive during the pleasant season. When the colder weather comes an evergreen decoration takes the place of the flora-blooming period, and thus the circuit of the year finds these cemeteries presenting becoming aspects.

Necrology.—But a glance at a record of this description will lead the reader to meditate upon the mutations of history. About the year 1861 may be noted the death of Smith A. Freeland, an efficient town clerk here. He was still a young man, and died of consumption. Same year died Job Smith, of Secaucus, aged sixty-four; his son Job, aged twenty-nine, died in 1865. Issachar Cozzens died in the month of April of the latter year. Cozzens had lived here when the township was still without its prefix "North," as he moved here from New York nearly fifty years ago. Another old resident died in December, aged seventy-six,—Abel I. Smith, of Secaucus. The year 1867 had quite a notable mortality record. In the month of June, John I. Earle, many years the assessor and local magistrate, in August, at the homestead of the late Job Smith, Edward Hagen, who had resided at Secaucus for a few years; in August occurred the death of Walter Weldon, after encountering an attack of Asiatic cholera. This demise was succeeded by that of James Cox.

Quite a shock came to the inhabitants by the sudden death of John S. Mackrel, well-known as a resident of New Durham. Though an old inhabitant of this county he was a native of Jamaica, L. I. A death almost coincident with his own was that of Governor John A. King, the two having been boys together.

Highways.—No little care was bestowed upon the conveniences of transit here from very early periods. The "short route through the woods" as time passed on took shape in substantial roads. In the days when Revolutionary events occurred here of a stirring description some labor had been already given to the roads. At a time running remotely back, road masters had their districts, within which they were to keep the roads in repair. Adam Boyd, whose wagon conveyed passengers from Hoboken to Hackensack in 1783, said the roads were good. As the highways verged to the Weehawken ferry, then in operation, considerable travel was noticed on those highways, the farmers from a region many miles around taking their produce by these routes to market. The by-roads leading to the principal thoroughfares were more primitive, and often rough and narrow, being rather cow-paths than roadways.

Bergen turnpike, incorporated in 1802, was constructed under the chartered power, and continues as a highway upon which toll is collected till the present time. In 1852 planks were laid all along its route, it becoming then known as the plank-road. It was soon followed, however, by what was styled the Paterson plank-road, a highway that has become within a few years a county road. Planks are now superseded by crushed stone, several years having elapsed since the worn-out planks were taken off both of these thoroughfares. The first-named turnpike—now pretty well macadamized—is the main avenue traversed by teams going from Hackensack to Hoboken. A highway over nearly the same route existed before this company was chartered. In relation to the Paterson turnpike, a considerable distance traversed by that roadway was new, it being opened about the year 1854. The roads leading into these main thoroughfares were for many years under supervision of road masters elected yearly at the spring town-meetings.¹ Under an act passed by the Legislature and approved March 17, 1875, duties before incumbent upon road overseers are now performed by five commissioners of roads. The office is held for one year, the incumbent being limited to his district and to the direction of the township committee. The sum to be raised for working roads is an amount fixed by the town committee, set forth by public resolution, posted thirty days before the annual election in the spring.

That amount is the maximum sum to be voted for, and when adopted no more is expended than the district is entitled to "under the apportionment of the general township tax." Ordinarily two thousand dollars have been ordered, and the five districts have shared pro rata in labor expenditures for repairing the highways annually. About sixteen thousand dollars have been expended upon the roads of the township since that law went into operation. This is exclusive of outlays by the Board of Chosen Freeholders in erecting bridges and culverts upon the local highways in and about the township.

Local Government.—A town committeeman is chosen from each of the five school districts. The election occurs in April of each year, when a township clerk, collector, assessor and other local officers are chosen to serve for the following year. The committee meet at Town Hall the first Saturday in each month, and oftener when needful. Among the duties incumbent upon a committee here are

1, To make out annual tax warrant; 2, to frame and enforce ordinances; 3, to name commissioners on special improvements; 4, to fill vacancies in local offices; 5, to locate pounds and appoint their keepers; 6, to grant licenses upon application by inn-keepers; 7, to audit reports of overseers of the poor; 8, to choose a treasurer and collector of arrears; 9, to fix amount of bonds to be given by local officers; 10, to supervise record of township accounts; 11, to estimate prospective outlays on roads; 12, to specify and audit yearly reports; 13, to order payments for and supervise road repairs, etc.; 14, to confirm special assessments; 15, to report redemption collections for the year.

The earlier records of the township are primitive and crude, whatever may be attained of them. Many are with the missing. The records deemed in many instances valueless by the early officials went at random, and got at loose ends. There were no efforts shown to maintain any order in the local register. Public business took its yearly tramp, having nothing but caprice to fix the locality for transaction, or, while the township was more extended in its area, popular convenience was considered; for instance, North Bergen's collector in the year 1859 sat to receive taxes, December 10th, at Guttenberg, P. Schelpf's; December 12th, at Union Hill, J. Reinhart's; December 14th, West Hoboken, G. Van Vorst's; December 15th, New Durham, B. S. Earle's. Even subsequent to the division of the township, in 1861, a similar line of proceeding was followed. In 1865 the commissioners of appeals sat at the North Bergen Hotel, east side of Paterson plank-road, November 28th. The collector sat December 5th at Bull's Ferry Hotel, December 10th at Sigler's New Durham Hotel, and December 16th at C. McCollum's Hotel. The elections were held at one and at another hotel year after year, as the majority of ballots determined at the yearly town-meeting. In particular instances, there was considerable rivalry exhibited by contending Bonifaces, each striving to outdo his competitor for the choice to be thus determined. By an act approved April 3, 1873, authority was granted to the municipal corporation to purchase a suitable public hall, and here the public business has been transacted ever since. The location of the hall is central, on the east side of the Bergen turnpike, and close to the boundary line between South and North New Durham. The edifice has ample accommodations to meet the requirements of the township. At the conclusion of the fiscal year, April 4, 1874, the accounts stood, showing —

¹ The landing road from the turnpike to Newark Railroad Station was secured by the New Durham Railroad Station Association, A. H. Ryder president and T. D. Eckerson secretary. Three conveyances were executed June 27, 1870.

Resources	$1,142
On hand	3,142
Balance consisted of:—Town Hall and Common	950
Old accounts due	1,000
Cash balance	1,000
	$1,000

The committee that year were James McFarland (chairman), Andrew Beck, Henry Smith (till Dec. 20, 1873), Gebhard Braue till April 4, 1874. In 1875 the township committee delegated A. H. Ryder to compile the acts relating to North Bergen, a work completed August 21st, that year.

An annual statement audited by the township committee, April 1, 1883, makes the assets $30,359; liabilities, $4290; balance, $26,068. The township committee that year comprised Abm. Dwyer, chairman, from District No. 4; and District 1, Patrick Bracken; District 2, John Weigand; District 3, John Sullivan; District 4, Albert Woringer. Serving by appointment in lieu of Bracken, Edward Lennon filled the position for District 1.

The published report made April, 1881, shows proceeds from declarations of sale assigned, $4938; from tax sales, $1600. The cash balance from all sources, $10,174. At item of current expenses the receipts show, $3741; disbursements, $2330; leaving a balance, $411.

Fire Department.—The department here comes from a voluntary organization, instituted May 15, 1865. The assemblage then met at the house of George Bruce, Jr., organizing as a hook-and-ladder company.

John J. Ackerson.	Ernest Grøenland
Henry Ackerson	C. McCallum
Peter E. Ackerson	M. McCrackery
Andrew Beck, Jr.	J. B. M. Crookery
George Burns, Jr.	James McFarland
Seth Bogert	Egbert Post
Jacob Day	Robert Randall
William T. Day	A. H. Ryder
William Day	G. H. Saumer
T. D. Eckerson	John Seelby
James Danielson	Andrew J. Sigler
P. B. Everson	William Whittington

At a meeting held Jan. 15, 1866, an act was adopted by sections and submitted for action by the Legislature, entitled "An Act to incorporate Excelsior Hook-and-Ladder Company, No. 1, of New Durham, Hudson Co.," the same being reported at a meeting held April 2nd to have received the Governor's signature. Lot, truck-house and apparatus were at the company's service in June, at which time membership had increased:

Henry L. Towson	L. D. Luter
A. J. Climes	Barth Wykers
C. Dowse	George Van Coten
William T. Day	Ed. B. W. James

Members' Names.

The truck-house is just on the eve of concluding the second decade of its existence. The efficiency of the organization—the esprit de corps shown for a protracted period,—can be gathered from the fact that the company still remains at "the call," amply accommodated with all appliances for steaming duty. The building is eligibly located, a short distance from the Town Hall, and the truck is kept in good trim for service. The establishment has its sombre and pleasant reminiscences. At the loss of a member, suitable and impressive action has been taken, and in an instance or two the organization exhibited a benevolence not ordinarily attributed to similar institutions. Too much space would be occupied here were an attempt made to enumerate the social festivals of this company, from which radiate the pleasantest of memories. Sufficient to state that a picnic was held at Back-Cellar Park, in July, 1866. The third annual picnic of the company was held at same park, Aug. 13, 1868. A picnic was held by the company at Schuetzen Park, Sept. 9, 1873. The company celebrated Washington's birthday by having their sixteenth annual oyster supper and hop, Feb. 22, 1881, at William Walbaun's hotel, New Durham.

Business Operations.—Besides agricultural pursuits before mentioned and quite extensive operations in floriculture,¹ this township has been the arena of considerable activity in other departments of industry. Within a score of years past the register of manufacturers included H. Altman, F. Brauback, G. W. Coolbigh, Gustav Forch, George Kahlert, Henriek W. Lehing, cigars; Theodore H. Conkling, matting; Robert B. Russell, furniture; P. L. Schwenfurth, vinegar; Richard Stanton, pyrotechnics; David Walker, gold leaf; James Ware, clothing.

This record is considerably extended by a view of local business from more varied stand-points. Andrew Beck, John W. Bricher, canning; John G. Earle, butcher; D. Feerson, wheelwrights; Philip Emmerick, tanner; John F. Kinzie, mason; William Miller, cattle breeder; John Merz, John Steinbrenner, express; Joseph Tetze, smoking tobacco; Frederick Tonges, walking-canes; Henry H. Von Glahn, John Willse, builders; Joseph Wilson, shoes.

Manufacturing of glue by Charles De Clyne, of New Durham, merits mention, while that of silk fabrics is extensively carried on at Homestead, the firm established there having airy and well-ventilated buildings amply fitted for the employment of several hundred operatives. The silks made by the Givernuds may be said to have a ready sale. Three edifiges are in the occupancy of this firm at Hackensack, at Homestead, and at West Hoboken, Hudson Co. Atienne Givernand, the elder of the two surviving brothers, resides here, devoting his entire attention to the business. Another manufactory is that of inks by the Messrs. Underwood, sons of the late John Underwood, who established themselves here upon the demise of their father, in 1882. The chemical laboratory is the building at one period used by Charles Bene as an ostrich-feather factory, and subsequently by R. Stanton in manufacturing fire-piano-fortes. There are five persons employed about the business, and the capacity admits manipulating there from four thousand to six thousand deer-skins per year. Steam-power is in use there, and the water supply is from an inexhaustible artesian well upon the premises having a depth of ninety feet. The establishment was represented at the Paris Exposition of 1867 and at the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876.

¹ Many bouquets are made up by florists here for the New York market, J. Steiger, of Bergenwood Avenue, and others giving considerable attention to this industry.

CHARLES DE CLYNE.—The De Clynes are descended from a Huguenot family who fled from France

Charles De Clyne

works. The Underwood concern made an exhibit at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876, and at the Paris Exposition in 1878. The remaining manufactory to be mentioned is of a business running back more than three hundred years in the family of the present proprietor, Richard Meyer. He succeeded to the business in 1873. It was established first on this continent by his father, C. F. W. Meyer, at Philadelphia, in 1846, removed to Union Hill, 1863, and to the present building, south side of Fisher Avenue, New Durham, 1868. It is the business of tanning all kinds of buckskin, the speciality being the buckskin for on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and one branch of whom settled in Schwarzburg, Sondershausen, in Saxony, where Albrecht De Clyne, grandfather of Charles, resided. He was by occupation a farmer, and at one time burgomaster of the town. His son George was a native of the same town, where he followed the calling of an agriculturist, was inspector of a large estate and resided until his death. He married Dorothea Teschner, a neighbor by residence, to whom were born children,—Charles, Theodore, William, Frederick and John,—of whom the subject of this sketch, and his brothers Theodore and Fredrick are the survivors. Charles was born on the 24th of June, 1821, in Schwarzburg, Sondershausen, and in youth became a pupil of a school of forestry, where he acquired proficiency in engineering, mineralogy and botany. He remained at this school two years, and afterward continued his studies under private auspices. The revolution having been inaugurated at this time, Charles De Clyne's love of freedom led him to sympathize with the Republican party, and made his escape from the country a compulsory measure. He fled to America, from whence, after a brief period of industry, he sailed for France. While a sojourner in the latter country his attention was directed to an examination of its paving system, and the superiority of the Belgian pavement over that of any other method made a profound impression on his mind. Returning to America, he obtained a contract for the introduction of this pavement in New York City, but through some unfortunate complications with a partner, was forced to abandon his project. This system of pavement has since been used in this city with marked success. Mr. De Clyne having met Dr. Leibig, the chemist, engaged with him in the study of chemistry, and was pursuing this profession at the outbreak of the late war. He enlisted in the Third Battalion of Artillery, New York State Volunteers, which was later transformed into the Fifteenth Regiment Heavy Artillery, New York State Volunteers, and continued in active service until the close of the conflict. He participated in various engagements, was made a lieutenant and attached to the staff of Gen. Thomas D. Donleedy, and later, on receiving promotion to the rank of captain, was appointed by Gen. Halleck inspector-general of defenses south of the Potomac.

On retiring from the service, Mr. De Clyne made New Durham, Hudson Co., his residence, and embarked in the manufacture of glue, in which he is still engaged. He was married, in 1854, to Miss Helen Klien, daughter of Christian Klien, of North Bergen. Their children are Caroline (Mrs. Abram Kittel), Theodore (a veterinary surgeon and graduate of the Columbia College School of Veterinary Surgery), Gustavus (who is associated with his father in business), Emma, Helen, Emil and Clara (twins). Mr. De Clyne is in politics a Republican, but has declined all political preferment other than trustee of his school district, to which position he has been chosen for the third term. He was educated in the faith of the Lutheran Church.

Post-Offices.—The earliest postmaster mentioned was Henry Ackerson, who was appointed and a post-office established at New Durham Feb. 6, 1845. The post-office in Ackerson's care was located west side of the turnpike, opposite the Three Pigeons. It was afterwards, about the year 1863, removed to its present locality, and Thomas D. Eckerson appointed postmaster. A post-office was established at Homestead a few years ago, but has been discontinued. Another is located at Secaucus, near the iron-works in operation there.

Public Resorts.—In June, 1856, Col. M. Daniel assumed proprietorship of the Agricultural grounds at Secaucus, entering into exhibitions of an attractive description at the race-course. The colonel brought from Virginia a considerable stock, with a retinue of black servants, and lived here as he had been accustomed to do in the Old Dominion. Time glided on, and he discovered less chivalry than he anticipated, the members of the Agricultural Society saw less patronage; the consequence was that the institution passed into oblivion. A few exhibitions, none-startling in endurance or speed, gained some degree of notice, and this is all that need be noted of the Secaucus grounds as a public resort. Beyond similar entertainments located up the parks, far preferable for their varied diversions. Of these resorts there are three within this township: Floral Park, Rock Cellar and Schuetzen. The first, since under the care of the chevalier, has had several proprietors, all of whom have made it more or less inviting as a summer resort. The tenth annual Platt Deutsche Volksfest occurred Aug. 25, 26 and 27, 1884, at the Schuetzen; at least sixty-five societies, whose members are from the north of Germany, joined in this summer festival. Hardly any conceivable prank escapes the crowd at such a gathering, and but a single purpose is aimed at, and that is sportive enjoyment. A display of fireworks accompanies the evening's performances, while there is no end to the most exhilarating music. That resort has met with no limited degree of encouragement, its picnics, concerts and festivals attracting multitudes to its gates. Where such gatherings occur one could scarcely anticipate a uniform regard for decorum. Occasional interruptions must happen in the dizzy pursuit of amusement.¹

The other park, if less a centre of attraction than the Schuetzen, still has its many allurements. Located on elevated ground, and made by the late Adolph Meckert as charming as good taste could make it, the resort has been extensively appreciated. A legion of picnic-parties may be said to avail themselves of this pleasant resort. The Helvetia Rifle Club met here twenty years ago, and Rock Cellar has many a refreshing event notched among its chronicles not easily to be effaced. The park is provided with its shooting-gallery, a platform of ample dimensions and a commodious hall, the surroundings having rural features. William H. Steimbrenner has done the honors as the host at this establishment many years.

Private Libraries.—Some one says, "The man of genius dwells with men and with nature; the man of talent in his study, but the clever man dances here, there, and everywhere, like a butterfly in a hurri-

¹ By act approved March 27, 1873, special police powers were given a justice of the peace in the Township to enforce order.

anc." An American poetess, referring to her library, remarks,—

"This is my world, my angel-guarded shrine,
Which I have made to suit my heart's great need

Only an enumeration of the local libraries, with an approximate estimate of the volumes, is allowed under a pressure for chronicle space. Besides two, those of Charles Siebh and Xavier Stoppel (in the German and ancient languages), the more notable private libraries here have been those of Issachar Cozzens, 700 volumes; Charles Downer, 600 volumes; W. V. V. Mabon, 900 volumes; James S. Parsons 600 volumes; A. H. Ryder, 1100 volumes; W. P. Wright, 1700 volumes.

Churches.—By a publication issued more than half a century ago, we learn of one whose conversation here was declared to be "truly spiritual and sweet,"—one who was considered among the good, that in his day and sphere adorned the doctrine of grace, wanting not the notable mark of a saint of God. He is said to have possessed remarkable modesty and meekness and genuine excellency. Old inhabitants recognize at once a reference to Bradley Randall, who resided here from the spring of 1811 till the autumn of 1825, his death occurring October 25th of the latter year, aged thirty-seven. Randall was upon the committee having charge of building the lecture-room, a convenient, cozy, cheerful-looking structure, many years in service at New Durham. The edifice was used mainly for church and Sabbath-school¹ for the space of a decade or two. It served afterwards for a district school-house.

The churches now within the township are those of four denominations,—the Grove Church, at New Durham; Baptist, at New Durham; Methodist, at Bull's Ferry; Church of the Sacred Heart, Bull's Ferry; Reformed Church at Secaucus. The latter, organized in 1883, is without an edifice. The corner-stone of the Reformed Church at New Durham was laid on Tuesday, March 30, 1847. The edifice, since called Grove Church, was dedicated September 1st, same year, and is located west side of Bergenwood Avenue, upon the hill-slope east of the site of the old lecture-room at New Durham. A consistory room and a parsonage were erected subsequently, the latter being completed during the summer of 1850. The committee delegated to make the purchase of grounds comprised Ebenezer Deas and John Morgan, who had an interview with the land-owner, Mr. Zabriskie. The result was a procuring for church purposes of the four or five acres covered by a grove of forest-trees. William V. V. Mabon, D.D., served this congregation from Oct. 6, 1846, till a year or so ago, when he was chosen a professor in Rutgers College. Dr. Mabon contributed his zeal in the establishment of this church's missions, of which those at West Hoboken and at Guttenberg are the more prominent. At this church, on the evening of the 11th of November, 1883, there were held, in commemoration of the four hundredth birthday of Martin Luther, the following order of service:

1, Organ Voluntary, George Egbert, 2, Selection by the choir; 3, Invocation, by Rev. Mr. Jones of the Baptist Church, Union Hill; 4, Hymn No. 1 "Our God our help," (the congregation joined in the singing); 5, Antiphonal recit. "Gloria" (all united in repeating); 6, Scripture Lesson, Psalm 87, "Let the words of my mouth," by the choir; 7, Address, by Rev. William H. Scudder, of Grove Church, New Durham; 8, Address by Rev. Mr. Crawford, of the Methodist Church, Union Hill; 9, Hymn No. 2, "Blow ye the trumpet" (the congregation joined in the singing); 10, Address by Rev. Mr. Justin, of the German Reformed Church, Union Hill; 11, Address, in German, by Rev. E. P. Luippold, of the German Methodist Church, Union Hill; 12, Prayer, in German, by Rev. F. Sievers, of the German Baptist Church, Union Hill; 13, Luther's Hymn, No. 3, "A Mighty Fortress," "Ein feste burg," the congregation joined in the singing; 14, Address by Rev. E. S. Harding, of the Baptist Church, New Durham; 15, Hymn No. 4, "All hail the power," (the congregation joined in the singing); 16, Prayer by Rev. Alexander Shaw, of the Reformed Church at Guttenberg; 17, Doxology, Old Hundred, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow;" 18, Lord's Prayer by ministers and congregation; 19, Benediction; 20, Postlude, by George Egbert.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH at NEW DURHAM was dedicated June 1, 1856, Rev. H. C. Fish, of Newark, delivering the dedicatory sermon. A great deal of energy was displayed by Rev. Joseph Perry in bringing this edifice to completion. Anterior to the occupancy of this church building the congregation worshipped in a small lecture-room located south side of the old Secaucus road, a little west of the Bergen turnpike. The two-story brick school-house of District No. 3 at present occupies that site, the frame-building having been sold and removed.

THE METHODIST CHURCH at Bull's Ferry was erected upon land donated by John G. Seaton, one of the veterans of the war of 1812. An itinerant system governs the ecclesiastical arrangements in vogue here, and old residents name many exhorters and clergymen who officiated here during the four or five decades just elapsed. Few alterations occurred in this church since it was erected. It is a frame building, located south side of Bull's Ferry road, a short distance east of Bergen Line Avenue.

CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART.—The corner-stone of this church was laid in 1872. It is a frame edifice built upon the hill-slope, a little way west of the River road, not far from the county line. Rev. Francis O'Neill has officiated here since June, 1880, the same pastor serving the congregation of St. Joseph's, Guttenberg, and occupying a dwelling contiguous to the latter church.

Recent Progress.—The pressure of events arising out of operations conducted by the West Shore Railway Company make a lively chapter in this township. Where, a year or so ago, agriculture was pursued in a quiet way, the track is laid and the locomotives move many times a day to and fro. A round-house has been erected, machine-shops are in operation, and a counting-room is established and a station put up, where but a brief period since one merely noted the ordinary household arrangements with the domestic and social customs of the times.

¹ The venerable E. Deas alludes to a habit of accompanying his children from his dwelling at Deas Point to the Sunday-school here.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

UNION TOWNSHIP.

ALL the territory included within this township was a portion of the region early known as Bergen woods. Eleven separate localities are particularly mentioned in the preamble of the act to create the county of Hudson; yet no allusion is made to this region. (On a reference, in a society report for 1853, to what is now termed North Hudson, no localities at that time familiar here, are noticed.)

An act approved Feb. 28, 1861, dividing North Bergen into three separate townships, gave existence to the township of Union. Under subsequent acts the town of Union and the town of Guttenberg were set off from this township, making present boundaries: the north line, south line of Guttenberg; the south line north line of the town of Union; west line Dalleytown or Bergenwood road, and the east line, the Hudson River. The second section of the act of 1861 sets forth original bounds and is the primary source of the name given this township.

Besides a compact settlement styled West New York, the localities here familiarly known as Brower's Point, Oak Cliff, Weehawken ferry vicinity, the upper part of Dalleytown and the Quarry Grounds are all within this township. The latter grounds are commons on which thirty cows were seen grazing on the morning of May 21, 1884. Horses and goats here roam at large with the domestic fowls. Here and there is a verdant slope or grassy knoll, upon which appears the floweret and herbage common in this latitude, and in its season, the wild thyme. Quarrymen and the block dealer are, however, working vast changes here, and the rock pit, pool and piles of stone chips show their fields of industry.

Early History.—At the early points marking historical aspects and events this region abounds in forest and river scenes and incidents. Without going farther than the memory of some old people here extends, the materials are ample in descriptive features.

Upon the river and its margin are spectacles and prospects varied from those of to-day; and over the land, whether valley or hill top, the diversity is as broad. One can scarcely realize that a change so radical has occurred; we have merely to look at the region as it was by attending to those who can describe it, and then take its appearance as it presents itself at the present period.

The region was noted for gigantic trees. One is apt to stare when the dimensions of some of these trees are given. Vast quantities of the timber and the lumber taken from the forests growing at one period here were used in ship-building.

About the year 1820, Benjamin Westervelt bought seventeen acres of land from Gen. Ives, who had purchased the land for the heavy timber upon it. Considerable white oak grew there; it was cut and rafted down to the East River.

The heavy timber and undergrowth were very thick. "The region was a wilderness when I was a boy," declares an old resident. "The hogs ran wild in those days; the common way in the autumn was to hunt them with dogs. My father-in-law one fall killed five handsome hogs; they never had a mouthful except what they got out of the woods. So dense was the forest that I often got lost when going out gunning. The cows had beds, or you never could have found them."

The heavier logs were hewn, and many were got up on the river. Saw-pits were serviceable here and there. A great deal of wood was cut by the cord and taken to the city, where it served as fuel. In those days the folks did not think of coal, the use of wood as fuel being general all over this region. An elderly dame says, "When we first came here, more than thirty-six years ago, neighbors were far apart. It was all woods then, and there was scarcely a man from here to Bergen that hadn't something to do with wood-chopping."

An effort was started to establish a saw-mill at Faleo's pond. The enterprise, like the mill at Swallow Barn, dwindled, and it would be a tedious labor to elucidate the scheme. The locality is now in the occupancy of L. Sargent, mentioned elsewhere.

The woods and thickets herein named had their attractions. The kiskadee, the mocha, the butternut, the chestnut, were here in abundance. Wild raspberries (the blackcaps) and blackberries were, in their seasons, also plentiful. Game is spoken of by old settlers. "Out all night for a coon," had occasionally the significant announcement that there was zeal shown in hunting. Complaints were made now and again that coons were destroying the corn crops. Rabbits and squirrels were numerous according to all accounts; and, as for the feathered tribes, numerous narratives show sumptuous fire-on game by early residents about the area now covered by Union township. One would think nothing of shooting two or three high-olders at a shot off a dogwood tree. Those birds, with robins and wild pigeons, were plentiful in Dickie's woods and about Price's property. "I have known," is the remark of an old resident "the gunners to shoot five or six dozen robins in a short time; I have myself shot twenty-eight or twenty-nine wild pigeons before breakfast."

The river region was a resort, too, for game; Michael Carley, who died in his eighty-second year, about twenty-two years ago, had a taste for the sport of gunning and made it a source of profit. His sons were excellent hunters, too, and more than one gained a great reputation for skill in this direction. The Carley boys had their hunting-dogs well trained, and old inhabitants are accustomed to mention their exploits in woodcraft. "My brothers," says one of the two daughters of the veteran, now living within Union township, "were fond of gunning on the land for pigeons and robins; basketfuls of these birds were sold by them in the city market. Father was more partial to the river. I've seen him with a white cap upon his head, with gun in hand, walk down to his little white duck boat, get in and paddle quietly to within gun-shot of these water-fowl. He used to fetch plenty of ducks home. The pillows and beds in our house were made of duck feathers, and they made excellent beds. Occasionally," the daughter adds, "he had the luck to get a wild goose."

As the axe of the woodman completed its work, and river and harbor and dock improvements advanced and extended, other scenes are witnessed where these exploits transpired.

Old and New Ferry.—Thirty years have elapsed since the first steps were taken to establish what has been long recognized as the Forty-second Street ferry. In the first flush of the enterprise no little consternation was evinced on observing the following article in the columns of a metropolitan paper. The delicate thrust, so adroitly executed, merits attention at this period. Like the enterprise of Fulton, the invention of Morse and a million other adventurers, it is always seen that no proposition comes up leading to risk and outlay without some criticising comment intended to discourage the measure. The New York Evening Express of April 6, 1852, says,—

"We have had sent to us a copy of a bill, passed by the New Jersey Legislature at its last session, and signed by the Governor on the 25th ultimo, incorporating the Weehawken Ferry Company. The corporation consists of William Cooper, Rodman M. Price, David Allerton, Francis Price, Elijah Ward, Dudley S. Gregory, Barney Bertram, David Biddam, Lorenzo W. Elder. The act empowers them to establish a ferry between some suitable point or points in the city of New York and a point north of Deas' Point, in the county of Hudson, with power to build boats, wharves, piers, bulkheads. It is also enacted that the capital of said company shall be half a million of dollars, divided into shares of fifty dollars each, certificates of such shares to be deemed personal property. Other provisions customary in acts of this character are formally made. The act is to continue in force for thirty years, but unless the company within five years from its passage shall have established a ferry and have the same in operation so as to accommodate the inhabitants the act shall be void. We are not read up in the details of this new enterprise, but it strikes us that if the object of the new company is limited to the accommodation of the inhabitants, they will have a very easy task to perform, for about the only inhabitants one finds at Weehawken just now are some venerable oak and elm-trees. As it is presumed they don't intend to emigrate to New York, the question is very generally asked, Where is the patronage to come from that is to offset the proposed outlay of half a million of dollars.

In June of the same year, under suburban improvements, the same journal remarks:

"Nowhere in the neighborhood of New York has improvement been more rapid, or in better consonance with good taste, than along the Hudson River on the Jersey shore, north of Hoboken."

Books of subscription for the stock of the Weehawken Ferry Company were opened at the Otto Cottage, in Hoboken, May 9, 1853. A prospectus setting forth the natural advantages of the regions, with other facts, had been extensively circulated. The New York Common Council, by resolution, approved by the mayor July 9, 1856, directed that a ferry be established from the foot of Forty-second Street to the New Jersey shore, and authorized the comptroller to advertise and issue a lease of the ferry privileges for a term of ten years. Under this resolution, Comptroller Flagg sold the lease to Francis Price, Aug. 19, 1856, at the bid of fifty dollars per year for the ten years, and steps were taken to make the ferry enterprise effective.

The original officers of the company were: President and Treasurer, William Cooper; Executive Committee, Francis Price and Louis Becker, with Secretary, William W. Niles. As a board of nine directors appears the persons already named and Garrett H. Stryker, Jr., Rodman M. Price, Gen. Elijah Ward, Barney Bertram and Dudley S. Gregory. The slips, houses, boats and other adjuncts necessary to a ferry were yet to be provided, and the ferry got in operation in 1859. The current receipts for the month of August, 1865 were $3131; and the same month of the following year $2955. In September of 1866 they were $3247. In February, 1867, the gross receipts footed up $2007, and in March, $2230. For July and August, 1869, they showed a total of $5799.

A considerable area of real estate was purchased by Judge Price, the pioneer adventurer in ferry matters, from Anthony Ludlow, John Ludlow, William Gormot, Mead and others. Price occupied a cottage on the peak of the hill, at a locality termed the Cedars, from a plentifulness of that species of trees upon the premises. He erected of stone a land-office, and began an edifice designed for a sumptuous dwelling, which afterwards became a saloon, the mansion never reaching completion. Quarry operation and the work performed by a steam stone-crusher in that vicinity effected many alterations. After vacating the homestead, the place passed through various mutations, the cottage being burned down; and the stone of which the new mansion was built was put into an outward shape and utilized for other purposes.

The ferry was managed during several years by Nathaniel Dole, and passed afterwards into the possession of the Midland Railroad Company, a corporation that has consigned it to what is now popularly known as the West Shore Company. The new ferry at the tunnel entrance serves the car passengers conveniently, while the old ferry at this writing affords greater facilities to the inhabitants of this locality passing their business hours in the city. The old ferry company at one period had a boat that served as a cattle-boat, vast numbers of cattle being conveyed to the city by this ferry. The stick-yard company conducted business for a few years just north of the ferry landing. The Belgian blocks manufactured by the thousand, the bulk of which have come off the ferry company's grounds, are taken by teams over this ferry to the metropolis.

Road Improvements.—The second section of the Bergenwood road lies on the west of this township, and the assessment was reviewed Sept. 29, 1875. The following is a report of work done by the contractors, and amount assessed for same:

Retaining wall, 395 cubic yards, at $9.75	$3,843.75
Drain, near station 79, one third of cost	97.50
Drain No. 2, 129 feet, at $8.50	1,096.50
Drain No. 6, 44 feet, at $8.50	374.00
Rock excavation, 11,119.54 cubic yards, at $2.50	27,798.50
Earth excavation, 7,506.61 cubic yards, at $3.45	25,917.48
Amount	$37,930.13

"Excavations were mainly at points south of entrance to Fisher Avenue, opposite land of Louis Sargent, Esq., also at a locality some distance south of house of William C. A. Esq.; about points north and south of property of Jacob C. Smith, Esq. Boulders on the road measuring 100 cubic yard and upward were considered as rock excavation."

"Respectfully submitted,

"JAMES GARDNER,

"ANDREW H. RYDER,

"GEORGE SNEATH,

"Commissioners."

"Aug. 30, 1875.

Although conspicuous ponds appear within this township, there are no prominent bridges. The Bergen Line Avenue is a nearly central high way within this township. To improve this road, steps were taken in 1871, beginning by a petition from the following line-owners asking for the passage of a legislative act:

Malachi Cannon.	Daniel S. Rooney
Henry Griffin.	Fred. Bohmann.
Fredrick Krueger	Michael Furlong
John Pahl.	John New
Michael P. Wallace	Harold N. A. L.
George Huea.	Thomas Purdie
Henry Ulrich.	Christopher Ward
William Elliot.	George Fisher.

The desire of the inhabitants set forth by the petitioners met with only temporary opposition. The prospect of having a more easy communication with Bergen County and of having a substantial avenue with a width of eighty feet was too attractive, especially where the roads had been so neglected as they had been in this latitude. The act approved April 4, 1872, contained fourteen sections; the facility for progress seemed to smile upon the measure; and, although many changes occurred in the working force of the commissioners, the purpose gained accomplishment within reasonable time. An assessment was confirmed by the commissioners Dec. 10, 1881. The commissioners in service at that date were John Reid, George P. Schinzel and Stephen Quail.

Prominent Business Interests.—Conspicuous here looms up the ice traffic, an industry covering a little over one decade. In the present year there are five establishments: Meckert, 4; Schmitt, 4; Dobbis, 2; Wehnke, 2; Peters, 4. The figures designate the number each owner has of ice-houses, the fourth and fifth are located west of Bull's Ferry road, the third east of Bergen Line Avenue, and the first and second east of the Bergenwood road. Albert Littlefield began the business in 1871 or previous, he was subsequently joined by one Fries and afterwards by John A. Ross. These firms were brief in the term of operation, and Files gained the business, holding it for a year or more. Meckert took possession in December 1878, and continues.

HERMANN MECKERT was born in Saxony, Germany, Oct. 29, 1846, came to this country September, 1870. He married, Feb. 15, 1872, Rosamond Algera, a resident of this township and a native of New York City. The ice business is the sole concern of his busy hours.

The florist business has been conducted many years upon the old Falco Place, where Mr. Sargent propagates the rose. His operation is mainly confined to the several varieties of this flower. In some seasons he joins to that line the making up of bouquets for the city market. Similar business is conducted by Mr. John Collins, upon the premises located north of Pierce Avenue and east of Bergenwood road. On the latter road, Henry Steiger conducts a thriving business in pot and cut flowers having two hot-houses in operation. He began in May, 1881.

Early Residents.—Among the earliest settlers here was John Muller, who is a native of Baden, born May 6, 1828. Remaining in New York City the space of three years after his arrival in this country, in 1846, he then proceeded to the city of Buffalo, again came to New York; married, in 1855, Elizabeth Bisschoff, also a native of Germany, and settled here in 1857. He remarks that when he made this locality his home there were here "plenty of game and a great many trees." The roadways were few and rough. A foot-path led from the lower end of Dalleytown, where the present Bergen Line improvement begins, and came over to Kugels, on the Bergenwood road, near the present Pierce Avenue. Muller soon added to his bakery commodities a grocery, and progressed in business.

The cottage of Charles Schultz was early a rendezvous for the local gossips about West New York. Charles was an early settler, visited California and his native Germany during his residence here; and most of the neighbors had a good social footing with this citizen of cosmopolitan habits and ideas.

Schultz's Garden is well tended, and his attention has been directed recently to improving real estate.

Theodore Ristow, jobber in seed, leaf and Spanish tobacco, took up his residence here in 1866 or 1867. Ristow was born in Prussia, April 12, 1842; came to this country in 1858, and married here his present wife, who was also a native of Prussia. He began the business, now engaging his attention in July, 1868. He erected the buildings on the premises where he lives in 1867, and has since erected a block of eleven dwellings east side of Maarkens Street.

Metha Grimm, relict of Henry Grimm, has a conspicuous store on the west side of Bergen Line Avenue, just north of Dalleytown. Her late husband, who died in 1877, showed eagerness to second all efforts ensuring local improvements.

James H. Symes located a lumber-yard near the Guttenberg line, upon the west side of Bergen Line Avenue, Sept. 2, 1882. An office, sheds and dwelling were erected, and he entered at once upon the management of an energetic business.

A little to the west and south of the last-named place, upon the slope ascending Tower Hill, stands the studio of Henry Melrose, the landscape painter. From the site he there occupies a commanding prospect presents itself at this time, the view ranging over New York Bay, the vicinity of the Narrows, Staten Island and the Orange Mountains.

Centennial Fourth.—This memorable day won the notice of a patriotic populace here. Perhaps no township of its size in the country shows more flag-stalls, and on gala-days more flags, than does Union township. A committee of arrangements had served efficiently on the centennial anniversary. The people of the several localities in the region united in a parade and patriotic demonstration in the morning. Early in the afternoon, according to the announcement, exercises at the Hudson County Park consisted of the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Frambach Frederick, Jr., and an oration pronounced by A. H. Ryder.

The themes dwelt upon in this park oration referred to the aspects of the country, comparing 1776 with 1876. Evidences of advancement were set forth and the number of changes wrought during the century witnessed as well in this locality, as the entire land.

Township Officers.—Governing this municipality is a township committee consisting of three members, elected annually at the spring town-meeting. This committee, assisted by a township clerk, also elected yearly, supervise the general affairs of the township.

At the meeting of the joint committee held at Hudson County Park House, March 20, 1879, the township was represented by Town Committeemen William H. Schmidt, Cornelius Healy and Charles Wurtz, Jr. The joint committee, after adjusting and determining the separate assets justly pertaining to the township of Union and to the town of Guttenberg, submitted to the inhabitants their proceedings by a publication covering seven pages, and dated the 31st day of March, 1879.

The township committee for the year 1884 were Messrs. William H. Schmidt (chairman) Michael Furlong and Garret Pink. Thomas McCormack is the township clerk, the present year being the second he has served. The chairman of the township committee, William H. Schmidt, has served several terms as a committeeman of this township and was a member of the joint committee in 1879. Born in Saxony, Germany, in May, 1834, Mr. Schmidt emigrated to this country in 1851. He carried on a business in New York City for eighteen years, excepting about eighteen months which he passed in military service as a lieutenant in the Fifty-fifth Regiment New York Infantry. Mr. Schmidt married, in 1853, a native of Bavaria; has had four children, all of whom reside within the township. He removed from the city in 1869, and erected the house on the east side of Bergenwood or Dalleytown road, where he has since lived. Mr. Schmidt is the proprietor of the Palisade ice-houses, buildings re-erected in 1884 and he continues the ice business, which he has successfully conducted since 1873, besides attending to a landed estate, to the future improvement of which he looks forward with interest.

Residents of this township as now constituted appearing in the Board of Chosen Freeholders, may be mentioned: Michael Henry, 1884; Hugh Mooney, 1866; Francis Pollock, 1865.

Miscellany.—The entire area of this township is thought to have been owned at an early period by Bergeners, among whom were Van Vorst, Van Horn, Newkirk, De Mott and others. Plots were purchased by men of enterprise, surveyors employed, and maps marking out building lots numbered and located and announced for sale. Among these maps are "Map of West New York," 1855, giving localities of lots on both sides of Jefferson and of People Streets; "Map of eighty-two building lots" filed July 5, 1856, showing lots on Bergenwood road, Washington Street, Jefferson Street, and Pierce Avenue; "Map of Property surveyed by William Hexamer, surveyor, 1867," showing lots on Washington Street and Jefferson Street, West New York. As years have elapsed these maps have multiplied, so that at the present time very little of the area of this township can be said to be without map illustrations, denoting the "building lot" though the building itself be in a distant future.

The summer abode of the late D. S. Gregory, at Oak Cliff, meets occasional mention among old inhabitants; it has, since his death, been in the occupancy of agents connected with the stock-yards. The locality had many attractions while the Gregory family possessed, it and the earlier incumbent, Jacob Brower, tilled the soil, making the property no little source of profit. The river-front, called Brower's Point, gained its name from this tenant, whose home was there for many years. The owner of the property was Van Vorst.

Some distance below or south of this place was a stone dwelling built by Mr. Constock, who had bought the land of Cornelius Van Horn, son-in-law of Garrabrant, the original owner. Constock resided there for the space of a year or two only.

It was about the first of August, 1840, that a large whale came up the river. "I recollect the circumstance," says an old narrator, "as though it were yesterday; the bullets shot from father's gun glanced off, or seemed without any effect; at any rate the monster continued his way up the river."

For several years, in the earlier history of Ferry incidents a great deal could be chronicled concerning gunners. During the summer and autumn too, no scant number of target companies gave their salutes to this township. For several years in fact, it seemed to be the special resort of similar excursionists; especially while Dave Pollock—as he was familiarly styled—stood at the head of an establishment near the shore. That clever Boniface, a native of New York, had the attractive quality and genial nature that gave him great popularity with these crowds. Year after year, his roomy pavilion near the ferry won the notice of many hunters and marksmen coming from the city for practice or for a hunt. Pollock's brother Frank followed him, and the vicinity of the ferry, for a considerable period of time, had a galaxy of brilliant resorts, each vying with the other.

Among the military veterans residing in this township is Henry Dumar, who served three years as a private in the New York Fifty-fourth Regiment Infantry, enrolling himself August 13, 1862. J. Scherer, enlisting in September 1861, also served nearly three years in the Ninth and nearly three months in the Ninety-seventh New York Militia, having the advantage of heroic experience at Belle Isle, at Gettysburg, South Mountain, Winchester, the Wilderness, with other places, where the contest was the thickest.

Charitable Organizations have the convenience of a very commodious hall corner of Pierce Avenue and Polk Street. At present two institutions meet at stated periods here, conducting their proceedings in the German language and co-operating with members admitted from another locality. The edifice, serving also as an inn, exhibits a sign, "Union Assembly Rooms by Garret Fink." Here also the township committee holds many of its meetings. (Fink is serving his second year as a committeeman. He was born in Westphalia in 1850, and accompanied his parents to America in 1853). He has resided here about eighteen years; married in 1876 Christiana Witt, a native of West New York, and erected the edifice in which he at present lives, in 1883. About the year 1862 and for several years afterwards, what is called "Alter Dutcher der Harigari" met in this neighborhood. It is now occupying a lodge room in an adjoining town.

Educational Matters have made headway, although progress here may appear at times otherwise. In the year's report for Union Township, 1866, the superintendent of the then township says: "We have built a very handsome school-house in one of the districts which cost, with the land, three thousand two hundred dollars." This was at West New York.

As now constituted the township has two school districts, numbered nine and ten.

District number nine covers the area of territory along the river and on both sides of Bill's Ferry road. During a number of years, school was kept in a hired building but inelegantly adapted to the purpose. Such a circumstance afforded opportunities for censure and comment. The county superintendent in his report for 1871 intimates that he had never seen so poor a school-house, and in his report for 1875 considers the district "fortunate in not owning it." At the latter date he gives the district one hundred and fifty-eight children. A sort of adulation attended the chronicles referring to the other districts, and number nine had no attractions to recommend it to a general notice. Its romantic locality rarely received any notice, its inconvenient appointments and its other repulsive features prevented any encomiums. Accordingly the district became an interesting field for educational efforts. The attention of the people, too long engrossed by other matters, was now directed to a new school-house.

The school-building opened Oct. 16, 1882, meets the demands in an eminent degree. It can healthfully accommodate the pupils in attendance, having an ample supply of sittings, and being in all respects adapted to the purpose for which it was built. The edifice is large, constructed upon a good plan, eligibly located, and affording the conveniences for two departments. It is a two-story brick building, with an extension for entrances; the ceilings are high; the furniture and apparatus the choice of practical minds; and the entire outfit does credit to the district. The present Principal, Mary Lynch, has occupied the position since the new school opened. Jennie D. Gros, is the assistant.

The second district in Union township, No. 10, organized as a separate school district in June, 1865. It has a one-story frame building in good condition, with convenient classrooms, erected in that year and subsequently at a considerable outlay, enlarged. The rooms are furnished with modern desks; the school possesses a globe, an organ and other auxiliaries, including a circulating library. The present Principal, Alexander Smith, has been here since 1882. The primary department has been in care of Amelia Collier for more than six years. The district is known as the "West New York District." Trustees: George A. Melrose, George Schwartz, John Oitjen.

Churches—ZION KIRCHE.—There are two churches at West New York, both using the German language in their services. On the corner of Pierce Avenue and People Street, fronting on the latter street towards the east, stands an extremely neat church edifice. Over the large front entrance near the words in German text, Zion Kirche. It was erected during the summer of 1875, and dedicated November 7th that year. The present pastor, Rev. E. P. Linnpold, labors also in a church on New York Avenue, town of Union.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN CHURCH OF WEST NEW YORK.—Another Church edifice was erected on the west side of Maackens Street, south of Pierce Avenue, West New York, in 1875. It was built by a congregation that had organized in 1870, and worshipped for some time in the Public School House of district number ten, under the ministrations of Rev. R. W. Buehler, a missionary from New York. Following that missionary, came Rev. Gerbhard Burkhardt, now at Greenville, under whom the church was built and dedicated as St. John's Lutheran Church of West New York. His successor, F. L. Brown, was unfortunate in his ministry here, and was succeeded by Rev. Ernest Edee, at present in Maryland. The last named clergyman has been absent about four years, his place being filled for that period by Rev. H. Shoeppe, who also officiates in a church at Union Hill. Services are held in the afternoon on Sundays. The earliest officers of the church were George Ellwein, Gabriel Bayerline, William H. Schmidt, Ferdinand Muller, Hermann Hilderbrand. Present membership, twenty-five. Value of church property, two thousand dollars.

A Sabbath-school accompanies the organized influences of this ecclesiastical association. Also a Ladies' Benevolent Society, of which Mrs. Charles Schultz is treasurer, and Mrs. W. H. Schmidt, secretary. The Sunday-school holds its sessions on Sundays, from 9 to 10.30 A. M. Superintendent, Alber Miller. Miss Breckwedel, organist.

CHAPTER XLIX.

WEST HOBOKEN TOWNSHIP.¹

Description and Boundary.—Perhaps no veracious historian, seeking from exterior objects merely, would give West Hoboken its actual area of territory. One would say this and another that locality is West Hoboken. In a qualified sense both would approximate the fact and yet fall short of full reality. For a certainty, as a municipal dominion, West Hoboken covers a greater extent of ground than goes in everyday confab by its name. Within what is now by a recent ordinance declared to be the town of West Hoboken are portions of Weavertown, of Lossburg, and the entire boundaries of Wechawken village and Bonnsville. The act of State Legislature, 1861, making West Hoboken a separate township, extended its area beyond what ordinary town-talk would, in common conversation, attribute to it. General comments make it "a charming village within arm's length of Hoboken," or "the village that overlooks Hoboken and the majestic Hudson;" then further limiting it to "a broad avenue, on each side of which are the embowered residences of its inhabitants." These descriptions, and similar ideas arising from them, come from the notion commonly prevailing that West Hoboken proper extends to the north very little beyond High Street, and to the south but a short distance from Hague Street. The boundaries, as fixed, place portions of Hoboken and Wechawken on the east; Weavertown or Bergenwood road on the west; the Bergen turnpike, leading to Haekensack, on the north; and the Paterson turnpike on the south.

Early Chroniclers.—The steady sentinels of the forest occupied these lands in Continental days. The elder inhabitants speak of the rural aspects ruling the region and refer to rustic experiences common in sylvan localities. The earliest postmaster of West Hoboken, Mr. Andrew Anderson, a native of this immediate vicinity, develops the fact that even far in the current century much of what is now West Hoboken was, as he styles it, "a mass of timber." Mr. Anderson lives at present at the corner of Clinton Avenue and Malone Street. When a stripling he went from his dwelling to the vicinity of the "Indian Spring" in search of the cow, and remembers well how the country looked about there. The trees now in Squire's Woods are samples of what were then all over the hill. As years elapsed the avenue came into use here. No saw mill was in this vicinity, "though farther down there was one." In my early notion, says Anderson, and when contemplating the wilderness around, the idea haunted me that "I might sometime meet an Indian near the Indian Spring." This region, "in later years, was my gunning ground. I found here partridges, quail, woodcock, snipe, etc. Rabbits were plenty." Somewhat of a similar account is given by others; a particular point here and there showing the red cedar as being a prevalent tree, especially upon a knoll in the vicinity of what has since been known as Cox's Corners. At the Cedars (meaning the knoll and grounds around it, where the cedar was plentiful) many of the earlier gunners got an abundance of birds and other game. With the lapse of years and the march of speculation varied scenes have succeeded, and the territory at present is occupied by numerous dwellings and garden plots. Among the earliest pursuits that presented itself here was that of the florist.

Florists.—A graphic writer, penciling this locality, puts forth in prominent colors "its graperies and its flowers of every kind, both native and exotic." Still another writer, as if entranced by Flora's gifts, says with earnestness:

"Bring me flowers, fresh flowers, to be admired and loved for their Maker's sake, to awaken within me a source of innocent delight. When I see the eyes of the young kindle with pleasure while gazing upon these lovely objects, I pray that such tastes may never be supplanted by grosser ones; and when I behold the aged taking pleasure in them, I am thankful that their rough experience of the world has not rendered them so obtuse as to quench this delicate sensibility."

The vineyard of Loss was an early object observable on the easterly slope, its proprietor giving Lössburg its name. The florists located mainly along the Bergen wood road, this vocation making itself conspicuous for its permanent thrift and its enterprise. Near the Schuetzen Park, just south of Cox's corners, are some three and a half acres of land, owned by Henry Kuhl, a florist established there upwards of thirty years. Like his neighbors in the same business, Mr. Kuhl says: "We grow roses, and violets, and pinks, and whatever sells in our line at the city stores where purchases are made of us." To the floral department, which numbers ten hot houses, Kuhl adds other lines of enterprise, and he has of his own rearing grapevines, fruit and ornamental trees. The season's productions receives Mr. Kuhl's attention. Mr. Kuhl arrived from Hanover in 1844, located in this vicinity in 1847, and is now in his seventy-sixth year. His fellow-townsmen engaged in similar business, include now as formerly: Messrs. C. A. Asmus, Herman Brensing, William Dietz, Charles Drescher, Jacob Eyrth, Julius W. Paulsen, C. Welterbee, and others.

¹By Hon. Anthony H. Ryder.

A tourist would find something akin to enchantment where the vocation here referred to is carried on. A wayfarer observed recently an invoice of flowers en route to the city from the establishment of Mr. Brensing, whose residence is half a mile south of Mr. Kuhl's. The exhibition surpassed any similar one he had ever beheld. The flowers are quite as innocent, simple, and yet superbly complex as any created thing. It expands to heaven its grateful and to man its cheerful looks. It in many instances exhales a fragrance that exhilarates and delights, thus yielding "a sweet friendship of the quiet plant." Lessons learned amid the works of nature are of peculiar value in the present age. 'Tis wise, no doubt, now and then to take instruction from the lily, that quiet denizen of Divine bounty. Surely, too, if an admiration of the beautiful productions of nature has any tendency to refine, a culture of them has additional power in the same direction and a more abiding influence. Delightful as such exhibitions are in the domain of horticulture the floweret, the ornamental shrub; besides these are many fruits, the propagation of which gains no little care at West Hoboken. East of Palisade Avenue, near Charles Street, is the establishment of a noted mushroom cultivator, Mr. J. Conord. These plants are produced for the market by a process that is a specialty here with Mr. Conord, who has conducted the business upwards of thirty years.

Syms' Park.—The visitor to West Hoboken during the summer can not be otherwise than pleased with Syms' Woods. It is located west of Givernaud's large factory, whose employes resort to it in the warm weather during their nooning. Picnic parties and schools have found it a pleasant resort in July and August, and not a few retain happy recollections of the spot. It is an ample grove, the trees of which yield from high branches a cooling shade. The ground is covered with luxuriant grass and altogether free from thickets and underbrush. No one visits this natural park without having a sense of grandeur awakened, and at midday the shelter of the lofty foliage is really grateful and refreshing. One walks among these veteran trees encountering no obstructions and the piercing rays of the burning sun are altogether excluded.

Indications of Progress.—Kindling with enthusiasm as land speculators got hold of the soil here, steps were taken to improve the place. Building associations were formed, the highways were graded and attention was shown towards easy methods of transit. The hill road and a plank-walk over the meadow to the Deer Park, and a "short cut" across that "Park" to Washington Street, Hoboken, was for years the pedestrian's route to the city. The hack was the ordinary conveyance, and this vehicle was always ready at the ferry to take the passenger in whatever direction he chose to go. In December, 1851, Seth Hunt, an enterprising inhabitant of Albany, was deliberating upon the establishment of a line of stages to run to and fro betwixt the Hoboken Ferry and West Hoboken.

The locality came to one and then to another point of advancement, looking at it from a social and conventional standpoint. Jotting down the village notes in 1852, the morning gossip reports that he does not "see much of the young Sanclairs. Anderson is well, and so is the village "patron saint." Sylvera returned from California some time ago and has made two or three trips to South Carolina since. Battersworth still pursues his artistic vocation and frequently brings in to my view the work of his delicate pencil. Your rosy-checked artist, Gordon, may be seen as formerly in close companionship with his pipe and pleasant thoughts, having a word and witicism for all."

At about this period the newly-established post-office was in ample operation, and it became, as such institutions do, the headquarters of the town news. Events and incidents of a local description were commented upon here, and tourists and excursionists had a tendency to regard it as the proper place to gain information upon many subjects. A literary society operated in the vicinity. The exercises here consisted of critiques, debates, essays, occasional lectures and concerts. Proceedings of that description had an awakening influence amongst the populace, such an institution conducted with no small degree of animation, as that was, stirred the intellect and gave vivacity to the neighborhood. In a short time afterwards the following circular gained local distribution among the inhabitants.

WEST HOBOKEN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.—THE CLERKS OF WEST HOBOKEN. The West Hoboken Library Association having been duly incorporated by law and being now ready to go into active operation, the undersigned, Trustees of the same, beg leave to call the attention of their fellow citizens to the objects of the Association and the advantages which it offers to its members.

"It is proposed to establish and sustain, in this village, a Public Library, selected with reference to the wants and tastes of our population, and aiming to be both attractive and useful. Measures have already been taken to secure a good selection of popular books in the various departments of reading, such as History, Biography, Travels, Poetry, Light Literature, Science and Morals, which will be increased as rapidly and judiciously as possible.

The Association has also now ready a large and varied list of Standard Reviews, Magazines and Periodicals. Many of these works, it is well known, possess great intellectual ability and attraction; and it is believed that our collection will be found to contain those which the lovers of good reading will not fail to appreciate. Among them will be found such as the following: The 'North American Review,' the 'London Quarterly Review,' the 'Edinburgh Review,' the 'Westminster Review,' the 'North British Review,' 'Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine,' 'Harper's Magazine,' the 'Edinburgh Magazine,' 'Littell's Living Age,' the 'Knickerbocker,' the 'Democratic Review,' 'Chambers' Edinburgh Journal,' the 'London Illustrated News,' the 'Aldion,' 'Sartain's Magazine,' 'Godey's Lady's Book,' and several other well-known periodicals.

In the appropriate season, the Association purposes to secure a series of interesting popular Lectures on scientific subjects, with illustrations and apparatus by able lecturers. It is believed that the Association possesses the means of providing a series of popular and attractive intellectual entertainments, which will be a source of great benefit and pleasure to its members. A debating society will also form a part of the objects of the Association.

Believing that the inhabitants of our village have long desired such an institution, and will appreciate its advantages, especially in its influence on the young, we take the liberty of respectfully soliciting the co-operation of our fellow-citizens. With the united efforts of all who feel an interest in the improvement of our place, we are confident that a most valuable result may be easily and speedily realized.

The terms of admission are fixed at the lowest price allowed by law, — one dollar initiation fee and fifty cents a quarter.

Ladies will be permitted to have access to the library by paying twelve-five cents half-yearly.

The library is open on Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week.

WILLIAM SINCLAIRE,

WM BRADFORD,

JOHN HARPER,

W. K. HALL,

R. C. WETENHALL,

Trustees.

WEST HOBOKEN, April, 1852.

Some amount of emulation had evoked the above circular. The West Hoboken Literary Society, in active operation since November, 1851, contemplated additional facilities looking to the intellectual improvement of its members. The West Hoboken Lyceum and Library Association, actuated by similar inclinations, gave considerable attention to their design of facilitating mutual intercourse and promoting "a spirit of useful inquiry." The Literary Society set forth in September, 1852, their amplified regulations, showing a working force of twenty-six active members. Essays took a wide range within this society and the questions in debate likewise. By way of illustration, the question here given was debated on the evening of October 21, 1852: "Was Napoleon justifiably sentenced to St. Helena?" Affirmative debaters, John Syms, William Galbraith; negative debaters, W. F. Buckley, W. H. Alcorn.

At this period many efforts were made to facilitate transit to and from West Hoboken. Accordingly the following citizens signed a petition to the legislature, asking for the establishment of the "Weehawken Ferry" as a means of enhancing facilities of intercourse: Stephen Varity, Curtis Jennings, Garret Spear, John Speir, Garret Van Vorst, Patrick Collins.

A prospectus, issued with a view of promoting this Ferry enterprise, declared the western shore of the North River to be advancing briskly in importance, make it more accessible. By reason of the prevailing westerly winds at that season the winter finds this shore less encumbered by floating ice. The summer sees it surrounded by many advantages. Elevated, fresh and pleasant, these suburban grounds present an invaluable outlet to the thronging thousands of the metropolis. The region offers its inducements as a desirable and healthful locality for residence. No insignificant revenue flows into the State Treasury from canals and railroads. Schools derive support from State funds in addition to the amount annually received from township taxation. Within Hudson County (continues this prospectus of 1853) several of the schools are already free and others are upon the verge of this condition. Taxes in this county are much less than in New York, and here we may observe the reasons that are leading many to escape from the din and dust of the city to more congenial homes on this side of the river.

In the local reports the advancing steps were shown. By the State report for the year 1856 it may be seen that six hundred and fifty dollars had been assessed for enlarging the public school-house at West Hoboken, and by the report of the Lyceum and Library Association, efforts were concentrating in the prosecution of a laudable enterprise.

Among the donors to the Library Association may be mentioned, John Alcorn, William Bradford, S. H. Cone, John Hague, S. R. Syms, Robert Harper, Anthony H. Ryder, A. B. Ryerson, J. J. Senell, John Syms and W. J. Syms.

The library was indebted to the generosity of the late James G. King, a donation from him having been appropriated to fit up the book-cases. Subsequently to the Lyceum and Library Association John Sims, and Grace L., his wife, by deed recorded in the twenty-fifth book of Deeds for the county, conveyed that plot of land at the junction of the southerly line of Hague Street with the easterly line of Suckley Street, a plot measuring one hundred by fifty feet, to the Trustees of the Association named, mentioning special provisions in the conveyance. The purpose of these donors seems to have been to make the solid elements alluring and to exercise an effectual favor in behalf of intellectual improvement. The mode of address in the Deed determines their design and the annual report of the association already referred to looks upon a sphere of usefulness only commenced in this direction.

West Hoboken made a Township.—Practical expedients were familiar to the populace here, and as circumstances transpired requiring definite action there were inhabitants in West Hoboken ready for the exigency. The township of North Bergen, with rapidly increasing citizens located in scattered neighborhoods, admitted of division. The township had a collector who sat, for public convenience, one day at Union Hill, another at Saunacus, another at West New York, and another at West Hoboken and so on. These populous regions aspired to greater distinction, and began to contemplate the measure of making themselves municipally independent. At primary conventions a difficulty presented itself of supplying local calls, and many reasons combined to show that room for at least a trio of townships might be observed on a map of North Bergen—the North Bergen of 1869. Accordingly notice appeared in November 1869, in one of the newspapers published in the county, announcing that application would be made at the next session of the State Legislature to divide the township of North Bergen into two or more townships and to amend the act creating the township of Weehawken. The latter township had, since March 15, 1859, organized under the act of that date, and was covering territory taken in part from North Bergen and in part from the city of Hoboken. West Hoboken, with zealous action under notice just mentioned, had a bill passed by the House of Assembly creating the township of West Hoboken. That act, when about to be submitted to the Senate, was withdrawn, with the consent of its advocates, and the bill Senate No. 50, entitled "An Act to divide the Township of North Bergen, in the County of Hudson," took its place. This act establishing North Bergen by new bounds, and creating the township of Union and the township of West Hoboken, became a law Feb. 28, 1861.

New Mode of Transit.—The scenes about West Hoboken began to vary, and the populace became more familiar with the quick step of local improvement. Francisco's hacks for many years convenient, and the omnibus and the stage were all tried, and still the people sought farther and better modes of transit. Adventure "took another tack," as can be gathered from the significant notice that follows:

WEST HOBOKEN & HOBOKEN PASSENGER RAILROAD COMPANY.

"The subscribers to the capital stock of this company are requested to pay an installment of ten per centum, or $2.50 for each share subscribed, on each of the following days:

1861.
June 1st.	August 1st.
October 1st.	December 1st.
1862.
February 1st.	April 1st.
June 1st.	August 1st.
	October 1st.

"The payments are to be made against the receipts of John Roemmelt, treasurer, at the offices of Roemmelt & Leicht, (5 Hudson City), or at the office of the Hoboken and Weehawken Horse Railroad Company, opposite the Ferry Buildings in Hoboken.

"By order of the Board of Directors,

"CHARLES STEPHENS,
Secretary.

"May 14, 1864."

Educational.—Keeping even pace with material progress were considerations looking to general education and the facilities to be afforded to it. The local school superintendent, in his annual report for 1863, notwithstanding the township had entered upon a chartered career when the country had just begun to be agitated by a civil war, earnestly recommended that steps be taken to "seek out a suitable central location for a school-building, ascertain upon what conditions can be procured, consult as to best plan and its cost and mature a report in reference to the whole subject." His method comprised a committee of seven, who would hear suggestions from all interested in the subject, and whose written report should be submitted at a public meeting for township action. In such a pithy proposition appeared the elements always deserving due deliberation. Reports, as they succeeded that suggestion, shook no feature here, put forth; and measures in due time followed, carrying the scheme into operation. This advertisement shortly appeared in the public prints, asking as follows:

"Such a proposal and notice will be published on the 11th day of August next for the attention and consideration of the New Jersey House to be erected at West Hoboken N. J. according to plan and specifications.

"Proposals and estimates will be received at the office of James Aitken, Esq. at No. 2 Pine Street, New York, or at his residence, West Hoboken. Plans of building or specifications may be seen at the office of Mr. Aitken, from and after the date until the 20th day of August, and after that date at his residence.

JAMES OLS,
JAMES AITKEN,
T. KENNEDY,

"August 1862."

"School Trustees."

A population here, said to number about two thousand five hundred in 1833, showed a census of seven hundred and eighteen children between five and eighteen years of age. Some of these were in a parochial school; others at the Palisade Institute, a school sustained by private enterprise; the bulk however,—at least five hundred and eighteen of the township children—had resources for tuition in the public schools here, of which there were four reported in the township by the previous year's report—two kept in the old school-house, and two in hired buildings. During several years the census showed rapid advances in the numerical force; as in 1867 there were 1118 school children reported; two years after, in 1869, there were 1244; and in 1871 there were 1474. The local superintendent near the close of 1866, in his yearly communication touching public instruction, sought a plan of school building large enough to accommodate six hundred pupils, and reported to the State superintendent that the township had recently bought a building site one hundred by one hundred and fifty feet. County Superintendent Dickenson, when reporting for the year 1871 to the Department of Public Instruction, remarks: "District No. 11 embraces the rapidly growing town of West Hoboken. No district in the county has improved more than this during the time I have been in office. * * * Now a good three-story brick school house, and a corps of ten wives awake teachers, are very gratifying proofs of rapid and satisfactory progress." In passing, it may be well to suggest the fact that the State, by generous endowments, was from time to time contributing directly to local facilities in the way of public edification.

Lossburg.—Charles Loss, a resident for some time at Coblenz, on the Rhine, came to America about the year 1795. An old map among the heirlooms of his descendants exhibits at one of its corners written in a bold, clear hand, the following words: "I do hereby agree to convey to Mr. Charles Loss twenty-three acres of land according to the lines of this map, for one thousand dollars. Aug. 21, 1804. John Stevens." No doubt the frank offer so expressed was accepted, and Mr. Loss, who was a Huguenot, found room to enjoy here liberty, peace and prosperity, booms denied him in la belle France. Loss was a surveyor; as was his son, Charles Loss, Jr., also. The vineyard upon the easterly slope made, no doubt, an umbrageous exhibit amidst the rocks so abundant on that ridge many years ago.

Of the family, we find that Luke Strausbie, married one daughter, and Herman Von Drehle, another. Strausbie who was born at Birmingham, England, April 20, 1788, was many years in the service of the Land and Improvement Company, a very genial, companionable man, having what might be called the tourist's courtesy, a social way with him that all who knew him, well remember. The venerable gentleman closed his career at the old Loss homestead, being in his eighty-sixth year at the date of his death, Sept. 12, 1873. His wife, Amelia, survived him three years; her death took place Sept. 13, 1876, in her eightieth year. Von Drehle was a genial man, familiar with the Holland language, and spoke the German fluently. By his first wife, he had one daughter, who married C. O. Von Meyer. She, her husband and the children's governess were drowned at South Hampton, Long Island, July 29, 1869. The four children¹ were afterwards adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Von Drehle. The second wife of Mr. Von Drehle was a daughter of Luke Strausbie. The dwelling at Lossburg was built in 1869. From the rear piazza and windows of this domicile, a most commanding prospect is had. The decline from the bluff is abrupt, and the altitude of the house is three hundred feet above sea-level. The prospect takes in the city of New York, portions of Long Island, Staten Island and the intervening rivers and bay. Near the dwelling a few yards north, stands the observatory,² long here a trysting place during the warm season for admirers of fine scenery. Mr. Von Drehle for many years occupied a handsome dwelling south of the Loss homestead, below the hill near the meadows. The Loss property was divided about the year 1848, A. L. Von Boskerek, Garret Sip and Thomas B. Gautier serving as commissioners. Von Drehle offered at auction April 10, 1877, considerable land located at Lossburg. The map of that property then exposed for sale, exhibits a Cliff, a Washington and a Weehawken Street, leading to the mountain road. Besides the latter road, there are traces also upon that map of Hillside road, of the Bergen turnpike, of Amelia, Chestnut, Hermann and Luke Streets. Herman Von Drehle was born Oct. 9, 1808, became a United States citizen here Oct. 8, 1844, and died at his Lossburg residence Oct. 25, 1882.

WILLIAM RANNEY, the artist, exercised his skill with assiduity for several years here, having his residence and studio upon an eminence south of Lossburg, on the west side of Palisade Avenue, several blocks north of the Palisade News office. The pictures that made Ranney prominent amongst the fraternity of landscape painters were mainly produced here. He was passionately fond of nature in its romantic aspects, and rural views had a fascination for him. The experience he had gained in the military service as a volunteer under Gen. Houston, and the pursuit of his artistic studies at intervals, made him apt in the line of delineation. Sketches made in his Texas campaigns gave a spirit and vigor to his paintings, contributing to the celebrity he gained for a vivid portrayal of prairie life. Ranney was born at Middletown, Conn., in 1813; died in West Hoboken Nov. 18, 1857. His amiable and courteous greetings are remembered by many of the early residents here. Ranney showed prolific genius, seldom in want of a subject for his easel. The hunter and soldier characters of our early history were his favorites; and these were copied and carried to every city on the globe where prints are exhibited in shop-windows. The versatile scenery presented by this artist did honor to American talent. He numbered among his subjects "The Sleigh-Ride," "On the Wing," "The Trapper's Last Bullet," "Marion and his Men," "Boone's First View of Kentucky," the latter being amongst those of his works that were engraved by the American Art Union.

Cox's Corners.—At the time most of the present residents came to count themselves amongst the inhabitants of West Hoboken, the New Inn, by W. Cox, was what in legal parlance would be styled a misnomer. The site was anterior to the entry by Cox, owned by J. Gillman, who had bought of his predecessor, Ross. The locality went by the name of Cox's Corners, and continues to be designated in that way, although the bills for many years emanating as well from this old as from the new store, are dated at "Weehawken Village, N. J." The Corners got to be a common entrepot for every kind of goods, other stores not having the variety, or, at least, the assortment, kept at this. The store of William Cox, of Cox & Sons, or of William and George Cox, for such were the mutations, had ample supplies to meet demands. It was a country store, showing an inventory of many commodities. Builders resorted to this place, teamsters, painters of fences and dwellings, as well as all who needed flour, feed and fine groceries. An addition was made to the building in 1848 enlarging the original edifice. The edifice now occupied by George Cox is located just east of the old building on the same side of Bergen turnpike. The store is at the extreme northwest point of the West Hoboken boundary as established by the act of 1861. Elevated upon the apex of a hill, from the west end of the front piazza is enjoyed a commanding prospect looking to the west. The stage line of Goetz & Meckler, in 1862, extended along the route in front of Cox's, the conveyances passing several times a day to and from Fairview. In earlier years the omnibus arrived at Cox's Corners from Hoboken, this point being the route's terminus. Old residents talk of these corners as a locality always showing something new. The inn had, like other public resorts, its show of current advertisements placarded upon the walls; sometimes that of a stray cow, a lost dog, or a stolen horse. Local matters were often noticed here. George V. De Motte, at that period town clerk of North Bergen, in October, 1852, notified the North Bergen people that the township committee would "meet at the house of W. Cox on Wednesday, the 20th inst., between the hours of 10 o'clock, A.M. and 3 o'clock, P.M." At that time this locality was a central position convenient for the populace to get here from each extremity of the large township, and occasionally the polls were held at Cox's Corners. William Cox, Sr., had six daughters and four sons; all excepting Emma, the wife of Edward Marvin, survived him.¹

¹ Louisa A., Leonora M., Henry F. and Albert Herman Von Meyers.

² The prospect is commanding and commends itself to home-tourists in quest of a wholesome recreation, and to strangers from abroad seeking prominent views within our country. The proprietor, Charles Schmitz, is courteous and accommodating, and no one who takes to his experience the panorama here presented is apt to forget it. A scene so extensive, varied by such a multitude of the most significant objects, is apt to impress itself upon the memory, to be, as the years pass by, reviewed and retained as a scenic treasure of the recollection.

Elizabeth, wife of John Rowland; Mary, wife of William Chapman; Harriet, wife of Christopher Manahan; Selina, wife of Thomas Keynton; Maria, wife of George Fussell; William, John, George and Charles.

Roads and Streets.—The local authorities were moving from time to time, showing enterprise in the matter of improvements, seen in proceedings as here.—

¹An ordinance to provide for the opening of a street from Pallade Avenue to the 1st Station (so called) of the Mountain Road, and to grade and flag the same, and also a portion of the Mountain Road.

²The inhabitants of the Township of West Hoboken, in the County of Hudson, do ordain as follows:

"1.—That a street fifty feet wide be opened, beginning at the 1st Station of the Mountain Road, and running westerly, on or about the southerly line of V. Savoy's property, and ending at Pallade Avenue, where it strikes the same at nearly right angles, and in accordance with a survey and map of said proposed street made by A. Beane, Township Surveyor, and adopted by the Township Committee, August 21st, 1866.

"2.—That the roadway and sidewalks of said proposed street from Pallade Avenue to the 1st Station of the Mountain Road, and also that portion of the Mountain Road from the 1st Station thence to Washington Street shall be graded and completed to the full width thereof, and that the sidewalks of 1800, the said streets be flagged with blue stone flagging four feet wide, from Pallade Avenue to Washington Street, and proper curbs and sidewalks laid thereon.

"3.—That Wm. S. Balch, Chas. S. Galbraith and John G. Stone be, and they are hereby appointed to execute the same, and to pay the expenses incurred in making the said improvement.

"4.—That the work aforesaid shall be made under the direction of Albert Beyer, Township Surveyor.

"WILLIAM GALBRAITH,
"CLERK OF TOWNSHIP.
"ALBERT A. BIERER, E. GREENWAY,
"Passed August 21st, 1866. "Township Clerk."

A brief period in advance of the foregoing ordinance many land owners had met to discuss "an act to provide for the acquisition and construction of a public pleasure ground and avenue," contemplated as a more general improvement. The meeting was held at the Hudson County Hotel, Bergen turnpike, Feb. 15, 1868. The call was signed by many citizens, including William Galbraith, Charles Sædhoj, Louis Becker, John H. Bonn, J. W. Paulsen, H. J. Rottmann, Herman Breusing, Alfred E. Gregory, Peter Brunges. The measure assumed various attitudes. Its opposers and exponents arranged many schemes contriving to urge or to circumvent the proposal. A variety of plans followed, none of which, however, went far enough to assure success. Local authorities for all that gave way to no expectation of a general improvement by the county, but kept a vigilant hand busy. West Hoboken lent her ear to petitions, and cleared the course for progress:

"OPENING OF SPRING STREET.

"Pursuant to a resolution of the Township Committee of the Township of West Hoboken public notice is hereby given of the following petition for opening Spring Street, from the Paterson Plank Road to the Hackensack Plank Road, in the township of West Hoboken:

"WEST HOBOKEN, May 14, 1874.

To the Honorable the Township Committee:

"GENTLEMEN.—We, the undersigned, owners of property on Spring Street, respectfully request your honorable body to take such action as you deem best for the opening of said street from the Paterson Plank Road to the Hackensack Plank Road.

"We request A. Beyer be appointed surveyor.

"And your petitioners will ever pray.

"A. Anderson, Griwald & Amrade (per R. T. Bates, James Day, M. Day, James McKenna, W. E. Wells, E. S. Guyner, Thomas Brennan, Peter Balpin, T. H. Gerdes, Patrick Rogers, Joseph E. Taylor, John L. Meredith, Samuel R. Syms, Christopher Karb, The Hoboken Land and Improvement Company, by W. W. Shippen, president.

"Now, therefore in further pursuance of said resolution public notice is hereby given that all parties interested in the above improvement called for, and objecting thereto, must file the same, in writing, with the township clerk on or before Wednesday, July 15, 1874, at 7:30 P. M., at which time the township committee will meet at the Town Hall to consider such objections.

JONAS FUCHSNER,
"Township Clerk.

"Town Hall, West Hoboken, June 6th, 1874."

Similar steps leading to local progress have been made during the decade just elapsed, the views here given showing who were busy and what were the matters attracting attention during the periods just explored.

¹He died March 22, 1866. A brother, Abraham Cox, residing at Saratoga, over eighty years of age, was still living there in 1884.

Early and Recent Business.—Engaged in the earlier traffic here were many persons of whom mere mention must suffice. The pencil case manufactory of John Hague, a representative for many years in the Board of Chosen Freeholders, the silk factory of Henry G. McRea, the watch case manufactory of U. Savoye (the latter we will notice a little later); the business carried on by William Galbraith, more recently by his son, Charles F.; the same taxidermy conducted also under varied auspices by A. F. Alexander; that chocolate factory on Dubois Street, conducted by L. Thourot—in all these enterprises skill developed the local industry, and in the cases where the business still goes on, enterprise is joined to valuable experience.

R. T. Bene, corner of Clinton Avenue and Barclay Street, has been many years engaged on fine work, the productions in the ostrich feather department giving evidence of familiarity with the process. Not less important is the silk business carried on within this township. Messrs. Givernaud have one of their factories here. (See North Bergen.) The like business in silk fabrics is carried on by J. W. Pinkney & Co., successors to Jordenil & Co. In ribbons, as well as dress-goods, there is the establishment of John Comby, and in silk specialties that of Joseph Rappi.

On Paterson Avenue are the Phalanx Silk Manufactory, with a Mr. Ceste serving as its director, and two separately conducted shuttle manufactories, one under the direction of Mr. A. Bonnet, and the other of Mr. Cotte. A manufactory of considerable permanency here is that of C. A. Schindler, west side of Palisade Avenue, corner of High Street. He manufactures photographic furniture, including pedestals, with fine antique cabinet furniture as a specialty. Schindler settled here about the year 1855, and erected the dwelling he now occupies, in 1861.

The eligible situation of the edifice, its old form and elevated flagstaff, make it a prominent object to the gaze. Extensive additions, with circular windows, were added to the building in 1884. Mr. Schindler, assisted mainly by his son, C. A. Schindler, Jr., conducts the manufactory in the basement, thus utilizing the entire premises.

Henry Haassenpflug, south side of Bergen turnpike, began the harness-making business about the year 1863, conducting it with skill and energy to the present time.

Henry Todd began twine manufacturing in 1866 at Bonnsville. A similar manufactory was subsequently conducted there by Robert Bankosky.

Alphonse Burgnon established business in cigar-making at Lossburg in 1866; Valentine Eberlee at Bonnsville in 1867. An express instituted by Nicholas Schmidt, since well known as Schmidt's New York and Union Hill Express, began operations in September, 1866, with its headquarters located here.

The official business connected with transactions by the West Hoboken and the Hoboken Passenger Railway, and by the North Hudson County Railway Company, was conducted during several years in the brick office on the east side of Bergen Line Avenue, south of the ear stables.

A brewery business went on successfully under the auspices of John H. Wettig, as well anterior as subsequent to the year 1867. Mr. Wettig disposed of one hundred and eighty and a half barrels of lager during the single month of June, 1870; the entire number of barrels sold by him in 1871 was seventeen hundred and eighty. The brewery was located some distance south of Cox's Corners, on the east side of Bergenwood (or Weavertown) road. At present Charles Gelan, a silk manufacturer, occupies the premises, keeping busy twenty-five operatives upon silk fabrics.

Business advertised in 1875, through the medium of the almanac published by Alfred E. Gregory for that year includes, Edward Baptist, Jr., carpenter and builder; Frank Beatty, hardware, lumber, lime, etc.; William Rosman, groceries; Joseph E. Taylor, groceries; Henry T. Bernhard, groceries; John Ehrardt, groceries; Thomas Keynton, groceries; Charles Hewning, Railroad House; Walker & Doab, Depot House; John H. Wise, groceries; A. Anderson, real estate; M. S. Kerrigan, Henry Monett, Henry Dean, Fred. Walka, Monsieur Feytel, and others in various branches of business.

The post-office at this place varies in some of its features from others. Located on the southwest corner of Spring and Hoboken Streets, with an outlook towards the east, the building, which is large and airy, presents a tidy and cheerful aspect. No one can enter it and not notice its neat and methodical appointments. A hardware business is joined to the official duties devolving upon Mr. Lawyer; and neither branch of his calling is neglected owing to the nimble movements of so brisk a personage. At one moment you hear him speaking to some person who seems to choose the Parisian style of speech, and then speedily his idens are wanted in our vernacular form. The postmaster accommodates and gratifies both. The position, held by him since 1880, has a routine with which he shows a brisk familiarity; and his adjustment of appliances to fit despatch in practical operations, seems to show the happiest design. All his arrangements appear well adapted to the business in hand. Mr. Lawyer is a native of the city of New York, and located in the immediate vicinity of his present store in 1868. Since May 1, 1880, the post-office under his management, has indicated evidences of improvement; one hundred and twenty-six boxes are now rented to patrons. The "international money order system" operates here, and parties from the circuit of other post-offices avail themselves of that feature at this office. French and German letters coming to this office are about equal in number. Epistles in the Russian, the Turkish and a number of other foreign languages come hither; those of the latter class in the Castilian, the Portuguese and the Italian predominating. A Chinese letter is a thing not unknown to this office. There are two arrivals and two departures of the mail each day.

Noted Residents.—Amongst the earlier residents evincing enterprise and showing adventure about this locality it would be a neglect to omit mentioning those so conspicuous at one or another period as C. S. Browning, James Cox, Smith A. Freeland, John Hague, James Kerrigan, Daniel Lake, Thomas Rosman, and Charles A. Savoye. Biography yields to each no limited record; in a history yielding local transactions all these men figure more or less conspicuously in the affairs affecting West Hoboken and its early chronicles. Other inhabitants as prominent were noticed in other parts of these chapters; yet these make their impressions upon the local record as events transpired in which they figured. Browning became possessor of considerable land here, as shown by the map drawn by S. D. Button, May 30, 1813. His dwelling, which became the residence of John Syms, was for a long period more conspicuous than any other of its class in the neighborhood. Snatched from this world by a tragical event¹ that occurred Nov. 9, 1815, the property passed into other hands and enterprises contemplated by the active mind of the adventurous Browning forever ceased. He left a widow and one daughter, the latter became the wife of A. H. De Motte.

James Cox, a brother of William, of whom record is already given, kept a grocery in this region many years. He was a school trustee several years. His brick store, on the south side of the Bergen turnpike, west of Bergen Line Avenue stood for years as a hint for further progress, its style, size and appointments showing local advancement considerably ahead of all others disposed to invest at that period in building enterprises. An imposing obelisk of marble now standing near the easterly border of the main avenue within the Grove Cemetery gives the announcement that James Cox died Oct. 28, 1867, aged fifty-four years. Smith A. Freeland, son of Lawrence Freeland, was a member of the firm of Anderson & Freeland for several years. He was postmaster and township clerk, and gave much energy to the furtherance of laudable enterprises. John Hague represented, with his colleague, John Shields, the township of North Bergen in the Board of Chosen Freeholders in 1850. His interest was forcible and efficient in establishing this township,² which he ably represented from 1863 to 1867 in the same board. The residence of Mr Hague was corner of Clinton Avenue and Hoboken Street; his garden always possessed attractions, and the conservatory connected with the dwelling about the year 1853 and subsequently yielded an exhibition of rare and choice plants. Mr. Kerrigan³ made early investments in real estate, purchasing land from Van Vorst and others. Daniel Lake represented the township in the Board of Chosen Freeholders during the years 1861-62 and the year 1872. Thomas Rosman, the owner of the ancient stone house east side of the Weavertown road, filled the position of school trustee with great acceptability. His widow survives him, living in 1884 within the vicinity of "the old house." Charles A. Savoye, the founder of the watch-case business in conjunction with his son, came here in 1842. The property occupied was bought of C. S. Browning. The father died Sept. 24, 1856, aged eighty-two. The business continued under Plysse Savoye's direction until 1861. Mr. Ulysse Savoye was born in France, and came to this country when seventeen years of age, having been born April 29, 1811. This pleasant residence, in which his golden wedding occurred in 1882, is located west side of Spring Street, between Corlandt and De Motte Streets. Mr. Savoye served as a member of the township committee in 1872, a position he held several terms at intervals in years gone by, when a greater area of territory pertained to the township. The daughters Harriet, Elise and Milhe were married. He has six sons now living,—Charles, Victor, William J., Ulysse, Edward, Walter G.

Fire Department.—The protection of property from the elements, at least that of fire, has gained attention here. The bell-tower is located in the rear of the two-story brick edifice occupied by Neptune, No. 1, east side of Clinton Avenue. Near by, in a similar edifice, north side of Charles Street, adjoining the Town Hall, is Columbia, No. 1. Empire Company, No. 2, on the south side of Hoboken Street, west of Clinton Avenue. Eagle Engine Company, No. 3, is in the northerly portion of the town. A board of trustees, denominated fire trustees, takes charge of the department, the proceedings of which are published. Here we give the reader the transactions of a ¹Special meeting at the Town Hall, Nov. 9, 1815.

²Present, Messrs. Nelson Olmstead, Lamm, Francis and Brewster.

³Absent, Messrs. Breakway, Baptist, Fuller and Tanager.

⁴The chairman stated that the meeting was called to receive badges from Hardy & Plinkman.

⁵On motion, That the badges be received if they are accompanied by specification, and all be ordered paid. Carried.

⁶On motion, That Neptune, Empire and Eagle Engine Companies receive fifty badges each and Columbia Hook-and-Ladder Company fifty badges for distribution.

⁷Amended, That each member appear before this board and receive his badge.

⁸The yeas and nays being called, resulted as follows:

⁹James Kerrigan died at his city residence, aged eighty-four, November, 1870. He left five children, three of whom was living in 1884.

¹ Killed in a burlesque on the Beacon race-course, being thrown from the Canadian pony "Hepe."

² The committee having the business in hand convened at Mr. Hague's house, where the "Act to divide the township of North Bergen" was matured and prepared to be submitted to the Senate. This was in January, 1851.

On amendment, yeas, Olmstead and Lamm

Nays, Nolan, Francois and Brookman.

On motion, yeas, Nolan, Francois and Brookman

Nays, Olmstead and Lamm.

The following bill was ordered paid:

Harby & Pinkman, two hundred lodges, eighty dollars.

"Adjourned.

"FREDERICK WELLS, Clerk."

Boat Club.—Membership of a boat club whose number three or four years since at the organization did not exceed seven men now numbers forty-five. It is named the Hillside Boat Club of West Hoboken, N. J. Its officers consist at present of a president, vice-president, captain, secretary, treasurer and a first and a second lieutenant, besides a board of seven trustees. The club has a dozen boats. Its boat-house is at the Elvian Fields. Meetings of the club occur weekly, and a quorum consists of eight active members. The constitution and by-laws were printed in 1883. Article tenth designates insignia to be worn by the several officers, and declares what shall be the uniform. Present President, J. Butterfield; Vice-President, F. Stern; Captain, Charles Schindler, Jr.

Masonic.—The Masonic organization here is named Doric Lodge, No. 86, "warranted at the January communication, A. L. 5868." The earliest W. M. was Richard Graham; Senior Warden, William Fearis; Junior Warden, Jonah Fulcher.

This lodge has held its meetings for some time in the Baptist Church building, east side of Clinton Avenue. In making an impressive announcement touching the views held by their organization, Doric Lodge says, in the brochure containing its by-laws, "Each individual is free to choose the creed most in accordance with his own sense of right and justice." By fostering the benevolent principles of the human mind through unity of action, these are brought, they believe, into more active and useful exercise. "Freemasonry has existed from time immemorial, and has received the sanction of the wisest and best of men in all ages."

The regulations shown by this lodge are made apparent throughout the several sections and articles of the by-laws, which were adopted and ordered printed Tuesday, April 14, A. D. 1863. Independent of the chaplain, the marshal and the organist and several other efficient assistants, the lodge has seven elective officers, whose duties are specified in the third article of the brochure above named. These comprise a W. M., a Senior and a Junior Warden, a Treasurer and a Secretary, and a Senior and a Junior Deacon.

Ecclesiastical.—Early movements made here about the year 1844 suggested church organization. Religious services were held in this and that place, wherever suitable conveniences permitted. In some seasons recourse was had to the school-house, then located on the west side of the Weavertown road, and to private dwellings. About twenty persons were united in this direction in 1848, and in the latter part of the next year the location of a church building met deliberation. A plan of an edifice, with dimensions twenty-eight by fifty feet, was obtained in 1850 from E. Waring. Towards the erection of the building, and in aid of the ecclesiastical society that took up the matter of procuring a suitable place, many early residents and not a few neighbors were ready with earnest efforts. The helping hand and generous contribution, so useful in enterprises of the sort, showed themselves with the lapse of time, and the work, wished for so earnestly and so long, was at length accomplished. Quite conspicuous in this enterprise were the Messrs. Syms (father and three sons), the Messrs. Alcorn, R. W. Ryerson & Co., William Galbraith and others. Liberal collections were received from the city by several friends, including Rev. Mr. Howe; the great bulk, however, were those received through the instrumentality of Rev. Charles Parker, these being from Spring Street Church, New York, $50; Thirtieth Street Church, New York, $82; various other sources, $1277; total, $1499.

The Rev. Mr. Parker, in 1852 and thereabouts, preached in the new church; also Rev. William Bradford, as occasion required. Bradford was an associate editor of the New York Evangelist, and both these gentlemen were zealous in adding to the efforts and plans inaugurated by Rev. Mr. Howe. Contributors, Orison Blunt, John Brookes, C. Y. Clickener & Co., D. S. Gregory, L. Van Buskerek evinced a lively interest, as also (by a second contribution) James G. King. R. M. Price and E. A. Stephens showed encouragement with others.¹ John Syms had given $243.11; Rev. Mr. Howe had received from Mercer Street Church $138.05; his own subscription, $34, and the total of the other subscriptions, including those collected by Rev. C. Parker, made an aggregate of a trifle in excess of $2700, valuing the lots donated by Mr. Syms at $100 each.

1 Mrs. F. Browning.	Alexander Galbraith.
Mrs. Harter	C. G. Hook.
Mrs. Leoux.	J. C. Hoxey.
Mrs. Nixon.	T. G. Hodgkins.
Mrs. Quigley	A. La Grève.
Mrs. M. E. Serrill	R. McDowell.
Dr. Elder	E. McDowell.
Dr. Julian	W. R. Painter
A. Beatty.	A. Pinsky.
Mr. Chamberlain.	Mr. McLaughlin
Mr. Clark.	Mr. Taylor.
C. Beatty.	A. Randall.
A. Becker.	J. T. Scott
A. N. Brown	Philip Scott.
E. K. Bussing.	J. J. Serrill.
R. Hutton.	J. Sylvester.
Denning Door.	William Sinclair
William Elvin	John Tomelle.
John Everson.	G. Vreeland.
L. Freeland.	Dudley Wheeler
Mr. Newark	Mr. Van Vorst
Mr. Roman	Mr. Van Winkle.

¹These subscriptions were in sums from each party less than thirty dollars, given to the agent of the Ecclesiastical Society as that organization reported from time to time.

As brilliant an author as the English language presents says, "Ignorance is the curse of God." Local zeal here led from ignorance into other directions. The Governor of the State, in his message of January, 1853, remarks: "There seems to be a disposition in the popular mind to sustain all proper methods by which knowledge may be universally diffused." This region had its proportion of people holding similar sentiments, and of such were the contributors here named. Colporteurs, sanguine in the cause of sacred truth, evinced a vigilant care in distributing the Scriptures. The Hudson County Bible Society at this period evinced much assiduity. The noted historian Allison at this epoch was saying, "When the Christian religion had spread the people had replenished and subjected the earth in proportion; . . . the discoveries of the compass, of printing, were contemporary with the Reformation, as if the shackles of superstition were to be shaken from us before we were allowed to people the Western Hemisphere."

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—This building is located on the south side of Hague Street, corner of Clinton Avenue. The structure is the outcome of the contributions mentioned in the preceding paragraph. As the basement was devoted to a library and other purposes pertaining to a literary organization, the congregation got the facilities of an additional building, erected by Daniel Lake, for their devotional meetings. This accommodation contributed by Mr. Lake was made available till 1836, when the church assumed entire possession of the premises. A manual comprising thirty-eight pages mentions the chronological events connected with this church enterprise. The pastor, Rev. J. C. Egbert, has officiated here since June 13, 1855.

EPISCOPAL.—A number of services were held at a room in McKea's factory preparatory to establishing a church here. June 8, 1846, seven gentlemen assembled at the house of James Delancy Walton, and initiated measures leading to an organization. On the 19th of the same month a vestry was chosen. J. D. Walton and H. G. McKea, wardens. In 1847, William Sinclair donated two lots, corner of Warren Street and Clinton Avenue. The foundation was laid by Richard Ujshin, and Bishop Donné officiated in laying the corner-stone on the 29th of June, 1848. Among the early rectors of St. John's Episcopal Church, West Hoboken, were Rev. E. F. Edwards, Rev. E. P. Wright, 1856, Rev. Orlando Harriman, 1859. This church was consecrated Oct. 2, 1849, Rev. John Reynolds then being the rector. The present rector is Rev. Stephen H. Ruttin.

BAPTIST.—Organized in 1853; located on De Motte Street, corner of Clinton Avenue, in a frame building erected by John Syms, in 1856, Rev. C. A. Buckbee, pastor. The present structure is of stone, fronting on the west side of Clinton Avenue, corner of Serrell Street, fifty-seven by seventy feet, with choir gallery. Dedicated Jan. 13, 1874. Pastor, Rev. Frederick L. Chorn. The annual report by the North New Jersey Association for 1883 says: "This church has a vigorous school, supports a native Karen preacher, and cancelled a mortgage of five thousand dollars."

GERMAN.—A frame building south side of Courtland Street. The church was constituted in 1807, and now numbers fifty-eight members. The incorporation, Feb. 15, 1809. Earliest pastor, Rev. C. F. Blumberg; present pastor, Rev. E. Anselm.

METHODIST.—The Porter Methodist Episcopal Church, is located east side of Bergen Line Avenue a short way south of Bergen turnpike. Frame building, dedicated Sept. 19, 1876. Trustees in 1872, James D. Ackerman, David L. Beatty, Samuel H. DeWint, Richard H. Denman, Hiram Dobb, George W. Dobb, Garret H. Westervelt. Earliest pastor, Rev. John Campbell; present pastor, Rev. C. Crawford.

REFORMED CHURCH.—Chapel in co-operation with Grove Church, a two-story frame edifice, with belfry, erected in 1868, south side of Bergen turnpike, east of Bergen Line Avenue. Land conveyed as a donation from E. A. Stevens, and edifice erected by the liberality of James Brown. The services here are usually in the evening the Grove Church pastor officiating. The Sabbath-school meeting here was organized in 1858. The building is styled the Plank-road Chapel. Present pastor, Rev. W. H. Scudder.

ROMAN CATHOLIC.—On the northwest corner of High Street and Clinton Avenue stands a frame building vestibuled by a cross. A tablet over the door of a vestibule in front, contains the following:

Mater, Misericordia
1851

Mother of grace—O, Mary, I pray,
To thee, sweet fount of love, we fly,
Shed as through life and take us hence,
To thy dear bosom when we die.

This church was consecrated Nov. 23, 1851, as St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church. Rev. Anthony Cauvin officiated as pastor from July, 1851, till April 21, 1861. The church was at the last date transferred to the Passionist Fathers,¹ who erected upon a large plot of ground some distance north of St. Michael's. Of this edifice we have a description furnished by Benedict C. P., as follows:

"The church called St. Michael's is a masterpiece in its style of architecture, and is built of blue stone, with brown-stone trimming. Its extreme length is two hundred feet, its width in the transept is one hundred and five feet, in the nave eighty-five feet. Two towers, each one hundred and forty-five feet high, guard its front, and its outside dome, two hundred feet high, can be seen for miles around. The church can accommodate from two to three thousand people. Its interior is so very handsome and richly ornamented. There are six altars, three of which are of Italian marble, made at Rome. It is doubtfully the grandest church structure in the State. The corner-stone was laid in 1868, and on the 4th of July, 1875, the church was solemnly opened."

¹ The Passionist Fathers erected here a monastery, the cornerstone of which was laid July 18, 1864. It is the abbey of the Provincial and his Council, being the principal house of the order in this country. Its charter of March 27, 1866, allows the abbey to be the advanced agent of education. The house easily accommodates fifty members. A parochial school near by is taught by the Christian Brothers.

ST. MICHAEL'S MONASTERY CHURCH, in West Hoboken, comes next in size to the Hoboken Church, and [it surpasses the latter in cost. The structure cost over two hundred thousand dollars. It was dedicated July 4, 1875. It is attached to the great Passionist monastery, and it serves as a parish church for the neighborhood. The parish counts about four thousand souls, but the church is filled every Sunday by visitors from New York and other neighboring cities. This church succeeded as parochial church the old church called Our Lady of Mercy, which was built in West Hoboken in 1851 by Rev. A. Canvin, of Hoboken, on ground donated by James Kerri-gan. The old church and parish were given to the Passionists in 1861.

CHAPTER I.

WECHAWKEN TOWNSHIP.¹

As a township covering a limited area of territory along the west shore of the Hudson, Weehawken dates its beginning from the middle of March, 1859. For years, in common talk, Weehawken was given a larger area. The post-office by that name is to-day within the town of Union. What are styled Weehawken Grove and Weehawken village are not included within this incorporation, nor is the landing-place of the Weehawken ferry, that went under a charter of March 25, 1852. The ferry grant by George the Second to Stephen Bayard, dated in 1752, mentions an maple line coursing the distance of half a mile below that place called the Great Slough, meaning the property of one Jacob Slough, and extending to the Bergen north line. In a reference to local real estate movements and great changes along the opposite shores, a New York City newspaper of April 30, 1852, after commenting upon the busy invasion of Harsimus and Hoboken, remarks: "Farther up the river, at Weehawken, a German Building Association have purchased a thousand acres of land on the slope of the hill belonging to the estate of a Mr. Dubois." Common references to this region amplify its actual area as a municipality, the name being a sort of generic term applied to all the lesser localities around, owing, no doubt, to the historic events and prominent personages connected with its history.

The name Weehawken attracted the notice of antiquarians years ago; of late, attempts to elucidate it have been abandoned. One authority, as the modern orthography gives a sound similar to Y-haw-ken, thought it must signify houses; another authority suspected the word bore reference, by its termination "auk," to a tree. The local Indian name for tree is hitock; therefore it scarcely gets its direct origin from that source. Several early residents, amongst whom the late James Gardner is one, had an inclination to think the word conveys an allusion to the designation mill. Earliest proprietors here took occasion to seek a privilege to erect a saw and corn-mill along the water-run upon their plantation in this region. The local historian, in mentioning the locality of the landing-place of the earliest ferry here, speaks of it as being "near the mouth of the Weehawken Creek,"² equivalent in this sense to Mill Creek. "The Indian Interpreter" copied from the Salem town records, 1684, and now in the office of our Secretary of State at Trenton, yields nearly three hundred translations of Indian phrases and terms. In a social and business intercourse those terms used by the aborigines were gathered, and they are not otherwise than instructive when referring to a period during which they were in daily use. Fifty morgens of land at Awichaken are granted to one Maryn Adriaensen, whose widow subsequently marries, May 3, 1654, one Geerliel Michielsens. The Dutch morgen was equal to about two English acres. On the 10th of June, 1678, reference is made to a water-mill and plantation here; no doubt that mill had been erected pursuant to a grant very early allowed by the Bergen authorities. The Indians, when designating localities, were apt in picking out particular characteristics and notable features. They chose some definite object to distinguish a location; at this spot neither rocks nor trees would suffice, owing to a superabundance of these objects. The mill was the monument to which the aboriginal arrow was directed. Accordingly, Uhockon was the term applied, for this word was the term used in naming mill by the aborigines. At all events, as the reader can discover, this is the broadest hint developed thus far as to the source of the familiar name Weehawken.

Duels.—Events of this description took place here in considerable numbers early in the current century. The plateau picked out for this display of pluck continues a topic for the graphic historian and a scene for the artist. In a moment of irritation a rash deed was done; a poetic squib gave offense; sarcastic, nipping expressions were uttered; offensive epithets were applied; the consequence was a challenge. Grievous words stir up anger. The party asked to explain declined to do so, and the private difference or the point of honor led the duelist to combat. Formal steps made by the seconds in arranging the preliminaries gave the transaction a little display of ceremony. The affair could not be amicably adjusted. The hills of Weehawken must reverberate with their pistol-shots. The time was fixed for the meeting, and the movements of the principals were regulated by the stipulations agreed upon by these seconds. The duel attracting most attention here was that of Hamilton and Burr, on the morning of July 11, 1804. Each man was an eminent chief within his circle; differences had arisen, and controversy led to this contest. When narrating the details of this summer tragedy one of our chroniclers says, "Judge Pendleton then explained to the parties the rules which were to govern them in firing." Upon the first discharge at this duel the ball from the pistol of Col. Burr fractured a rib and entered the body of Gen. Hamilton, who fell, his second springing forward and lifting him to a sitting posture. Burr afterwards retired to the shore, entered his barge and returned to the city. Hamilton was conveyed to his boat; he lingered till two o'clock the next afternoon. The following are several names of parties engaged in duels here, premising that Aaron Burr's first duel was fought with John B. Church on this ground Monday, Sept. 2, 1799; Henry Aitkin, Mr. Barton, De Witt Clinton, George J. Eacker, Maj. Green, William G. Graham, Isaac Gouverneur, Philip Hamilton, Capt. Heath, John Langstaff, William H. Maxwell, Oliver H. Perry, Benjamin Price, Richard Riker, Thomas Sherman, John Swartwort, Robert Swartwort, Oliver Waldron.

² "History of Hudson County" (Winfield). New York. 1874, page 239.

¹ By Hon. Anthony B. Ryder.

Principles were grafted upon our judicial system putting aside this custom. Stout constables were stationed to frustrate anything like a duel, and men began to see clearly that there was really not so much valor in these pistol-shots after all. In fact, two of the parties on the above list, Aitken and Sherman, who came to the ground, Oct. 19, 1835, to test their skill at a duel, were interrupted in the midst of the preliminaries. Squire Paradise a county official, took cognizance of their manoeuvres, and submitted them and their proceedings to the good graces of the grand jury. The inquisition held in November, 1804, had indicted Burr, charging that duelist with the crime of murder, and this indictment remained till November, 1807, when at the instance of Col. Ogden it was quashed. In June and July of the latter year Burr underwent a trial for treason at Richmond, Va.

Scenery.—Picturesque views are plentiful. Early and late chroniclers refer to Castle Point as presenting many fascinations. The domain, with its embowered and elevated outlook, awakens admiration at many prominences. When alluding to Highwood, the county's historian says: "From this height still opens as fair, as varied, as beautiful a scene as mortal could wish to behold." No one appreciating rural surroundings and having a taste for scenery could pass unheeding these groves, tall bluffs and rugged cliffs. The fact that poets and painters have been busy since the earliest periods of our history in portraying this scenery leads the readers here to conclude us to a general estimation in which it is held. Excursionists enlivened by exertion are apt to become animated in the presence of an alluring prospect so pleasant as these various stand-points yield. Years ago says one: "Here we are at the top of the hill! What a charming view of the great city, the river, the bay, the steamers and other water-craft! Look around us; here is the Mountain Pavilion, yonder is the seat of Mr. King; in front of us are the wondrous hills!"

The spacious pavilion at one period was chosen as a residence for the late Daniel Webster, it being then owned by the late Judge Price. Mr. Webster made arrangements to assume a position here, but other engagements called him to another locality. About the year 1855 the dwelling was the home of the late James Gregory. Adjoining was the abode (to the west of the pavilion) for years of Esquire John Ehlers. A white Italian marble headstone, to the north of the southerly avenue within Grove Cemetery, bears this inscription: "In memory of John Ehlers, of Weehawken Heights, born April 13, 1791. Died Aug. 29, 1874." The pavilion, in the occupancy of Mr. Gregory and the mansion of Mr. Ehlers, as these proprietors died, became the property of others, who made here extensive alterations. A considerable degree of the early scenery is retained, however, in many parts of the present township. This scenery is amply appreciated, and tourists carry with them over the globe delightful recollections of it. Many who have left this region, on recurring to these scenes when in distant portions of the world, have discovered that they bear a fair comparison with localities holding what are noted as the choicest prospects. A resident of Weehawken in visiting, years ago, a prominent gallery in Europe, derived great pleasure in recognizing among its most valued pictures one of the familiar scenes often observed by him when at home.

Elysian Fields.—"There, gentlemen," remarked an excursionist with a party on the road to Weehawken Heights; "there on our right are the far-famed Elysian Fields and the long walk overhung with vines and trees. Just there on the river, among some tall trees, is a place called Turtle Grove, memorable as a spot where, twenty years ago, certain aldermen and other great geniuses from the city manufactured their turtle soup, and invited their clans to come and partake freely. Here punch and politics flowed in profusion, and jokes were adapted to the capacities of the recipients. Dignity was laid aside for the nonce, while great men sang and smoked and slandered just like common men." The same jubilant excursionist, in May, 1846, refers to long walks and long talks of the "long ago." He alludes to pleasant recollections of chowder-parties, of clam-bakes, of fishing-parties and shad feasts, identifying these gatherings with "the never-to-be-forgotten enjoyments that stand forth like green islands on the desert of business life."

As early as 1810 many parties doing business in New York selected this vicinity as a place of residence, and the great park and picnic-ground on this side of the river is to some extent shorn of its former ample area. A shady retreat on the shore side-walk. Sybil's Cave, a grassy lawn, however, are still here, and yet yielding exuberant facilities for affording recreation of the purest and healthiest kind.

Yacht Club.—The club-house at the Elysian Fields has had its attractions many years. In organizing, the New York Yacht Club followed an act approved Aug. 7, 1848, entitled "An act to authorize the secretary of the treasury to license yachts, etc." Their rules and regulations, printed in 1852, define the starting-point when sailing for prizes to be "from the anchorage at the Elysian Fields." The yachts of this club in 1852 numbered twelve:

Alpha, Morris owner; Arab, Emmet owner; Ariel, Grinnel owner; Breeze, Coles owner; Cornelia, Edgar owner; Dream, Hall owner; Ianthie, Cadwaller owner; Maria, Stevens owner; Spray, Wilkes owner; Sport, Ferris owner; Ultra, Miller owner; Una, Waterbury owner.

The lightest of these was a schooner of eighteen tons, the "Arab;" the heaviest was a sloop of one hundred and seventy tons, the "Maria." The club consisted of ten honorary and about two hundred regular members. Its regatta committee were Anson Livingston, Robert O. Colt and W. Holley Hudson. Squadron Officers: Commodore, John C. Stevens; Vice-Commodore, Hamilton Wilkes; Corresponding Secretary, John C. Jay; Recording Secretary, G. R. J. Bowdoin; Treasurer, William Edgar.

Early Chronicles.—A night attack, Feb. 25, 1643, by the whites upon the Indians, followed by depredations, put the entire region encompassing this locality into a deplorable situation. Solitary plantations were in jeopardy, menaced day and night by the upraised tomahawk of the savage. The war-cry was furious near the Raritan, about the Hackensack and along the west shore of the Hudson. Homes were abandoned and refuge was sought in the city. Years elapsed ere the security so needful for profitable industry was vouchsafed to this vicinity. A dozen years, in fact, elapsed before much encouragement seemed to lead adventurers in this direction, although earnest efforts and a spirit of rivalry were here, as elsewhere, predominant in gaining possession of the more desirable plantations.

Scattering items have been noted in gleaning facts for the early chronicles of this locality, and a few obscure narratives bear upon existing fragments of the race at one time tarrying here. Little that is lucid and less that is entertaining were amongst the revelations. The race might have continued here one thousand years longer, and never, perhaps, thought of "making hay while the sun shines." Out of the three hundred words given us, not one names granary or barn. One designation applies as well to basket as to bag, and this is outae. The minerals at Castle Point contributed to the Indians' wants in the making of smoking-pipes.¹ Their dishes, which were of wood, were made with crooked knives; constructive skill, however, had the narrowest range amongst these people. A uniform disposition to deal fairly with these sons of the wilderness led Governor Stuyvesant, whom they styled the Great Doer of Justice, to compensate them for their land and accept a deed, dated Jan. 15, 1658. This conveyance transfers the territory early comprised in the township of Bergen, beginning, according to the indenture, "by the great rock above Wiehacken," then taking the sweep of what was west of the Hudson and east of the Hackensack Rivers, extending down to the Kill von Kull.

All these lords of the soil, representing the Six Nations, made their marks in presence of witnesses, interpreters and of Wharimes Van Couwe, formerly an owner of the lands aforesaid: Bomokan, Koghkenningh, Memirvokan, Seghkw, Wawapehack, Wewenatokwee.

In the year 1661 the inhabitants were notified to have their lands surveyed and to take out patents, the current of events leading to something like permanent settlement. Active husbandmen directed their attention to improvements. This vicinity bore a share of the burden, whatever that might be, in making up the evidences of genuine advancement. This was one of nine districts into which the extensive township of Bergen had to parcel out the labor in keeping the roads in repair. As early as June 3, 1718, a road was laid from the vicinity of the Kroma Kill to the Weehawken Ferry.—This convenience for the transportation of passengers, cattle, horses and country produce existed here for nearly a century and a half, starting anterior to the year 1700. Quite a number of the senior inhabitants of the northerly portion of Hudson County retain recollections of this ferry, though more than fifty years have elapsed since it ceased operations. The ferry-house was occupied at one period by Crines Bartolf, at another by Lucas Van Boskerck. The latter removed subsequently to Hoboken. There was no slip at the river-side, but a little dock extended into the stream, at which the boat, a periauger, landed. One of the early residents of Secaucus, at the time a lad, remembers this ferry distinctly, and the fact that a road leaving the turnpike near the Mountain House led down the hill to this ferry. He was in the habit of resorting to this route when sending garden-truck to the city market. A yoke of oxen attached to a wagon loaded with full baskets was driven to the landing, and the baskets were conveyed to the city, the lad's mother having charge of the market sales, as was the fashion in those days. The ferry-house, at one time owned by Daniel Smith, passed into other hands. A spirit of rivalry induced the running of two ferries here, a "new" and "old" ferry. The Bergen Turnpike Company constructed its roadway from Hoboken to Hackensack in 1804, lines of stages were running to Hoboken, and much travel formerly resorting to the old perianger ferry took the other route; so this ferry, after efforts to compete with steam were seen to be unprofitable, was discontinued.

¹ The pipe is made of a soft stone; the bowl, into which the tobacco is put, is circular, and at the bottom it is flat and much broader. The pipe is frequently carved in a curious manner; the stem is of wood, such as has a small pith. —Harmon's "Account of the Indians," page 376.

Residents.—Conspicuously among the early inhabitants of this locality was Capt. Deas, whose cozy home at Deas' Point, was pleasantly located upon a knoll or elevation near the river. James Deas was a native of Scotland, a sea-captain. His wife was Miss Suzan Ludlow, of Rahway. Mr. Deas, whose son is now living at the age of eighty-four, died when this son was about ten years old. His remains were consigned to a vault at the Wall Street Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member. Mr. Ebenezer Deas, now residing east side of the Bergenwood road, near the Grove Church, is still hearty and vigorous, and retains distinct recollections of events here in the early part of the current century. The farm here of his father was tilled, producing, with the usual garden fruits and vegetables, buckwheat, corn and rye. In his early days he often took a load of grain to the Secaucus grist-mill. He has recollection of a saw-mill where white cedar was sawed in considerable quantities for tubs and pails. That saw-mill was erected by Samuel Ordway. A circumstance connected with this enterprise is mentioned by Mr. Deas, "One morning more than sixty years ago," said he, "my mother called attention to a raft on the river approaching the shore. It was Ordway, who had come down the river fetching with him materials for a saw-mill. He explored the neighborhood, and discovered water sufficient for his purpose in the brook a little below our place; he built a dam and put up the mill on Edward Earle's land." This is the brook where, in the history by Winfield, it is noted that Nicholas Bayard had a mill at an early day.

Edward Earle, a bachelor, living with his mother, who attained the age of ninety-seven, had a dwelling on the hill near the earlier home of James F. Gardner. The house, two stories, with large garret and a kitchen adjoining, fronted the south. In the dooryard was a well, thirty feet deep, with the bucket attached to an old-style sweep. In the kitchen was the broad fire-place, with oven near by, and the ancient adjustments,—the fashion of those times. A barn, with hovel and barrack, a large pear-tree and rural shrubbery, added to the curtilage. Large orchards were near this domicile, yielding excellent fruit, and the woods in the distance had in the warm season a dense foliage. Two roads, one leading west and the other south, were near this house. Attached to this household were four bond-people, the law at the date to which our notice is given permitting persons of African descent to be held as heirs-loons in a family. In many cases at the period mentioned persons thus connected with a plantation in a variety of ways gained mutual benefits. Those held to service suffered no lack of appreciation and entertained no want of a comfortable abiding-place; in return there were labors performed and frequently interest shown in the domestic welfare. The system, for all that, was repugnant to the principles espoused by the founders of our independent institutions, and has been happily since set adrift. These slaves were called Pompey, Hannah, Ben, and Pompey (the younger).

Old Pomp was a hard case, and gave his master no small degree of annoyance. He ultimately left. Hannah was transferred to another branch of the same Earle family at Secaucus, by whom she was sold to Henry Day, who afterwards sold her to one Kingsland, a farmer at Barbours Neck, not far from Belleville. Ben died about the year 1815, and the younger Pompey, like the great prototype of that name, got to be artful and intriguing, and ran away from his master in his eighteenth year. The father of Edward, the proprietor here, was named Robert Earle, whose widow at her death left four children, one daughter, Polly, wife of James F. Gardner, and three sons, Edward, Philip and Job. The real estate here was subsequently sold to James G. King, who, with James Brown, both bankers in New York City, became extensively interested in the landed property and riparian interests within this township.

Mr. King, the third son of Rufus King was born in 1791. His father was a member of the convention that framed the United States Constitution, and was delegated by Washington minister to the court of St. James, acting there as representative of the republic till the second year of Jefferson's administration. He died on Long Island, April 29, 1827, aged seventy-two. James Gore King was educated in England, and entered business at Liverpool, in 1813, as one of the firm of King & Gracie. His wife was a daughter of Archibald Gracie and a sister of his business co-partner. About the year 1823 he joined in forming the noted firm of Prime, Ward & King, a house that became prominent in commercial circles. At the closing up of that establishment, after the demise of the elder Mr. Prime and Samuel Ward Sr., Mr. King, with his son and son-in-law, started the banking-house of James G. King & Sons. He acted at one period as president of the New York and Erie Railroad Company and evinced a zeal in many enterprises designed to promote internal improvements. His home here had choice comforts and attractions. Mr. King represented the Fifth District of this State in the Thirty-first Congress, beginning March 4, 1849 his predecessor was D. S. Gregory. Mr. King's brother, John A., was a Representative in Congress from the District of New York the same term, the close of which was March 3, 1851. Mr. King was a genial, eminently practical and considerate citizen, calculating to make prominent whatever enterprise enlisted his notice. In the campaign of 1852, when Gen. Scott was a Presidential candidate, that old hero received many a compliment from Mr. King. At a meeting at the Three Pigeons, in New Durham, Mr. King delivered a speech very cordially indorsing that veteran for the office. The succeeding October had not closed, and this estimable resident was no more. His death happened suddenly from an asthmatic attack, to which he was subject, having reached his sixty-second year. His widow, four daughters and three sons survived him. The widow died a few years since at the family residence here, Highwood.

James Brown joined Mr. King, investing largely in the woody regions of Weehawken. The charming residence he built and adorned here, called Clifton, won notice for a considerable period, its occupants investing it with all those incidents one takes pleasure in recollecting. Mr. Brown was benevolent in a great many cheering senses of that much abused word, and traced a career in an eminent degree animating to one's notice. He was born Feb. 4, 1791, came to this country when a lad, his father, Alexander Brown, settling in Baltimore about the year 1800, and beginning, about ten years after, a business there, the firm style being Alexander Brown & Sons. The father had, it appears, four sons.—William, George, John A. and James. John P. Kennedy, the fascinating author of "Swallow Barn" and other American classics, in an autobiography quoted by Tuckerman,¹ refers to these "boys" by name. They, or as he remembers distinctly, John, James, and George,—he is not so sure about William—were school-fellows of Kennedy. He was there upon his preliminary studies at Priestly's school, which was in the best repute in those days. Priestly gave up his Baltimore academy about the year 1808. Kennedy alludes to the sons of Alexander Brown—John, James and George—as "the principal bankers of the United States and Liverpool." James, after a few years' residence in Philadelphia, settled in New York in 1825. He was elected a member of the Chamber of Commerce Sept. 4, 1827, and upon the retraique, in 1838, of John A., he became the head of Brown Brothers, remaining so till the time of his death, Nov. 1, 1877. That commercial establishment under his regulations moved with a financial force signally efficient and serviceable all over the globe. With such a span of mercantile conceptions, it may readily be inferred that Mr. Brown's perceptions were not at all shortened when he turned his attention to other than business purposes. He had many methods of fostering utility, the evidences of which are traced in this vicinity, while the circuit of his munificent charities commends itself to all who would be generous. Mr. Brown, not only during his residence here, made many contributions to various objects, but he has bequeathed by his will liberal sums to promote beneficent purposes.²

Mr. Brown left a widow (his second wife) and two sons, George H. and John C. His children by the first wife surviving him were Sarah B., widow of Alexander Brown; Mary Louisa, wife of Howard Potter; and Margaretta H., widow of James C. Lord. A considerable portion of the land, now in use by the West Shore Railroad Company, on the river margin, pertained to this estate. The ferry charter procured by Mr. Brown in 1871 was transferred to this company.

References are made by early residents to the Ludlow house, at the old ferry site, and by others to the Mountain House,—persons who styled these dwellings their early homes. At the side of the Hill road in days long ago the William Tell House is remembered. Tourists in years past remember these, yet more abiding recollections are with those who connect with these buildings those associations that make their lasting impressions. Who does not go back freely and fondly to the early home? Quite likely, ideas of this sort recur at times to those who, in years gone by, spent many a spring-tide hour amidst the busy scenes along the Weehawken shore, amongst whom are numbered now Ebenezer Deas, Thomas Gardner, Andrew Kennedy, John A. Ludlow, Baker B. Smith, David Van Zile, or will occur to the enterprising fishermen who were busy here during the annual fishing season,—Randolph Clayton, John R. Johnson, Charles Ludlow, James Ludlow, Samuel Ludlow, Edward Van Zile. Certain it is that much referring to fishing matters at Weehawken may be gleaned from these energetic followers of a renowned pursuit. Capt. John Ludlow has been for many years "at home" in these particulars. Year and year again, as the season came round, his recollections were chronicled by the city reporters. The "first shad" came to his net, and still the veteran is standing a sentinel at the very post he occupied half a century ago, ready to herald the arrival of the first shad as the next season comes round. "Uncle John," as he is familiarly called, is the local umpire, by a sort of conventional agreement, in matters pertaining to this business. His "fathers before him," he asserts, were busily employed here, and his sons and brothers still thrive at the calling. The shore here, as elsewhere, met notice as it refers to where the tide ebbs and flows and to the rights of the State to its lands under water, old residents here and there taking considerable interest in this matter.

In his "Geological History," published by subscription in 1843, Issachar Cozens, Jr., librarian of the Lyceum of Natural History of New York, refers to a noted resort for mineralogists. He refers to Castle Point, "as you go north from the ferry wharf, to that delightful walk, the Elysian Fields." That author is describing the mineral serpentine found here as a different kind from any seen in other localities. It contains, he says, a larger portion of magnesia than common; it is of a light-green color with variations, having carbonate of magnesia running in veins through it, the hydrate of magnesia not being so plenty. There are some veins he adds, of magnesia carbonate of lime, "a kind of gullifloite accompanying it, in which are seen the hydrate in small scales." A work published by Constock likewise makes frequent references to this locality. Noted, then, as it may be for its mineralogical features, it is still far more so for its historical reminiscences. The historian speaks of the 11th of September, 1609, when the "Half-Moon," Hudson's yacht, came to anchor at the great river of the mountains. He refers also to that season as the time when the eyes of white men first rested upon the green shores of Scheehihi, or New Jersey. The inquiry naturally suggests itself here as to whether the green mineral or the green foliage is referred to. Upon the return down the river, when anchored in Weehawken Cove, just above Castle Point, October the 2nd, same year, special mention is made by Juet of "a cliff that looked of the color of white-green, as though it were either a copper- or silver mine."

¹ The "Life of John Pendleton Kennedy," by Henry T. Tuckerman. New York: Putnam & Sons, 1871, p. 37.

² He will enumerate a gift of four thousand dollars to the Grove Church, the income of which is to be applied to useful repairs.

This property came into the possession of John Stevens by purchase in 1784. It afterwards fell into the hands of his son, Edwin A. Quite a variety of changes were made by the latter proprietor, the occupant still continuing to maintain the sumptuous abode as a homestead having the modern conveniences. The domicile and its surroundings make up a desirable home few would care to part with. Stevens, as an exemplary citizen, prudently employing means at his command to promote the best purposes of life, made himself a public benefactor. By his will, which makes him "of the township of Weehawken," he specifies particularly the devise of Castle Point, which contains about thirty acres, with the homestead lot, to his wife. A subsequent division into four plots may follow, in case his widow can determine which of the sons shall have the plot on which the mansion stands. His will bears date Aug. 5, 1865, the codicil enumerating the public bequests bears date April 15, 1867. He died Aug. 7, 1868. A local print gave an elaborate account of the obsequies, the concluding portion of which we quote:

"These were very attended at which were the Ex-Executives, Hon. James Livingston, Mr. Martin L. Ward, Hon. Thos. C. Randolph, Thos. W. Ludlow, Jas. P. Bradley, Geo. A. Brown, Bush Vanoyserp, Wm. H. Garrison, President of the Camden and Andover Railroad Company, and Benjamin Fiske. In addition were Mr. Stephen, Hon. J. H. P. Stockton and the Hebrew Ferry Association. At 11 o'clock the procession moved to St. Paul's Church, where it was met by a committee from the New York Yacht Club, of which Mr. Stevens was the first commander, and by officers of the different regiments and ferry companies in which he was a stockholder. They consisted of those of the New Jersey Railroad Company, the Camden and Andover, the Camden and Burlington, Camden and Hightstown, Delaware, Monmouth, Essex and the Hudson and Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Companies. About 1,000 were members of the Hebrew Ferry Association, with several from the New York Board of Education, Board of Education and Water Transportation.

"The body was carried by Mr. Stephen's carriage, which had followed his remains with his brother, Grand soldiers and two young sons.

"Body put in a hearse, ornamented at the church. Two horses were used by him and two additional a carriage with, being by a carriage from New York, consisting of Messrs. Brown and Robinson, Mr. Quincy and Mrs. Leonard, the son-in-law of Capt. J. H. Knapp, the Governor of New York, and J. Knapp and J. P. Knapp. The hearse was the same as that of the American Mr. Knapp was married. The body was taken to the cemetery by the ferry company, being, and being of the same color as the ferry company.

Another resident within his township was that of Robert M. Price, a citizen in the possession of F. H. Cassett, a metropolitan merchant. Like other retreats of the moment and it was stately and sumptuous. Cooper seemed some boundless continuity of shade to escape what he esteemed to be the annoyances of the world. Spenser had delight near a crystal fount, where similar rare attractions presided—

"A fount, where fountain it was,
To which a child, hard by a fountain,
Far from the world, I found the fountain
To reach to and to—"

What admirer of a rustic retreat can fail to appreciate this of Spenser. At Castle Point was the southern extremity of this township, the abode of Mr. Price was the northern. The very attractive sites for dwellings, we see, were chosen by men of taste, who united to their admiration for fine rural beauty no insignificant reflections upon the general welfare. Being a member of the House of Representatives, Mr. Price, April 20, 1852, delivered, from a lively interest he had in the measure, an impressive speech on the enforcement of discipline in the navy. The views here expressed he remarked on this occasion, were convictions of his mind drawn from his knowledge and experience of naval affairs derived from ten years passed by him in that branch of our country's service. Mr. Price's services in Congress were followed by his being called to the Governor's chair, being chosen at the State election held Nov. 8, 1853.

Improvements. As time has run on many aspects underwent a change sufficient to obliterate multitudes of old features (not observable in many parts of that territory that has gone under the name of Weehawken. The entrance to the premises known as Castle Point was at a gate, on either side of which was a brace of massive stone pillars. A couple of gnarled, knotty and very ancient willow-trees stood as sentinels near by. Across the road, to the west, were several equally old Lombardy poplars. All these vacate at the demand of progress, and farther on stood the rustic dwelling of Cranston, whose collection of green and hot-house plants exhibited an extensive variety. Choice assortments of shrubbery and hardy plants were there, as well as flower seeds. Orders were filled on shortest notice for fruit, ornamental and street trees, stages passed this place every fifteen minutes. A little farther on, and the pedestrian observed a collection of forest-trees, tall and vigorous. In a minute or two he came to a toll-gate, and then followed the lead of the turnpike over a causeway till he got to the foot of Weehawken Hill. The toll-gate, kept many years by Jacob Willse, was subsequently removed¹ to a site located some distance from the foot of the hill, and here it was tended by Michael M. Ryer. Radical changes have occurred over the route just traversed, the streets, as they were extended, making the more important alterations. New houses assisted to delimit the earlier scenes, and the entire neighborhood is altogether as a new play would be upon the dramatic stage. Certain other parts of the township have experienced like variations, particularly near the docks from which cattle, coal and petroleum are now shipped. One of these localities is devoted to each of these branches of industry, and all cover a considerable area, though not a little of this area was once shore and meadow.

Buildings and population of the township progressed, as may be seen by the increase from year to year in the local census of school children and in the number of election votes. Children betwixt the ages of five and eighteen in the year 1867, 69; 1869, 71; 1871, 110; 1873, 162; 1875, 165; 1879, 265; 1881, 301. The vote shown by returns announced for the year 1885 numbered 27; 1871, 75; 1877, 83.

Denning Duer represented this township in the Board of Chosen Freeholders from 1859 till 1866, when he was succeeded by Joshua J. Benson. For the period extending from 1869 till 1874 this position was filled by John Frost, with the exception of 1871, the township being represented that year by Albert B. Dod. In December, 1877, a meeting was held in the city of Newark having for its object material interests of the State. It was a gathering convened with the view of weighing transportation matters, and numbered thirty-six persons. Among the rest were present, George H. Cook, Samuel B. Dod, Nathaniel Dale, Solon Humphreys, John G. Stevens, William W. Shippen.

Several counties were represented at this conference. A constitution was chosen, a board of directors selected to proceed to some practical considerations. The main feature at this meeting was an address read by one of the members on "Terminal Interest," in which this locality shows no little degree of attention. The North Hudson County Railway Company has laid its tracks through this township en route to Union Hill, adding its conveniences of travel. Steps were taken to regulate grade and in other particulars improve the "lower road," running into Bull's Ferry road, and also to improve Bull's Ferry road. Very material progress arose from this measure, the vicinity improved rapidly and dwellings of a cozy description multiplied. The authorities deliberated from time to time over measures very materially promoting the public convenience and security. Arrangements were effected and went into operation greatly enhancing the general interests. From a few topics talked over during a brief conference at a meeting of the township committee in the earlier days of the township, held at Perry's hostelry, in the Elysian Fields, the local committee extends its consideration now to a multitude of themes.

All the functions of a full township came into active exercise here, with the additional appendages of a lamp, police and an incipient fire department. The township, in the year 1869, came to an unanimous vote against the suggested plan to consolidate the municipalities into one, and make one city of the eleven cities, towns and townships then existing throughout this county. In 1883 a county tax was paid by this municipality of $9188; the State school tax paid amounted to $4072, predicated upon a valuation in gross of $1,645,575, the personal valuation being $45,150, and the real $1,600,425.

The school property in the township is, by report of 1875, placed at four thousand five hundred dollars valuation. Average attendance, twenty-six; number of scholars enrolled, seventy-one. District No. 7, said the county superintendent in his report for 1871, comprises the township of Weehawken; it has a good school-house and a good school. Number of children reported in this district in 1872, one hundred and forth-six; pupils in attendance at private schools, fifty. Quite probably the only person now living who attended the school taught for this region then, is Mr. E. Deas, whose early years were passed at the homestead, at Deas' Point. The teacher was Mr. Bradley Randall, who was the local teacher from 1811 till about the close of the year 1825. Mr. Deas remembers well the early preceptor and the old school-house located at that period a few yards south of what is now the Hoboken City Cemetery entrance, Bergen turnpike, at North New Durham. The children of this vicinity attended the New Durham school for many years, or until about the year 1857, when a nearer school-house was built. This was styled the Weehawken School, and dedicated by appropriate services Nov. 9, 1857. That edifice is now superseded by a new edifice, with all the modern appointments, located on New York Avenue. No. 7 succeeded.

A church organization was matured here in the year 1868, styled the Weehawken Presbyterian Church. The structure is of wood, situated west side of Park Avenue, nearly midway betwixt the site of the ancient ferry dock and that of the old William Tell House. Work began upon this building in the summer of 1870, and dedication services were held in it May, 1871. Rev. Robert Proutit served the congregation as their earliest pastor. The vicinity has been favored occasionally with courses of winter evening lectures, the church officials permitting the building to be used. Hon. Charles H. Winfield gave a discourse here on one occasion, taking for his subject a local theme; and Hon. A. A. Hardenbergh addressed an audience one evening here upon the topic "Unwritten History." It is said somewhere very pitifully that it is well to choose for a home that neighborhood where attention is shown to reading, where the people take an interest in the progress of society and in that of the church of God.

¹Towards the summit of the hill, Ryer, with his family, occupied this gate-house, as Willse had done at the old place. The gate-house at present is in North New Durham, just south of Granton.

In his address at the opening of the county court house, the chief justice¹ said:

The facilities of steamboats and railroad cars, and the increasing spirit of trade and commerce and many features of the arts, have brought the good old town of Bergen into contact with the world, but up her tributary into small headlands, studded her shores with splendid buildings, for the times into pleasure seats.

The substitution of the horse-car for the omnibus was an advance in the way of transit. Experiments were made with the steam dummies, but this mode of travel had only a short career in this locality. Old residents who recall the hack, the coach, the stage and omnibus, do so when thinking of things of the past. They refer also, in a random way, of the winding route over the causeway to the cottage of R. man, the first house met with after leaving the toll-gate. In a similar effort of recollection, they recall the old "shades" kept for years by Dussman. It was a popular inn for many years. The old house at the north edge of the Flysian Fields (many of the early fishermen called it the Bolivar House) yields a rich store of recollections. It was kept many years by a little white-haired veteran, with the brogue to his speech. He was called Stevens. The ancient Benson² dwelling has also its reminiscences. Hundreds of people within the past few years, while riding in the horse-cars by the new route, have revived their remembrances somewhat in this style.

After noting alterations by way of route and mode of transit on the land, the idea naturally arises—what evidences have we suggested here of river and ocean navigation? The facts referred to in talks beneath the shade of Wechawken's trees are vast in number. The increasing spirit of trade and commerce prompted rapid transit, as well upon the sea as upon the land. Many a sea-captain and many a sailor whiled the dallying hour away amid the Wechawken groves during the earlier decades of the current century. While in port for a week or ten days, crossing the Hoboken ferry and a ramble in this direction came as an acceptable recreation. Here, under the shade of an umbrageous tree, along with a shipmate, or together with an excursion party, the nautical topics discussed had a wide range. The vicinity, from many incidents that might meet notice here were space allowed, was clearly a favorite resort of the mariner, as it has been, all know, a favorite abode of men doing business with those people that went down to the sea in ships. A glance at the craft in service about forty-five years ago, will yield a historical hint. We quote from the New York Sun, of Aug. 19, 1839—

The superior steamer, which to-day completes her ninth trans-Atlantic trip, the largest of the four that have started us from Great Britain, is still a giant among its species of craft, and one of the most glorious specimens of naval architecture and stupendous mechanism afloat. She has ever been among the most favorite and successful steamers belonging to England, and is, perhaps, quite as well calculated for the transportation of passengers with comfort and satisfaction to themselves as is that far more bulky, early and magnificent paragon of all British craft, the "British Queen." The average length of her western passages has been, on many days from Cork to New York, and of her eastern passages fifteen and a half days. They have, however, been mostly made in the winter months, not the best calculated for making short runs, and with but one exception, she has made the western passage, thereby shortening her voyages, but avoiding the risk of running upon ice, and obtaining for her passengers mild and fine weather. On her May trip she took twenty-three days' later news to England. A few days before her arrival she took a ship from Europe to New York, and fourteen days she delayed her departure for Liverpool, took in another and before she again arrived in New York spoke the same ship yet on her voyage to that port. The following is a correct account of her dimensions, tonnage, &c.

"Extreme length over all, 220 feet; extreme length under deck, 20 feet; extreme length keel, 200 feet 5 inches; breadth 80 ft. in paddle-boxes, 30 feet 10 inches; breadth (including paddle-boxes) 96 feet 2 inches; depth at masts, 13 feet 8 inches; tonnage, 1150 tons; power, 438 horses; diameter of cylinder, 77 inches; length of stroke, 7 feet; draft of water when loaded for her voyage to Liverpool, 16 feet 10 inches."

Since the days of this leviathan other favorites have come and gone, and many changes have transpired in methods with the sea. The craft about the ocean and upon the noble Hudson during the three or four past decades were numerous, and in referring to this theme numerous suggestions must present themselves to the mind of the reader.

These eligible outlooks, in the vicinity of the ferry where plied "the first steam ferry-boat in the world," command views always varying and attractive. When the comedy or the tragedy, and it has both, of this region is introduced, one is apt to drop it for the magnificent prospect.

¹ The yacht "America," two hundred and four tons, built by Stevens, out-sailed, in August, 1851, the yacht "Britannia," and at Cowes, Isle of Wight, won that prize, the "Cup of All Nations."

¹ At the first session in the courthouse in North Bergen township, held Tuesday, March 11, 1845, presiding judge, Josiah H. Coulter.

² The Frederic News of April 22, 1862, makes mention of this old house in saying:

A relic of the earlier times in the settlement of Hudson County was presented to us a few days ago, by John Frost, Esq., of Wechawken. It is a brick, 1½ x 3½ x 7 inches in dimensions, which was imported from Holland about the year 1626, and formed part of the material of which the Benson-house, of Wechawken, one of the oldest in the State, was built. Mr. Frost, as is well known, has occupied the premises some twenty-five years or more following the useful and profitable occupation of a market gardener. The property has been sold, however, and is being prepared for a cottage-yard.

INDEX.

A.

Abbott, Leon, 1078
 Abbot, Gustavus N., 271.
 Academy, the Newark, 632.
 Adams, F. A., 740.
 Adams, Frederick, 290.
 Adams, Hugh Francis, 1108.
 Adams, James, 32.
 Adams, Thomas, 636.
 Agriculture: 1911, Essex County Society, 350.
 State Society reorganized, 351, products of Essex County, 351; Slaves' farm, 344—general review of farming interests in Essex, 362; P. T. Quinn, 352; about Bayonne, 1207; in North Bergen, 1208.
 Akers, Oscar J., 314.
 Albers, Hans, 328.
 Albright, Andrew, 590.
 Allison, M. S., & Sons, 1184.
 Ailing, Isaac A., 603.
 Ailing, John, 44.
 Ailing, Samuel, 388.
 Ailing family, 368.
 Allen, Edward S., 301.
 Allen, Frank B., 234.
 Allen, Horatio, 522.
 Allen, John, 242.
 Allen, Henry, 1112.
 Allen, William L., 296.
 Anderson, Andrew, collections of, 13, 83.
 Anderson, John, 248.
 Andrews, William J., 318.
 Andrews, Caleb H., 690.
 Annett, James, 1214.
 Aronis, James, 10.
 Arlington, village, 1271.
 Arlington Homestead Association, 1274.
 Arlington Catholic Rectory, 1274.
 Armstrong, Abel, 272, 867.
 Armitage, John L., 616.
 Artisan wells, 18, 861.
 Art Association, Essex, 209.
 Associations: see Societies.
 Aths, Andrew, 593.
 Attorneys of Essex County, 232-302, of Hudson County, 1048-1061 (see also individual names).
 Attorney-General, 214.
 Auditors of Essex County, 217.
 Austen, Deas & Co., 749.
 Aynsley, William, 299.

B.

Babbitt, Frank M., 273.
 Babbitt, Robert O., 1086.
 Babbitt, William M., 267.
 Backus, Henry F., 83.
 Bachman, Charles, 339.

Bach, Robert Gehran, 1170.
 Bach, Samuel, 738.
 Baker, Walter S., 341.
 Balbach, Edward, Sr., 604.
 Baldwin, Zedek, 838.
 Baldwin family, 717, 730.
 Baldwin, Benjamin, 358.
 Baldwin, Jonathan, 358.
 Baldwin, John, Sr., 358.
 Baldwin, Samuel, 358.
 Baldwin, Timothy, 356.
 Baldwin, Elnathan, 358.
 Baldwin, Nathaniel, 358.
 Baldwin, John, Jr., 359.
 Baldwin, John, 368.
 Baldwin, Joseph, 368, 362.
 Baldwin, Samuel H., 280.
 Baldwin, Warren S., 877.
 Baldwin, John Y., 550, 853.
 Baldwin, Jesse, 553.
 Baldwin, Ezra, 708.
 Baldwin, Aaron K., 343.
 Baldwin, Milton, 315.
 Baldwin, Josiah L., 705.
 Ball, Albert, 341.
 Ball, Edward J., 333.
 Ball family, 782.
 Ball, Philander, 790.
 Ball, Richard H., 800.
 Ballentine Brewery, 613.
 Ballinger & Co., 599.
 Banks:—In Newark Newark National Banking Company, 605 National State Bank, 627, Newark City National, 628, Essex County National, 628, Second National, 628, Merchants' National, 629; Manufacturers' National, 629; German National 629; State Banking Company, 629, North Ward National, 629, Howard Savings Institution, 630; Dime Savings Institution, 632; Germania Mutual Savings Institution, 643; Security Savings-Bank 633; Franklin Savings Institution, 633.
 In Orange National, 754; Savings-Bank, 754, Half-Dime Savings-Bank, 754.
 In Belleville Manufacturers', 890-92.
 In Jersey City Hudson County National, 1107; First National, 1108, Second National, 1170; Provident Institution for Savings, 1170; Hudson City Savings, 1171 German Savings, 1171.
 In Hoboken City Bank, 1219, Bank for Savings, 1219.
 Barlow, Frederick C., 1205.
 Bartholomew, E. L., 742.
 Barnes & Braun, 1164.
 Barrett, M. T., 290.
 Barnett Brothers & Powell, 603.
 Barrett, H. M., 999.

Bartlett, Frank, 297.
 Barst, Peter, 243.
 Bates, Phineas, 834.
 Bauer, Frederick, 748.
 Bayonne, city of, 122—early history, 1220—characteristics of the 1840's, 1261, extreme cold in various years, 1271, cloisters, 1282 Bergen Point, 1272 civil organization, 1233, Fourth of July celebrations, 1256 area and population, 1256, agriculture, 1257 religious institutions, 1237 educational, 1230 Fire Department, 1222, growth of city, 1230.
 Bayard, Balthazar, 927.
 Bayard, Samuel, 1230.
 Bayles, George, 318.
 Beach, Zephor, 368.
 Beach family, 368.
 Beach, Owen M., 294.
 Beach, Jonathan, 852.
 Beach, Jacob, 46.
 Beach, Henry, 242.
 Beckett & McDowell, 1275.
 Belle, Joseph D., 246, 1031.
 Belcher, Jonathan, 249.
 Belleville township: General description of, 879; bridge over the Hackensack, 880 Indian matters, 880, churches, 880; schools, 888; roads, 890; stages and taverns, 890; civil organization, 890-92; old residents, 890-92; Spier family, 890-92; industries, 898-92, 1290 Department, 893-92; societies, 890-92.
 Benbow, Jacob, 928, 931.
 Benz, R. T., 1306.
 Benzel, Terah, 384.
 Bennett, Charles D., 346.
 Bennett, Frederick N., 334.
 Bentley, Peter, 1301.
 Bentley, T. H., 684.
 Bentley, Peter, Sr., 1308.
 Benson, F. S., 890.
 Bench and Bar of Essex County, 237, of Hudson County, 1048 (see also individual names).
 Beckley, Leif, 2.
 Berry, Charles T., 812.
 Berg F., 835, 717.
 Berrien, John M. Pearson, 736.
 Berry, Joshua D., 709.
 Berry, William B., 735.
 Berrien, John, 243.
 Bernard, Francis, 249.
 Bergen, North, township of Organization, 1278 county poor farm, 1278, Beacon race-course, 1279 Frenchman's garden, 1279 early tanneries, 1280, New Durham village, 1280 topography, 1281, agriculture, 1281 blue-belt industry, 1282, early modes of travel, 1282; training-days, 1282, 1283; boat club, 1283 Young Men's Association, 1283

- ... T. J. 1283; education, 1287; deer hunting, 1286; domestic animals, 1287; pomology, 1287; old-time social customs, 1288; Indian springs, 1289; early architecture, 1289; cemeteries, 1289; necrology, 1289; highways, 1288; local government, 1289; Fire Department, 1291; business operations, 1291; post-offices, 1293; public resorts, 1293; private libraries, 1293; religious societies, 1294; recent progress, 1294.
- Berzon village: Founding of, 924; chartered by English, 924; settlements of, 926, 927; as the capital of East Jersey, 930; naming of, 963, 969; charter of, 977; court established at, 977; survey of lands ordered, 938; pioneer officers of, 939.
- Bergen, old township of, 931; land grants in, 924; Indian deeds for, 931; fortified town ordered by Stuyvesant, 931; repurchase from the Indians, 934; township made a body corporate, 941; division of lands, 942.
- Besson family, 1076.
- Besson, John C., 1076.
- Bidwell, Horatio G., 1109.
- Bigelow, Moses, 58.
- Bigelow, Samuel F., 288.
- Billington Brothers, 1193.
- Bird, John Q., 1308.
- Bird, John T., 255.
- Blatchley, Thomas, 359.
- Black, Edward S., 300.
- Blake, John Lauris, 284.
- Blair, John A., 1083.
- Blennerhassett, Herman, his visit to Newark, 622.
- Bliss, Delos, 1061.
- Bloomfield, Moses, 879 (note).
- Bloomfield, Gen. Joseph, 250, 859.
- Bloomfield township, 858; earlier and later outlines, 859; town charter, 859; internal divisions, 860; surface, streams and soils, 860; Indian history, 861; Dutch movement of immigration, 861; the Puritan colony, 861; names of the first comers, 861; the Revolution, 862; later history, 863; churches, 864; schools and education, 866; libraries, 869; Young Men's Lyceum, 870; public communication, 871; Watsessing, 872; Glen-ridge, 873; statistics of population, 873; societies, 875; Fire Department, 875; Phoenix Hose Company, 876.
- Bloom & Weill, 1262.
- Board of Health of Hudson County, 1115.
- Bode, August W., 1261.
- Boggs, H., 237.
- Bond, Stephen, 359.
- Bone, Christian, 845.
- Bonn, John H., 1946.
- Bonnell, Joseph, 243.
- Borchelt, Charles, 287.
- Bout, Jan Evertsen, 998, 916, 1133.
- Bound Creek, hamlet of, 695.
- Boudinot, Eliza, 244.
- Bowen, Thomas, 249.
- Bowne, Andrew, 540.
- Bowen, Eleazer, 1307.
- Bower's plantation, 782.
- Boyden, L. & Co., 574.
- Boyden, Seth, 59.
- Boylan, David K., 208.
- Boylan, James H., 299.
- Boylan, Aaron O., 256.
- Boylan, Aaron, 27.
- Bradson, Thomas, 387.
- Bradin, Edward De L., 345.
- Bradley, W. H., 290.
- Bradner, F. E., 297.
- Bradley & Co., 747.
- Bradshaw, Misses, 733.
- Brackett, Alonzo, 739.
- Brady, Joseph P., 255.
- Brafford, Thomas N., 341.
- Brewster-Coxs Company, 611.
- Breunan & Carr, 748.
- Breintnall, John H., 318.
- Brearley, David, 240.
- Bridges in Essex County, 187; in Franklin, 684; in Hudson County, 1037.
- Bried, Charles, 298.
- Brisson, John, 507.
- Brinkerhoff, William, 1079.
- Brower, Jacob, 1298.
- Brower's Point, 1295.
- Brown, James, 691, 1314.
- Brown, John, Jr., 689, 690.
- Brown, John, 359.
- Brown, William M., 313.
- Brown family, 783.
- Brown, Samuel P., 809.
- Brown, Aaron B., 894.
- Brown, George H., 246.
- Browning, C. S., 1307.
- Brush, H. Mortimer, 1106.
- Bruen, Capt. Caleb, 45.
- Bruen, Otachah, 599.
- Bruen, Nathaniel, 737.
- Bruyere, Walter K., 344.
- Brundage, Amos H., 320.
- Brundage, Abner, 867.
- Bramley, John Imane, 319.
- Brush, Charles D., 1297.
- Burnet, John, 1256.
- Burnett, William, 248.
- Burnett, William, 304.
- Burnett, William, Jr., 304.
- Burnett, James B., 341.
- Burgle, Paul W., 344.
- Burr, Rev. Aaron, 464, 651.
- Burr, Aaron, exploit of, at Hackensack, 953.
- Burham, Frederick G., 290.
- Burrage, John Frazer, 268.
- Burrage, Robert L., 315.
- Burrage, Robert L., 346.
- Burwell, Ephraim, 369.
- Burwell, Zachariah, 360.
- Burroughs, Charles, 598.
- Burgnon, Alphonse, 1306.
- Bush family, 848.
- Buttars, 844.
- "Buttertown," 844.
- Buttett, Edward Patsyn, 1098.
- Byington, Roderick, 280.

C.

- Cabot, Jenn and Sebastian, 896.
- Cadmus, James, 610.
- Cadmus, Jasper A., 1233.
- Cadmus, William J., 1109.
- Caldwell, North, village of, 852.
- Caldwell township: Geography, 829; Dutch occupation of, 829; land troubles of 1749-50; name, 830; topography, 830; organization, 831; roster of officials, 831, 832; extracted early records, 832; roads, 833; county pendency, 833; village of Franklin, 834; early settlers, 834, 836; post-office, 836; tobacco industry, 836; education, 837; Caldwell village, 837; mills and stores, 837; stage line, 838; early settlers, 838; churches, 840, 843; Masonic lodge, 843; land, 843; 1 O. O. F. lodge, 844; the old brass cannon, 844; Verona village, 844; Newark City Home, 846; Methodist Church, 847; Cedar Grove, 847; manufactures, 847; Clinton, 848; Fairfield, 849; Reformed Church, 850; Westville, 850; North Caldwell, 852.
- Caldwell, James, chaplain, 42; his part in the battle of Springfield, 43; poem on, 43.
- Caldwell Village, 857.
- Caldwell village, 857.
- Camp, William, 45, 360, 550, 690.
- Camp family, 692, 693.
- Camp, Capt. Nathaniel, 45.
- Campbell, David, 619.
- Campbell, Moses, 838.
- Campbell, Peter, 820.
- Campbell, Samuel, 707.
- Campbell, Wellington, 715.
- Campfield, Abraham, 308.
- Campfield, Matthew, 360.
- Campfield, Ebenezer, 369.
- Campfield, Robert B., 591.
- Camptown, village of, 695.
- Canal, the Morris, 871.
- Cannell family, 852.
- Cannon, Charles Kinsey, 1085.
- Carlton, John, 601.
- Carpenter, Thomas P., 245.
- Carpet-Cleaning Works, 1165.
- Carrington, Edward M., 288.
- Carter, Salon & Co., 600.
- Carteret, Sir George, 2, 4, 290, 715; issues patent for Paulus Hook, 1140.
- Carteret, Philip, 376, 377, 716, 923.
- Carteret, Elizabeth, 4.
- Cassedy, Samuel, 1948, 1053.
- Cassedy, George W., 1061.
- Castle, Robert L., 295.
- Catlin, John, 590, 646.
- Catholic Societies: Young Men's Catholic Association of Newark, 543; Catholic Benevolent Legion of Newark, 543; Young Men's Association of Harrison, 1252; Benevolent Legion of Harrison, 1252; St. Vincent de Paul, in Harrison, 1253.
- Cedar Grove, village of, 847.
- Celebrations, of the 4th of July in Newark, 690, 661; bi-centennial of Newark's settlement, 662; in Orange, 1813, 729; of the battle of Paulus Hook, 1151; of the 4th of July in Bayonne, 1236; of the centennial of independence in town of Union, 1260, 1298.
- Chancellors of New Jersey, 248, 254; Vice-, of New Jersey, 254, 255.
- Chain-Works, the Jersey City, 1163.
- Champerois & Co., 603.
- Chabert, Romeo F., 1098.
- Chapin Hall Manufacturing Company, the, 608.
- Chapman, Jedediah, 764.
- Chaubers, Talbot B., 346.
- Charter of James, Duke of York, 923.
- Charters of Concessions, Carteret and Berkeley's, 715.
- "Chesapeake," 856.
- Chetwood, John, 244.
- Cholera, visits of, in 1832 and 1849, 1232.
- Christiansen, Hendrick, voyage of, to Manhattan, 808.
- Christman, M. Osborne, 343.
- Churches—African M. P., in Millburn, 712.
- Baptist.—In Newark: First, 484; First German Baptist, 486; South, 487; North, 488; Fifth, 488; Fairmount, 489; Mount Pleasant, 489; Roseville, 489; Bethany, 490; Mount Zion, 490; Belmont Avenue (German), 491; Sherman Avenue, 491. In Millburn: First, 711. In Orange North Orange, 770; Washington Street, 772. In South Orange, 798. In East Orange: First, 824. In Caldwell:

- First, 842. In Livingston, 850. In Bloomfield, 865. In Jersey City, First, 1182; Summit Avenue, 1182; North, 1183. In Hoboken, First, 1225. In Bayonne, First, 1238. In Union First, 1265. German Pilgrim, 1265. In North Bergen, New Durham, 1284. In West Hoboken, 1293.
- Christian.—In Clifton, 608.
- Church of Our Lady Jesus Christ.—In Jersey City, 1186.
- Church of the Messiah.—In Newark, 22.
- Congregational.—In Newark, First (formerly First Free Presbyterian), 345; Belleville Avenue, 321. In Orange, Orange Valley, 715. In West Orange, Summit Valley, 809. In East Orange, Grosvenor Street, 824. Trinity, 823. In Jersey City, First, 1180. In Montclair, First Christian Church of Christ, 890-r. Abraham Lincoln, 890-r.
- Episcopal and Protestant Episcopal.—In Newark, Trinity, 301, Grace, 304, Christ, 313, St. Philip's, 303, St. Matthew's, 304, House of Prayer, 304, St. Barbara's, 306, St. John's, 307, St. Stephen's, 306, St. Mark's, 308, St. Paul's, 307. In Franklin, Grace, 681. In Millburn, St. Stephen's, 711; Christ, at Short Hills, 712. In Orange, Grace, 703. In West Orange, St. Mark's, 867. In East Orange, St. Paul's, 825; Christ, 826. In Bloomfield, Christ, 860, St. Paul's, 869. In Belleville, Christ, 883. In Jersey City (St. Paul's, 1183; St. Matthew's, 1183; Christ, 1184; Holy Trinity, 1173; Grace, 1181; St. Mark's, 1181; Church of the Ascension, 1180) early service at Paulus Hook, 1247. Trinity, of Bergen Point, 1238. In Bayonne, St. Bartholomew's, 1238, St. John's Mission, 1238. In Harrison, Rutherford Memorial, 1232. In Union, St. Justin the Martyr's, 1230. Church of the Holy Family, 1230. In West Hoboken, St. John's, 1309. In Montclair, St. Luke's, 830-q.
- Free Will Baptist.—In Bloomfield, First, 865.
- German Evangelical Association.—In Newark, 322. In Jersey City, 1182. In Union Immigrant, 1265.
- German Evangelical at Littleton.—In Jersey City, First, 1181, St. Matthew's, 1181. In Union, St. John's, 1265.
- German Evangelical Protestant.—In Newark, 341.
- German United Evangelical.—In Newark, St. Stephen's, 322.
- Hausfrau or Association of Spiritualists.—In Newark, 222.
- Hollow Synagogues.—In Newark, First organization, 522; Second and Third Tenets, 522; Othello Stanton, 523. In Jersey City, Isaac Ephraim, 1192. In Hoboken, Adolph Emanuel, 1208.
- Italian.—In Newark, St. John's German, 344, St. John's First, 345. In Hoboken, St. Matthew's, 1225. In Bayonne, 1238. In Union township (West New York), St. John's, 1300.
- Methodist Episcopal.—In Newark, Wesley Chapel, 634; Franklin Street, 634; Immanuel German, 634; Union Street, 630; Eighth Avenue, 636; Central, 637; St. Paul's, 637; Trinity, 630; Roosevelt, 503. De Groot, 503. Centenary, 503; Stroudsbridge Mission, 603. In Clifton, 629. In Orange, 708. In East Orange, Calvary, 828. In Verona, 847. In Clinton village, 848. In Bloomfield, 865; Wassessing, 865. In Belleville, 863; Sabbath-school of, 867. In Jersey City, Trinity, 1180; Simpson, 1186; St. Paul's, 1180; Holding, 1187; Emery, 1187; Pallade, 1187; Conary, 1187; West End, 1187; Lafayette, 1188; Waverly, 1188; Linden Avenue, 1188; James 1188 (consequence, 1188; West 8th Avenue, 1188; Jersey City District of Newark Conference, 1188. In Hoboken, First, 1220; German, 1220; Free Tabernacle, 1216; Holy Innocents, 1217; St. Paul's, 1221; Trinity, 1217; Bayonne, Bergen Neck, 1238; West View Avenue, 1230. In Harrison, 1232. In North Bergen, Bull's Ferry, 1334. In West Hoboken, 1300. In Montclair, Church of Montclair, 890-q. of West Bloomfield, 890-q.
- Methodist Protestant.—In Newark, First 601.
- Methodist, Primitive.—In Bloomfield, 865.
- Presbyterian.—In Newark, First, 663-669; Second, 470, Third, 471, Plane Street, 473; Central, 474, Sixth, 477; High Street, 477; Park, 479; South Park, 480; Roosevelt, 481; Bethany, 481; Wilkiffe, 492; Calvary, 481; First German, 484; Second German, 484; Third German, 484; Memorial, 484. In Clinton, 629. In Millburn, First, of Wyoming, 712. In Orange, First, 734; Central, 735; German, 708. In South Orange, 799. In West Orange, Pleasant Valley, German, 800. In East Orange, First, 822; Elmwood Chapel, 822; Second Brick Church, 823; Bethel, 823. In Caldwell, First, 830. In Bloomfield, 864. In West Bloomfield, 865; German, 867; Westminster, 866. In Jersey City, First Jersey City Heights, 1176; Westminster, 1179; Second, 1180. In Hoboken, First, 1225. In Bayonne, First People's, 1238. In Kearny, First, 1274; Knox, 1275. In West Hoboken, 1297. In Weehawken, 1316. In Montclair, Bloomfield, 890-q. of West Bloomfield, 890-q.
- Reformed Dutch.—In Newark, First, 513; Second, 513; North, 513; Clinton Avenue, 514; West Newark, 514; Christ, 514. In Franklin, 680. In East Orange, First, 823. In Caldwell (Fairfield), 850. In Bloomfield, 863. In Belleville, 860. In Jersey City, Bergen, 1172; First, 1172; Second (or First, of Van Vorst), 1173; Third, 1174; Second, of Hudson, 1173; Lafayette, 1175; Greenville, 1175; Central Avenue, 1176; Free, 1176. In Hoboken, First, 1231; German Evangelical, 1225; Bayonne, North side, 1228; Bergen Neck, 1238; Bergen Point, 1230; Third, of Bayonne City, 1238. In Union, Evangelical, 1230. In Guttenberg, 1276. In North Bergen, New Durham, First, 1294. In Union township, Zion Kirche, 1300. In West Hoboken, 1300. In Montclair, Stone House Place, 890-p.
- Reformed Episcopal.—In Newark, Emmanuel, 508.
- Roman Catholic.—In Newark, St. John's, 338; St. Patrick's Cathedral, 309; St. Mary's (German), 309; St. Peter's (German), 309; St. Joseph's, 309; St. James', 310; St. Boniface's, 310; St. Columbus', 311; St. Anthony's, 310; St. Agnes', 310. St. Paul's Ref. Cathol. Mission, 310; Monastery of St. Dominic, 311. In Franklin, St. Mary's, 631. In Millburn, Church of St. Rose of Lima, 711. In Orange, St. John's, 733. In East Orange, Our Lady Help of Christians Church, 805. In Pleasantfield, Church of the Sacred Heart, 806. In Belleville, St. Peter's, 868. In Hudson County, 1189; St. Mary's, 1190; St. Peter's, 1130; St. Bridget's, 1190; St. Paul's Green-
- ville, 1190; St. Patrick's, 1191; St. Michael's, 1191; St. Peter's, 1190; St. Joseph's, 1192. In Hoboken, Church of Our Lady of Grace, 1234; German, 1234. In Bayonne, St. Mary's Star of the Sea, 1238. In Harrison, St. Peter, 1300. In Guttenberg, St. Joseph's, 1270. In North Bergen, Church of the Sacred Heart, 1294. In West Hoboken, St. Mary's, 1300; St. Michael's Monastery Church, 1310. In Montclair, Church of the Immaculate Conception, 890-r.
- Second Adventists.—In Newark, 322.
- Society of New Jerusalem.—In Newark, 22.
- Trinity Methodist.—In Jersey City, 1192.
- United Presbyterian.—In Newark, 484. In Jersey City, Second, 1180; Summit Avenue, 1180. In Hoboken, First, 1225.
- Unitarian.—In Newark, Church of All Souls, 375. In Montclair, 690-r.
- Universalist.—In Newark, First, 321. In South Orange, 790. In Jersey City, Church of the Good Shepherd, 1195; Second, 1190.
- United States Light Company, the, of Newark, 340.
- City Mills, the Newark, 611.
- Civil history (see Essex County, see Hudson County).
- Clarke, Benjamin G., 1108.
- Clark, Abraham, 296.
- Clark, Throop Company, 611, 1275.
- Clark, George A., 611.
- Clark, William, 612.
- Clark, James Henry, 611, 945.
- Clark, J. Ogden, 295.
- Clark, Samuel W., Jr., 1112.
- Clark Throop Works, 1275.
- Clark, William N., 1107.
- Clawson, William S., 216.
- Clay, Henry visit Newark, 624.
- Clarkson & James, 740.
- Cleaver, James D., 280.
- Cleveland, Richard F., 842.
- Cleveland, Grover, 842.
- Clinton, Sir Henry, 864.
- Clinton, village, of, 348.
- Climatology, 7, 13.
- Clinton township. Boundary, derivation of name, etc., 690; topography, 690; pioneers, 689; Lyons Farm, 685; Beand Creek, 685; Campdown, 685; pioneer mechanics, 685; mail route, 686; Post-office, 686; Irvington, 686; schools, 686; slavery, 686; industry at Lyons Farm, 688; churches, 688; schools, 702; 1. O. of D. F. Lodge, No. 18, 702.
- Clory, William, 748.
- Cochran, John A., 293.
- Cochran, Thomas, 834.
- Cockcroft Hill, 666.
- Coe, Aaron, 258.
- Coe, Ernest E., 288.
- Cole, George W., 300.
- Cole, Josiah, 506.
- Coles, Abraham, 302.
- Coles, Jonathan A. Sherman, 341.
- Cole, E. M., 247.
- Collectors of port of Newark, 669.
- Collins, Gilbert, 1080.
- Combs, Moses N., 371.
- Committees of Safety, members of, 214.
- Communions (letten etc.), 4, 923.
- Condit, John, 303.
- Condit, Charles, 304.
- Condit, John S., 303.
- Condit, Joel W., 303-304.
- Condit, Israel D., 738.

- Condit, William, 731.
 Condit, Moses, 731.
 Condit, Polly, 737.
 Condit, Albert Pierson, 284.
 Condict, Silas L., 1093.
 Condict, John, 569.
 Condit family, 369-722.
 Congar, Honore S., 283.
 Congar, Stephen, 659.
 Conger, John, and family, 369.
 Conger, Lieut. Samuel, 45.
 Conger, Walter M., 629.
 Congressmen, Essex County, 214.
 Conover, William H., 298.
 Connett, E. V., & Co., 749.
 Cook, Edward, 265.
 Cook, Hiram, 815.
 Cooke, Mrs. Harriet B., 868.
 Cooke, Robert L., 868.
 Copper, discovery of, 1245.
 Corbin, Charles L., 1085.
 Corbin, William H., 1087.
 Corey, Ashbel W., 269.
 Corey, Jonathan, 536-538.
 Cornell, George B., 1107.
 Cornelison, John M., 1082.
 Cornish, Robert N., 742.
 Coroners of Essex, 217.
 Corson, John W., 312.
 Corwin, Joseph A., 339.
 Corwin, Theodore W., 345.
 Cosby, William, 248.
 County officers (see separate headings, as surrogate, clerks, etc.).
 County clerks of Essex, 216; of Hudson, 946.
 Deputies of Essex, 216; of Hudson, 946.
 Council of Safety, members of, 214.
 Courts, first in the province, 231; under Carteret, 925; act to erect County Courts, 232; titles of, derived from English tribunals, 232; ordinance for establishing courts of justice, 235; Court of Chancery, 236; New Jersey lawyers and the Stamp Act, 237; Colonial Supreme Court, 238; chief justices of, 238-243; chief justices after the Revolution, 240; associate justices of Supreme Court, 242, 248; courts established by Dutch at Bergen, 338; first in Hudson County, 943, 948; jurors of, 943; justices of Supreme Court assigned to Hudson Circuit, 1088; judges of Common Pleas, 1088; prosecutors, 1088.
 Court-houses in Essex County, 212, 213, 214; in Hudson County, 943; dedication of, 944.
 Courter, Henry, 836.
 Coult, Joseph, 288.
 Cowles, Elijah Strong, 1081.
 Coxe, Daniel, 243.
 Cox, James, 1307.
 Cox family, 1305.
 Cox's Corners, hamlet of, 1304.
 Crane, Benjamin F., 639.
 Crane, Joseph, 853.
 Crane, Samuel, 853.
 Crane, Zenas C., 854.
 Crane, Noah, 854.
 Crane, Elvin W., 296.
 Crane, Lyman M., 311.
 Crane, Jasper, 350, 369, 361.
 Crane, Azariah, 361.
 Crane family, 853, 851.
 Crane, James H., 836.
 Crane, Nathaniel, 868-n.
 Cranetown, 869.
 Craig, James, 1101.
 Craven, Rev. Elijah Richardson, D.D., 471.
 Craven, John Joseph, 1105.
 Crapper, Charles W., 1111.
 Crosselmar, C. F., 605.
 Cross, Jeremiah A., 314.
 Cross, Philip W., 294.
 Culois, the black Revolutionary soldier, 60.
 Colver, Joseph Edwin, 1096.
 Cumming, Gilbert W., 272.
 Cumming, William Garfield, 293.
 Cummings, Matthews & Barry, 749.
 Currie, Theodore L., 294.
 Curtis, Capt. John, 361, 606.
 D.
 Daily, Soffrino, 320.
 Dalglisli, Robert, 361.
 Dallas, Alexander, 1111.
 Dalrimple, Van Cleve, 246.
 Darcy, John Stevens, 396.
 Darlington, William L., 1110.
 Davenport & Treney Company, the, 1103.
 Davies & Russell, 1165.
 Davis, Joseph A., 331.
 Davis, Stephen, 361.
 Davis, Thomas, 361.
 Davis, John, 361.
 Davis, Samuel, 361.
 Davis, Hiram W., 1255.
 Day family, 728.
 Day, Stephen D., 731.
 Day, Charles T., 564.
 Day, Charles Rodney, 265.
 Day, E. A., 297.
 Day, George, 361.
 Day, Capt. Samuel, 361.
 Day, Daniel, 361.
 Day, Joseph, 361.
 Day, William T., 298.
 Dayton, William L., 245.
 Dauforth, Capt. 64.
 Dean, Daniel, 708.
 Dean, Jacob, 708.
 Dearborn, Mose J. B., 749.
 Deas, James, 1313.
 Debt, imprisonment for, 1048.
 De Clyn, Charles, 1292.
 De Clyn, Glue-Works, 1291.
 De Cuyper, Thomas Fredericks, 940.
 Decatur, Col. Peter, 844.
 Decatur, Stephen, 890-d.
 De Groff, E., 1106.
 De Gress, Francis, 878.
 Demarest, N. J., & Co., 584.
 Dempsey, J. A., 500.
 Denison, Robert, 362.
 Denison, John, 362.
 Denman family, 707.
 Denman, A. B., 301.
 Dennis, Laban, 540.
 Deque, David Ayres, 247.
 Derby, Nelson R., 1096.
 De Witt, Moses J., 235.
 De Witt Wire-Cloth Works, 800-d.
 Dey family, 850.
 Dey, Anthony, 1141.
 Dickenson, Mahlon, 245, 251.
 Dickenson, Philemon, 251, 708.
 Dickinson, William Levertin, 1128.
 Diehrick, Hans, 927.
 Dieffenbach, R. G. P., 344.
 Dieffenbacher, J. V., 606.
 Dixon, Jonathan, 247, 1074.
 Dobbins, Edward L., 289.
 Doel, Daniel, 369.
 Doel, Ebenezer, 369.
 Doel, Samuel, 369.
 Doel family, 718, 722.
 Dodd, Amzi, 254.
 Dodd, Bethuel Lewis, 320.
 Dodd, David C., 603.
 Dodd, Daniel, Jr., 279.
 Dodd, Joseph Smith, 307.
 Dodd, Matthias, 829.
 Dodd, Josiah F., 827.
 Dodge & Lyons, 598.
 Domestic Spring-Bed Company, 1164.
 Doremus, Peter C., 829.
 Doremus, E. O., 829.
 Doremus, Cornelius, 1280.
 Dougherty, Alexander S., 313.
 Dougherty, A. C., 316.
 Dougherty, Andrew, 718.
 Douglass, Nathaniel, 834.
 Douglas, William P., 1380.
 Downing, George R., 553.
 Downer, D. B., 635.
 Drake, Corra, 270.
 Drake, Elias W., 704.
 Drake, E., & Co., 610.
 Drake, George K., 245.
 Drew, John, 708.
 Dunning, E., & Bro., 629.
 Duncan, Henry B., 686.
 Durand & Co., 662.
 Durand, Cyrus, 685, 701.
 Durand, Elias W., 702.
 Durrie, William A., 1095, 1111.
 Durning, John C., 291.
 Duryee, Geo. S., 296.
 Duryea, John, L. G., 342.
 Duryee, F. H., 301.
 Dutch, the, discovery by, 1, 2; settlements by, 4; expeditions against the French, 5; subversion of their authority, 375; in Caldwell, 829; in Bloomfield, 861; second expedition by, to New Netherland, 898; treaty with the English, 903; capitulation to the English, 923; recapture of New Netherland by Everaet and Broukes, 927; again lost to the province, 929; characteristics of, 1280.
 Dutch West India Company, 1, 896, 897; first colony sent to New Netherlands by, 901.
 E.
 Earle, Edward, 1313.
 Eagle Iron Foundry, 505.
 Eaglefield, W. de-la-rive, 708.
 Eaton, Samuel L., 344.
 Eberle, M., 747.
 Edwards, John, 708.
 Edwards, Aaron, 708.
 Edwards, Emus Ward, 342.
 Edwards, B. J., 298.
 Ed-wartse, Harman, 927.
 Edge, Isaac, 1306.
 Edison, Thomas, Lamp Company's works, 1253.
 Education, legislation relative to, in New Jersey, 205-209, 646; in Newark, 645 (see Schools); in Hudson County, 1121.
 Ehlers, John, 1311.
 Elder, Lorenzo Welton, 1085.
 Electric Light and Power Company, the Newark, 645.
 Electric Light Company, the United States, 640.
 Elizabethtown, named in honor of Lady Elizabeth Cartwright, 4.
 Elliot, Daniel, 346.
 Elmer, Daniel, 245.
 Elliott, C. Loring, 1269.
 Elliot, James, 333.
 Elmer, I. Q. C., 246.
 Elsworth, Philip, 1241.
 Emery, John R., 288.

English, Thomas Dunn, 334
Essex County: formation of, 211; public huntings in, 212; vote on change of county-seat location, 212, 213; second court-house, 213; present court-house, 214; jail, 214; officials, 214-217; courts in, 230.
Ezold, Frederick, 1262.
Kvarson, Cornelia, 928, 930.
Evoni, John R., Jr., 1109.
Ewing, Charles, 230.
Ex-actor Silk, Eel Company, 1163.
Farr, James, Ande son, 1163.
Fayth, Christopher G., 319.

F.

Fairbairn, William S., 262.
Fairfield village, 839.
Fansel, George, 1267 (note).
Farley, M., 1089.
Farmer, Edgar, 845c, 887.
Farmer, Thomas, 233, 233.
Farmer, George H., 3294.
Farrand, Daniel, 303.
Farrand, Samuel, 303.
Farriner, Patrick, 369.
Fehr, Julius, Hus.
Fehl, John, 361 (note).
Fenn, Benjamin, 336.
Ferry, licensed by the crown, 1043; common law, 1343; old Weehawken, 1343; Jersey
City, 1043; Hudson, 1043; Passaic, 1043;
Staten Island, 1043; "Hudson ferry," 1210; first steam ferry boat in the world, built by
Col. John Stevens, 1210; at Guttenberg,
1229, 1274; Ferry second Street, 1229; Weehawken ferry, 1226, 1262, 1312.
Ferry & Napier, 637.
Fessenden, Joseph, Jr., 344.
Fiehl, James W., 296.
Field, J. T., 1163.
Flogenspan, C., 315.
Filtering Company, the Newark, 618.
Finter & Co., 581.
Fish, Frederick S., 297.
Fish, Rev. Henry Jay, 185.
Fisher, Michael J., 1288.
Fisher, William Russell, 1168.
Fitzgerald, James N., 587.
Fitzgerald, Julius C., 233.
FitzSimmons, A. R., 391.
Flaming, Col. James E., 528.
Flaming, James, Sr., 1139.
Flaming, James, Jr., 199.
Fletcher, Henry, 598.
Flood, E. L., 793.
Flood, John O., 288.
Flood, Gabriel H., 245.
Fornum, Samuel R., 1097.
Fort, John Franklin, 294.
Forte, Nathaniel, 1097.
Forsrinner Wire Works, 838-9.
Fourth of July, earliest celebration of in New ark, 669, 667; several, in Passaic, 1236; centennial in Union township, 1298.
Franklin, Benjamin, 342.
Franklin township: geography and topography of, 678; organization, 679; old residences,
679; educational, 679; religious interests,
680; officers of township, 682; post-offices,
683; hotels, 683; highways, 683; prominent people near, 683; bridges, 684; estates and families, 684; sandstone quarries, 685; manufactures, 686; nurseries, 688; schools, 688; mercantile, 689; valuation, 689.
Franklin, villages of, 834.
Franklin, William, 249.

Freshwaters, Board of Chosen, in Hudson
County, 947.
Froeman, A. H., 734.
Froeman, Stephen, 732.
Froeman, Sumner, 732.
Froeman, Willerforce, 290.
Froeland, Smith A., 1307.
Froelighuysen, George J., 255.
Froelighuysen, Frederick, 72.
Froelighuysen, Frederick J., 213, 276.
Froelighuysen, Theodor, 248.
Froelighuysen, Theodor, Jr., 276.
Fronmery Manufacturing Company, the, 617.
Fryer, Edward W., 1179.
Fries, Frederick, 343.

G.

Gallagher, J. D., 393.
Gardner, Robert F., 1292.
Gardner, John, 370.
Gardner & Dickey, 747.
Garbison, Abram Quirk, 1078.
Garri, John, 1074.
Garold, George A., 1130.
Gas-Light Company, the, of Newark.
Gautier, Thomas Brown, 1092.
Gautier, Joseph Horatio, 1093.
Gaulke, Herman W., 343.
Geography of Essex County: of Hudson
County, 891.
Geology of Northern New Jersey, 10, of Essex County, 92; freestone and sandstone quarries, 14-16; O'Rourke quarry, 16; Insaults formation, 13-17; 864; of Hudson
County, 893; Big and Little Snake Hills,
892; of Castle Point, 134.
Gerrits, Gerrit, 927.
Gerlach, Herman C., 346.
Gifford, Archer, 239.
Gifford, Charles L. C., 267.
Gillman, Edward D., 1387.
Gill, J. A. G. H., 717.
Gilbert, Matthew, letter from, to the directors, general of New Netherlands, 30; address in, 73.
Gillechrist, Robert, 1061.
Gila, Francis A., 741.
Gill, George H., 748.
Glass Works, Jersey City Flint, 1164.
Glen, Charles T., 291.
Glenridge, 873.
Goble, Luther Spencer, 282.
Goble, J. G., 369.
Goble, Luther, 72.
Goez, Nicholas, 1259.
Golden, H. E., 238.
Goldner & Post, 581.
Goring, Estevan, 896.
Gosnell, James, 1145.
Gordon, Thomas, 238.
Gordon, C. C., 1163.
Gore Brothers & Wykeman, 748.
Gould, Joseph P., 839.
Gould, Stephen Graver, 635.
Gould, Joseph, 839.
Gould & Eschardt, 586.
Governors of New Jersey, 7, 216.
Graf, Leopold, 371.
Graphite Lubricating Company, 1165.
Graves, Charles W., 236.
Graves, William B., 345.
Graves, Anna M., 841b, 345.
Gray, William A., 344.
Gray, Richardson, 344.
Grout, Daniel, 321.

Greenfield Steam Engine Works, 1264.
Green, Mac-Gin, 41.
Green, Henry W., 293.
Green, Henry Woodford, 449, 146.
Green, Dudley S., 134.
Greene, Isaac, 27.
Greiff, Edward Perry, 761.
Greiff, John, 1067.
Greiff, Thomas, 63.
Greiser, Lewis S., Jr., 27.
Greiser, David C., 273 (note).
Greiser, Stephen, 841.
Greiser, Stephen W., 273.
Greiser, Stephen Augustus, 273.
Greiser, William B., 273.
Greiner, Isaac H., 345.
Greiner, William R., Jr., 345.
Greiner, J. F., 273.
Greiner, William M., 271.
Grim, Jasper, 273.
Guttenberg, town of: Weehawken Land and Ferry Company, 1217; early residents, 1219;
vicinities of the town, 1217; paper cement,
1219; Guttenberg Ferry Company, 1219; of Ferry of the Ferry Association, 1219; manufactures, 1270; quarries, 1271; post-offices, 1217; village population, 1272; educational interests, 1272; churches, 1276.

H.

Hague, John, 1067.
Haas, John F., 343.
Haggen, William H., 273.
Hahn & Stumpf, 1293.
Hahn, Daniel, 1049.
Hahn, Jacob, 251.
Haines, Daniel, 246, 252.
Halpenny, Charles H., 301.
"Half-Moon," the, 300-301, 300.
Hall, Edwin, 867.
Hall, Mrs. H. S., 1166.
Hall, Louis A., 307.
Halsey, Joseph L., 367.
Halsey, Samuel, 579.
Halves, William, 257.
Halsted, Oliver S., 663.
Halsted, George B., 290.
Halsted, Matthias G., 749.
Halsted, Leffitt G., 742.
Halsted, Oliver S., Jr., 290.
Halsted, Gust, 365.
Halsted, N. N., 1253.
Halsted, J. H., 380b, 385.
Halvey, Samuel, 571.
Hamburg Woolvan Tannery, 879.
Hamilton, John, 213, 388.
Ham, Col. Aaron, 799.
Harrop, Oct. A. G., 718.
Harvey, Joseph, 239.
Harvey Thomas, J., 34.
Hardey, Robert, Augustus A., 1168.
Hartenshlag, Lewis D., 1084.
Hartenshlag, Jacob H., 1084.
Harris, Edward C., 292.
Harris, Frederick H., 298.
Hartshorn, Charles H., 1088.
Hartshorn, Stewart, 596, 711.
Hartshorn & Shad-Boller Manufacturing, 1384.
Harrison, Ira, 818.
Harrison, Ira M., 809.
Harrison, C. H. & J. D., 576.
Harrison, M. G., 809.
Harrison, Samuel, 721, 730.
Harrison, Abraham, 737.
Harrison, David W., 809.
Harrison families, 833, 830.

- Harrison, Richard, 362.
 Harrison, Samuel, 362.
 Harrison, Benjamin, 362.
 Harrison, John, 362.
 Harrison, Joseph, 362, 859.
 Harrison, George, 362.
 Harrison, Daniel, 362.
 Harrison, Richard B., 828.
 Harrison, C. M., 829.
 Harrison, town of: Indian history, 1244; Capt. Sandford's purchase from Tantaqua, 1244; the Schuylcr purchase, 1245; discovery of copper, 1245; old town of Petersburg, 1246; change of township name from Lodi to Harrison, 1246; original road districts, 1246; civil roster, 1247; Fire Department, 1251; educational, 1251; churches, 1252; societies, 1252; industries, 1253.
 Hassell, Abram M., 296.
 Hasetline, A. H., 399.
 Hassonpluge, M., 1296.
 Hathfield, Edwin F., 764.
 Hauck, Peter, & Co.'s brewery, 1254.
 Havell, George, 598.
 Hay, James B., 595.
 Hay, Ebenezer C., 595.
 Hayes, David Abbott, 264.
 Hayes, Thomas, 379.
 Hayes, Samuel, 296.
 Hayes, H. W., 391.
 Hayes-family, 695.
 Haydon, Joseph N., 314.
 Headley, William O., & Co., 585.
 Headley, William F., 267.
 Heath, S. R. W., 556.
 Healden, Edward, 379.
 Healden, C. M., & Co., 607.
 Healden, John H., 346.
 Healden, Joseph, 38, 39, 551.
 Healden, A. J., 694.
 Heintich, Boehus, 599.
 Heintz, C., & Son, 1164.
 Henry, John Powell, 1112.
 Hendricks, Herman, 890-c.
 Hendry, Hugh Campbell, 313.
 Henderson, William, 748.
 Henderson, James, 708.
 Hoffer, Samuel Alexander, 1110.
 Hoffer, Frederick, 617.
 Henry, Thomas S., 237.
 Hoster, Jacob, 399.
 Hertert, John W., 1087.
 Herold, Herman C. H., 245.
 Herrosm, Frederick W., 1271.
 Hetfield, Odeli, 853.
 Hey, F. T., 391.
 Hewes & Phillips, 594.
 Hewlett, Peter V. P., 342.
 Higgin, Edward Payson, 271.
 Hill, Augustus Villeroy, 1167.
 Hill, William, 618.
 Hill, Charles E., 294.
 Hill, Charles E., 269.
 Hillyer, Edward T., 265.
 Hillyer, Asa, 764.
 Historical Society of New Jersey, 661.
 Hitchcock, William E., 341.
 Hobart, Bishop, 708.
 Hoboken, city of: General description of, 1207; early history of, 326, 1208; the town founded by John Stevens, 1210; Hoebuck ferry, 1210; first steam ferry-boat in the world, 1210; topography, 1211; sanitary condition, 1211; statistics, 1212; government and officials, 1214; police, 1216; Fire Department, 1217; water-works, 1217, 1219; Land and Improvement Company, 1218; Gas Company, 1218; banking, 1219; ocean steamship lines, 1220; D. L. and W. R. R., 1229; post-office, 1220; District Courts, 1230; German Club, 1220; business places, 1220; military, 1221; educational, 1131, 1134-1136, 1222-1224; churches, 1224; cemeteries, 1228.
 Hoboken, West, township of: Description and boundary, 1300, 1301; progress, 1301; ferry, 1302; organization of township, 1302; Railroad, 1303; educational interests, 1303; Large-village, 1304; Cox's Corners, 1304; public improvements, 1305; early and recent business, 1306; noted residents, 1307; Fire Department, 1307; boat club, 1308; religious matters, 1309.
 Holland, public attention in, drawn to America, 809.
 Holbrook, Andw Law, 267.
 Holden, Edgar, 721.
 Hoffman, William T., 1073.
 Holt, Henry Dobb, 1096.
 Holden, Capt. Levi, 51.
 Hommel, Philemon, 1112.
 Hoel, Louis, 302.
 Hooper, Robert Lettice, 239.
 Hooper, Francis, 244.
 Hornblower, Joseph C., 241, 1049.
 Hornblower, Theodore R., 1169.
 Hornblower, Josiah, 735, 1032, 1101.
 Hornblower, Josiah, Jr., 1092.
 Hornblower, William T. V. H., 1093.
 Hornblower, Joseph C., 736.
 Hospitals: In Essex County, 347; St. Michael's, 347; St. Barnabas', 347; Newark German Hospital, 347; Newark Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary, 347; Memorial Hospital and Infirmary, 347; New Jersey House for Disabled Soldiers, 347; Women's and Children's Hospital for the Home of the Friendless, 347; Newark City, 348. In Hudson County, 1114; Christ, 1115; St. Francis, 1115.
 Howard, George E. P., 296.
 Howell, Theodore P., 575.
 Howell, James E., 293.
 Howell, Francis K., 290.
 Howell, Richard, 250.
 Howe, Edwin J., 343.
 Hoyt, James, 765.
 Huddy, Hugh, 243.
 Hubbell, J. G., 298.
 Hubbell, Algernon Sydney, 276.
 Hubbell, George W., 201.
 Hudson County, geography of, 891; geology of, 891; organization of, 943; courts of (see Courts), court house, of, 943; other public buildings of, 946; Board of Health of, 1115; vital statistics of, 1116; poor farm of, 1278.
 Hudson River, 896.
 Hudson, Henry, 1; discoveries by, 2; conciliatory policy toward Indians, 3; employed by the Dutch, 896; third voyage and discoveries of, 896.
 Hulse, Samuel V., 291.
 Humphreys, Solon, 1269.
 Hunter, C. H., 838.
 Hunter, Robert, 248.
 Hunt, Dr. Sanford B., 223.
 Hunt, John Wesley, 1191.
 Huntington, Thomas, 362.
 Huntington, Samuel, 362.
 Pusk factory, 848.
 Hyatt, John W., 618.
 I.
 III, Edward J., 345.
 III, Friedrich, 334.
 Indians, 2; occupation of New Jersey by, 3; massacre of, at Pavonia, 3, 914; Dutch prohibit sale of brandy to, 356, 357; Molhuks, and New Englanders war, 357; Hackensack propose to sell lands on Kill von Kull, 358; protest against Newark settlers landing goods, 377, 378; sell lands to them, 381; feasible signatures on bill of sale, 384; sale by, of Manhattan island, 903; tribute from, demanded by Dutch, 910; troubles with Dutch, 911; rise: Indians turn to Dutch for protection and are lutehered, 913; continuance of Indian war, 914, 915; treaty, 916; correspondence and conference of, with officers of colony, 917-921; deed from Indians for territory of old Bergen township, 931; hostile Indians destroy Pavonia, 933; Indian signatures on deed of sale of Bergen lands, 934; sale of land by Tantaqua to Capt. William Sandford, 1244; wampum described, 1244.
 Industrial Exhibition in Newark, 547.
 Independent Order of Odd-Fellows (see Odd Fellows-ship).
 Ingalls, Thomas C., 759.
 Insurance, fire and life, in Newark: Mutual Fire Assurance Company, 633; Mutual Benefit Life, 634; American Mutual Fire and Marine, 635; Firemen's, 636; Merchants', 637; People's, 637; New Jersey Plate-Glass, 637; Germania, 638; Prudential Insurance Company of America, 638.
 Internal revenue, collectors of, 660.
 Irving, 696.
 Irving, Washington, 690.
 J.
 Jacobus, C. H., 845.
 Jacobus, Lemuel, 845.
 Jacobus family, 848.
 Jacobus & Condit, 584.
 Jackson, Abraham S., 1672.
 Jackson, John P., 261, 270.
 Jackson, Joseph Bloomfield, 310.
 Jackson, Schuyler B., 295.
 James, Thomas D., 262.
 James, Thomas W., 1062.
 Jamison, David, 239.
 Jockel, Charles E., 1113.
 Jenkinson, George B., 586.
 Jersey City Flint-Glass Works, 1164.
 Jersey City Paper Box Company, 1164.
 Jessip, Charles M., 273.
 Jersey City: Early deed history of Daniel Hook, 1138; ancient "ground brief," 1139; English patent for the Hook, 1140; horse-racing, 1140; beginning of prosperity, 1140; Varick, Day and Radcliff, the founders of the city, 1141; sale of lots, 1141; incorporation of the town, 1141; consolidation of municipalities, 1142; roster of officials, 1142; sketches of Mayors Gregory, Manners and Gopsill, 1144-1146; the city as a port of entry, 1146; post-masters, 1147; water-works, 1147; Fire Department, 1149; stock-yards, 1150; homes and asylums, 1150; Paulus Hook's centennial celebration, 1151; "Light-Horse Harry Lee," 1153; Stirling, 1154; "Lay of Paulus Hook," 1156; old wind-mill, 1156; manufactures, 1167; banking, 1167; churches, 1172; societies, 1163.
 Jobs, Eugene, 513.
 Johnson, Col. Adolphus J., 67.
 Johnson, Anna H., 345.
 Johnson, David, 303.
 Johnson, J. L., 298.
 Johnson, John W., 345.

- Johnson, Frederick T., 367.
 Johnson, Thomas, 362, 363.
 Johnson, Elizabeth, 362.
 Johnson, Joseph, 362.
 Johnson, John, 362.
 Johnson, John, 362.
 Johnson, Uzal, 362.
 Johnson, John, 363.
 Johnson, John L., 846.
 Johnson, Thomas V., 843.
 Jones-family, 829.
 Jones, Phineas, A. & C., 382.
 Jones, Phineas, 382.
 Jones, Samuel H., 293.
 Jorvegan, A., 694.
 Joy, Edmund L., 556.
- Journalism in Essex County: New Jersey Journal, 218; Wood's Newark Gazette and New Jersey Advertiser, 207; Carroll's of Freedom, 208; William Tattle, 210; The Rural Magazine, 221; Modern Spectator, 221; New Jersey Eagle, 211; Newark Morning Eagle, 221; Newark Daily Post, 222; Newark Evening Courier, 222; Newark Intelligencer, 222; Newark Monitor, 222; The Daily Advertiser, 222; The Kings, 224; Temperance Advocate, 224; The Vindicator, 226; Morning Post, 226; Evening Journal, 226; Morning Herald, 227; Summit Call, 227; Free Press, 228; Iron, 228; The Philadelphia, 228; Strait's Zeitung, 228; Frei-Zeitung, 228; Der Arbeiter, 228; New Jersey Volkman, 228; New Jersey Democrat, 228; New Jersey Republican, 229; Newark Post, 229; Orange Vindicator, 229; Orange Journal, 229; East Orange Gazette, 229; Orange Chronicle, 230; Montclair Times, 230; Bloomfield Citizen, 230; Bloomfield Gazette, 230.
- In Hudson County: The Bergen County Gazette and Jersey City Advertiser, 1117; Bergen County Courier, 1117; Jersey City Gazette and Bergen Courier, 1117; Jersey Blue and Bergen County Democrat, 1117; Jersey City Advertiser and Bergen Republican, 1117; Jersey City Democrat, 1117; Morning Sentinel, 1117; Evening Sentinel, 1117; Telegraph, 1117; Hudson County Union, 1117; Hoboken Gazette, 1117; Hudson County Democrat, 1117; Jersey City Courier, 1118; Courier and Advertiser, 1118; City Gazette and Hudson County Chronicle and Cultivator, 1118; Circuit Judge, 1118; Hoboken Standard, 1118; American Standard, 1118; People's Advocate, 1118; Jersey City News, 1118; Jessy City Herald, 1118; The Evening Journal, 1118; Jersey City Times, 1118; Hudson City Gazette, 1119; Jersey City Chronicle, 1119; Hudson County Vindicator, 1119; Bayonne Herald and Greenway Banner, 1119; Hudson County Journal, 1120; Jersey City Herald and Gazette, 1120; Hudson County Banner, 1123; Palisade News, 1123; Bayonne Times, 1123; Die Wacht am Hudson, 1123; Hughland Standard, 1123; Hudson County Independent, 1123; The Dispatch, 1123; The Evening Palisades, 1123.
- Justice of Supreme Court, 242-248; in Hudson County, 1088.
- Judges of Common Pleas in Hudson County, 1088.
- K
 Kalich, Leinsch, 298.
 Kalich, Samuel, 298.
 Kearn, Gen. Philip, 62.
 Kearny, township of: Organization of, 1273; boundaries, 1273; roster of officers, 1274; village of Arlington, 1274; manufacturing, schools and churches, 1274; upper lands, early houses of, 1274.
 Keasley, Anthony Q., 292.
 Keasley, Edward Q., 291.
 Keasley, G. M., 290.
 Keating, John, 1131.
 Keefe, Charles, 747.
 Keen, Oscar, 293.
 Keen's, construction, 67.
 Keen, George H., 311.
 Keen, Michael R., 293.
 Keeney-Harvey, G., 92.
 Kennedy, John P., 1134.
 Keogh, J. W., 298.
 Kerr & Co., spoonstam factory, 1164.
 Kerrigan, James, 1167.
 Kernan, John V., 294.
 Kief, William, 908, 910, 915, 1130.
 Kell von Kell, 1230.
 Kline, Thomas T., 223, 280.
 Kinney, William H., 223.
 King, William, 667, 668.
 King, John J., 280.
 King, James G., 1133.
 King family, 1133.
 King, George, 261.
 Kingsley, Philip, 262.
 Kingsley, George B., 260.
 Kingwood, Nathaniel, 196.
 Kinsland, Edmund W., 929.
 Kingold family, 687, 1276.
 Kinsey, James, 240.
 Kipp, Charles John, 222.
 Kirk, W. H. A. C., 698.
 Kirk Hon. William Henry, 698.
 Kirkpatrick, Andrew, 244, 280.
 Kirkpatrick, Andrew, 240.
 Kit-hell, Robert, 323.
 Kit-hell family, 323.
 Knapp, Manning J., 247.
 Knapp, Manning M., 1651.
 Knight, H. W., 290.
 Knight, W. J., 298.
 Knox, Rev. Charles E., 858.
 Knysman, Gen., 40-42.
 Koles, Otto, 1276.
 Koptelny, Ottocar, 1079.
 Kornmann, H. A., 339.
 Kosuth, Louis, 26; his visit to Newark, 624.
 Krueger, Gottfried, 633, 614.
 Kuchler, Max, 338.
 Kuehler, William T., 1111.
 Kye, Calvin F., 1112.
- L
 Lafayette, Marquis de, 56; 681 to Newark, 624; visit to Caldwell, 814; visit to North Bergen, 1276.
 Lafor, Thomas, 210.
 Lafor, J. & Co., 1273.
 Laflaw, Alexander H., 1097.
 Lambert, George H., 380.
 Lambert, John, 250.
 Lampton, Eleazar, 770.
 Lampton, Mortimer, 1137.
 Lands, warrant for, in Essex County, 2923; rule for obtaining, by Carter and Berkeley, 716; troubles concerning, in 1740-80; 869; patents for, in Hudson County, 906, 61-4, in Hudson County (Palisade Hook) conveyed by Keef, 669, 1140; grants or patents in Bergen, 924; S. M. patent, 927; division of, in Bergen township, 942.
 Lane family, 858.
 Lane, George, 861.
 Lang, Henry, 78.
 Lantier, T. W., 846.
 Lasser, —, 1467.
 Lavers, see Bench and Bar, also Individual names.
 Lawrence, Deacon, Richard, 661.
 Law, Richard, 565.
 Leary, E. S., 391.
 Leck, Daniel, 245.
 Lee, "Lionel House Harry", 661, 1164.
 Legislation relative to educational interests in New Jersey, 1869; concerning the early acts, 200.
 Legislature, members of, from Essex, 115.
 Lem Hudson County, 947.
 Leblach, Charles F. J., 326.
 Leiper, Deacon, 747.
 Leisner, F., 346.
 Leisner, Henry, 1167.
 Lenni Leisner, 200; in Indiana.
 Lewis, Carl, 294.
 Lewis, F. W., 293.
 Lewis, Edward Park, 1166.
 Lewis, William Allen, 1075.
 Libraries: Newark Library Association, 842; Orange Free Library, 744; In Newark, 543; In Bloomfield Ward, Simon Library Company, 80; Bloomfield Library Association, 879; West Hudson Library, 1161.
 Lignot, Charles Albert Jones, 1114.
 Elliott, Rudolph H., 1136.
 Lightship, C. F., 293.
 Linn, Oliver, Charles A., 1135.
 Linn and O'Brien Company, the Newark, 696.
 Linn, and Company, as a vendor to Newark, 625.
 Linsley family, 745.
 Linsley, John M., 293.
 Linsley, Francis, 902.
 Linsley family, 363.
 Linn, John, 1063.
 Linn, Thomas, 618, 619.
 Linn, T. J., 391.
 Lippinot, Jul. Hilliard, 1083.
 Liqueur-Works, the Newark, 620.
 Littel, Capt., 46.
 Littel, John Dunn, 1048, 1065.
 Livingston Township, 80; location of Canoe Brook, 857; (right in matters, 861) early houses and mills, 867; taverns, 868; Grange, 858.
 Livelyn Park, 856.
 Lloyd, T. Wiegand, 317.
 Lochner, John, 1109.
 Lockwood, C. S., 1109, 387.
 Lockward, John T., 886.
 Lodge (see Freeman Co., 1944 Fellowship, 616).
 Loh, John R., 1276.
 Long, John R. & Son, 747.
 Longstaff, 898-7.
 Lomborg, Village of, 1194.
 Loo, Charles, 1094.
 Loo, John J. H., 321.
 Loo, Philip, 301.
 Lowenthal, Ernst J., 1067.
 Lowers, Thomas W., 793.
 Ludington, Thomas, 363, 660.
 Lum, Frederick Harvey, 520.
 Lutkins, Alfred A., 1109, 1112.
 Lutz, George, 610.
 Lyon, Ernest M., 314.
 Lyon, Walter M., 288.
 Lyon, Philip, 708.
 Lyon, Stephen, 708.
 Lyon, D. M., 615.
 Lyon, Henry, 364.
 Lyon family, 84, 1256.
 Lyons, James Harvey, 1071.

Lyon, Samuel, 690.
 Lyons, Thomas, 590, 691.
 Lyon-Biller-Works, 596.
 Lyons Farms, 695.
 Lyman, Robert, 343.
 Lynch, Thomas, 1112.

M.

Macdonald, S. H., 311.
 MacWhorter, Rev. Alexander, 52, 467, 863.
 MacWhorter, Alexander C., 257.
 MacWhorter, Alexander C., Jr., 259.
 MacCartag, Ludlow, 791.
 McCarter, Robert H., 301.
 McCarter, Thomas Nesbitt, 280.
 MacHesney & Fisher, 749.
 McHesney, John, 839.
 McClellan, Maj.-Gen. George R., 817.
 McClelland, Richard D., 1066.
 McCullough, C., 749.
 McConnell, M., 846.
 McCracken, John, 285.
 McDanel, Col., 1293.
 McDonald, William K., 266.
 McDonald, James C., 285.
 McDowell, James H., 1099.
 McDowell, William J., 1110.
 McDermott, Allan L., 1087.
 McDermott, F. M., 302.
 McEddy, Hiram, 1049.
 McEntee, James F., 273.
 McFall, Allen & Co., 748.
 McGee, John Flavel, 1082.
 McGill, Alexander T., 1081.
 McGill, John Dale, 1109.
 McKernan, Lewis, 290.
 Melane, Allen, 960.
 MeLeod, Alexander, 708.
 Melthron, John Rhoderick, 1202.
 Mackey, William J., 1110.
 Magie, William J., 248.
 Mahon & Dingwall, 580.
 Mahr, Henry, 333.
 Malleable Iron-Works, 796.
 Mandeville, Abraham, 778.
 Mandeville, Frederic R., 323.
 Mannes, Abraham, 787.
 Mannes, David S., 1144.
 Mangels & Schmidt, 611.
 Manufactures—In Newark. Statistics of, in 1830, 590, in 1835, 561; growth of, from 1843 to 1890, 562; statistics of, in latter year, 563, 564; beginnings of various industries, 596, 67; statistical exhibit for 1880, 565, 566; pioneer application of steam, 570; tanning, 570; pioneer shoemaking, 571; Mosco Combs 571; Luther Golde, 572; leather industry, 574; patent-leather, 579; first morocco manufacture, 580; pioneer and later carriage-making, 581; spoke and wheel-works, 582; saddlery and harness, 582; trunks and traveling bags, 583; saddlery hardware, 587; carriage hardware, 587; rubber-coated harness hardware, 589; foundries, iron and machine-works, 592; Seth Boyden, 592; tool-makers, 598; metal fancy goods, 598; cutlery business, 599; saddler's and harness-maker's tools, etc., 601; jewelry manufacture, 601; lapidaries, jewelers and engravers, 602; Newark Zinc and Iron Company, 605; lime and cement, 606; clothing, 606; furniture, 606; hat-making, 606; silk manufacture, 607; wash, dye and blind and planing-mills, 607; coars and spine-mills, 611; Clark Thread-Works, 611; breweries, 613; knit-goods, 615; varnish, 615; vegetable wood, 617; ultramarine works, 619; tobacco manufactures, 619. In Franklin: The Essex Works, 686; Underhill Manufacturing Company, 687; Vantico Mill, 688. In Clinton, 702. In Millburn: Campbell's paper-mill, 717; Diamond Mill, 712; Short Hills Paper-Mill, 713; Wade's binder's board mill, 713; Fandango Mill, 713; Smith's binder's board mill, 713; Condit's hat-body factory, 713; Light-hips's hat-body factory, 714; Grace's hat-body factory, 714; Butler's, Summers', Wickman's, Brown's, Dillon's, Shaw's and Duff's hat-factories, 714; Reeves' saw-mill, 714; Drew's machine-shop, 714. In Orange City: mills, 745; hat-making, 746; glass-stainers, 750. In Caldwell: tobacco-factory, 836; mills and tannery, 837; cigar-factory, 838; harness-making, 839. In Verona village, 845. In Cedar Grove, 847. In Westville, 851. In Livingston: mills, 857, 858. In Belleville: Hendricks' mills, 890-c; powder-mill, wire-cloth works, 890-d; skin-dressing, 890-e; mordants for dyeing, 898-g; Riverside Rubber-Works, 890-h; paint-mill, 890-i; button-factory, 890-b; calico-works, 890-j; Randolph's mill, 890-j.

In Jersey City: Lorillard's Tobacco Manufactory, 1157; sugar-refining, 1158; Cadgate's soap-works, 1159; the steel industry, 1159; miscellaneous-manufactures, 1160, 1167. In Harrison: favorable situation for, 1253; Edison Lamp-Company's Works, 1253; Pennsylvania Railroad shops, 1254; wire-works, 1254; Hartshorn's shade-roller factory, 1254; insulated wire works, 1254; steam-engine works, 1254. In town of Union: brewing, 1261; silk-works, 1261. In Guttenburg, 1270. In North Bergen, 1291. In West Hudson, 1396.

Manhattan, importance of, commercially, in 1673, 899; Island purchased from aborigines, 103.

Mapes, James Jay, 657.
 Marcellissen, Peter, 940.
 Marsh, Francis E., 292.
 Marsh, Stewart Craig, 332.
 Marshall, Corp. James, 65.
 Martland, William H., 312.
 Masonry (see Freemasonry).
 Maclin Machine-Works, 1163.
 Maxwell, Hannah, killing of, by British soldiers, 41.
 Maybaum, Levy, 298.
 Maynard, E. F., 838.
 Mead, John, 834.
 Mead family, 834.
 Means, Victor C. B., 1112.
 Meekert, Herman, 1207.
 Medical profession; in Essex County, 302 (see also names of individuals); surgeons of the Rebellion, 318; in Hudson County, 1091-1115.
 Medical Societies, in Essex County: The Essex District Medical Society, 348; in New Jersey, 1091.
 Meeker, David M., 507.
 Meeker, George F., 343.
 Meeker, Henry, 701.
 Meeker, J. H., 259.
 Meeker, John H., 282.
 Melrose, Henry, 1298.
 Mercer, Archibald, 312.
 Mercer, Frederick F., 288.
 Mercer, William T., 331.
 Mercurial well in Franklin, 689.
 Mey, Bernelle Jacobson, 902.
 Meyers' (Ri-hards) tannery, 1222.
 Michaux, Andrew, 1279.

Miller, Alexander, 602.
 Miller Brothers, 602.
 Miller, James W., 602.
 Miller, Archer G., 268.
 Miller, William W., 259.
 Miller, John F., 339.
 Miller, William P., 282.
 Miller, McCullough & Ober, 574
 Mills, Andrew M., 324.
 Mills, Henry J., 296.
 Mills, John, Jr., 299.
 Millburn township: Geographical and topographical, 706; civil organization, 706; list of officers, 707; old families, 707, 708; hamlet of Millburn, 708; Short Hills, 709; Wyoming, 711; churches, 711; schools, 712; industries, 712; poor farm, 714; Millburn in civil war, 714.
 Milts, Frederick, 610.
 Minit, Peter, 903, 904.
 Mitchell, Henry, 1107.
 Mix, Eldridge, 765.
 Mockridge, Abraham N., 266.
 Mockridge & Son, 690.
 Monpe-sou, Roger, 258.
 Money in New Jersey prior to Revolution, 23-28.
 Montclair township of: Geography and topography, 890-1; the Hollanders, 890-1; early land-owners, 890-1; Indian titles, 898-n; difficulties over, 890-n; Revolutionary traditions, 890-n; churches, 890-n; education, 890-n; public communication and development, 890-n; railroads, 890-v; patriotism, 890-w; Gas and Water Company 890-w; Library Association, 890-w; statistics, 890-w; post-offices, 890-w; Fire Department, 890-w.
 Montgomerie, John, 248.
 Monroe, Alexander, 394.
 Moore, George De Gray, 281.
 Moore, James, 810-w.
 Moore, Samuel, 838.
 Moore, George D. G., 838.
 Morris, Lewis, 243, 249.
 Morris, Robert, 240.
 Morris, Theodore Freelinghynsen, 1098.
 Morris, Thomas, 364.
 Morris, Stephen V., 1111.
 Morris, Ephraim, 877.
 Morris, William Collin, 1053.
 Morris and Essex Canal, the, 190.
 Morris, Lewis, 248.
 Morris, Robert Hunter, 239.
 Morris, Stants Smith, 274.
 Morrow, Elias F., 293.
 Morrow, William H., 289.
 Morrow, Samuel R., Jr., 292.
 Morrow, James M. C., 293.
 Morton Brothers, 613.
 Morgan, James F., 1108.
 * Morhoussetown, 856.
 Morehouse, Stephen, 708.
 Morehouse, Jacob, 708.
 Mott, L. S., 309.
 Mountains, First, 12; Second, 13.
 Muller, John, 1297.
 Munn family, 725.
 Munn, Ivy, 731.
 Munn, Joseph L., 289.
 Murphy, W. H., & Co., 616.
 Murphy, Jane H., 334.
 Music Singing societies in Newark, 543; Liedertafel, in Union, 1264.
 Myers, Samuel J., 1112.

N.

Naundorff, Oscar, 298.

- Navigation of the Passaic, 188-189; cf. Morris and Essex Canal, 195-192.
- Necrology of Newark 470.
- Nesbit, Samuel, 270.
- Nesbit, Lawrence M., 1112.
- Nevins, James S., 24.
- Nevins, James S., 1054.
- Nevil, Samuel, 213.
- Newbold, M. T., 1052.
- New Durham, village of, 180.
- New Jersey naming of 2 governors of 7, first installation of, 20-21.
- New Netherlands, the, 1; English claim of, 1; impious, 2; being, by New England, 2; description of, by Hudson, 89; formal method of and granting of charter, 90; first colony sent to, 90; first European, 350; first in, 902; second colony, 903; first formal div. of government, 906; Stuyvesant becomes director-foregatherer of, 917; capture of colony by English, 922; included in Duke of York's charter, 923; recapture of, by Dutch, 927; second possession by the English, 928.
- Newman, R. & Co., 37.
- Newell, William Henry, 1042.
- Newark, city of, 1; correspondence leading to settlement of, 25-308; geographical notices of early settlers, 30-77; circumstances which led to the settlement, 371; location decided upon, 376; the pioneers to the Passaic warned by Indians not to land their goods, 377; the town laid out, 379; status of Newark, 379; name; "church and State" insisted upon by the pioneers, 379; the ownership of lands lost, 380, 381; Indian title preserved, 381; extent of the tract, 381; boundary between Newark and Elizabethtown, "Divident Hill," 382; Indian bill of sale, 383; town planted, 387; early town records, 387; relative wealth of the pioneers, 388; first grist-mill, 400; office-holders from 1693 to 1751, 411-443; history from 1711 to 1823, 443; purchase lands, 447; instructions to Representatives in the Legislature, 449; premium for wool-raising, 450; first lot from 1736 to 1809, 456-472; the township divided into four wards, 481; Newark chartered as a city, 484; officials from 1696 to 1884, 484-498; Police Department, 438; Fire Department, 438; 809; religious interests, first church edifice, 493; arranged as a place of defence, 494; second 1696, 464; Rev. Aaron Burr and Rev. J. Worcester, 495; the present edifice, 495; the parsonage pillaged, 495; cessation of meeting, 497; the old church 1631, 497; officials, 498; first Sunday-school in city and State, 493; Second Presbyterian, 471; Third Presbyterian, 471; Rev. Craven, 471; Pine Street Presbyterian, 474; Central Presbyterian, 473; normal members, 471; Sixth Presbyterian, 477; High Street Church, 477; Park Presbyterian, 479; South Park Presbyterian, 480; Roselle Presbyterian, 481; Bethany, 481; Wakefield, 482; Calvary, 483; First German Presbyterian, 480; Second and Third German, 480; Mercantile Presbyterian, 481; First Presbyterian, 481; First Baptist, 481; Rev. H. C. Fish, 480; First German Baptist, 480; South 10th, 487; North Baptist, 488; Fifth, 488; Fairmount, 489; Mount Pleasant, 489; Roselleville, 489; Bethany, 490; Mount Zion, 490; Bohm of Avenue German Baptist, 491; Sherman Avenue Baptist, 491; Wesley M. E. Chapel, 491; Sunday-school, 491; Franklin Street M. E. Church, 494; Immanuel M. E., 494; Union Street M. E., 495; Eighth Avenue M. E., 495; Central and St. Paul's M. E., 497; Trinity, Roselleville, De Forest, Centenary and Strawbridge, 498; First M. P., 501; Trinity, Episcopal, 501; C. I. Ogden's Sunday school gathering, 92; other Episcop. churches, 500-506; Roman Catholic Churches, 508-513; the Cathedral, 509; Monastery of St. Dominic, 511; Reformed Dutch Church, 513, 514; Evangelical Church, 514; Lutheran Church, 514, 4; First Congregational Church, 515; Bellevue Avenue Congregational, 521; Evangelical Church, 521; Jewish Synagogue, 522; Congregational, 523; Free-masonry, 524-526; 1841 Fellowship, 526; Grand Army of the Republic, 530-52; Library Association, 542; Catholic organizations, 517; Sunday schools, 4; Knights of Cytherea, 545; Board of Trade, 547; Newark Industrial Exposition, 547; Newark of Honor, 548; Young Men's Hebrew Association, 549; Young Men's Christian Association, 549; early merchants, 550; industries, 550; see Manufactures; distinguished visitors; Washington, Tally-rail, Bernershaert, Van Berckel, Lafayette, Henry Clay, St. South, French, 561-562; banking and insurance, 603; street illumination, 608; electric light, 610; municipal 645; celebrations, 666; New Jersey Historical Society, 684; parks and Club-land 1861, 685; ship-building, 687; moral epidemic, 668; Asylums for insane, 669; death of Washington, 669; noology, 670.
- Nichols, Edward Payson, 324.
- Nichols, Frank, 1102.
- Nichols, Humphrey, 370.
- Nichols, Isaac A., 310.
- Nichols, Whitfield, 311.
- Niven, Malcom W., 1086.
- Noble, Francis K., 1397.
- Noe, John, 852.
- No-Name Hat Manufacturing company, 719.
- North Caldwell village, 852.
- "Northfield," 850.
- Norris, Henry Lee, 1109.
- Nuttall, 581.
- Notman, James, 370.
- Nuttman, Capt., 40.
- Oak Cliff, 1245.
- Oakes, David, 876.
- Oakes, Edward, 362.
- Ogden family, 40-50.
- Ogden, Gen. Matthias, 50.
- Ogden, Aaron, 49, 250, 1452.
- Ogden, Elias B. D., 246, 1360.
- Ogden, Matthias, 6083.
- Ogden, John, 49.
- Ogden, David, 244, 371.
- Ogden, Frederick David, 47-50.
- Ogden, Frederick B., 1085.
- Ogden, Col. Josiah, 502.
- O'Gorman, William, 360.
- O'Gorman, William, Jr., 360.
- Olds, Benjamin, 360.
- Olds, Franklin M., 248.
- Olds, Anthony, 728.
- Oliver, David W., 1.
- Olvestad, Garret M., 1371.
- Oratum, chief of Hackensack, 357.
- Oranges, the, 715; purchase of land in, 716; geography, 716; hydrology, 716; early settlers, 717; land troubles, 728; extracts from old papers, 729; Fourth of July, 720; Oranges as a watering place, 721; men-hunt, 721; course of travel, 731; taverns, 732.
- Orange, city of, 1; Municipal government, 701; roster of officials, 734; educational history, 735; teachers, 737; Book Concern primary, 740; educational fund, 740; school building, 741; Free-church, 744; Industrial, 745; societies, 750; Fire Department, 752; Police Department, 753; banks, 754; real-estate, 755; the 341 company, 754; Episcopal churches, 757.
- Orange, South, County of, 753; portions of, 750; arrivals, 750; highways, 750; early mills, 750; educational history, 753; churches, 750; society, 750.
- Orange, West, township of, 803; points of interest in, 803; Madison Park, 803; mountain cottages, 804; civil history, 803; roster of officials, 803; religious interests, 807; odd deeds, 809; scholar's coffee's negro, 810; Tory Gerrit, 811; first Sunday-school, 812; Eagle Creek road, 812; Williams family, 812; Essex County's last slaves, 813.
- Orange, East, township of, 773; the region to the past, 813; old families, 806; municipal organization, 811; roster of officials, 811; post-office, 821; water works, 822; religious matters, 823; educational interests, 823; societies, 823.
- Orator, Dennis, 300.
- Osborn, J. H., 300.
- Osborne, E. A., 300.
- Osborne, Joseph D., 300.
- Osborne, L. S. & Co., 300.
- Osmun, Adolph, 823.
- Ottobrin, John, 700.
- P.
- Painot, Michael, 905, 907, 1100.
- Palmato, the, 80.
- Panagiam, Z. K., 1319.
- Parkhurst Benjamin, 371.
- Parkhurst, Stephen, 737.
- Parker, Gerhardt, 371.
- Parker, Gerhardt, Jr., 301.
- Parker, Jos., 240.
- Parker, Richard Wayne, 201.
- Parker, H. Wayne, 23.
- Parol, Thomas, 700.
- Passaic Carbon and Agricultural Works, 617.
- Passaic Machine Works, 307.
- Passaic, the navigation of, 103.
- Passaic Valley, 803.
- Patronage, privileges of, 965.
- Patterson, William, 300.
- Paulus Hook, deeds for, in 1700, 100, 1108; settlement at, 925; ferry at, 926; Van Viper's race-course, 965; circumstances connected in 1776, 964 under command of Gen. Steiner 968; the British in possession, 970; their strengthening the works, 977; description of, 988; surprise of the British garrison by Maj. Lee, 993; comparison between this settlement and the storming of Stony Point, 993; celebration of centennial anniversary of battle, 1151.
- Paulsen, M. hael, 300, 1100, 1100.
- Paxton, Eljah J., 1079.
- Paxton's settlement, 4; Indians massacred at, 3, 914; first house at, 300; later, 300; pioneer hospitality of O'Connell Van Vost, 300; destruction of, by Indians, 300.
- Payne & Peine, 749.
- Peck, Edward E., 336.
- Peck, Joseph, 371.
- Peck, Jeremiah, 44.
- Peck family, 720, 920.

Peddle, Thomas B., 586.
 Peddie, T. B., A. C. Co., 585.
 Penitentiary of the County of Essex, 83.
 Pennington, William Sandford, 46.
 Pennington, William S., 245, 250, 267.
 Pennington, William, 251.
 Pennington, Alexander C. M., 263.
 Pennington, Alphonsus Y., 272.
 Pennington, Enoch M., 273.
 Pennington, Jabez P., 274.
 Pennington, Samuel H., 290.
 Pennington, Samuel Hayes, 329.
 Pennington, Ephraim, 364.
 Pennington family, 364.
 Perry, Nehemiah, Jr., 272.
 Perry, Oliver H., 295.
 Personette, George, 841.
 Personette, Stephen, 311.
 Peters, George, 583.
 Peters & Calloun Company, the, 581.
 Peters Manufacturing Company, 615.
 Pettisborough, village of, 1246.
 Pettigrew, O. J., 290.
 Petrie, Robert M., 1108.
 Petrie, James A., 1167.
 Phalanx Silk-Factors, 1306.
 Phillips, John M., 591.
 Physicians, county, 217.
 Physicians—see Medical Profession, also names of individuals.
 Pier, David, 849.
 Pierson, Rev. Abraham, 302, 303, 364.
 Pierson, Rev. Abraham, Jr., 365.
 Pierson family, 305, 719, 783, 851.
 Pierson, Thomas, 365, 690.
 Pierson, Matthias, 305, 736.
 Pierson, Isaac, 365.
 Pierson, Cyrus, 305.
 Pierson, Edward A., 317.
 Pierson, William, 358.
 Pierson, Albert, 628, 867.
 Pierson, Samuel, 763.
 Pierson, George, 764.
 Pierson, Philander S., 836.
 Pigot, Edward, 303.
 Pihl, Frederick H., 235.
 Pissell, William Nick, 326.
 Pinborne, William, 243.
 Pinner, James Beza, 626.
 Planck—see Verplanck.
 Plum, Samuel, 365.
 Plum family, 365.
 Plum, Stephen Haines, 639.
 Poland, George W., 290.
 Poinier, Horace J., 631.
 Population of Essex County, 67; of Hudson County, 949, 1115.
 Poor farm of Hudson County, 1278.
 Porter, Crofut & Hodgkins, 749.
 Potts, J. Herbert, 698.
 Potts, Steens G., 246.
 Potter, Thomas, 1127.
 Potter, Samuel, 371.
 Prescott, C. J., 740.
 Price, Daniel, 615.
 Price, Edward Livingston, 289.
 Price, Rodman M., 1315.
 Prich, Benedict, 228.
 Prosecutors of the plea in Essex County, 216; in Hudson County, 1088.
 Provincial Assemblies, members of, from Essex County, 214.
 Provincial Congress of New Jersey, members of, 211.
 Provost, Jonathan, 839.
 Provost, Thomas, 294.
 Prudden, Rev. John, 371.

Puff & Yeomans, 749.
 Pyle, Edwin W., 1110.

Q.

Quarries at Bell-ville, 13; Newark, 15; Orange, 14-16; Pleasant Valley, 17; in Franklin, 685; Arlington quarries, 803; in Guttenberg, 1271; in Belleville, 809-10.
 Quinby & Co., 581.
 Quinby, Isaac N., 1099.
 Quinby, James, 581.
 Quinn, P. T., 352.

R.

Rabe, Rudolph F., 1083.
 Radcliff, Jacob, 1141.
 Rae, Walter, 1110.
 Railroads, 192; Camden and Ansbjg Railroad and Transportation Company, 193; New Jersey Railroad, 193; National Docks Railway, 196; New York, Susquehanna and Western, 196; Morris and Essex (D. L. & W.), 1220; Bonton Branch, 198; Newark and Bloomfield, 198; New York, Lake Erie and Western, 196; Northern Railroad Company of New Jersey, 199; Paterson, Newark and New York, 199; New York and Greenwood Lake Railway, 199, 872, 890-c; Watchung Branch, 200, 872; New York and Fort Lee, 200; Hackensack and New York, 200; Central Railroad of New Jersey, 200; Newark and New York, 200; Long Branch Division of the Central, 200; Delaware and Bound Brook, 201; New York, West Shore and Buffalo, 201; Orange and Newark Horse-Car Railroad, 203; Newark and Bloomfield, 204, 871; Newark, Harrison and Kearny, 204; Newark and Irvington, 204; Clinton Avenue, 205; Newark and South Orange, 205; Elizabeth and Newark, 205; in Caldwell-efforts to build, 833; street railroads in Hudson County, 1045-1048; West Hoboken and Hoboken, 1303.
 Rand, John Milton, 326.
 Randolph, Bennington F., 1090.
 Randolph, C. F., 204.
 Randolph, Joseph H., 1035.
 Randolph, Joseph F., 245, 1081.
 Rankin, William, Jr., 313.
 Ranney, Timothy P., 269.
 Ranney, William, 1304.
 Ransom, Anson A., 337.
 Ransom Stephen B., 1093.
 Rapelje, Sarah (first child born in New Netherlands), 902.
 Rapp, John H., 1267.
 Rayner, E. A., 392.
 Read, Charles, 238, 243.
 Read, Joshua Ware, 339.
 Reading, John, 249.
 Rebellion, the war of, Essex County in, 54; the New Jersey Brigade, 54; hostilities commenced, 55; organization of the First Regiment, 57; position of Newark at opening of the war, 57; Mayor Bisslow's patriotic utterances, 58; action of city authorities, 59; voice of the people, 60; Second Regiment, 61; Gen. Kearny, 62; battles of Second Regiment, 65; field and staff of, 65; roster, 66-93; Eighth Regiment, 93; engagements of, 96; Gen. Ward, 96; roster of Eighth Regiment, 97-135; Thirteenth Regiment, 135; battles, 140; roster, 140-147; Twenty-Sixth Regiment, 147; staff of, 151; roster, 152-165; Thirty-third Regiment, 166; roster of, 173-184; surgeons from Essex in war, 318; volunteers from Montclair, 809-c.

In Hudson County: Patriotism and liberality of the people, 988; the Second Regiment, 989; roster of, 991-997; First Regiment, three years' troops, 997; Fifth Regiment, 1001; Sixth Regiment, 1006; Seventh Regiment, 1008; Ninth Regiment, 1011; Tenth Regiment, 1015; Eleventh Regiment, 1032; Thirteenth Regiment, 1018; Twenty-first Regiment, 1021; Thirty-third Regiment, 1034; H-xammer's battery, 1837; affairs in North Bergen, 1284.
 Rector, Pierson, 1106.
 Reed, Alfred, 248.
 Reeve, Gilbert, 708.
 Regad, E. D., 604.
 Register of bank department, 216.
 Register of deeds and mortgages of Essex, 217.
 Reilly, Patrick, 370.
 Religious—(see Churches, also separate city, town or township headings).
 Revel, Thomas, 213.
 Revere, Paul, 301.
 Revolutionary war, the, Essex County in, 28; first call for troops, 29; State troops, 29; militia, 30; troops called to New York, 30; troops requested for Washington's army, 30; officers from Essex County, 31, 32; enlisted men from Essex County, 32-37; Committee of Safety, 37; British troops in Newark, 38; destruction of Connecticut Farms, 41; murder of Hannah Maxwell, 41; battle of Springfield, 41, 42; Chaplain Caldwell, 42, 43; poem on, 43; reminiscences of Alling family, 44; the Wheelers, 44; Capt. Camp, 45; the Congers and Brauns, 45; Capt. Little, 46; William Sandford Pennington, 46; Judge Ogden, 47-50; the black man Cudjo, 50; Capt. Holden, 51; Pastor MacWhorter, 52; Chief Justice Smith on the Stamp Act, 52; Capt. Kidney's adventure, 53; soldiers nursed at Trinity Church in Newark, 501; traditions of in Bloomfield, 862; in Montclair, 890-w. In Hudson County (then portion of Bergen): Patriotic resolutions of freeholders and inhabitants, 951; preparations to resist the British, 951; Lord Stirling's plans for defense of Bergen, 951; development of loyalty to the King, 952; beginning of active movements, 952; capture of New York, 952; Col. Aaron Burr's exploit at Hackensack, 953; Clinton's raid, 954; Paulus Hook in possession of the British, 956; the works strengthened, 957; plans for an assault, 960; the surprise and capture by Maj. Lee, 963; the exploit compared to the storming of Stony Point, 966; correspondence and orders concerning, 968-976; the affair at Block House Point, 977-981; correspondence relating to, and contemporary accounts of, 981-986; confirmation of estates in what is now Hudson County, 987; high treason, 987; list of estates seized, 988.

Rhodes, Josiah, 890-f.
 Rich, Augustus A., 1046.
 Richards, David Willard, 554.
 Richards, George W., 328.
 Richards, Thomas, 365.
 Richards family, 365.
 Richardson, Enos & Co., 604.
 Rieord, Frederick W., 650.
 Ricord, Philippe, 341.
 Riggs, Edward, 365, 690.
 Riggs family, 365, 781, 784.
 Richter, William A., 283.
 Riker, C. W., 300.

- Riker, William, 694
Ripley, David, & Sons, 616
Rishw, Theologian, 1207
Roully, early, 184-187; in Franklin 663; in Caldwell 331, in Livingston, 856, in Bloomfield, 862; from Newark to Dublin Hook, 890; in Bloomfield, 871, in Belleville, 890 in North Bergen, 1289, in Hudson County, 1637, in Union, 1267
R.erts, Hugo, 66, 156, 691, 692
Robertson, T., 776
Robertson, C., 191
Robison, George M., 281, 106
Robinson, Chester, 737
Robinson, Manning, 345
Robinson, Morton, 399
Robinson, William D., 441
Robson, John I., 686
Robin, Hans P., 342
Rogers, James, 386
Rogers family, 386
Rogers, Henry, 229
Ronsdale, Isaac, 1974
Romer, A. J., 296
Romer, James W. A., 333
Rose, Isaac, Sugar, 336
Rosiger, A. W., 226
Roswell, William, 15
Rothman, H. J., 664
Rosa, Hans, see Carlsson
Roths, J., 694
Rugg, George, Secretary, 1199
Rumson, Geo. Davidson, 334
Rutherford, John, 298
Rutherford, Walter, 294
Ryall, Philip J., 282
Ryerson, David A., 1978
Ryerson, Martin, 16
Ryerson Thomas C., 235
- S
- Sadron, A. B. C., 238
Saltonstall, Gilbert D., 199
Saltar, Richard, 293
Satterthwaite family, 634, 666
Sassano, 1260
Sawford, Capt. William, 1244
Sawford, Theodore, 879
Sawborn, Noah, 1106
Sawford, William, 443
Sawford, Michael, 890-6
Sawford, William, 890-6
Sawford, Jonathan, 96
Sawford family, 96
Sawson Manufacturing Company, 388
Sawson, Samuel S., 288
Sawson, Paul, 127
Saxony, Charles A., 137
Saxony, George, 1407
Say, Armin C., 280
Say, F. P., 391
Schauber's Antique Furniture Factory, 1396
Schultz, John, 137
Schuyler, Ar. of 1693, 127
Schuyler, Aront, 1249
Schuyler family, 1249
Schureman Albert I., 348
Schureman, Charles A., 342
Schilling, William, 348
Schulz, Frederick, 1101
Schneck, L. H., 239
Schneck, Harold A., 293
Scharff, Christian Henry, 269
Schiffner, Emil, 269
Schneck, A. V. S., 239
Schools, State fund declared, 296. Administration of school money, 298, 297. State and city superintendents, 297. In operation of school districts, 298. In Newark, 144, in pioneer school-master, 146. Legislation concerning, 336; encouragement to, 337. Essex Union S. H. S. 1947. Public schools established, 197, first public school-house, 648. Board of Education 1861 to 1861, 348. Rev. Amos Burr's classical school, 661. The academy, 612. List of trustees, 693. Mr. Whitehead, 693. Wesleyan Institute, 694. Hudson and Kearny's schools, 693. (Massachusetts Business College, 693. New Jersey Business College, Judge Howell, 696. In Franklin, 693. In Clinton, 696; Elm Institute, 697, 698. In Milltown, 712. In city of Orange, 735. In South Orange. The progress in way of teachers, 739. Free Education, 797. Sutton Hall College, 798. In 1289 Orange, 825. In Caldwell (Franklin) 867. In Caldwell village, 869. In Verona village, 846. In Cedar Grove, 843. In Clinton, 848. In North Caldwell, 892. In Livingston, 836. In Bloomfield, 869, academy, 866, private schools, 869. German Theological School, 870. La Belleville Proprietors' 888. Merrifield School, 960. In Montclair, 890-8.
In Hudson county: East, in Bergen, 1121. First Board of Education, 1123. Normal School established, 1123. In Hudson City, 1124. In first middle, 1126. In Jersey City, 1126. First ordinance 1126. Gradual schools, 1127. Boards of Education, 1127; free library, 1193. Hoboken educational interests, 1193, 1222-1224. private schools of, 1223. In Bayonne, 1134, 1289. In Harrison, 1143, 1291. In town of Union, 1143, 1266. In Union township, 1229. In townships, 1134. Teachers of 1134, Hudson Institute, 1134. (Gaskell Business College, 1136. Hoboken Academy, 1136. Stevens Institute of Technology, 1136. Stevens High School, 1137. Roman Catholic School, 1137. In Guttenberg, 1472. In Arlington, 125. In Kearny, 1276. In North Bergen, 1289. In West Hoboken township, 1293.
School superintendents, Stat. 211. Essex County, 217.
Scott, J. S., 239.
Scudder, E. W., 217.
Scudder, Isaac W., 1069.
Scudder, W. M., 291
Seward, John L., 342.
Seiderling, Philip, 1999.
Seufftlen, Hugo H. F., 1979
Secretary of 890-6, 214
See, Cornelius S., 1986.
Seiber, Elias P., 214.
Seibin, J. Carr, 315.
Sellers, early, numbers and listings of, 318. Settlement, Charles H., 1112
Sherwood, Henry Le La's, 1112
Sherman, Gordon F., 366
Sherman, Abraham H., 239
Sherwin, Charles, 1993
Society of Essex, 216, of Hudson, 946, under sheriff, 946.
Ship-building, 667
Short Hill, 799
Shores, Deleg., 726
Shrop, William B., 1367
Shrop, Misses, 794
Shrimmon, Harris R., 1111
Shuman, Robert, 1264.
Simpson, James Y., 446
Simon & Brothers, 38
Simon & Merritt, 666
Skidde, William L., 38
Snyder, James M., 27
Snyder & Lory, 38
Slack, A. C., 293.
Slayers, 386
Slater National C., 1072
Slaves, 81-116
Slawson, Henry, 69
Smith, Jonathan C., 1134
Smith, J. W., postmaster, 1242
Smith family, 336
Smith, Hugh, 974
Smith, Lyman Abner, 396
Smith, Oliver, 766
Smith, Man, 769
Smith, Wade, 768
Smith, David S., 27
Smith, William A., 367
Smith, Franklin A., 137
Smith, J. M. & D. Co., 369
Smith, Joseph M., 669.
Smith, Isaac, 244
Smith, Abel, 1, 189
Smith, Myron W., 271
Smith, F. O. G., 31
Smith, Frederick, 366
Society—A unity of Essex, Bldg. 299. Art Association, 191. for the Preservation of Society to Children, 299. Provident Insurance Mutual Aid Association, 219. New Jersey Wheelmen, 711. Essex Day & Co., 211. Essex Flowering Association, 211. Wood's Art Exhibition, 211.
Society, Historical Commission. In Newark, 347. 87. Union Lodge, No. 1, 625. Newark Lodge, No. 7, 529, 14, 667. Essex, No. 72, 569. Northern Lodge, No. 25, 667. Western Lodge, No. 30, 27. Oriental Lodge, No. 11, 57. King's Lodge, No. 46, 567. Schiller Lodge, No. 156, 528. St. Albans Lodge, No. 68, 527. Cosmos Lodge, No. 136, 568. Trilium Lodge, No. 112, 667. Acha Lodge, No. 116, 528. Pythagoras Lodge, No. 114, 229. Germania Lodge, No. 128, 569. Rosehill Lodge, No. 143, 529. Union Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M., 366. Harmony Chapter, No. 2, R. A. M., 366. King Council, No. 2, R. and S. M., 367. Danvers Chapter, No. 3, 31. Knight Templar, 341. Order of the Bannermen, 361. Hudson Chapter, No. 7, O. of F. S., 341. Masonic Mutual Life Insurance Company, 331. Northern Lodge, Masonic Life Insurance Company, 362. Mutual Mutual Life Insurance Company of New Jersey, 369. In Orange, Union Lodge, No. 11, 750. Corinthian, No. 7, 750. Orange Chapter, No. 67, 790. In East Orange. Hope No. 124, 866. In Caldwell. Essex, No. 44, 863. In Woodbridge, 10, 11, 12, 13, 49, 873. In Jersey City. Helron, No. 17, York, No. 3, 1184. Bergen No. 47. 1193. Elmbridge, No. 48, 1193. Eagle, No. 53, 1140. Ten Pails, No. 72, 1361. Jersey City, No. 74, 1194. Highland, No. 79, 1194. Amity, No. 103, 1194. Royal Star, No. 199, 1194. 146th of the Temples No. 119, 1196. Zeroduba, No. 131, 1195. Algonquin, No. 132, 1196. Boy View, No. 146, 1195. Hugh de Payens Commandery No. 3. Knight Templar, 1196. In Union. Pelton, Mystic Tent and Jackson, 1293. In West Hoboken. York, No. 8, 1308. In Belleville. Belleville No. 10, 896A.
Grand Army of the Republic—in Newark, 540. Kearny Post, No. 1, 540. Ladies' Log-

League of Kearny Post, 540; Lincoln Post, No. 11, 541; Society of Richmond, 541; Hexamer Post, No. 34, 541; Isaac M. Tucker Post, No. 67, 541; Sons of Veterans, 541; Joe Hooker Camp, 541; Robert Leslie Camp, No. 4, 542; James A. Garfield Post, No. 4, 542; Marcus L. Ward Post, No. 88, 542. In Orange: Ezra Dodd Post, No. 12, 752. In Bloomfield: William S. Pierson Post, No. 58, 874. In Jersey City: G. Van Houten Post, No. 3, 1200; George H. Thomas Post, No. 20, 1200; Zabriskie Post, No. 38, 1200; Henry Wilson Post, No. 13, 1200. In Union: Ellsworth Post, No. 14, 1264.

Good Templars, Independent Order of.—In Jersey City: Excelsior Lodge, No. 101, 1201.

Knights of Pythias.—In Newark: St. Chrysostom Lodge, 545; La Mancha, 545; Washington, 546; Henry Clay, 546; Germania, 546; Granite, 546; Covenant, 546; Black Prince, 546. In Bloomfield: Eureka, No. 46, 875. In Jersey City: Jersey City, No. 15, 1197; Cincinnatus, No. 32, 1197; Lincoln, No. 30, 1198; Hudson, No. 87, 1198; Pythagoras, No. 62, 1198; Centenary, 1198; Lafayette, No. 79, 1198; Woodland, No. 5, 1198.

Knights of Honor.—In Newark, 548. In Bloomfield: Excelsior and Bloomfield Lodges, 874. In Jersey City: Ivanhoe, No. 509, 1193; Germania, No. 469, 1193; Palisade, No. 711, 1193; Charmonot, No. 2600, 1193; Anierbach, No. 2805, 1199; Amicitia, No. 2804, 1199.

Odd-Fellowship.—In Newark, 332; Howard Lodge, No. 7, 539; Friendship Lodge, No. 11, 533; Marion Lodge, No. 26, 533; Protection Lodge, No. 28, 534; Columbian Lodge, No. 117, 531; Germania Lodge, No. 121, 533; Apollo Lodge, No. 145, 535; Humboldt Lodge, No. 137, 535; Herman Lodge, No. 142, 535; Newark Lodge, No. 8, 535; Allemania Lodge, No. 79, 535; Golden Rule Lodge, No. 133, 536; Trinity Lodge, No. 160, 536; Eureka Lodge, No. 123, 536; Eagle Lodge, No. 136, 536; Stella Lodge, No. 133, 536; Lucretia Lodge, No. 181, 537; Halcyon Lodge, No. 83, 537; Liberty Lodge, No. 196, 537; Park Lodge, No. 198, 537; Mount Ararat Encampment, No. 3, 538; Washington Encampment, No. 13, 538; Jefferson Encampment, No. 24, 538; Newark Encampment, No. 17, 539; Newark Uniformed Degree Camp, No. 1, 539; Odd-Fellows' Mutual Life Insurance Association of New Jersey, 539. In Clinton, 702. In Orange: John F. Morse Lodge, No. 183, 531; Lafayette, No. 12, 531; Lave Oak, 531; Mount Hebron Encampment, No. 57, 532. In South Orange: Century, No. 109, 539; Hope, No. 179, 539. In Caldwell: National, No. 192, 844. In Belleville: Harmony, No. 25, 890-k. In Bloomfield: Olive Branch, No. 51, 875. In Jersey City, 1195; Hudson, No. 14, 1196; Irregulars, No. 32, 1196; Mechanics', No. 66, 1196. In Lincoln, No. 126, 1196; Monticello, No. 144, 1196; Farnsworth, No. 145, 1196; United Brothers', No. 153, 1197; upward, No. 159, 1197; Summer, No. 199, 1197. In Jersey City, No. 21, 1197. In Harrison: Harrison, No. 199, 1262. In Union: Jefferson, No. 125, and Jackson, No. 199, 1260.

Temple of Honor and Temperance.—In Jersey City: Jersey City Temple, No. 32, 1201.

Temperance, Royal Templars of.—In Jersey City: Hudson Council, No. 1, 1201, Centenary Council, No. 6, 1201. In Harrison, 1253.

Societies, miscellaneous.—In Newark: Young Men's Hebrew Association, 549; Young Men's Christian Association, 549; United Friends in Franklin, 688; Archery Club to Franklin, 688; Star Temple of Honor in Millburn, 712; Union Council, Golden Star Fraternity, Millburn, 712. In Orange: Deutsch Orden Harugari, No. 198, 501; Orange Bureau of Associated Charities, 752; East Orange Council of Chosen Friends, 827. Longfellow Council, No. 675, Royal Arcanum (in East Orange), 827. In Caldwell: Temple of Honor, No. 10, 844; Grange, in Livingston, 858; Freundschafts Bund, in Bloomfield, 874. In Jersey City: Order of Chosen Friends, Washington Council, No. 7, 1202; American Legion of Honor, Superior Council, No. 337, 1202; Ancient Order of Foresters, Court Hudson, No. 6990, 1202; Court Little John, No. 6999, 1202; Court Jersey City, No. 7129, 1202. In Union: Veteran Association, 1264; A. D. O. H., 1264; Councils of O. U. A. M., 1264.

Southard, Samuel L., 245, 251, 1602.

Southard, Loth, 337.

Soumans, Peter, 243.

Speer family, 850.

Speer family, 800-b.

Spiro, David, 301.

Sprague, Isaac N., 842.

Spurr, J. J., 1253.

Spurr, Marcus Frederick, 1169.

Stages, 187, 188; early manufacture of, in Newark, 581; from Caldwell to Newark, 838; from Paulus Hook to Philadelphia, 1041; in town of Union, 1259; from Hoboken to Hackensack, 1282; from Belleville to New York, 890.

Stanley, Miss, 739.

Stickney, Charles W., 327.

State controllers, 216.

Stanlar, Peter, 890-e.

Stanlar & Laffey, 890-e.

Stamp Act, the, 237.

Stirling, Lord, measures of, for defense of Bergen, 951; examination of Paulus Hook, 956; sketch of, 1154.

Street railroads, 203, 205 (see Railroads).

Stanlar & Laffey's wire-works, 1254.

Staples, Thomas, 366.

Stachlin, Robert, 344.

Steam-engine, first, in Hudson County, 1245.

Stevens, John, 1210.

Stevens family, 1210.

Stevens, the Masses, 868.

Stevens, Frederick Willard, 200.

Stevens, Edwin A., 1315.

Stephens, John H., 551.

Steub & Condit, 1163.

Steinhilber, English et, 926, 940.

Steffens, Julius, 616.

Stearns & Co., 607.

Steel-Works, Newark, 303.

Steele, Thomas, 365.

Stearns, S. F., 291.

Stetson, Horace, 291.

Stimets, Charles C., 1135.

Stimets, Caspar, 926, 940.

Stickland, John, letters from, inquiring about the Achter Cull, 355.

Stickler, Joseph W., 345.

Stuckton, Richard, 244.

Stoeker, W. F., 747.

Stoekton, Charles S., 677.

Stone, J. Henry, 287.

Struble, Alpheus, 232.

Strandie, Luke, 1304.

Stuyvesant, Peter, 3; letters to, inquiring about the Achter Cull from New Englanders, 365, 373; superseded Kieft as director-general of the New Netherlands, 916, 1208; reasons of, for surrender to English, 363; ground brief of, to Van Vorst, 1139; deed from, to Nicholas Varlet for Hoboken patent, 1269.

Surrogates of Essex, 216; of Hudson, 947.

Sutphen, Theron Y., 343.

Sutphen, Reuben M., 335.

Swaine, Capt. Samuel, 396.

Sweeney, Daniel, 343.

Symes, James H., 1298.

Symmes, John Cleves, 244.

Swards, George P., 346.

T.

Talcott, William, 1083.

Talleyrand, Marquis de, visit of, to Newark, 622.

Tanqua (Indian chief), 1244.

Tartar Chemical Company, 1164.

Taxes in New Jersey prior to Revolution, 23-28.

Taylor, Isaac Stewart, 1077.

Taylor, John W., 286.

Taylor, H. B., 299.

Taylor, Rev. B. C., 944.

Taylor, Daniel, 763, 771.

Teese, Frederick H., 281.

Tea-Tray Company, the Newark, 620.

Ten Broek, Jasper, 530.

Tetevault, Francis J. E., 446.

Thomas, Luther G., 315.

Thompson, Edwin B., 327.

Thompson, Anthony (slave), 816.

Thorn, C. E. S., 300.

Thread-Works, the Clark, 611.

Tibbles, George Nelson, 1108.

Tichenor, Martin, 366, 690.

Tichenor, Hiram H., 357.

Tichenor family, 396, 794, 786.

Tichenor, Francis M., 289.

Tillot, Abiah F., 802.

Titworth, Caleb S., 285.

Titus, George E., 1111.

Titus, William, 342, 610.

Toad, Henry, 1306.

Tours, Claes Arcentie, 940.

Tomlinson Spring Company, 593.

Tompkins, De Necha, 690.

Tompkins, Cahome & Co., 589.

Tompkins, Samuel E., 589.

Tompkins, Capt. Michael, 366.

Tompkins family, 367.

Tommy Corner, 739, 811.

Traprock, 892, 869.

Traphagen, A. D., 707.

Traphagen, Henry, 1078.

Treat, Robert, 356, 357, 367, 374, 376, 377, 378, 381, 387.

Treat family, 367.

Trent, William, 239.

Trimble, James M., 299.

Tripp, Joseph E., 556.

Tripp, Joseph E., Jr., 288.

Truesdell, John G., 292.

Tucker, Samuel, 244.

Tucker, Isaac M., 270.

Tucker, Theodore M., 568.

Tucker, Col. Isaac M., 64.

Turnpike, 188-190, 1044; Joseph Danielson's difficulty with the Bergen County Turnpike Company, 1283; in North Bergen, 1280; Bloomfield, 800-b.

Turner, William, 393.

Tuttle, John N., 269.

Tuttle, Joseph Nathaniel, 274
 Tuttle, Joseph, 371
 Tuttle, Timothy, 371
 Tuttle, George F., 263
 Tuttle, William, 213, 253
 Tuttle, Samuel M., 842

V.

Van Arsdale, Elias, 277
 Van Arsdale, Robert, 292
 Van Arsdale, Jacob, 285
 Van Arsdale, Elias, 290
 Van Baskirk, John, 1243
 Van Buskerk, Gd. Abraham, 807
 Van Boreck, Peter I., his visit to Newark, 725
 Van Buskerk, De Witt, 394
 Van Cortlandt, Stephen, 890-3
 Vance, John, 371
 Vanderpool, John, 372
 Van Dyke, John, 240
 Vanderpool, Beach, Jr., 288
 Vanderpool, William, 283
 Van Dusen, Stephen W., 328
 Van Fleet, 277
 Van Houten, Cornelius, 890-1
 Van, Mort H. C., 328
 Vanness family, 835
 Vanross, Edwin, 847
 Van Neel, J. J., 391
 Van Rensselaer, Stephen Van Cortlandt, 280
 Van Rensselaer family, 890-3
 Van Riper, Cornelius, 890-3
 Van Strykel, Bennett, 217
 Van Strykel, John Derwin, 1109
 Van Twyler, Walter, 354
 Van Vleet, George, 369
 Van Vorst, Joe Garrison, 925, 1150
 Van Vleet, Tichman, 927
 Van Vorst, John, 1110
 Van Wagoner, George A., 312
 Varick, Richard, 1141
 Varick, Theodore R., 1394
 Varick, William W., 1110
 Varist, Nicholas, 1290
 Vaux, Charles Otto, 1108
 Verrazano, Jean de, 895
 Verhulst, Willem, 903
 Verona Valley, 830
 Verona village, 844
 Verplank, Abraham Isaacson, 939, 1139
 Veterans distinguished, to Newark, 921
 Vignier, Charles, 280
 Vondy, Joseph H., 1107
 Voordt, Charles H., 1071
 Voordtburgh, James B., 1179
 Voordtburgh, Peter, 216, 1070
 Vroom, John P., 1368
 Vroom, Peter D., 251

U

Uffington, Thomas, 890-8
 Ulanov, Allen, 1119
 Ulanovskis, Waks, 107
 Underhill Elk Works, 1292
 Underwood, Charles T., 314
 United States District attorney, 214
 Union, township of. Description, 1295; early history, 1295; Forty-second Street ferry, 1296; road improvements, 1297; old residents, 1298; centennial Fourth of July, 1298; township officers, 1298; miscellany, 1298; charitable organizations, 1299; educational matters, 1299; religious interests, 1300, 1300
 Union, town of. Boundaries, 1985; first officers,

1985; old residents, 1296; important events, 1297; Fire Department, 1298; patriotism, 208; methods of travel, 1299; attractive places, 1299; public resorts, 1299; entertainers, 1300; post office, 1299; business interests, 1299; education, 1293; schools, 1294; churches, 1295

W.

Wade, Joseph L., 320
 Wakeman, Edgar B., 1905
 Wakeman, F. S., 322
 Wall, Garret D., 231
 Wallace, Joseph Jay, 274
 Wallace, William C., 707
 Wallace, William, 390
 Wallis, Hamilton, 1067
 Walker, Frederick, 1274
 Walker, Norman, 1272
 Walker, Thomas, A. C., 718
 Walters, Joseph, 377
 Wampum, description of, 1211
 Ward, John, 390
 Ward, Eleazer, 908
 Ward, Samuel Lawrence, 205
 Ward, John F., 312
 Ward, Henry, 315
 Ward, Leslie H., 528
 Ward, William S., 723
 Ward, Isaac Morgan, 399
 Ward, George S., 307
 Ward, Arthur, 308
 Ward, Edwin Morrison, 541
 Ward, Lawrence, 307
 Ward, John, Sr., 307
 Ward, John, Jr., 307
 Ward, Josiah, 307
 Ward family, 307, 784
 Ward, E. S. & Co., 308
 Ward, Marcus L., 150
 Ward, John Earl, 1147
 Ward, Eliza B., 295
 Ward, Gen. William, 308
 Ward, I. E., 290
 Ward, James H., 340
 Ward, F. W., 308
 Washington, George, visit to Newark (1782, 1802, mention of, 890-n; death of, 890
 Water-works. In Newark, 1739; in East Orange 19; in Orange, 19-21; in Bloomfield, 872; in Jersey City, 1147; in Hightstown, 1217
 Watts, Campbell & Co., 507
 Watts, William, 508
 Watswong, 72
 Watson, Beriah A., 1104
 Watson, William P., 1111
 Waugh, Charles H., 208
 Wayne Anthony, camp of, at Second River, 890-n
 Weart, Jacob, 1306
 Weart, James Manners, 1070
 Weideneyer, Class H., 1264
 Weehawken, township of. Description, 1310; name, 1310; duels, 1310; scenery, 1311; the "Hessian Fields," 1311; yacht club, 1312; early events, 1312; ferry, 1312; prominent residents, 1313; geology of Castle Point, 1314; improvements, 1315; Presbyterian Church, 1315; schools, 1316; miscellany, 1317
 Weeks, John B., 267
 Weidenmayer, G. A., 615
 Weiss & Meaders, 41
 Weeks, J. R. Jr., 301
 Weeks, William R., 290
 Westford, Caleb, 81

Weston, Edward, 64
 Westbrook, Charles K., 294
 Westfield, Benjamin, 1298
 Westway, John K., 1200
 Whiting, John H., 1396
 Whiston, Nathaniel, 367
 Whittier, Deacon James, 372
 Whittier family, 372
 Whittier, Capt. Caleb, 41
 Whittier, Nathaniel, 368
 Whittier, E. W., 240
 Whittiply, Edward W., 242
 White, Job, Moore, 315
 White, Isaac, American, 1300
 White, William C., 704
 Whitehead, Am. Jr., 387
 Whitehead, Am., 205
 Whitehead, D. A., 391
 Whitehead, George D., 391
 Whitehead, I. C., 34, 393
 Whitehead, John, 275
 Whitehead, Samuel, 1256
 Whitehead, William Stone, 394
 Whitehead, William Adams, 394
 Whiteford, Henry B., 320
 Whiting, E. B., 740
 Whittington, Edward T., 329
 Whittier, Joseph, 368
 Whittier, General, 1300
 Whiggans, James, 300
 Whiggans, Frank C., 310
 Whiggans, Thomas, 304
 Whittier, Rodney, 654
 White, Edwards, 208
 White, Samuel, 890-2
 Whitman, James, 1148
 Whitman, Matthew, 372, 725
 Whitman, Edmund, 725
 Whitman, E. A. & Son, 1163
 Whitman, James, 104
 Whitman, J. B., 747
 Whitman, Jesse, 779
 Whitman, Washington D., 1060
 Whitman, family, 81
 Whitman, Isaac, 1060
 Whitman, Benjamin, 1060
 Whitman, E. H., 206
 Whitman, Isaac H., 251
 Whitworth, Frank, 217
 Whison, Alexander, 809
 Whisfield, Charles H., 608, 1300
 Whigins, G. E., 1241
 Whittier, F. H., 608
 Whittier, Charles, 1208
 Whittier, Joseph, 1103
 Whoddy, Henry H., 1070
 Whoddy, Alfred W., 914
 Whoddy, George S., 249
 Whoddy, John H., 254
 Whoddy, Philomena, 288
 Whoddy Susan Purp and Hosiery Company, 1064
 Whitenylke, Jacob Hyring, 1068
 Whitt, Edward H., 284
 Wright, E. R. A., 1060
 Wright, William, 608
 Wrighton, James T., 844
 Wyckoff, —, 707
 Wyoming, 711

Y.

Young, Clement C., 1110
 Young, Henry, 283
 Young, John J., 1108
 Young, James, & Son, 740

Young, John Sylvester, 293.
Young & Morgan, 608.
Young, Robert, 372.

Z.

Zabrickle, Abraham O., 253, 1055.
Zabriskie, Lansing, 1072.
Zabriskie, Augustus, 1089.
Zel, Charles M., 336.

Ziegler, Charles T., 270.
Zinc and Iron Company, the Newark, 605.
Zule family, 1256.
Zulick, Conrad M., 287.

